

Anno 1778.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY

Gift of Lester S. Morse, Jr. in honor of
Thomas T. Lyons

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED IN THE
SUPREME COURT
OF THE
UNITED STATES

203, 204, 205, 206 U. S.

BOOK 51,
LAWYERS' EDITION,
CITED "LAW. ED."

COMPLETE WITH HEAD LINES, HEAD NOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOT NOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES.

BY THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.

1926.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year nineteen hundred six, by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year nineteen hundred seven, by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

R
348.73
UN35

W 203-204

JUSTICES
OF THE
SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,
HON. MELVILLE WESTON FULLER.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN,
HON. DAVID JOSIAH BREWER,
HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE,
HON. RUFUS W. PECKHAM,

HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,
HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES
HON. WILLIAM R. DAY,
HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY.¹

ATTORNEY GENERAL,
HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY.
HON. CHARLES J. BONAPARTE.²

SOLICITOR GENERAL,
HON. HENRY M. HOYT.

CLERK,
JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, Esq.

REPORTER,
HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,
JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, Esq.

¹Appointed to succeed Mr. Justice Brown, who retired May 28, 1906. Commission ordered recorded December 17, 1906.

²Commission ordered recorded December 17, 1906.

ALLOTMENT, ETC., OF THE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

December 24, 1906.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 51 L. ed., Appendix I. post, 1193.

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS. 1902-1903.	COMMISSIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	FIRST. ME., N. H., MASS., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE RUFUS W. PECKHAM, New York.	President CLEVELAND.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1895. (Dec. 9.)	1896. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM H. MOODY, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PA., DEL.	1906. (Dec. 12.)	1906. (Dec. 17.)
CHIEF JUSTICE MELVILLE W. FULLER, Illinois.	President CLEVELAND.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1888. (July 20.)	1888. (Oct. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President CLEVELAND.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1894. (Feb. 19.)	1894. (Mar. 12.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN, Kentucky.	President HAYES.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President ROOSEVELT.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE DAVID J. BREWER, Kansas.	President HARRISON.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO., KAN., ARK., NEB., COLO., N. D., S. D., UTAH, WYO., NEW MEX.,* OKLA.*	1889. (Dec. 18.)	1890. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH MCKENNA, California.	President MCKINLEY.	NINTH. CAL., OR., NEV., MONT., WASH., IDAHO, ALASKA,* ARIZONA,* HAWAII.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 203, 204, 205, 206.

A.

Abilene Cotton Oil Co., Texas & P. R. Co. v.	553
Acosta v. Porto Rico (Mem.) (206 U. S. 566)	1191
Adams, Wallace v.	547
Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky (206 U. S. 138)	992
v. Kentucky (206 U. S. 129) ..	987
Aetna L. Ins. Co., Whitfield v.	895
Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission (203 U. S. 496) ..	289
Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. v. Cheney (Mem.) (206 U. S. 563) ..	1189
Allen v. Riley (203 U. S. 347)	216
v. United States (204 U. S. 581) ..	634
United States ex rel. Lowry v.	281
Alliance Gas & Electric Co. v. City Alliance (Mem.) (203 U. S. 598)	333
American Car & Foundry Co., Robinson v. (Mem.)	330
American Exp. Co. v. Kentucky (206 U. S. 139)	993
American News Co. v. United States (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565) ..	1190
American R. Co. v. Cardona de Castro v. Castro (204 U. S. 453)	564
v. Fernandez (Mem.) (203 U. S. 597)	333
American Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Colorado ex rel. Lindsley (204 U. S. 103)	393
Anderson, New Jersey v.	284
Standard Oil Co. v. (Mem.) ..	923
v. White Star Min. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 540)	921
Andrews v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. (203 U. S. 127)	119
Andrus v. Berkshire Power Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 596) ..	333
Angle v. United States (Mem.) (205 U. S. 542)	922
Appleyard v. Massachusetts (203 U. S. 222)	161
Arizona, Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v.	1143

Armour & Co. v. Skene (Mem.) (206 U. S. 562)	1189
Armstrong v. Ashley (204 U. S. 272) ..	482
Arthur v. Texas & P. R. Co. (204 U. S. 505)	590
Ashley, Armstrong v.	482
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Empire State Cattle Co. v. (Mem.) ..	672
Minnesota & D. Cattle Co. v. (Mem.)	672
Atlanta, Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works v.	241
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Florida ex rel. Ellis (203 U. S. 256) ..	174
v. North Carolina Corp. Commission (206 U. S. 1.)	933
Atlantic Transport Co. v. Barnes (Mem.) (203 U. S. 589) ..	330
Atlantic Trust Co. v. Chapman (Mem.) (203 U. S. 587)	329
Atty. Gen., Colorado ex rel., Patterson v.	879
Automatic Scale Co., Computing Scale Co. v.	645
Axtell v. Webber (Mem.) (203 U. S. 578)	325

B.

Babcock, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v.	636
Bachtel v. Wilson (204 U. S. 36)	357
v. Wilson (204 U. S. 42)	360
Bacon v. Walker (204 U. S. 311)	499
Badgley, Colorado ex rel., Elder v. ..	381
Bailey, Yates v.	1015
Baker, Fisher v.	142
Ballard v. Hunter (204 U. S. 241) ..	461
v. Hunter (Mem.)	1191
Ballentyne v. Smith (205 U. S. 285) ..	803
Bancroft, Wicomico County v.	112
Bank, Des Moines Sav., v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901
Eau Claire Nat. v. Jackman (204 U. S. 522)	596
Equitable Nat., James McCreery Realty Corp. v. (Mem.) ..	328

CASES REPORTED.

Bank, Euclid Park Nat., v. Union Trust & D. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924	Boston & M. R. Co. v. Gorkey (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672)	673
First Nat., Conboy v.....	128	Bown v. Walling (204 U. S. 320)	503
First Nat., v. Flickinger (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595)	332	Boynton, Ex parte (Mem.) (204 U. S. 668)	671
First Nat., National Live Stock Bank v.	192	Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v.	629
Home Sav., v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901	Braden v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695
Jones Nat., Yates v.....	1002	Bradford, Expanded Metal Co. v. (Mem.)	1189
National Exchange, v. Superior (Mem.) (206 U. S. 564) ..	1190	v. United States (Mem.) (206 U. S. 563)	1190
National Live Stock, v. First Nat. Bank (203 U. S. 296) ..	192	Brandenburg v. District of Columbia (205 U. S. 135)	743
Northwestern Sav., Centerville Station v. (Mem.)	1190	Brast, Stephens v. (Mem.)	921
Ohio Valley Nat., v. Hulitt (204 U. S. 162)	423	Bravo v. Gomez (Mem.) (205 U. S. 549)	925
People's Sav., v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901	Brewster, Cahen v.	310
Union, Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1190	Bright v. Fifth Congre. Church (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541) ..	921
Union Nat., Neill v. (Mem.) ...	924	Brown, Kurtz v. (Mem.)	923
Utica, Yates v.	1015	v. Lanyon (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672)	673
Varick, Hiscock v.	945	United States v.....	1046
Barber Asphalt Paving Co., Field v. (Mem.)	328	v. United States (206 U. S. 240) ..	1046
Barnes, Atlantic Transport Co. v. (Mem.)	330	Urquhart v.	760
Barrington v. Missouri (205 U. S. 483) ..	890	Browne, Johnson v.	816
Bay Prairie Irrig. Co. v. Wood (Mem.) (205 U. S. 545)	923	Buchanan, South Carolina ex rel., v. Jennings (Mem.) (204 U. S. 667)	671
Bay State Dredging Co. v. United States (206 U. S. 246)	1047	Buck v. Beach (206 U. S. 392)	1106
Beach, Buck v.	1106	Buckley, Crane v.	260
Behn, M. & Co. v. Campbell & Go Tauco (205 U. S. 403) ...	857	Buffalo Land & Exploration Co., Strong v. (Mem.)	327
Benjamin H. Howell, Son & Co., United States v. (Mem.)	671	Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co., Schlemmer v..	681
Berkshire Power Co., Andrus v. (Mem.)	333	Burdick v. Dillon (Mem.) (205 U. S. 550)	925
Berkson v. Marcuse (Mem.) (205 U. S. 551)	925	Burns, Taylor v.....	116
Bernheimer v. Converse (206 U. S. 516)	1163	Burroughs v. Treat (205 U. S. 33) ...	695
Bethlehem Steel Co., United States v.	731	Burt v. Smith (203 U. S. 129)	121
Bidwell, Crossman v. (Mem.)	674	Bush, Shropshire, W. & Co. v.....	436
Bierce v. Hutchins (205 U. S. 340) ...	828	Buster v. Wright (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599)	334
Bigelow, Chapman & D. Land Co. v....	953	Butler, News & C. Co. v. (Mem.)	672
Billings, Zartarian v.	428	C.
Birkett, Tindle v.	762	Cahen v. Brewster (203 U. S. 543) ...	310
Blackford, Wilder v. (Mem.)	922	California Consol. Min. Co. v. Manley (Mem.) (203 U. S. 579) ..	326
Blanton, Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. (Mem.)	922	Campbell & Go Tauco, Behn, M. & Co. v.	857
Blumer, Iowa Railroad Land Co. v....	1148	Cardona de Castro, American R. Co. v.	1187
Board of Education v. Illinois (203 U. S. 553)	314	Carl, John Woods & Sons v.....	219
Bonsall v. Platt (Mem.) (206 U. S. 564)	1190	Carlson, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	334
Borden v. Trespacios Rice & Irrig. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 667)	671	Carpenter v. Treat (205 U. S. 33) ...	695
		Cary, Ornstine v. (Mem.)	672
		Cassatt, Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co. v. (Mem.)	924
		Webster Coal & Coke Co. v. (Mem.)	924
		Castro, American R. Co. v.....	564
		Centerville Station v. Northwestern Sav. Bank (Mem.) (206 U. S. 564)	1190

CASES REPORTED.

Central Eureka Min. Co., East Central Eureka Min. Co. v....	476	Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. (204 U. S. 116).....	399
Chaison v. Hyde (Mem.) (203 U. S. 596)	333	Cleveland Electric R. Co. v.....	399
Chanler, Ex parte (Mem.) (205 U. S. 535)	919	Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. v. East Itasca Min. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 545)	923
v. Kelsey (205 U. S. 466).....	882	Cleveland Electric R. Co. v. Cleveland (204 U. S. 116).....	399
Chapman, Atlantic Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	329	Cleveland v.	399
v. Chapman (Mem.) (203 U. S. 586)	329	Coffey v. Harlan County (204 U. S. 659)	666
School Dist. No. 11 v. (Mem.)	923	Cogswell, Jerome v.	343
Chapman & D. Land Co. v. Bigelow (206 U. S. 41).....	953	Cole v. Indianapolis (Mem.) (203 U. S. 592)	331
Charles, Dexter v. (Mem.).....	925	Coleman, Kansas ex rel., Rose v. (Mem.)	326
Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works v. Atlanta (203 U. S. 390) ..	241	Collins v. O'Neil (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599)	334
Cheney, Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. v. (Mem.)	1189	Colorado, Kansas v.....	953
Cherokee Nation v. United States (203 U. S. 76)	96	Colorado ex rel. Lindsley, American Smelting & Ref. Co. v.....	393
Cherry v. Fidelity & D. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 537)	920	Badgley, Elder v.	381
Chesapeake & O. S. S. Co. v. Morris (Mem.) (203 U. S. 592)...	331	Atty. Gen., Patterson v.	879
Chicago v. Chicago City R. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 549).....	925	Columbus, Mercantile Trust & D. Co. v.	198
v. Mills (204 U. S. 321).....	504	Computing Scale Co. v. Automatic Scale Co. (204 U. S. 609) ..	645
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Babcock (204 U. S. 585).....	636	Conboy v. First Nat. Bank (203 U. S. 141)	128
v. Carlson (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599)	334	Connecticut, Reynolds v. (Mem.).....	328
Green v.	916	Wightman v. (Mem.).....	335
v. Williams (205 U. S. 444)...	875	Continental Paper Bag Co. v. Eastern Paper Bag Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 542).....	922
Chicago City R. Co., Chicago v. (Mem.)	925	Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Lewis Voight & Sons Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 673).....	673
Chicago Consol. Traction Co., North Chicago Street R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1190	Convent of St. Rose v. United States Sav. & L. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 543)	922
West Chicago Street R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1190	Converse, Bernheimer v.	1163
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Mumford (Mem.) (203 U. S. 601)...	335	Drey v.	1163
Peterson v.	841	Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Arizona (206 U. S. 474).....	1143
Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co., Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. (Mem.)	672	Coram, Ingersoll v. (Mem.).....	333
Chisholm, Eagle Ore Sampling Co. v. (Mem.)	329	Covington, Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. (Mem.)	334
C. H. Nichols Lumber Co. v. Franson (203 U. S. 278).....	181	Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Covington (Mem.) (203 U. S. 598)...	334
Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (206 U. S. 142).....	995	v. Hager (203 U. S. 109).....	111
Cisco Oil Mill, Texas & P. R. Co. v....	562	Craig Shipbuilding Co., Graham & M. Transp. Co. v. (Mem.).....	325
Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. (205 U. S. 46).....	703	Crane v. Buckley (203 U. S. 441).....	260
City Alliance, Alliance Gas & Electric Co. v. (Mem.).....	333	Crawford, Ex parte (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561)	1189
Clark, Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Co. v.....	91	Crichfield v. Julia (Mem.) (203 U. S. 593)	332
v. Gerstley (204 U. S. 504)...	589	Crossman v. Bidwell (Mem.) (204 U. S. 675)	674
Osborne v.....	619	Crouch, Dakota, W. & M. River R. Co. v. (Mem.)	327
v. Wells (203 U. S. 164).....	138	Crowe v. Harmon (204 U. S. 241)....	461
Clement v. United States (Mem.) (206 U. S. 562)	1189	v. Trickey (204 U. S. 228).....	454
		Cruit v. Owen (203 U. S. 368).....	227

CASES REPORTED.

		E.
Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Nashville (Mem.) (203 U. S. 589)	330	Eagle Ore Sampling Co. v. Chisholm (Mem.) (203 U. S. 587)	329
Cunningham v. Springer (203 U. S. 647)	662	East Central Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co. (204 U. S. 266)	476
Curtin v. Tucker (Mem.)	1191	Eastern Dredging Co. v. United States (206 U. S. 246)	1047
D.		Eastern Oregon Land Co., Andrews v. Eastern Paper Bag Co., Continental Paper Bag Co. v. (Mem.)	922
Dakota, W. & M. River R. Co. v. Crouch (Mem.) (203 U. S. 582)	327	East Itasca Min. Co., Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. v. (Mem.)	923
Dalcour, United States v.	248	Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman (204 U. S. 522)	596
Dampskibsselskaber Kjoebenhabn, Ward v. (Mem.)	923	Echman, Mexican C. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	920
Dastas, Garrozi v.	369	Edelstein v. United States (Mem.) (205 U. S. 543)	922
Davidson S. S. Co., Ohio Transp. Co. v. (Mem.)	332	Edwards, Illinois C. R. Co. v.	305
v. United States (205 U. S. 187)	764	Iroquois Transp. Co. v.	836
Davis v. Wilson (204 U. S. 42)	360	Eidman v. Tilghman (Mem.) (203 U. S. 580)	326
Delamater v. South Dakota (205 U. S. 93)	724	Eisner v. Saxlehner (Mem.) (203 U. S. 591)	331
De Laney Forge & Iron Co., Iroquois Transp. Co. v.	836	E. J. McLean & Co., New Mexico ex rel., v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. (203 U. S. 38)	78
Delaware, New Jersey v. (Mem.)	925	Elder v. Colorado ex rel. Badgley (204 U. S. 85)	381
Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Rutter (Mem.) (203 U. S. 588)	330	Eldred, Kessler v.	1065
Denver & R. G. R. Co., New Mexico ex rel. E. J. McLean & Co. v.	78	Ellis, Lee v. (Mem.)	335
Des Moines, Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Home Sav. Bank v.	901	v. United States (206 U. S. 246)	1047
People's Sav. Bank v.	901	Ellis, Florida ex rel., Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.	174
Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901	Florida ex rel., Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v.	175
Deutsche Levante Linie v. Galanopulo (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	Emmons, Waters v. (Mem.)	325
v. Harris (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 670)	672
v. Hills Bros. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley (205 U. S. 225)	779
v. National Bd. of Marine Underwriters (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	Ensley Land Co., Kessler v. (Mem.) ..	921
v. Stephenson (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	Equitable Nat. Bank, James McCreery Realty Corp. v. (Mem.) ..	328
Dexter v. Charles (Mem.) (205 U. S. 549)	925	Erie & W. Transp. Co., Erie R. Co. v. Erie R. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. (204 U. S. 220)	450
Diamond Match Co., Saginaw Match Co. v. (Mem.)	330	Euclid Park Nat. Bank v. Union Trust & D. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924
Dillon, Burdick v. (Mem.)	925	Expanded Metal Co. v. Bradford (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561) ..	1189
District of Columbia, Brandenburg v. Martin v.	743	Ex parte Boynton (Mem.) (204 U. S. 668)	671
Donald, Guy v.	245	Chanler (Mem.) (205 U. S. 535) ..	913
Donnell v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 591)	331	Johnson (Mem.) (205 U. S. 551)	925
Douville, Keel v. (Mem.)	327	Montana Min. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 667)	671
Downes v. Teter-Heany Development Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 543)	922	St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561) ..	1189
Doyle v. London Guarantee & Acci. Co. (204 U. S. 599)	641
Drey v. Converse (206 U. S. 516)	1163
Duke v. Turner (204 U. S. 623)	652

CASES REPORTED.

Ex parte Seneca Nation (Mem.) (203 U. S. 577)	325
Wisner (203 U. S. 449)	264
Zell (Mem.) (203 U. S. 586) ..	329

F.

Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven (203 U. S. 379)	237
Farenholt, United States v.	1036
Fernandez, American R. Co. v. (Mem.)	333
Fidelity & D. Co., Cherry v. (Mem.) ..	920
Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Clark (203 U. S. 64)	91
Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 585) ..	328
Fields v. United States (205 U. S. 292)	807
Fifth Congre. Church, Bright v. (Mem.)	921
Finch v. Maryland Casualty Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 592) ..	331
Fink, Union P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	334
Union P. R. Co. v.	636
Weinreb v. (Mem.)	329
First Nat. Bank, Conboy v.	128
v. Flickinger (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595)	332
National Live Stock Bank v.	192
Fisher v. Baker (203 U. S. 174)	142
Fite v. United States (203 U. S. 76) ..	96
Fitts, Spaugh v. (Mem.)	921
Flahive, Love v.	768
Love v.	1092
Flickinger, First Nat. Bank v. (Mem.)	332
v. United States (Mem.) (204 U. S. 671)	673
Florida ex rel. Ellis, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.	174
Ellis, Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v.	175
Fowler v. Osgood (Mem.) (205 U. S. 535)	919
Francis v. Francis (203 U. S. 233)	165
v. United States (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565)	1190
Frank v. Vollkommer (205 U. S. 521)	911
Franson, C. H. Nichols Lumber Co. v.	181
Frantz, Saylor v. (Mem.)	924
Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co. (203 U. S. 502)	292
Fulton, Wilmington Star Min. Co. v.	708

G.

Galanopulo, Deutsche Levante Linie v. (Mem.)	823
Gallagher v. Illinois (Mem.) (203 U. S. 600)	334
Gandolfi v. Siegert (Mem.) (205 U. S. 542)	922
Garrozi v. Dastas (204 U. S. 64)	369
Garza de Villereal v. Texas (Mem.) (205 U. S. 536)	920
Gates, Newman v.	385

Gatti, New York Foundling Hospital v.	254
George Riggs & Co., United States v.	127
Georgia v. Tennessee Copper Co. (206 U. S. 230)	1038
Gerstley, Clark v.	589
McGuire v.	581
G. Falk & Bro., United States v.	411
Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v. Gila Water Co. (205 U. S. 279)	801
Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Lyon (203 U. S. 465)	276
Gila Water Co., Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v.	801
Gill, North American Transp. & Trading Co. v. (Mem.)	326
Gillelen v. Youngworth (Mem.) (205 U. S. 538)	920
Gillett, Roming v. (Mem.)	919
Gilmore, Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. (Mem.)	330
Ginzberg, Tracy v.	755
Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. United States (206 U. S. 194)	1022
Goldsborough, McCallum v. (Mem.) ..	673
Gomez, Bravo v. (Mem.)	925
Gonzales Resto v. Resto y Negron (Mem.) (203 U. S. 602) ...	335
Gorkey, Boston & M. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	673
Goudy v. Meath (203 U. S. 146)	130
Gould v. Youngworth (Mem.) (205 U. S. 538)	920
Grafton v. United States (206 U. S. 333)	1084
Graham & M. Transp. Co. v. Craig Shipbuilding Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 577)	325
Grand Central Min. Co., Mammoth Min. Co. v. (Mem.)	1191
Grand View Bldg. Asso., Northern Assur. Co. v.	109
Greco v. The Sarnia (Mem.) (203 U. S. 588)	330
Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (205 U. S. 530)	916
J. B. Orcutt Co. v.	390
Greenberg, Western Turf Asso. v.	520
Green County, Quinlan v.	860
Guice, Scott v. (Mem.)	331
Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas (204 U. S. 403)	540
Guy v. Donald (203 U. S. 399)	245

H.

Hager, Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. ..	111
Haight & F. Co. v. Robinson (Mem.) (203 U. S. 581)	327
Haire, Montana ex rel., v. Rice (204 U. S. 291)	490
Hall's Safe Co., Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co. v. (Mem.)	331
Halter v. Nebraska (205 U. S. 34)	696

CASES REPORTED.

Hammond v. Whittredge (204 U. S. 538)	606	Hunter, Ballard v. (Mem.)	1191
Hampton Roads R. & Electric Co., Newport News & O. P. R. & Electric Co. v. (Mem.)	334	v. Johnson (Mem.) (204 U. S. 673)	673
Hancock, Troy Wagon Works Co. v. (Mem.)	1190	Hutchins, Bierce v.	823
Hand, Security Warehousing Co. v....	1117	Hyde, Chaison v. (Mem.)	333
Hanley, Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v.....	779	Hynes v. Youngworth (Mem.) (203 U. S. 602)	335
Harlan County, Coffey v.....	666
Harmon, Crowe v.	461	I.
Harris, Deutsche Levante Linie v. (Mem.)	923	Iglehart v. Iglehart (204 U. S. 478) ..	575
Rosenberger v. (Mem.)	331	Illinois, Board of Education v.....	314
Harrison v. Magoon (205 U. S. 501) ..	900	Gallagher v. (Mem.)	334
Hart, Ward v. (Mem.)	922	Illinois C. R. Co., Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v.	703
Hartman v. John D. Park & Sons Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 562) ..	1189	v. Edwards (203 U. S. 531)	305
Hatch, New York ex rel., v. Reardon (204 U. S. 152)	415	v. Interstate Commerce Commission (206 U. S. 441)	1123
Hauser, Stuart v. (Mem.)	328	v. McKendree (203 U. S. 514) ..	298
Hawaii, Lowrey v.	1026	Mississippi Railroad Commission v.	209
Haynes v. Watkins (Mem.) (204 U. S. 673)	673	Indianapolis, Cole v. (Mem.)	331
Hedderly v. Youngworth (Mem.) (203 U. S. 602)	335	Ingersoll v. Coram (Mem.) (203 U. S. 596)	333
Heinszen, United States v.....	1098	Insurance Co., Aetna L., Whitfield v... Fidelity Mut. L., v. Clark (203 U. S. 64)	895
Henderson v. Henrie (Mem.) (206 U. S. 563)	1190	U. S. 64)	91
Hennessey, Van Buren v. (Mem.)	334	Metropolitan L., v. New Orleans (205 U. S. 395)	853
Henrie, Henderson v. (Mem.)	1190	Northwestern Nat. L., v. Riggs (203 U. S. 243)	168
Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. United States (206 U. S. 224)	1034	Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Co. v. (Mem.)	921
Hensey, Mercantile Trust Co. v.....	811	Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Co. v. (Mem.)	332
Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., Donnell v. (Mem.)	331	International Trust Co. v. Weeks (203 U. S. 364)	224
v. Hall's Safe Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 591)	331	Interstate Commerce Commission, Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v.	995
Heymann v. Southern R. Co. (203 U. S. 270)	178	Illinois C. R. Co. v.....	1128
Hills Bros. Co., Deutsche Levante Linie v. (Mem.)	923	Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Blumer (206 U. S. 482)	1143
Hiscock v. Mertens (205 U. S. 202) ..	771	Iroquois Transp. Co. v. De Laney Forge & Iron Co. (205 U. S. 354) ..	836
v. Varick Bank (206 U. S. 28) ..	945	v. Edwards (205 U. S. 354)	836
Hitchcock, United States ex rel. West v.	718	Irvine, Wyoming ex rel. Wyoming Agricultural College v.....	1063
Hite, United States v.	514	Iverson, Smith v. (Mem.)	329
Hodges v. United States (203 U. S. 1) ..	65
Holsclaw, Sobey v. (Mem.)	332	J.
Holtzman v. Linton (Mem.) (203 U. S. 600)	335	Jackman, Eau Claire Nat. Bank v... ..	596
Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901	Jacks, Monterey v.	220
Honore v. Wilson (Mem.) (204 U. S. 675)	674	James B. Clow & Sons, Merchants Heat & Light Co. v.....	488
Hubbard Bros. & Co., Southern R. Co. v. (Mem.)	922	James McCreery Realty Corp. v. Equitable Nat. Bank (Mem.) (203 U. S. 584)	328
Hughes, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.....	294	J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green (204 U. S. 96)	390
Hulitt, Ohio Valley Nat. Bank v.....	423	Jennings, Smith v.	1061
Hultberg, White Star Min. Co. v. (Mem.)	921	South Carolina ex rel. Buchanan v. (Mem.)	671
Hunt v. New York Cotton Exchange (205 U. S. 322)	821	Jerome v. Cogswell (204 U. S. 1)	343
Hunter, Ballard v.	461

CASES REPORTED.

John D. Park & Sons Co., Hartman v. (Mem.)	1189
Johnson, Ex parte (Mem.) (205 U. S. 551)	925
v. Browne (205 U. S. 309)	816
Hunter v. (Mem.)	673
v. White Star Min. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 540)	921
John Woods & Sons v. Carl (203 U. S. 358)	219
Jones Nat. Bank, Yates v.	1002
Jordan, Landram v.	88
Judges of Circuit Court, Zell v. (Mem.)	325
Julia, Crichfield v. (Mem.)	332
K.
Kaipu v. Pinkham (Mem.) (206 U. S. 566)	1191
Kalyton, McKay v.	566
Kain v. King (204 U. S. 43)	360
Kansas v. Colorado (206 U. S. 46) ...	956
Thomas v. (Mem.)	919
v. United States (204 U. S. 331)	510
Kansas ex rel. Coleman, Rose v. (Mem.)	326
Karrick, Wetmore v.	745
Kawanakoa v. Polyblank (205 U. S. 349)	834
Keatley, United States v.	618
Keel v. Douville (Mem.) (203 U. S. 583)	327
Kelsey, Chanler v.	882
Kentucky, Adams Exp. Co. v.	987
Adams Exp. Co. v.	992
American Exp. Co. v.	993
Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Blanton (Mem.) (205 U. S. 543)	922
Kerner, Laffoon v. (Mem.)	326
Kessler v. Eldred (206 U. S. 285)	1065
v. Ensley Land Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541)	921
v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695
Kewanee Mfg. Co., Leigh v. (Mem.) ...	332
Kibbe, Stevenson Iron Min. Co. v. (Mem.)	920
King, Kann v.	360
Webb v.	360
Kinney v. Mitchell (Mem.) (203 U. S. 586)	329
Kirk, United States v. (Mem.)	671
Klutt, Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	673
Knowles, Ramsden v. (Mem.)	1189
Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Chi- cago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 670) ..	672
v. Michigan C. R. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 671)	672
Kurtz v. Brown (Mem.) (204 U. S. 544)	923

L.

Laffoon v. Kerner (Mem.) (203 U. S. 579)	326
Lamar v. Spalding (Mem.) (203 U. S. 584)	328
Landram v. Jordan (203 U. S. 56) ...	88
Lanyon, Brown v. (Mem.)	673
Lawson v. Washington (Mem.) (205 U. S. 536)	919
Lee v. Ellis (Mem.) (203 U. S. 601) ..	335
Leeds & C. Co. v. Victor Talking Mach. Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 563)	1190
Leigh v. Kewanee Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595)	332
Zell v. (Mem.)	672
Levi, Viotor v. (Mem.)	333
Lewisohn, Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. v. (Mem.)	673
Lewis Voight & Sons Co., Continental Wall Paper Co. v. (Mem.)	673
Lexington, Security Trust & S. V. Co. v.	204
Lindsley, Colorado ex rel., American Smelting & Ref. Co. v.	393
Linton, Holtzman v. (Mem.)	335
Loeb, Slaughter v. (Mem.)	334
London Guarantee & Acci. Co., Doyle v.	641
Look, Smith v. (Mem.)	332
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Smith, H. & Co. (204 U. S. 551)	612
Love v. Flahive (205 U. S. 195)	768
v. Flahive (206 U. S. 356)	1092
Lowrey v. Hawaii (206 U. S. 206)	1026
Lowry, United States ex rel., v. Allen (203 U. S. 476)	281
Lukert, Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. v. (Mem.)	334
Lyon, Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v.	276

M.

McCallum v. Goldsborough (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672)	673
McCarty v. United States (Mem.) (205 U. S. 537)	920
McCoach v. Norris (Mem.) (203 U. S. 594)	332
v. Norris (Mem.) (205 U. S. 539)	921
v. Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Ins. Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 594)	332
v. Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Ins. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 539)	921
McCormick, Miller v. (Mem.)	1191
McDonough, Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v.	345
McDowell v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	696
McGill, Michigan S. S. Co. v. (Mem.)	332
McGrath, New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	924

CASES REPORTED.

McGuire v. Gerstley (204 U. S. 489) ..	581	Mississippi Railroad Commission v. Il-
Moore v.	773	linois C. R. Co. (203 U. S.
McKay v. Kalyton (204 U. S. 458) ..	566	335)	209
McKendree, Illinois C. R. Co. v.	298	New Orleans Great Northern R.
MacKenzie v. Pease (Mem.) (203 U.		Co. v. (Mem.)	925
S. 588)	330	Missouri, Barrington v.	890
McLoud, Walker v.	495	Mitchell, Kinney v. (Mem.)	329
McSwean, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v.		United States v.	752
(Mem.)	921	Mobile, Shea v. (Mem.)	922
Magoon, Harrison v.	900	Moeschen v. Tenement House Depart-
Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Central		ment (Mem.) (203 U. S.
Min. Co. (Mem.)	1191	583)	328
Manford v. Minnesota (Mem.) (205 U.		Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice (204 U.
S. 548)	924	S. 291)	490
Manley, California Consol. Min. Co. v.		Montana Min. Co., Ex parte (Mem.)
(Mem.)	326	(204 U. S. 667)	671
Marcuse, Berkson v. (Mem.)	925	v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co.
Marion Trust Co., United States v.		(Mem.)	1191
(Mem.)	332	v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co.
United States v. (Mem.)	1191	(204 U. S. 204)	444
Martin v. District of Columbia (205 U.		Monterey v. Jacks (203 U. S. 360) ..	220
S. 135)	743	Moore v. McGuire (205 U. S. 214) ..	776
v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. (203		Porterfield v. (Mem.)	1191
U. S. 284)	184	Morales, Ex parte (Mem.) (205 U. S.
Maryland Casualty Co., Finch v.		539)	920
(Mem.)	331	Moran, Re (203 U. S. 96)	105
Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Boynton		Morgan v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695
(204 U. S. 570)	629	United States v. (Mem.)	333
Massachusetts, Appleyard v.	161	Morris, Chesapeake & O. S. S. Co. v.
Mathieson, Mathieson Alkali Works v.		(Mem.)	331
(Mem.)	674	Mortiga, Serra v.	571
Mathieson Alkali Works v. Mathieson		Moyer v. Nichols (203 U. S. 221)	160
(Mem.) (204 U. S. 674) ..	674	Mumford, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co.
Meath, Goudy v.	130	v. (Mem.)	335
Mercantile Trust & D. Co. v. Columbus		Murphy, Wilson v. (Mem.)	326
(203 U. S. 311)	198	Myers v. Osborne (Mem.) (205 U. S.
Mercantile Trust Co. v. Hensey (205		538)	920
U. S. 298)	811	v. Wymore (Mem.) (205 U. S.
v. Wheeler (Mem.) (203 U. S.		551)	925
593)	332
Merchants Heat & Light Co. v. James		N.
B. Clow & Sons (204 U. S.		Nashville, Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg.
286)	488	Co. v. (Mem.)	330
Mertens, Hiscock v.	771	National Bd. of Marine Underwriters,
Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Or-		Deutsche Levante Linie v.
leans (205 U. S. 395)	853	(Mem.)	923
Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman (Mem.)		National Council of the J. O. U. A. M.
(205 U. S. 538)	920	v. State Council of Va. J.
Michigan, United States v. (Mem.) ..	335	O. U. A. M. (203 U. S. 151) ..	132
Michigan C. R. Co., Knudsen-Ferguson		National Enameling & Stamping Co.,
Fruit Co. v. (Mem.)	672	Wecker v.	430
Michigan S. S. Co. v. McGill (Mem.)		National Exchange Bank v. Superior
(203 U. S. 593)	332	(Mem.) (206 U. S. 564) ..	1190
Miller v. McCormick (Mem.)	1191	National Live Stock Bank v. First Nat.
v. Northern Assur. Co. (Mem.)		Bank (203 U. S. 296)	192
(203 U. S. 597)	333	Nebraska, Halter v.	696
v. Wilson (204 U. S. 42)	360	Neill v. Union Nat. Bank (Mem.) (205
Mills, Chicago v.	504	U. S. 546)	924
Minnesota, Manford v. (Mem.)	924	New Haven, Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v.	237
Minnesota & D. Cattle Co. v. Atchison,		New Jersey v. Anderson (203 U. S.
T. & S. F. R. Co. (Mem.)		483)	284
(204 U. S. 670)	672	v. Delaware (Mem.) (205 U.
		S. 550)	925

CASES REPORTED.

Newman v. Gates (204 U. S. 89)	385	Northwestern Sav. Bank, Centerville Station v. (Mem.)	1190
New Mexico ex rel. E. J. McLean & Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. (203 U. S. 38)	78	O.
New Orleans, Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v.	853	O'Brien, Northern Lumber Co. v. ..	438
New Orleans Great Northern R. Co. v. Mississippi Railroad Com- mission (Mem.) (205 U. S. 551)	925	Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (203 U. S. 372)	231
Newport News & O. P. R. & Elec- tric Co. v. Hampton Roads R. & Electric Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 598)	334	Ohio Transp. Co. v. Davidson S. S. Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 593) ..	332
News & C. Co. v. Butler (Mem.) (204 U. S. 670)	672	Ohio Valley Nat. Bank v. Hulitt (204 U. S. 162)	423
New York, Patrick v. (Mem.)	335	Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. v. Lukert (Mem.) (203 U. S. 598) ..	334
Sauer v.	1176	Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. v. Lewisohn (Mem.) (204 U. S. 673)	673
New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon (204 U. S. 152)	415	Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Gilmore (Mem.) (203 U. S. 590) ..	330
New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. McGrath (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547) ..	924	Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. McDon- ough (204 U. S. 8)	345
New York Cotton Exchange, Hunt v. New York Evening Journal Pub. Co. v. Simon (Mem.) (203 U. S. 589)	330	O'Neil, Collins v. (Mem.)	334
New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti (203 U. S. 429)	254	Ruef v. (Mem.)	924
New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. Offield v.	231	Ornstine v. Cary (Mem.) (204 U. S. 669)	672
Nichols, Moyer v.	160	Osborne v. Clark (204 U. S. 565)	619
Pettibone v.	148	Myers v. (Mem.)	920
Nicomen Boom Co., North Shore Boom & Driving Co. v. (Mem.) ..	924	Osgood, Fowler v. (Mem.)	919
Noel-Young Bond & Stock Co., Presidio County v. (Mem.)	923	Owen, Cruitt v.	227
Norris, McCoach v. (Mem.)	921	Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. Union Bank (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565) ..	1190
McCoach v. (Mem.)	332	P.
North American Transp. & Trading Co. v. Gill (Mem.) (203 U. S. 579)	326	Pabst Brewing Co., Thorley v. (Mem.)	333
North Carolina Corp. Commission, At- lantic Coast Line R. Co. v.	933	Paine Lumber Co., United States v.	1139
North Carolina Land & Timber Co., Reeve v. (Mem.)	329	Palson v. North German Lloyd (Mem.) (204 U. S. 671) ..	673
North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Chicago Consol. Traction Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565) ..	1190	Passmore, Rawlins v. (Mem.)	327
Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. (203 U. S. 106)	109	Patrick v. New York (Mem.) (203 U. S. 602)	335
Miller v. (Mem.)	333	Patterson v. Colorado ex rel. Atty. Gen. (205 U. S. 454)	879
Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien (204 U. S. 190)	438	v. Taylor (Mem.) (205 U. S. 548)	924
Northern P. R. Co. v. Slaght (205 U. S. 134)	742	Pearcy v. Stranahan (205 U. S. 257)	793
v. Slaght (205 U. S. 122)	738	Pease, MacKenzie v. (Mem.)	330
North German Lloyd, Palson v. (Mem.)	673	Pennsylvania, Rearick v.	295
North Shore Boom & Driving Co. v. Nicomen Boom Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 548)	924	Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co. v. Cas- satt (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924
Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs (203 U. S. 243)	168	Pennsylvania R. Co., White v. (Mem.)	923
		People's Sav. Bank v. Des Moines (205 U. S. 503)	901
		Perovich v. United States (205 U. S. 86)	722
		Persons Claiming Rights v. United States (203 U. S. 76)	96
		Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (205 U. S. 364)	841
		Pettibone v. Nichols (203 U. S. 192)	148
		Philadelphia, The, White v. (Mem.)	923
		Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Klutt (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672) ..	673

CASES REPORTED.

Philadelphia Trust, S. D. & Ins. Co., McCoach v. (Mem.)	332
McCoach v. (Mem.)	921
Phoenix, Phoenix Water Co. v. (Mem.)	674
Phoenix Water Co. v. Phoenix (Mem.) (204 U. S. 674)	674
Pinkham, Kaipu v. (Mem.)	1191
Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co., Martin v.	184
Platt, Bonsall v. (Mem.)	1190
Pollitz, Re (206 U. S. 323)	1081
Polyblank, Kawanakoa v.	834
Porterfield v. Moore (Mem.) (206 U. S. 566)	1191
Porto Rico, Acosta v. (Mem.)	1191
Presidio County v. Noel-Young Bond & Stock Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 545)	923
Q.
Quinlan v. Green County (205 U. S. 410)	860
R.
Railroad Commission, Alabama & V. R. Co. v.	289
Railroad Co., American, v. Cardona de Castro	1187
American, v. Castro (204 U. S. 453)	564
American, v. Fernandez (Mem.) (203 U. S. 597)	333
Atlantic Coast Line, v. Florida ex rel. Ellis (203 U. S. 256)	174
Atlantic Coast Line, v. North Carolina Corp. Commission (206 U. S. 1)	933
Boston & M., v. Gorkey (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672)	673
Chicago, R. I. & P., Peterson v.	841
Dakota, W. & M. River, v. Crouch (Mem.) (203 U. S. 582)	327
Delaware, L. & W., v. Rutter (Mem.) (203 U. S. 588) ..	330
Denver & R. G., New Mexico ex rel. E. J. McLean & Co. v.	78
Erie, v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. (204 U. S. 220)	450
Fair Haven & W., v. New Haven (203 U. S. 379)	237
Illinois C., Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v.	703
Illinois C., v. Edwards (203 U. S. 531)	305
Illinois C., v. Interstate Com- merce Commission (206 U. S. 441)	1128
Illinois C., v. McKendree (203 U. S. 514)	298
Illinois C., Mississippi Railroad Commission v.	209

Railroad Co., Louisville & N., v. Smith, H. & Co. (204 U. S. 551) ..	612
Mason City & Ft. D., v. Boynton (204 U. S. 570)	629
Michigan C., Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. (Mem.)	672
New Orleans Great Northern, v. Mississippi Railroad Com- mission (Mem.) (205 U. S. 551)	925
New York C. & H. R., v. Mc- Grath (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924
New York, N. H. & H., Offield v.	231
North Chicago Street, v. Chi- cago Consol. Traction Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565) ..	1190
Oxford & C. L., v. Union Bank (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565) ...	1190
Pennsylvania, White v. (Mem.)	923
Pittsburg & L. E., Martin v. . .	184
St. Louis & S. F., v. McSwean (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541) ..	921
Union P., v. Fink (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599)	334
Union P., v. Fink (204 U. S. 585)	636
West Chicago Street, v. Chicago Consol. Traction Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565)	1190
Railway Co., Alabama & V., v. Railroad Commission (203 U. S. 496)	289
Atchison, T. & S. F., Empire & D. Cattle Co. v. (Mem.)	672
Atchison, T. & S. F., Minnesota & D. Cattle Co. v. (Mem.) .	672
Buffalo, R. & P., Schlemmer v.	681
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Babcock (204 U. S. 585)	636
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Carlson (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599) ..	334
Chicago, B. & Q., Green v.	916
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Williams (205 U. S. 444)	875
Chicago City, Chicago v. (Mem.)	925
Chicago, R. I. & P., v. Mumford (Mem.) (203 U. S. 601) ..	335
Chicago, St. P. M. & O., Knud- sen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. (Mem.)	672
Cincinnati, H. & D., v. Inter- state Commerce Commis- sion (206 U. S. 142)	995
Cleveland Electric, Cleveland v.	399
Cleveland Electric, v. Cleveland (204 U. S. 116)	399
Gila Valley, G. & N., v. Lyon (203 U. S. 465)	276
Gulf, C. & S. F., v. Texas (204 U. S. 403)	540
Mexican C., v. Eckman (Mem.) (205 U. S. 538)	920

CASES REPORTED.

Railway Co., Northern P. v. Slaght (205 U. S. 122).....	738	Rose v. Kansas ex rel. Coleman (Mem.) (203 U. S. 580).....	326
Northern P., v. Slaght (205 U. S. 134)	742	Rosenberger v. Harris (Mem.) (203 U. S. 591)	331
Philadelphia & R., v. Klutt (Mem.) (204 U. S. 672) ..	673	Royster v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695
Northern P., v. Slaughter (205 U. S. 236)	784	Ruef v. O'Neil (Mem.) (205 U. S. 549)	924
St. Louis, B. & M., Sullivan v. (Mem.)	325	Rutter, Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	330
Seaboard Air Line, v. Florida ex rel. Ellis (203 U. S. 261) ..	175	S.
Southern, Heymann v.....	178	Saginaw Match Co. v. Diamond Match Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 589)	330
Southern, v. Hubbard Bros. & Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 544) ..	922	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McSwean (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541) ..	921
Southern, v. Stutts (Mem.) (203 U. S. 590)	331	St. Louis, B. & M. R. Co., Sullivan v. (Mem.)	325
Southern, v. Tift (206 U. S. 428)	1124	St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co., Ex parte (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561) ..	1189
Texas & P., v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. (204 U. S. 426) ..	553	Montana Min. Co. v.	444
Texas & P., Arthur v.	590	Montana Min. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1191
Texas & P., v. Cisco Oil Mill (204 U. S. 449)	562	St. Mary's Franco-American Petro- leum Co. v. West Virginia (203 U. S. 183).....	144
Texas & P., v. Small (Mem.) (205 U. S. 550)	925	Samuel H. Cottrell & Son, Smokeless Fuel Co. v. (Mem.)	923
Ranrsden v. Knowles (Mem.) (206 U. S. 562)	1189	Sarnia, The, Greco v. (Mem.)	330
Rawlins v. Passmore (Mem.) (203 U. S. 583)	327	Sauer v. New York (206 U. S. 536) ..	1176
Reardon, New York ex rel. Hatch v. ..	415	Saxlehner, Eisner v. (Mem.)	331
Rearick v. Pennsylvania (203 U. S. 507)	295	Saylor v. Frantz (Mem.) (205 U. S. 548)	924
Red Bird v. United States (203 U. S. 76)	96	Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. (205 U. S. 1)	681
Reeve v. North Carolina Land & Tim- ber Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 588)	329	School Dist. No. 11 v. Chapman (Mem.) (205 U. S. 545) ..	923
Reinhardt, Travers v.	865	Scott v. Guice (Mem.) (203 U. S. 592)	331
Re Moran (203 U. S. 96)	105	Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Florida ex rel. Ellis (203 U. S. 261)	175
Pollitz (206 U. S. 323)	1081	Security Trust & S. V. Co. v. Lexington (203 U. S. 323)	204
Ughbanks (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561)	1189	Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand (206 U. S. 415)	1117
Resto y Negron, Gonzales Resto v. (Mem.)	335	Seneca Nation, Ex parte (Mem.) (203 U. S. 577)	325
Reynolds v. Connecticut (Mem.) (203 U. S. 584)	328	Serra v. Mortiga (204 U. S. 470)	571
R. Hoe & Co., United States v. (Mem.)	333	Shaw, Richardson v. (Mem.)	329
Rice, Montana ex rel. Haire v.	490	v. United States (Mem.) (203 U. S. 591)	331
Richardson v. Shaw (Mem.) (203 U. S. 587)	329	Wilson v.	351
Riggs, Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v.	168	Shea v. Mobile (Mem.) (205 U. S. 543)	922
Riley, Allen v.	216	Shipp, United States v.	319
Robinson v. American Car & Foundry Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 590) ..	330	Shropshire, W. & Co. v. Bush (204 U. S. 186)	436
Haight & F. Co. v. (Mem.)	327	Siegert, Gandolfi v. (Mem.)	922
Rochester, Rochester R. Co. v.	784	Simon, New York Evening Journal Pub. Co. v. (Mem.)	330
Rochester R. Co. v. Rochester (205 U. S. 236)	784	Skene, Armour & Co. v. (Mem.)	1189
Romeu v. Todd (206 U. S. 358)	1093	Slaght, Northern P. R. Co. v.	738
Roming v. Gillett (Mem.) (205 U. S. 535)	919	Northern P. R. Co. v.	742

CASES REPORTED.

Slaughter v. Loeb (Mem.) (203 U. S. 600)	334	Sullivan v. St. Louis, B. & M. R. Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 578) ..	325
Small, Texas & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	925	Sum Gay v. United States (Mem.) (204 U. S. 668)	671
Smith, Ballentyne v.	803	Superior, National Exchange Bank v. (Mem.)	1190
Burt v.	121	Swing v. Weston Lumber Co. (205 U. S. 275)	799
v. Iverson (Mem.) (203 U. S. 586)	329	T.
v. Jennings (206 U. S. 276) ..	1061
v. Look (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595) ..	332	Taft, United States ex rel. Taylor v.	269
Smithers v.	656	Taggard, Thomas v. (Mem.)	672
v. Tennessee (Mem.) (205 U. S. 548)	924	Taylor v. Burns (203 U. S. 120)	116
v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695	Patterson v. (Mem.)	924
Smithers v. Smith (204 U. S. 632) ..	656	v. United States (Mem.) (205 U. S. 540)	921
Smith, H. & Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v.	612	United States ex rel., v. Taft (203 U. S. 461)	260
Smokeless Fuel Co. v. Samuel H. Cottrell & Son (Mem.) (205 U. S. 544)	923	Tenement House Department, Moeschchen v. (Mem.)	328
Sobey v. Holsclaw (Mem.) (203 U. S. 594)	332	Tennessee, Smith v. (Mem.)	924
South Carolina ex rel. Buchanan v. Jennings (Mem.) (204 U. S. 667)	671	Tennessee Copper Co., Georgia v.	1038
South Dakota, Delamater v.	724	Teter-Heany Development Co., Downes v. (Mem.)	922
Southern Illinois & M. Bridge Co., Stone v.	1057	Texas, Garza de Villereal v. (Mem.) ..	920
Southern R. Co., Heymann v.	178	Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v.	540
v. Hubbard Bros. & Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 544)	922	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. (204 U. S. 426) ..	553
v. Stutts (Mem.) (203 U. S. 590)	331	Arthur v.	590
v. Tift (206 U. S. 428)	1124	v. Cisco Oil Mill (204 U. S. 449)	562
Spalding, Lamar v. (Mem.)	328	v. Small (Mem.) (205 U. S. 550)	925
Spaugh v. Fitts (Mem.) (205 U. S. 540)	921	Thomas v. Kansas (Mem.) (205 U. S. 535)	919
Springer, Cunningham v.	662	v. Taggart (Mem.) (204 U. S. 670)	672
Standard Oil Co. v. Anderson (Mem.) (205 U. S. 545)	923	Thorley v. Pabst Brewing Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 597)	333
Staplehurst, Yates v.	1015	Tift, Southern R. Co. v.	1124
State Council of Va., J. O. U. A. M., National Council of the J. O. U. A. M. v.	132	Tilghman, Eidman v. (Mem.)	326
Stearns v. Todd (Mem.) (204 U. S. 669)	672	Tindle v. Birkett (205 U. S. 183) ..	762
Stephens v. Brast (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541)	921	Tinsley v. Treat (205 U. S. 20)	689
Stephenson, Deutsche Levante Linie v. (Mem.)	923	Todd, Romeu v.	1033
Stevenson Iron Min. Co. v. Kibbe (Mem.) (205 U. S. 537) ..	920	Stearns v. (Mem.)	672
Stewart v. United States (206 U. S. 185)	1017	Torrey Cedar Co., United States v. (Mem.)	925
v. Wright (Mem.) (203 U. S. 590)	330	Tracy v. Ginzberg (205 U. S. 170) ..	755
Stone v. Southern Illinois & M. Bridge Co. (206 U. S. 267)	1057	Travers v. Reinhardt (205 U. S. 423) ..	865
Stranahan, Percy v.	793	Treat, Braden v.	695
Strong v. Buffalo Land & Exploration Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 582) ..	327	Burroughs v.	695
Stuart v. Hauser (Mem.) (203 U. S. 585)	328	Carpenter v.	695
Stutts, Southern R. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	331	Kessler v.	695
		McDowell v.	696
		Morgan v.	695
		Royster v.	695
		Smith v.	695
		Tinsley v.	689
		Whittle v.	695
		Wilcox v.	695
		Trespacios Rice & Irrig. Co., Borden v. (Mem.)	671
		Trickey, Crowe v.	454

CASES REPORTED.

Tromp v. William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 671)	673
Troy Wagon Works Co. v. Hancock (Mem.) (206 U. S. 563) ..	1190
Tucker, Curtin v. (Mem.)	1191
Turner, Duke v.	652

U.

Ughbanks, Re (Mem.) (206 U. S. 561)	1189
Union Bank, Oxford & C. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1190
Union Bridge Co. v. United States (204 U. S. 364)	523
Union Nat. Bank, Neill v. (Mem.) ..	924
Union P. R. Co. v. Fink (204 U. S. 585)	636
v. Fink (Mem.) (203 U. S. 599)	334
Union Trust & D. Co., Euclid Park Nat. Bank v. (Mem.)	924
United Shirt & Collar Co., William Beattie & Son v. (Mem.) ..	924
United States, Allen v.	634
American News Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1190
Angle v. (Mem.)	922
Bay State Dredging Co. v.	1047
v. Benjamin H. Howell, Son & Co. (Mem.) (204 U. S. 667)	671
v. Bethlehem Steel Co. (205 U. S. 105)	731
Bradford v. (Mem.)	1190
v. Brown (206 U. S. 240)	1046
Brown v.	1046
Cherokee Nation v.	96
Clement v. (Mem.)	1189
v. Dalcour (203 U. S. 408)	248
Davidson S. S. Co. v.	764
Eastern Dredging Co. v.	1047
Edelstein v. (Mem.)	922
Ellis v.	1047
v. Farenholt (206 U. S. 226) ..	1036
Fields v.	807
Fite v.	96
Flickinger v. (Mem.)	673
Francis v. (Mem.)	1190
v. George Riggs & Co. (203 U. S. 136)	127
v. G. Falk & Bro. (204 U. S. 143)	411
Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. ..	1022
Grafton v.	1084
v. Heinszen (206 U. S. 370) ..	1098
Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. ...	1034
v. Hite (204 U. S. 343)	514
Hodges v.	65
Kansas v.	510
v. Keatley (204 U. S. 562)	618
v. Kirk (Mem.) (204 U. S. 668)	671
McCarty v. (Mem.)	920

United States v. Marion Trust Co. (Mem.)	1191
v. Marion Trust Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 594)	332
v. Michigan (Mem.) (203 U. S. 601)	335
v. Mitchell (205 U. S. 161)	752
v. Morgan (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595)	333
v. Paine Lumber Co. (206 U. S. 467)	1139
Perovich v.	722
Persons Claiming Rights v. ..	96
Red Bird v.	96
v. R. Hoe & Co. (Mem.) (203 U. S. 595)	333
Shaw v. (Mem.)	331
v. Shipp (203 U. S. 563)	319
Stewart v.	1017
Sum Gay v. (Mem.)	671
Taylor v. (Mem.)	921
v. Torrey Cedar Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 550)	925
Union Bridge Co. v.	523
United States Fidelity & G. Co. v.	516
Wilder v. (Mem.)	674
v. William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. (206 U. S. 118)	983
William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. v.	983
Yee Yuen v. (Mem.)	674
United States ex rel. Lowry v. Allen (203 U. S. 476)	281
West v. Hitchcock (205 U. S. 80)	718
West v. Taft (203 U. S. 461) ..	269
United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States (204 U. S. 349)	516
United States Sav. & L. Co., Convent of St. Rose v. (Mem.) ..	922
Urquhart v. Brown (205 U. S. 179) ..	760
Utica Bank, Yates v.	1015

V.

Van Buren v. Hennessey (Mem.) (203 U. S. 600)	334
Van Horn v. Wilson (204 U. S. 42) ..	360
Varick Bank, Hiscock v.	945
Vickers, Wilson v. (Mem.)	326
Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. (206 U. S. 496)	1155
Vicksburg Waterworks Co., Vicksburg v.	1155
Victor Talking Mach. Co., Leeds & C. Co. v. (Mem.)	1190
Victor v. Levi (Mem.) (203 U. S. 596)	333
Virginia v. West Virginia (206 U. S. 290)	1068

CASES REPORTED.

Vogt v. Vogt (Mem.) (203 U. S. 581)	327	Wilder v. Blackford (Mem.) (205 U. S. 541)	922
Völlkommer, Frank v.	911	v. United States (Mem.) (204 U. S. 674)	674
W.		William Beattie & Son v. United Shirt & Collar Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924
Walker, Bacon v.	499	William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co., Tromp v. (Mem.)	673
v. McLoud (204 U. S. 302)	495	v. United States (206 U. S. 118)	983
Wallace v. Adams (204 U. S. 415)	547	United States v.	983
Walling, Bown v.	503	Williams, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. ...	875
Ward v. Dampskibsselskaber Kjoebenhavn (Mem.) (205 U. S. 544)	923	Wilmington Star Min. Co. v. Fulton (205 U. S. 60)	708
v. Hart (Mem.) (205 U. S. 542)	922	Wilson, Bachtel v.	357
v. Ward (Mem.) (206 U. S. 564)	1190	Bachtel v.	360
Washington, Lawson v. (Mem.)	919	Davis v.	360
Waters v. Emmons (Mem.) (203 U. S. 578)	325	Honore v. (Mem.)	674
Watkins, Haynes v. (Mem.)	673	Miller v.	360
Webb v. King (204 U. S. 43)	360	v. Murphy (Mem.) (203 U. S. 580)	326
Webber, Axtell v. (Mem.)	325	v. Shaw (204 U. S. 24)	351
Webster Coal & Coke Co. v. Cassatt (Mem.) (205 U. S. 547)	924	Van Horn v.	360
Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co. (204 U. S. 176)	430	v. Vickers (Mem.) (203 U. S. 581)	326
Weeks, International Trust Co. v.	224	Wisner, Ex parte (203 U. S. 449)	264
Weinreb v. Fink (Mem.) (203 U. S. 588)	329	W. M. Laird Co., Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v.	292
Wells, Clark v.	138	Wood, Bay Prairie Irrig. Co. v. (Mem.)	923
West, United States ex rel., v. Hitchcock (205 U. S. 80)	718	Wright, Buster v. (Mem.)	334
West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Chicago Consol. Traction Co. (Mem.) (206 U. S. 565)	1190	Stewart v. (Mem.)	330
Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg. (204 U. S. 359)	520	Wymore, Myers v. (Mem.)	925
Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hughes (203 U. S. 505)	294	Wyoming ex rel. Wyoming Agricultural College v. Irvine (206 U. S. 278)	1063
Weston Lumber Co., Swing v.	799	Wyoming Agricultural College, Wyoming ex rel., v. Irvine (206 U. S. 278)	1063
West Virginia, St. Mary's Franco-American Petroleum Co. v. Virginia v.	1068	Y.
Wetmore v. Karrick (205 U. S. 141)	745	Yates v. Bailey (206 U. S. 181)	1015
Wheeler, Mercantile Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	332	v. Jones Nat. Bank (206 U. S. 158)	1002
White v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	v. Staplehurst (206 U. S. 181)	1015
v. The Philadelphia (Mem.) (205 U. S. 546)	923	v. Utica Bank (206 U. S. 181)	1015
White Star Min. Co., Anderson v. (Mem.)	921	Yee Yuen v. United States (Mem.) (204 U. S. 674)	674
v. Hultberg (Mem.) (205 U. S. 540)	921	Youngworth, Gillelen v. (Mem.)	920
Johnson v. (Mem.)	921	Gould v. (Mem.)	920
Whitfield v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. (205 U. S. 489)	895	Hedderly v. (Mem.)	335
Whittle v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695	Hynes v. (Mem.)	335
Whittredge, Hammond v.	606	Z.
Wicomico County v. Bancroft (203 U. S. 112)	112	Zartarian v. Billings (204 U. S. 170)	428
Wightman v. Connecticut (Mem.) (203 U. S. 601)	335	Zell, Ex parte (Mem.) (203 U. S. 586)	329
Wilcox v. Treat (205 U. S. 33)	695	v. Judges of Circuit Court (Mem.) (203 U. S. 577)	325
		v. Leigh (Mem.) (204 U. S. 669)	672

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1906,

Vol. 203.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1906,
AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 203,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1-2	Hodges v. United States	65	96	Moran, Re	105
2-5	"	66	102-104	"	108
5	"	67	104-105	"	109
14-16	"	68	106	Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand
16-18	"	69		View Bldg. Asso.	109
18-21	"	70	106-108	"	111
21-23	"	71	109	Covington & C. Bridge Co. v.
23-26	"	72		Hager	111
26-28	"	73	110-111	"	112
28-31	"	74	112	Wicomico County Comrs. v.
31-33	"	75		Bancroft	112
33-36	"	76	114-115	"	114
36-38	"	77	115-118	"	115
38	New Mexico ex rel. McLean v.		118-119	"	116
	Denver & R. G. R. Co.	78	120	Taylor v. Burns	116
46-47	"	84	120-121	"	117
47-49	"	85	124-125	"	118
49-51	"	86	125-126	"	119
51-54	"	87	127	Andrews v. Eastern Oregon
54-55	"	88		Land Co.	119
56	Landram v. Jordan	88	127-128	"	120
60	"	89	128-129	"	121
60-63	"	90	129	Burt v. Smith	121
63-64	"	91	133	"	125
64	Fidelity Mut. L. Ins. Co. v.		133-135	"	126
	Clark	91	135	"	127
72-74	"	95	136-139	United States v. George Riggs
74-75	"	96		& Co.	127
76	{ Red Bird v. United States		139-141	"	128
	Cherokee Nation v. United		141	Conboy v. First Nat. Bank	128
	States		142-144	"	129
	Fite v. United States		144-146	"	130
	Persons Claiming Rights in		146	Goudy v. Meath	130
	the Cherokee Nation v.		146-148	"	131
	United States	96	148-150	"	132
77	"	97	151	National Council v. State
77-80	"	98		Council	132
80-82	"	99	158	"	135
82-85	"	100	158-161	"	136
85-88	"	101	161-163	"	137
88-90	"	102	163-164	"	138
90-93	"	103	164	Clark v. Wells	138
93-95	"	104	168-170	"	140
95-96	"	105	170-172	"	141
			173	"	145

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here in
174-179	Fisher v. Baker	142	311-312	Mercantile Trust & D. Co. v.
179-182	" "	143		Columbus	198
182-183	" "	144	312-314	" "	199
183-184	St. Mary's Franco-American		314-316	" "	200
	Petroleum Co. v. West Vir-		319-320	" "	202
	ginia	144	320-323	" "	203
184-186	" "	145	323	" "	204
186-188	" "	146	323-325	Security Trust & S. V. Co. v.
191-192	" "	147		Lexington	204
192	" "	148	325-326	" "	205
192	Pettibone v. Nichols	148	329-330	" "	206
193	" "	150	330-332	" "	207
193-195	" "	151	332-335	" "	208
195-202	" "	152	335	" "	209
202-205	" "	153	335-336	Mississippi R. Commission v.
205-207	" "	154		Illinois C. R. Co.	209
207-209	" "	155	336-339	" "	210
209-212	" "	156	339-340	" "	211
212-214	" "	157	340-341	" "	213
214-217	" "	158	341-344	" "	214
217-219	" "	159	344-346	" "	215
219-221	" "	160	346-347	" "	216
221-222	Moyer v. Nichols	160	347-352	Allen v. Riley	216
222	" "	161	352-353	" "	217
222-223	Appleyard v. Massachusetts	161	353-356	" "	218
223-226	" "	162	356-358	" "	219
226-228	" "	163	358	John Woods & Sons v. Carl	219
228-231	" "	164	358-359	" "	220
231-232	" "	165	360	Monterey v. Jacks	220
233	Francis v. Francis	165	360-361	" "	222
236-238	" "	166	361-363	" "	223
238-241	" "	167	363	" "	224
241-242	" "	168	364	International Trust Co. v.
243	Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co.			Weeks	224
	v. Riggs	163	364-366	" "	226
247-248	" "	170	366-368	" "	227
248-250	" "	171	368	Cruit v. Owen	227
250-253	" "	172	368-370	" "	229
253-255	" "	173	370-371	" "	230
255	" "	174	371-372	" "	231
256-257	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.		372	Offield v. New York, N. H. &
	Florida ex rel. Ellis	174		H. R. Co.	231
257-260	" "	175	375	" "	235
261	Seaboard Air Line R. v. Flor-		375-378	" "	236
	ida ex rel. Ellis	175	378	" "	237
261-262	" "	176	379	Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v.
268-269	" "	177		New Haven	237
269-270	" "	178	381-383	" "	238
270-271	Heymann v. Southern R. Co.	178	383-386	" "	239
271-273	" "	179	386-388	" "	240
273-276	" "	180	388-390	" "	241
276-278	" "	181	390	Chattanooga Foundry & P.
278	C. H. Nichols Lumber Co. v.			Works v. Atlanta	241
	Franson	181	395-397	" "	244
280-282	" "	183	397-399	" "	245
282-283	" "	184	399	Guy v. Donald	245
284	Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R.		403	" "	246
	Co.	184	403-406	" "	247
284-285	" "	185	406-408	" "	248
291-293	" "	190	408	United States v. Dalcour	248
293-296	" "	191	420	" "	250
296	" "	192	420-423	" "	251
296-298	National Live Stock Bank v.		423-425	" "	252
	First Nat. Bank	192	425-428	" "	253
298-300	" "	193	428-429	" "	254
305	" "	195	429-434	New York Foundling Hospital
305-307	" "	196		v. Gatti	254
307-310	" "	197	434	" "	255
310	" "	198	434-435	" "	256

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 203 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
435-436	New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti	257	499	Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Rail- road Commission	291
436-437	" "	258	499-501	" "	292
437-439	" "	259	502	Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co.	292
439-441	" "	260	502-504	" "	293
441	Crane v. Buckley	260	504-505	" "	294
443-444	" "	261	505-506	Western U. Telcg. Co. v. Hughes	294
444-446	" "	262	506-507	" "	295
446-448	" "	263	507	Rearick v. Pennsylvania	295
449-450	Wisner, Ex parte	264	509-510	" "	296
455-456	" "	266	510-512	" "	297
456-459	" "	267	512-513	" "	298
459-461	" "	268	514-515	Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree	298
461	" "	269	515-517	" "	299
461-462	United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft	269	517-520	" "	300
462	" "	270	520	" "	301
462-463	" "	271	524	" "	302
463	" "	272	524-527	" "	303
463	" "	273	527-529	" "	304
463-464	" "	274	529-530	" "	305
464	" "	275	531	Illinois C. R. Co. v. Edwards	305
464-465	" "	276	531	Gatewood v. North Carolina	305
465	Gila Valley, G. N. R. Co. v. Lyon	276	535-536	" "	307
466-467	" "	277	536-539	" "	308
467-468	" "	278	539-541	" "	309
470-471	" "	279	541-543	" "	310
471-473	" "	280	543	Cahen v. Brewster	310
473-475	" "	281	546-549	" "	312
476	United States ex rel. Lowry v. Allen	281	549-551	" "	313
478-480	" "	282	551-553	" "	314
480-482	" "	283	553	Board of Education v. Illinois	314
482-483	" "	284	558-559	" "	317
483-484	New Jersey v. Anderson	284	559-562	" "	318
484-485	" "	285	562-563	" "	319
487-489	" "	286	563	United States v. Shipp	319
489-491	" "	287	571	" "	322
491-494	" "	288	571-573	" "	323
494-495	" "	288	573-575	" "	324
496	Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Rail- road Commission	289	577-600	Memorandum Cases	325-334

203 U. S.

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States
AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1906.

[1]*REUBEN HODGES, William R. Clampit, and Wash McKinney, Plffs. in Err.,

v.
UNITED STATES.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-38.)

Civil rights—power of Congress to protect against individual interference.

Congress was not empowered by U. S. Const., 13th Amend., to make it an offense against the United States, cognizable in the Federal courts, for private individuals to compel negro citizens, by intimidation and force, to desist from performing their contracts of employment, but the remedy must be sought through state action and in state tribunals, subject to the supervision of the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error in proper cases.

[No. 14, 1905 Term.]

Submitted October 19, 1905. Ordered for oral argument November 6, 1905. Argued April 23, 1906. Decided May 28, 1906.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas to review a judgment convicting individual citizens of compelling negro citizens, by force and intimidation, to desist from performing their contracts of employment. Reversed and remanded with instructions to sustain a demurrer to the indictment.

NOTE.—As to civil rights of negroes—see notes to Ferguson v. Gies, 9 L.R.A. 589; Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579; Civil Rights Cases, 27 L. ed. U. S. 836; Carter v. Texas, 44 L. ed. U. S. 839; Cumming v. County Bd. of Edu. 44 L. ed. U. S. 262; United States v. Reese, 23 L. ed. U. S. 563; and Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 45 L. ed. U. S. 244.

†[This case was decided at the October, 1905, term, but dissent was not filed until October 22, 1906.—Ed.]

203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On October 8, 1903, the grand jury returned into the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Arkansas an indictment charging that the defendants (now plaintiffs in error), with others, "did knowingly, wilfully, and unlawfully conspire to oppress, threaten, and intimidate Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton, citizens of the United States of African descent, in the free exercise and enjoyment of rights and privileges secured to them and each of them by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and because of their having exercised the same, to wit: The said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton, being then and there persons of African descent and citizens of the United States and of the state of Arkansas, had then and there made and entered into contracts and agreements with James A. Davis and James S. Hodges, persons then and there doing business under the name of Davis & Hodges as copartners, carrying on the business of manufacturers of lumber at White Hall, in said county, the said contracts being for the employment by said firm of the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton as laborers and workmen in and about their said manufacturing establishment, by which contracts the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were, on their part, to perform labor and [3] services at *said manufactory, and were to receive, on the other hand, for their labor and services, compensation, the same being a right and privilege conferred upon them by the 13th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and the laws passed in pursuance thereof, and being a right similar to that enjoyed in said state by the white citizens thereof. and while the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were in the enjoyment of said right and privilege the said defendants did knowingly, wilfully, and unlawfully conspire as aforesaid to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate them in the free exercise and enjoyment of said right and privilege, and because of their having so exercised the same, and because they were citizens of African descent, enjoying said right, by then and there notifying the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton that they must abandon said contracts and their said work at said mill and cease to perform any further labor thereat, or receive any further compensation for said labor, and by threatening, in case they did not so abandon said work, to injure them, and by thereafter then and there wilfully and unlawfully marching and moving in a body to and against the place of business of the said firm while the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were engaged thereat, and while they were in the performance of said contracts thereon, the said defendants being then and there armed with deadly weapons, threatening and intimidating the said workmen there employed, with the purpose of compelling them, by violence and threats and otherwise, to remove from said place of business, to stop said work, and to cease the enjoyment of said right and privilege, and by then and there wilfully, deliberately, and unlawfully compelling said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George [4] Shelton to quit said work and *abandon said place and cease the free enjoyment of all advantages under said contracts, the same being so done by said defendants and each of them for the purpose of driving the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton from said place of business and from their labor because they were colored men and citizens of African descent, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the United States."

A demurrer to this indictment, on the ground that the offense created by §§ 1977 and 5508, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1259, 3712), under which it was found, was not within the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, but was judicially cognizable by state tribunals only, was overruled, a trial had, and the three plaintiffs in error found guilty, sentenced separately to imprisonment for different terms and to fine, and to be thereafter ineligible to any office of profit or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Sections 1977, 1978, 1979, 5508, and 5510 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1259-1262, 3712, 3713) read as follows:

"Sec. 1977. All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other.

"Sec. 1978. All citizens of the United States shall have the same right, in every state and territory, as is enjoyed by white citizens thereof to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property..

"Sec. 1979. Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any state or territory, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities* se-[5] cured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."

"Sec. 5508. If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same; or if two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured,—they shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than ten years; and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to any office or place of honor, profit or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

"Sec. 5510. Every person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any inhabitant of any state or territory to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities, secured or protected by the Constitution and laws of the United States, or to different punishments, pains, or penalties, on account of such inhabitant being an alien, or by reason of his color or race, than are prescribed for the punishment of citizens, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both."

There being constitutional questions involved, the judgment was brought directly to this court on writ of error.

Mr. James P. Clarke submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. L. C. Going and J. F. Gautney were on the brief:

The right enjoyed by the African citizens set out in the indictment was not a right secured to them under the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 286, 36 L. ed. 429, 437, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3-13, 27 L. ed. 835-840, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601.

The right to pursue or follow any of the ordinary vocations of life is not created by the Constitution or laws of the United States, but is among the inherent and inalienable rights of man, and is, therefore, not dependent for its existence upon the Constitution.

Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652.

Some of the rights guaranteed or secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States are patent or trademark rights, the right to homestead public lands, to vote in Federal elections, etc.

United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

But a conspiracy to intimidate and compel officers of a mining company to discharge their employees, or to compel the employees to leave the service of the company, is not an offense against the laws of the United States.

Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542.

The Emancipation Proclamation, by removing the disability of slavery, made the negro a citizen, and placed him upon the same plane before the law as the white race.
203 U. S.

United States v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 28, Fed. Cas. No. 16,151; 1 Kent, Com. 298 and note; State v. Manuel, 20 N. C. 144, (4 Dev. & B. L. 20); State v. Newsom, 27 N. C. (5 Ired. L.) 250.

Assistant Attorney General Purdy, for defendant in error on original submission. Mr. Otis J. Carlton was on the brief:

The 13th Amendment was intended to secure to the colored race practical freedom.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; United States v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 28, Fed. Cas. No. 16,151; United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 835, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 726, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Re Turner, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 84, Fed. Cas. No. 14,247; Smith v. Moody, 26 Ind. 299; People v. Washington, 36 Cal. 658.

For this purpose the people used in the Amendment language which this court has said permits Congress to enact legislation operating directly to punish the acts of individuals, not sanctioned by any color of state authority.

Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 726, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429.

Cases upholding the constitutionality of the fugitive slave laws are important because they give us the rule by which to determine what is appropriate legislation.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 10 L. ed. 1060; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169.

Attorney General Moody for defendant in error on oral argument:

The right to vote at a Federal election (Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152); the right to remain on a homestead entry for the purpose of perfecting the title (United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35); the right of protection while in the custody, upon a charge of crime, of the officers of the United States (Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 429, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617); and the right to furnish information to the authorities of violations of the laws of the United States (Re Quarles, 158 U. S. 532, 39 L. ed. 1080, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959; Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 453, 44 L. ed. 1150, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993),—have each been held to be rights belonging to the citizen derived from the Constitution and laws of the United States; or, to use the words of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5508, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712, secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States, the deprivation of which by a conspiracy was punishable by this section.

The benefits of the 13th Amendment are not confined to the negro race.

Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 726, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429.

The deprivation of a constitutional right may be punished under this section even though the right may not be specifically set forth in any provision of the law or of the Constitution.

Logan v. United States and Ex parte Yarbrough, supra.

There is a valid distinction between the denial to a person of the right to labor by forcible action, which is inspired by motives of personal hostility or ill will, or which results incidentally or necessarily from the commission of an ordinary crime, and the same denial of the right to labor which is inspired by race hostility.

United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 22, 27 L. ed. 835, 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

While the indictment was founded on §§ 1977 and 5508, we have quoted other sections to show the scope of the legislation of Congress on the general question involved.

That prior to the three post bellum amendments to the Constitution the national government had no jurisdiction over a wrong like that charged in this indictment is conceded; that the 14th and 15th Amendments do not justify the legislation is also beyond dispute, for they, as repeatedly held, are restrictions upon state action, and no action on the part of the state is complained of. Unless, therefore, the 13th Amendment vests in the nation the jurisdiction claimed, [15] the remedy must be sought through *state action and in state tribunals, subject to the supervision of this court by writ of error in proper cases.

In the Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 76, 21 L. ed. 394, 408, in defining the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states, this is quoted from the opinion of Mr. Justice Washington in Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 3230:

"The inquiry," he says, "is, What are the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states? We feel no hesitation in confining these expressions to those privileges and immunities which are fundamental; which belong of right to the citizens of all free governments, and which have at all times been enjoyed by citizens of the several states which compose this Union, from the time of their becoming free, independent, and sovereign. What these fundamental principles are, it would be more tedious than difficult to enumerate. They may all, however, be comprehended under the following general heads: protection by the government, with the right to acquire and possess property of every kind, and to pursue and obtain happiness and safety, subject, nevertheless, to such restraints as the government may prescribe for the general good of the whole."

And after referring to other cases this court added (p. 77, L. ed. p. 409):

"It would be the vainest show of learning to attempt to prove by citations of authority, that up to the adoption of the recent amendments no claim or pretense was set up that those rights depended on the Federal government for their existence or protection, beyond the very few express limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed upon the states,—such, for instance, as the prohibition against ex post facto laws, bills of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But, with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the states, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative power of the states, and without that of the Federal government."

*Notwithstanding the adoption of these [16] three amendments, the national government still remains one of enumerated powers, and the 10th Amendment, which reads, "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people," is not shorn of its vitality. True, the 13th Amendment grants certain specified and additional power to Congress, but any congressional legislation directed against individual action which was not warranted before the 13th Amendment must find authority in it. And in interpreting the scope of that Amendment it is well to bear in mind the words of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 188, 6 L. ed. 23, 68, which, though spoken more than four score years ago, are still the rule of construction of constitutional provisions:

"As men whose intentions require no concealment generally employ the words which most directly and aptly express the ideas they intend to convey, the enlightened patriots who framed our Constitution, and the people who adopted it, must be understood to have employed words in their natural sense, and to have intended what they have said."

The 13th Amendment reads:

"Sec. 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

"Sec. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The meaning of this is as clear as language can make it. The things denounced are slavery and involuntary servitude, and Congress is given power to enforce that denunciation. All understand by these terms a condition of enforced compulsory service of one to another. While the inciting cause of the Amendment was the emancipation of the colored race, yet it is not an attempt to commit that race to the care of the nation. It is the denunciation of a condition, and not a declaration* in favor of a particular people. It reaches every race and every individual, and if in any respect it commits one race to the nation, it commits every race and every individual thereof. Slavery or involuntary servitude of the Chinese, of the Italian, of the Anglo-Saxon, are as much within its compass as slavery or involuntary servitude of the African. Of this Amendment it was said by Mr. Justice Miller in Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 69, 21 L. ed. 406: "Its two short sections seem hardly to admit of construction." And again: "To withdraw the mind from the contemplation of this grand yet simple declaration of the personal freedom of all the human race within the jurisdiction of this government . . . requires an effort, to say the least of it."

A reference to the definitions in the dictionaries of words whose meaning is so thoroughly understood by all seems an affectation, yet in Webster slavery is defined as "the state of entire subjection of one person to the will of another," and a slave is said to be "a person who is held in bondage to another." Even the secondary meaning given recognizes the fact of subjection, as "one who has lost the power of resistance; one who surrenders himself to any power whatever; as a slave to passion, to lust, to strong drink, to ambition," and servitude is by the same authority declared to be "the state of voluntary or compulsory subjection to a master."

It is said, however, that one of the disabilities of slavery, one of the indicia of its existence, was a lack of power to make or perform contracts, and that when these defendants, by intimidation and force, compelled the colored men named in the indictment to desist from performing their contract, they, to that extent, reduced those parties to a condition of slavery,—that is, of subjection to the will of defendants, and deprived them of a freeman's power to perform his contract. But every wrong done to an individual by another, acting singly or in concert with others, operates pro tanto to abridge some of the freedom to which the individual is entitled. A freeman has a right to be protected in his person from an assault and battery. He is entitled to hold his property safe from trespass* or ap-[18]propriation; but no mere personal assault or trespass or appropriation operates to reduce the individual to a condition of slavery. Indeed, this is conceded by counsel for the government, for in their brief (after referring to certain decisions of this court) it is said:

"With these decisions, and many others that might be cited, before us, it is vain to contend that the Federal Constitution secures to a citizen of the United States the right to work at a given occupation or particular calling free from injury, oppression, or interference by individual citizens.

"Even though such right be a natural or inalienable right, the duty of protecting the citizen in the enjoyment of such right, free from individual interference, rests alone with the state.

"Unless, therefore, the additional element, to wit, the infliction of an injury upon one individual citizen by another, solely on account of his color, be sufficient ground to redress such injury, the individual citizen suffering such injury must be left for redress of his grievance to the state laws."

The logic of this concession points irresistibly to the contention that the 13th Amendment operates only to protect the African race. This is evident from the fact that nowhere in the record does it appear that the parties charged to have been wronged by the defendants had ever been themselves slaves, or were the descendants of slaves. They took no more from the Amendment than any other citizens of the United States. But if, as we have seen, that denounces a condition possible for all races and all individuals, then a like wrong perpetrated by white men upon a Chinese, or by black men upon a white man, or by any men upon any man on account of his race, would come within the jurisdiction of Congress, and that protection of individual rights which, prior to the 13th Amendment, was unquestionably within the jurisdiction solely of the states, would, by virtue of that Amendment, be transferred to the nation, and subject to the legislation of Congress.

[19] *But that it was not the intent of the Amendment to denounce every act done to an individual which was wrong if done to a free man, and yet justified in a condition of slavery, and to give authority to Congress to enforce such denunciation, consider the legislation in respect to the Chinese. In slave times in the slave states not infrequently every free negro was required to carry with him a copy of a judicial decree or other evidence of his right to freedom or be subject to arrest. That was one of the incidents or badges of slavery. By the act of May 5, 1892 [27 Stat. at L. 25, chap. 60, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1319], Congress required all Chinese laborers within the limits of the United States to apply for a certificate, and any one who, after one year from the passage of the act, should be found within the jurisdiction of the United States without such certificate, might be arrested and deported. In Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016, the validity of the Chinese deportation act was presented, elaborately argued, and fully considered by this court. While there was a division of opinion, yet at no time during the progress of the litigation, and by no individual, counsel, or court connected with it, was it suggested that the requiring of such a certificate was evidence of a condition of slavery, or prohibited by the 13th Amendment.

One thing more: at the close of the Civil War, when the problem of the emancipated slaves was before the nation, it might have left them in a condition of alienage, or established them as wards of the government, like the Indian tribes, and thus retained for the nation jurisdiction over them. or it might, as it did, give them citizenship. It chose the latter. By the 14th Amendment it made citizens of all born within the limits of the United States and subject to its jurisdiction. By the 15th it prohibited any state from denying the right of suffrage on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, and by the 13th it forbade slavery or involuntary servitude anywhere within the limits of the land. Whether this was or was not the wiser way to deal with the great problem is not a mat-

[20] ter for the courts to *consider. It is for us to accept the decision, which declined to constitute them wards of the nation or leave them in a condition of alienage where they would be subject to the jurisdiction of Congress, but gave them citizenship, doubtless believing that thereby in the long run their best interests would be subserved, they taking their chances with other citizens in the states where they should make their homes.

For these reasons we think that the United States court had no jurisdiction of the wrong charged in the indictment. The judgments are reversed, and the case remanded with instructions to sustain the demurrer to the indictment.

Mr. Justice Brown concurs in the judgments.

Mr. Justice Harlan (with whom concurs Mr. Justice Day), dissenting:

The plaintiffs in error were indicted with eleven others in the district court of the United States, eastern district of Arkansas, for the crime of having knowingly, wilfully, and unlawfully conspired to oppress, threaten, and intimidate Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton, persons of African descent and citizens of the United States and of Arkansas, in the free exercise and enjoyment of the right and privilege—alleged to be secured to them respectively by the Constitution and laws of the United States—of disposing of their labor and services by contract and of performing the terms of such contract without discrimination against them because of their race or color, and without illegal interference or by violent means.†

*The indictment was based primarily upon [21] § 5508 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), which provides: “§ 5508. If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen

†The indictment charged that “the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton, being then and there persons of African descent, and citizens of the United States and of the state of Arkansas, had then and there made and entered into contracts and agreements with James A. Davis and James S. Hodges, persons then and there doing business under the name of Davis & Hodges, as copartners carrying on the business of manufacturers of lumber at White Hall, in said county, the said contracts being for the employment by said firm of the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton, as laborers and workmen in and about their said manufacturing establishment, by which contracts the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were, on their part, to perform labor and services at said manufactory, and were to receive, on the other hand, for their labor and services, compensation, the same being

[22] In the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the *same; or if two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured, they shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars, and imprisoned not more than ten years, and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to any office or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

Other sections of the statutes relating to civil rights, and referred to in the discussion at the bar, although not, perhaps, vital to the decision of the present case, are as follows: "§ 1977 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1259). All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, and be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other. § 1978. All citizens of the United States shall have the same right, in every state and territory, as is enjoyed by white citizens thereof, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property. § 1979. Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any state or territory, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution *and [23] laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress." "§ 5510 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3713). Every person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any inhabitant of any state or territory to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities, secured or protected by the Constitution and laws of the United States, or to different punishments, pains, or penalties, on account of such inhabitant being an alien, or by reason of his color or race, than are prescribed for the punishment of citizens, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both."

A demurrer to the indictment was overruled, and the defendants having pleaded not guilty, they were tried before a jury, and some of them—the present plaintiffs in error—were convicted of the crime charged, were each fined $100, and ordered to be imprisoned for one year and a day. A motion for new trial having been denied, they have brought the case to this court.

In our consideration of the questions now raised it must be taken, upon this record, a right and privilege conferred upon them by the 13th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and the laws passed in pursuance thereof, and being a right similar to that enjoyed in said state by the white citizens thereof; and while the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were in the enjoyment of said right and privilege the said defendants did knowingly, wilfully, and unlawfully conspire as aforesaid to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate them in the free exercise and enjoyment of said right and privilege, and because of their having so exercised the same, and because they were citizens of African descent, enjoying said right, by then and there notifying the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton that they must abandon said contracts and their said work at said mill, and cease to perform any further labor thereat, or receive any further compensation for said labor, and by threatening, in case they did not so abandon said work, to injure them, and by thereafter then and there wilfully and unlawfully marching and moving in a body to and against the places of business of the said firm while the said

Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton were engaged thereat, and while they were in the performance of said contracts thereon, the said defendants being then and there armed with deadly weapons, threatening and intimidating the said workmen there employed, with the purpose of compelling them, by violence and threats and otherwise, to remove from said place of business, to stop said work, and to cease the enjoyment of said right and privilege, and by then and there wilfully, deliberately, and unlawfully compelling said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton to quit said work and abandon said place and cease the free enjoyment of all advantages under said contracts, the same being so done by said defendants and each of them for the purpose of driving the said Berry Winn, Dave Hinton, Percy Legg, Joe Mardis, Joe McGill, Dan Shelton, Jim Hall, and George Shelton from said place of business and from their labor because they were colored men and citizens of African descent, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the United States."

as conclusively established by the verdict and judgment,—

That certain persons—the said Berry Winn and others above named with him—citizens of the United States, and of Arkansas, and of African descent, entered into a contract whereby they agreed to perform, for compensation, service and labor in and about the manufacturing business in that state of a private individual;

That those persons, in execution of their contract, entered upon and were actually engaged in performing the work they agreed to do, when the defendants—the present plaintiffs in error—knowingly and wilfully conspired to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate such laborers, solely because of their having made that contract, and because of their race and color, in the free exercise of their right to dispose of their labor, [24] and *prevent them from carrying out their contract to render such service and labor;

That, in the prosecution of such conspiracy, the defendants, by violent means, compelled those laborers, simply, “because they were colored men and citizens of African descent,” to quit their work and abandon the place at which they were performing labor in execution of their contract; and

That, in consequence of those acts of the defendant conspirators, the laborers referred to were hindered and prevented, solely because of their race and color, from enjoying the right by contract to dispose of their labor upon such terms and to such persons as to them seemed best.

Was the right or privilege of these laborers thus to dispose of their labor secured to them “by the Constitution or laws of the United States?” If so, then this case is within the very letter of § 5508 of the Revised Statutes, and the judgment should be affirmed if that section be not unconstitutional.

But I need not stop to discuss the constitutionality of § 5508. It is no longer open to question, in this court, that Congress may, by appropriate legislation, protect any right or privilege arising from, created or secured by, or dependent upon, the Constitution or laws of the United States. That is what that section does. It purports to do nothing more. In Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, it was distinctly adjudged that § 5508 was a valid exercise of power by Congress. In Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 286, 293, 36 L. ed. 429, 437, 439, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617, 623, 626, this court stated that the validity of § 5508 had been sustained in the Yarbrough Case, and, speaking by Mr. Justice Gray, said: “In United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 217, 23 L. ed. 563, 564, decided at October term, 1875, this court, speaking by Chief Justice Waite, said: ‘Rights and immunities created by or dependent upon the Constitution of the United States can be protected by Congress. The form and the manner of the protection may be such as Congress, in the legitimate exercise of its legislative discretion, shall provide. These may be varied to meet the necessities of the particular right to be *protected.’” After [25] referring to prior adjudications the court in the Logan Case also unanimously declared: “The whole scope and effect of this series of decisions is that, while certain fundamental rights, recognized and declared, but not granted or created, in some of the amendments to the Constitution, are thereby guaranteed only against violation or abridgment by the United States or by the states as the case may be, and cannot therefore be affirmatively enforced by Congress against unlawful acts of individuals, yet that every right created by, arising under, or dependent upon, the Constitution of the United States, may be protected and enforced by Congress, by such means and in such manner as Congress, in the exercise of the correlative duty of protection, or of the legislative powers conferred upon it by the Constitution, may, in its discretion, deem most eligible and best adapted to attain the object.”

In Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 44 L. ed. 1150, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993, the language of the court was: “We have seen that by § 5508 of the Revised Statutes it is made an offense against the United States for two or more persons to conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States,—the punishment prescribed being a fine of not more than $5,000, imprisonment not more than ten years, and ineligibility to any office or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States. And by § 5509 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), it is provided that if, in committing the above offense, any other felony or misdemeanor be committed, the offender shall suffer such punishment as is attached to such felony or misdemeanor by the laws of the state in which the offense is committed. No question has been made—indeed, none could successfully be made—as to the constitutionality of these statutory provisions. Ex parte Yarbrough, supra; United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35. Referring to those provisions and to the clause of the Constitution giving Congress authority to pass all laws *necessary and proper for carrying into execution the powers specifically granted to it, and all other powers vested in the government of the United States, . . .

this court has said: 'In the exercise of this general power of legislation, Congress may use any means appearing to it most eligible and appropriate, which are adapted to the end to be accomplished, and are consistent with the letter and the spirit of the Constitution.' Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 283, 36 L. ed. 429, 435, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617, 622."

In view of these decisions it is unnecessary to examine the grounds upon which the constitutionality of § 5508 rests; and I may assume that the power of the national government, by appropriate legislation, to protect a right created by, derived from, or dependent in any degree upon, the Constitution of the United States, cannot be disputed.

I come now to the main question,—whether a conspiracy or combination to forcibly prevent citizens of African descent, solely because of their race and color, from disposing of their labor by contract upon such terms as they deem proper, and from carrying out such contract, infringes or violates a right or privilege created by, derived from, or dependent upon, the Constitution of the United States.

Before the 13th Amendment was adopted the existence of freedom or slavery within any state depended wholly upon the Constitution and laws of such state. However abhorrent to many was the thought that human beings of African descent were held as slaves and chattels, no remedy for that state of things as it existed in some of the states could be given by the United States in virtue of any power it possessed prior to the adoption of the 13th Amendment. That condition, however, underwent a radical change when that Amendment became a part of the supreme law of the land, and, as such, binding upon all the states and all the people, as well as upon every branch of government, Federal and state. By the Amendment it was ordained that "neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as [27] a punishment for *crime where of the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction;" and "Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." Although in words and form prohibitive, yet, in law, by its own force, that Amendment destroyed slavery and all its incidents and badges, and established freedom. It also conferred upon every person within the jurisdiction of the United States (except those legally imprisoned for crime) the right, without discrimination against them on account of their race, to enjoy all the privileges that inhere in freedom. It went further, however, and by its 2d section, invested Congress with power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce its provisions. To that end, by direct, primary legislation, Congress may not only prevent the re-establishing of the institution of slavery, pure and simple, but may make it impossible that any of its incidents or badges should exist or be enforced in any state or territory of the United States. It therefore became competent for Congress, under the 13th Amendment, to make the establishing of slavery, as well as all attempts, whether in the form of a conspiracy or otherwise, to subject anyone to the badges or incidents of slavery, offenses against the United States, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both. And legislation of that character would certainly be appropriate for the protection of whatever rights were given or created by the Amendment. So, legislation making it an offense against the United States to conspire to injure or intimidate a citizen in the free exercise of any right secured by the Constitution is broad enough to embrace a conspiracy of the kind charged in the present indictment. "A right or immunity, whether created by the Constitution or only guaranteed by it, may be protected by Congress." This court so adjudged in Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 310, 25 L. ed. 664, 666, as it had previously adjudged in Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 10 L. ed. 1060, and in United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563. The colored laborers against whom the conspiracy in question was directed *owe their freedom as well as their [28] exemption from the incidents and badges of slavery alone to the Constitution of the United States. Yet it is said that their right to enjoy freedom and to be protected against the badges and incidents of slavery is not secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States.
203 U. S.

It may be also observed that the freedom created and established by the 13th Amendment was further protected against assault when the 14th Amendment became a part of the supreme law of the land; for that Amendment provided that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. To deprive any person of a privilege inhering in the freedom ordained and established by the 13th Amendment is to deprive him of a privilege inhering in the liberty recognized by the 14th Amendment. It is true that the present case is not one of the deprivation, by the Constitution or laws of the state, of the privilege of disposing of one's labor as he deems proper. But it is one of a combination and conspiracy by individuals acting in hostility to rights conferred by the Amendment that ordained and established freedom and conferred upon every person within the jurisdiction of the United States (not held lawfully in custody for crime) the privileges that are fundamental in a state of freedom, and which were violently taken from the laborers in question solely because of their race and color.

Let us see whether these principles do not find abundant support in adjudged cases.

One of the earliest cases arising under the 13th Amendment was that of United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, 318, 320, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897. It became necessary in that case for Mr. Justice Bradley, holding the circuit court, to consider the scope and effect of the 13th Amendment and the extent of the power of Congress to enforce its provisions. Referring to the 13th Amendment, that eminent jurist said that "[29] *this is not merely a prohibition against the passage or enforcement of any law inflicting or establishing slavery or involuntary servitude, but it is a positive declaration that slavery shall not exist. . . . So, undoubtedly, by the 13th Amendment, Congress has power to legislate for the entire eradication of slavery in the United States. This Amendment had an affirmative operation the moment it was adopted. It enfranchised four millions of slaves, if, indeed, they had not previously been enfranchised by the operation of the Civil War. Congress, therefore, acquired the power not only to legislate for the eradication of slavery, but the power to give full effect to this bestowment of liberty on these millions of people. All this it essayed to do by the civil rights bill passed April 9, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 31), by which it was declared that all persons born in the United States, and not subject to a foreign power (except Indians, not taxed), should be citizens of the United States; and that such citizens, of every race and color, without any regard to any previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, should have the same right, in every state and territory, to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey, real and personal property, and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property, as is enjoyed by white citizens, and should be subject to like punishment, pains, and penalties, and to none other, any law, etc., to the contrary notwithstanding. It was supposed that the eradication of slavery and involuntary servitude of every form and description required that the slave should be made a citizen and placed on an entire equality before the law with the white citizen, and, therefore, that Congress had the power, under the Amendment, to declare and effectuate these objects. . . . Con- ceding this to be true (which I think it is), Congress then had the right to go further and to enforce its declaration by passing laws for the prosecution and punishment of those who should deprive or attempt to deprive any person of the rights thus conferred upon them. Without having this power, Congress could not enforce the [30] Amendment. It cannot be doubted, therefore, that Congress had the power to make it a penal offense to conspire to deprive a person of, or to hinder him in, the exercise and enjoyment of the rights and privileges conferred by the 13th Amendment and the laws thus passed in pursuance thereof. But this power does not authorize Congress to pass laws for the punishment of ordinary crimes and offenses against persons of the colored race or any other race. That belongs to the state government alone. All ordinary murders, robberies, assaults, thefts and offenses whatsoever are cognizable only in the state courts, unless, indeed, the state should deny to the class of persons referred to the equal protection of the laws. . . . To illustrate: If in a community or neighborhood composed principally of whites, a citizen of African descent, or of the Indian race, not within the exception of the Amendment, should propose to lease and cultivate a farm, and a combination should be formed to expel him and prevent him from the accomplishment of his purpose on account of his race or color, it cannot be doubted that this would be a case within the power of Congress to remedy and redress. It would be a case of interference with that person's exercise of his equal rights as a citizen because of his race. But if that person should be injured in his person or property by any wrongdoer for the mere felonious or wrongful purpose of malice, revenge, hatred, or gain, without any design to interfere with his rights of citizenship or equality before the laws, as being a person of a different race and color from the white race, it would be an ordinary crime, punishable by the state laws only."*

This was followed by the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 20, 22, 27 L. ed. 835, 842, 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, 28, 29, in which the court passed upon the constitutionality of an act of Congress providing for the full and equal enjoyment by every race, equally, of the accommodations, advantages, and facilities of theaters and public conveyances, and other places of public amusement; and in which the court also considered the scope and effect of the 13th Amendment. In that case the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Bradley,—*who, as we have seen, delivered [31] the judgment in the case just cited,—said: "By its own unaided force and effect it abolished slavery and established universal free- dom. Still, legislation may be necessary and proper to meet all the various cases and circumstances to be affected by it, and to prescribe proper modes of redress for its violation in letter or spirit. And such legislation may be primary and direct in its character; for the Amendment is not a mere prohibition of state laws establishing or upholding slavery, but an absolute declaration that slavery or involuntary servitude shall not exist in any part of the United States. It is true that slavery cannot exist without law, any more than property in lands and goods can exist without law; and, therefore, the 13th Amendment may be regarded as nullifying all state laws which establish or uphold slavery. But it has a reflex character also, establishing and decreeing universal civil and political freedom throughout the United States; and it is assumed that the power vested in Congress to enforce the article by appropriate legislation clothes Congress with power to pass all laws necessary and proper for abolishing all badges and incidents of slavery in the United States. . . .

[32] The long existence of African slavery in this country gave us very distinct notions of what it was and what were its necessary incidents. Compulsory service of the slave for the benefit of the master, restraint of his movements except by the master's will, disability to hold property, to make contracts, to have a standing in court, to be a witness against a white person, and such like burdens and incapacities, were the inseparable incidents of the institution. Severe punishments for crimes were imposed on the slave than on free persons guilty of the same offenses. . . . We must not forget that the province and scope of the 13th and 14th Amendments are different; the former simply abolished slavery; the latter prohibited the states from abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, by depriving them of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and *from denying to any the equal protection of the laws. The Amendments are different, and the powers of Congress under them are different. What Congress has power to do under one, it may not have power to do under the other. Under the 13th Amendment it has only to do with slavery and its incidents. Under the 14th Amendment it has power to counteract and render nugatory all state laws and proceedings which have the effect to abridge any of the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or to deprive them of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or to deny to any of them the equal protection of the laws. Under the 13th Amendment, the legislation, so far as necessary or proper to eradicate all forms and incidents of slavery and involuntary servitude, may be direct and primary, operating upon the acts of individuals, whether sanctioned by state legislation or not; under the 14th, as we have already shown, it must necessarily be and can only be corrective in its character, addressed to counteract and afford relief against state regulations or proceedings."

I participated in the decision of the Civil Rights Cases, but was not able to concur with my brethren in holding the act there involved to be beyond the power of Congress. But I stood with the court in the declaration that the 13th Amendment not only established and decreed universal civil and political freedom throughout this land, but abolished the incidents or badges of slavery, among which, as the court declared, was the disability, based merely on race discrimination, to hold property, to make contracts, to have a standing in court, and to be a witness against a white person.

One of the important aspects in the present discussion of the Civil Rights Cases is that the court there proceeded distinctly upon the ground that although the Constitution and statutes of a state may not be repugnant to the 13th Amendment, nevertheless, Congress, by legislation of a direct and primary character, may, in order to enforce the Amendment, reach and punish individuals whose acts are in hostility *to [33] rights and privileges derived from, or secured by, or dependent upon, that Amendment.

These views were explicitly referred to and reaffirmed in the recent case of Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 726, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429. That was an indictment against a single individual for having unlawfully and knowingly returned, forcibly and against their will, two persons from Florida to Georgia, to be held in the latter state in a condition of peonage, in violation of the statutes of the United States (Rev. Stat. 1900, 5526, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1266, 3715). A person arbitrarily or forcibly held against his will for the purpose of compelling him to render personal services in discharge of a debt is in a condition of peonage. It was not claimed in that case that peonage was sanctioned by or could be maintained under the Constitution or laws either of Florida or Georgia. The argument there on behalf of the accused was, in part, that the 13th Amendment was directed solely against the states and their laws, and that its provisions could not be made applicable to individuals whose illegal conduct was not authorized, permitted, or sanctioned by some act, resolution, order, regulation, or usage of the state.

That argument was rejected by every member of this court, and we all agreed that Congress had power, under the 13th Amendment, not only to forbid the existence of peonage, but to make it an offense against the United States for any person to hold, arrest, return, or cause to be held, arrested or returned, or who in any manner aided in the arrest or return, of another person, to a condition of peonage. After quoting the above sentences from the opinion in the Civil Rights Cases, Mr. Justice Brewer, speaking for the court, said: "Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the 13th Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude. *This legis-

[34]lation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain, but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, or of its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this whether there be municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding. It operates directly on every citizen of the republic, wherever his residence may be." The Clyatt Case proceeded upon the ground that, although the Constitution and laws of the state might be in perfect harmony with the 13th Amendment, yet the compulsory holding of one individual by another individual for the purpose of compelling the former, by personal service, to discharge his indebtedness to the latter, created a condition of involuntary servitude or peonage, was in derogation of the freedom established by that Amendment, and, therefore, could be reached and punished by the nation. Is it consistent with the principle upon which that case rests to say that an organized body of individuals who forcibly prevent free citizens, solely because of their race, from making a living in a legitimate way, do not infringe any right secured by the national Constitution, and may not be reached or punished by the nation? One who is shut up by superior or overpowering force, constantly present and threatening, from earning his living in a lawful way of his own choosing, is as much in a condition of involuntary servitude as if he were forcibly held in a condition of peonage. In each case his will is enslaved, because illegally subjected, by a combination that he cannot resist, to the will of others in respect of matters which a freeman is entitled to control in such way as to him seems best. It would seem impossible, under former decisions, to sustain the view that a combination or conspiracy of individuals, albeit acting without the sanction of the state, may not be reached and punished by the United States, if the combination and conspiracy has for its object, by force, to prevent or burden the free exercise or enjoyment *of a [35] right or privilege created or secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States.

The only way in which the present case can be taken out of § 5508 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), is to hold that a combination or conspiracy of individuals to prevent citizens or African descent, because of their race, from freely disposing of their labor by contract, does not infringe or violate any right or privilege secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. But such a proposition, I submit, is inadmissible, if regard be had to former decisions. As we have seen, this court has held that the 13th Amendment, by its own force, without the aid of legislation, not only conferred freedom upon every person (not legally held in custody for crime) within the jurisdiction of the United States, but the right and privilege of being free from the badges or incidents of slavery. And it has declared that one of the insuperable incidents of slavery, as it existed at the time of the adoption of the 13th Amendment, was the disability of those in slavery to make contracts. It has also adjudged—no member of this court holding to the contrary—that any attempt to subject citizens to the incidents or badges of slavery could be made an offense against the United States. If the 13th Amendment established freedom, and conferred, without the aid of legislation, the right to be free from the badges and incidents of slavery, and if the disability to make or enforce contracts for one's personal services was a badge of slavery, as it existed when the 13th Amendment was adopted, how is it possible to say that the combination or conspiracy charged in the present indictment, and conclusively established by the verdict and judgment, was not in hostility to rights secured by the Constitution?

I have already said that the liberty protected by the 14th Amendment against state action inconsistent with due process of law is neither more nor less than the freedom established by the 13th Amendment. This I think, cannot be doubted. In Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578. 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. 431, *we said that [36] such liberty "means not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person, as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work when he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation, and for that purpose to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned." All these rights, as this court adjudged in the Allgeyer Case, are embraced in the liberty which the 14th Amendment protects against hostile state action, when such state action is wanting in due process of law. They are rights essential in the freedom conferred by the 13th Amendment. If, for instance, a person is prevented, because of his race, from living and working where and for whom he will, or from earning his livelihood by any lawful calling that he may elect to pursue, then he is hindered in the exercise of rights and privileges secured to freemen by the Constitution of the United States. If secured by the Constitution of the United States, then, unquestionably, rights of that class are embraced by such legislation as that found in § 5508.

The opinion of the court, it may be observed, does not, in words, adjudge § 5508 to be unconstitutional. But if its scope and effect are not wholly misapprehended by me, the court does adjudge that Congress cannot make it an offense against the United States for individuals to combine or conspire to prevent, even by force, citizens of African descent, solely because of their race, from earning a living. Such is the import and practical effect of the present decision, although the court has heretofore unanimously held that the right to earn one's living in all legal ways, and to make lawful contracts in reference thereto, is a vital part of the freedom established by the Constitution, and although it has been held, time and again, that Congress may, by appropriate *legislation, grant, protect, and enforce any right, derived from, secured or created by, or dependent upon, that instrument. These general principles, it is to be regretted, are now modified, so as to deny to millions of citizen-laborers of African descent, deriving their freedom from the nation, the right to appeal for national protection against lawless combinations of individuals who seek, by force, and solely because of the race of such laborers, to deprive them of the freedom established by the Constitution of the United States, so far as that freedom involves the right of such citizens, without discrimination against them because of their race, to earn a living in all lawful ways, and to dispose of their labor by contract. I cannot assent to an interpretation of the Constitution which denies national protection to vast numbers of our people in respect of rights derived by them from the nation. The interpretation now placed on the 13th Amendment is, I think, entirely too narrow, and is hostile to the freedom established by the Supreme Law of the land. It goes far towards neutralizing many declarations made as to the object of the recent Amendments of the Constitution, a common purpose of which, this court has said, was to secure to a people theretofore in servitude, the free enjoyment, without discrimination merely on account of their race, of the essential rights that appertain to American citizenship and to freedom. United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 217, 23 L. ed. 563, 564; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 555, 23 L. ed. 588, 592; Virginia v. Rives (Ex parte Virginia) 100 U. S. 334, 25 L. ed. 675; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 345, 25 L. ed. 679; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 665; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 386, 26 L. ed. 570; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 23, 27 L. ed. 835, 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

[37]

203 U. S.

The objections urged to the view taken by the court are not met by the suggestion that this court may revise the final judgment of the state court, if it should deny to the complaining party a right secured by the Federal Constitution; for the revisory power of this court would be of no avail to the complaining party if it be true, as seems now to be adjudged, that a conspiracy to deprive colored citizens, solely because of *their race, of the right to earn a living in a [38] lawful way, infringes no right secured to them by the Federal Constitution.

As the nation has destroyed both slavery and involuntary servitude everywhere within the jurisdiction of the United States, and invested Congress with power, by appropriate legislation, to protect the freedom thus established against all the badges and incidents of slavery as it once existed; as the disability to make valid contracts for one's services was, as this court has said, an inseparable incident of the institution of slavery which the 13th Amendment destroyed; and as a combination or conspiracy to prevent citizens of African descent, solely because of their race, from making and performing such contracts, is thus in hostility to the rights and privileges that inhere in the freedom established by that Amendment,—I am of opinion that the case is within § 5508, and that the judgment should be affirmed.

For these reasons, I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court.

TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO EX REL.
E. J. McLEAN & COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
DENVER & RIO GRANDE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 38-55.)

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—
Federal question.

1. A controversy as to the constitutional right of a territorial legislature to pass a specified law under the broad legislative power conferred by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1851, involves the validity of an authority exercised under the United States within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), § 2, defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over the supreme courts of the territories.

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—
amount in dispute.

2. Some sum or value must be in dispute in order to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court over the supreme courts of the territories which is conferred by the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), § 2, without regard to the sum or value in dispute, in cases involving the validity of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States.

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—
amount in dispute.

3. A suit in which the matter in dispute is the right of consignors to have a consignment shipped by a common carrier

NOTE.—As to Federal question as sustaining appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over territorial supreme courts—see note to New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, post, 254.

On judicial notice—see note to Olive v. State, 4 L.R.A. 44.

Inspection laws as regulations of commerce.

I. In general.

a. General principles.

b. Illustrative cases.

1. Merchandise generally.
2. Food.
3. Intoxicating liquors.
4. Vessels and cargo.

II. Discrimination.

III. Inspection fees.

The constitutionality of state legislation regulating the importation of infected animals, having been discussed in a note to Reid v. Colorado, 47 L. ed. U. S. 108, is not herein considered. Nor are state quarantine laws discussed here. Inspection laws have reference only to personal property, and are inapplicable to free human beings. New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. ed. 383, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87.

I. In general.

a. General principles.

So far as commerce with foreign nations is concerned, the Federal Constitution, in article 1, § 10, expressly reserves the right of the states, subject to the revision and control of Congress, to enact inspection laws and to collect the amounts necessary for their execution. "We think the same principle," said Mr. Chief Justice Fuller in Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, "must apply to interstate commerce."

Inspection laws for the protection of the people against fraudulent practices and for the suppression of fraud may be enacted by the states, although such legislation has an incidental and indirect effect upon interstate commerce. Ibid.

A state inspection law must not substantially hamper or burden the constitutional right, on the one hand, to make, and, on the other hand, to receive, an interstate shipment. Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

To forbid trade in respect to any known article of commerce irrespective of its condition and quality, merely on account of its intrinsic nature and the injurious consequences of its use or abuse, has never been regarded as within the legitimate scope of state inspection laws. Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062.

Inspection laws act as well on importations as on exportations. Green v. Savannah, R. M. Charlt. (Ga.) 368; Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture,—supra.

b. Illustrative cases.

1. Merchandise generally.

The removal or destruction of infectious or unsound articles was said by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678, to be an exercise of the power of inspection.

The state of Louisiana may, without infringing the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, require hay offered for sale at New Orleans to be inspected. State v. Fosdick, 21 La. Ann. 256. See also infra, III., Hay Inspectors v. Pleasants, 23 La. Ann. 349.

A municipal ordinance requiring coals sold within the city to be measured by a city inspector is a valid inspection law. Charleston v. Rogers, 2 McCord, L. 495, 13 Am. Dec. 751.

A state law relative to the exportation of hides imported from Mexico is no less an inspection law because it in terms provides to its destination involves a valuable right, measurable in money, and therefore satisfies the requirements of the act of March 3, 1885, conferring upon the Supreme Court of the United States appellate jurisdiction over the supreme courts of the territories without regard to the sum or value in dispute, where the validity of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States is involved.

Commerce—duties on imports or exports.

4. Only articles imported from, or exported to, foreign countries, are within the purview of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10, forbidding any state, without the consent of Congress to lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws.

that such hides need not be inspected, where the thing which is required, though not such an inspection as is usual and customary in other cases, is nevertheless an actual inspection, such as procuring a certificate certifying the date of importation, with the name of the importer and owner and of the person in charge, and the name of the place where imported, together with the number of hides and the description of any identifying marks and brands. Neilson v. Garza, supra.

It is no objection to the validity of a state statute making it unlawful to carry out of the state any hogsheads of tobacco raised in the state unless such hogsheads shall have been inspected, passed, and marked agreeably to its provisions, that it requires the articles to be brought to a state warehouse instead of sending an officer to them. Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

The Wisconsin grain inspection law which attempts to destroy the inspection system of Minnesota by obstructing or preventing delivery, storage, or reshipment, except by the Wisconsin system, is an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce. Globe Elevator Co. v. Andrew, 144 Fed. 871.

2. Food.

A law providing for the inspection of animals whose meats are designed for human food cannot be regarded as a rightful exertion of the police powers of the state if the inspection prescribed is of such character, or is burdened with such conditions, as will prevent altogether the introduction into the state of sound meats, the product of animals slaughtered in other states. Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

A state statute which requires, as a condition of sale within the state of fresh meats intended for human consumption, that the animals from which such meats are taken shall have been inspected in the state within twenty-four hours before being Evidence—judicial notice.

5. Judicial notice will be taken by the Supreme Court of the United States of the fact that, in the territory of New Mexico and in other similar parts of the West, cattle are required to be branded in order to identify their ownership, and that they run at large in great stretches of country, with no other means of determining their separate ownership than by the brand or marks upon them.

Commerce—territorial regulation—inspection law.

6. The prohibition against the receipt by common carriers for transportation beyond the limits of the territory of hides which do not bear the evidence of inspection required by N. M. act of March 19, 1901, is a valid exercise of the police power, and does not—there being no congressional legis-slaughtered, is an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce. Swift v. Sutphin, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 656, 39 Fed. 630; Re Christian, 39 Fed. 636, note; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, Affirming 39 Fed. 641.

A similar statute which differs principally from the Minnesota law in fixing forty-eight hours as the time limit before slaughtering within which the inspection in the state must be made was held to be an invalid regulation of interstate commerce in Schmidt v. People, 18 Colo. 78, 31 Pac. 498.

A state statute which requires inspection of all fresh meat slaughtered 100 miles or more from the place of sale, and exacts a fee of 1 cent a pound therefor, is a regulation of interstate commerce beyond the state to establish. Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

The selling, offering, or exposing for sale, in any city in the state, of fresh meat intended for human consumption, which has not been inspected alive within the county, cannot be penalized by the state without interfering with interstate commerce. Harvey v. Huffman, 39 Fed. 646.

Municipal ordinances which require an inspection of animals whose meat is intended for human consumption, as well as an inspection of the meat after slaughtering, and require the slaughtering to be done within one mile of the city limits, have the effect of preventing interstate traffic in dressed meat, and therefore violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Ex parte Kieffer, 40 Fed. 399.

A state cannot make it a misdemeanor to sell cattle and sheep without inspection before slaughtering within the state, and authorize cities to appoint inspectors for that purpose. State v. Klein, 126 Ind. 68, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 573, 25 N. E. 873.

A state statute which makes it unlawful to ship to or from any part of the state any carcass of a calf unless a tag is attached containing certain information, including the age of the calf when slaughtered, is not a regulation or interference lation covering the subject and making a different provision—violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, although hides not offered for transportation are not required to be inspected after thirty days in slaughterhouses, and not at all outside of the slaughterhouses, and although the incidental effect of the statute may be to levy a tax upon this class of property.

Commerce—territorial legislation—inspection fee

7. The amount of the fee imposed by N. M. act of March 19, 1901, for the inspection of hides offered for transportation beyond the limits of the territory, does not render that statute—if otherwise valid—repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, where it is not so unreasonable and disproportionate to the services rendered as to challenge the good faith of the law.

[No. 18.]

Argued March 14, 15, 1906. Decided October 15, 1906.

with interstate commerce, but is a reasonable exercise of the police power to protect the people of the state against the sale of unwholesome food. People v. Bishopp, 44 Misc. 12, 89 N. Y. Supp. 709.

A state statute under which every prepared article used for food, drink, flavoring, or condiment by man or domestic animals, whether simple, mixed, or compound, is required to be marked with the true name of the manufacturer and the location of the factory where it is prepared, constitutes an unreasonable interference with interstate and foreign commerce. Jewett Bros. & Jewett v. Smail (S. D.) 105 N. W. 738.

If a Georgetown ordinance providing for the inspection of flour could be deemed applicable to a shipment in transit between a point in the state of Maryland to the city of New York, it would violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Georgetown v. Davidson, 6 D. C. 278.

The incompleteness and inefficiency of the inspection of flour provided for by a state statute raises no question as to its validity under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Glover v. Flour Inspectors, 48 Fed. 348.

See supra. I. b, 1,—Globe Elevator Co. v. Andrew, 144 Fed. 871.

3. Intoxicating liquors.

A municipal ordinance which subjects to a fine any person selling intoxicating liquors without having them gauged and inspected by a city official, and requires the payment of a small compensation to such official for the services performed, is, when applied to a sale made by an importer from another state in the original package, an inspection law which does not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. Green v. Savannah, R. M. Charlt. (Ga.) 368.

A state statute prohibiting any common

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Santa Fe County, in that territory, sustaining a motion to quash an alternative writ of mandamus to compel a common carrier to receive for transportation beyond the limits of the territory hides which did not bear the evidence of inspection required by the territorial laws. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 N. M. 425, 78 Pac. 74, 79 Pac. 295.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William B. Childers argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. B. Catron, filed a brief for appellant:

The New Mexico statute under consideration is not an "inspection law."

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; New York v. Compagnie Générale carrier from bringing within the state any intoxicating liquors from any other state or territory without first having the certificate of the county auditor, therein required, that the consignee or person to whom the liquor is to be transported is authorized to sell intoxicating liquor in such county, burdens interstate commerce and is not sustainable as an inspection law. Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062.

A requirement that a sample shall be sent in advance for inspection before intoxicating liquors are brought into the state cannot be supported as an inspection law; but such law must at least provide for some inspection of the article imported. Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

A state statute which absolutely prohibits the importation of intoxicating liquors by private citizens for their own use, regardless of their purity or impurity, cannot be sustained as an inspection law because it empowers the state chemist to pass upon the "alcoholic purity" of importations by the state functionaries who are alone permitted to import such liquors into the state. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

The Wilson act of August 8, 1890, subjects intoxicating liquors arriving in the state to laws enacted by such state "in the exercise of its police powers."

A state statute imposing an inspection fee upon beer or other malt liquors shipped from other states into that state, and held there for sale and consumption therein, must, although producing a revenue, and not providing for an adequate inspection, be deemed enacted by the state "in the exercise of its police powers," within the meaning of this act, where the highest state court has upheld, as a valid police regula-Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 61, 27 L. ed. 383, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 112, 34 L. ed. 133, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Clintsmann v. Northrop, 8 Cow. 45; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 808, and note; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

Articles cannot be specially taxed, simply by reason of, or because of, their intended exportation.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 718, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 506, 29 L. ed. 989, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 426, 48 L. ed. 507, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

To impose a discriminating and special tax on the property of one class of citizens, as upon butchers or hide dealers, or upon one kind of property, as upon hides, to protect the property of another class of citizens, as cattle raisers, or another kind of property, as cattle, is in violation of tion, so much of the statute as imposes the same fee on beer of domestic manufacture, over the objection that it is a revenue measure, and not an inspection law. Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

An inspection law enacted by a state "in the exercise of its police powers," within the meaning of the Wilson act, is not void as an interference with interstate commerce because it operates to deter shipments into the state. Ibid.

Interstate commerce in intoxicating liquors is not unlawfully burdened by an inspection law enacted by a state "in the exercise of its police powers," within the meaning of the Wilson act, because the statute does not provide for an adequate inspection, and imposes a burden beyond the cost of inspection. Ibid.

4. Vessels and cargo.

A state statute which provides for the appointment of a gauger for the port of San Francisco, whose compensation is to be derived from the fees charged for inspections, is not an unconstitutional regulation of commerce. Addison v. Saulnier, 19 Cal. 83.

A state statute providing for gauging any coal or coke boat or barge in a port of the state, with a fee to the gauger, does not make an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce. Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 156 U. S. 590, 39 L. ed. 544, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 18, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

A state statute conferring upon the master and wardens of the port of New Orleans a monopoly of surveying the hatches of sea-going vessels arriving at that port, and of surveying damaged goods on board such vessels, imposes a burden on commerce, and is in no sense sustainable as an fundamental principles of government and natural right.

1 Tucker, Const. 77.

The New Mexico statute in question is not a reasonable law, properly devised for preventing the evil at which it may be aimed, if it is aimed at any evil; and not so devised as to no more than effectuate that purpose.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 550; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 300, 43 L. ed. 707, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 126, 41 Fed. 867; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454.

inspection law. Foster v. Master & Wardens, 94 U. S. 246, 24 L. ed. 122.

If Louisiana had the power to legislate respecting the inspection of vessels engaged in interstate commerce, such legislation ceased to operate after the passage by Congress of the act of July 7, 1838, to provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on vessels propelled by steam. Caldwell v. St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. 1 La. Ann. 85.

II. Discrimination.

Uniformity is an essential of an inspection law. Hence, a statute relating to the inspection of lime, which only affects lime manufactured within the state or imported from Maine, violates the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, and is not sustainable as an inspection law. Higgins v. 300 Casks of Lime, 130 Mass. 1.

A state cannot, under the guise of enacting inspection laws, make discriminations against the products and industries of another state, in favor of its own products and industries. Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 62, 35 L. ed. 638, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855. See also cases cited, supra, I. b, 2.

A state law which subjects flour brought into that state from other states to an inspection, and exacts a fee therefor, cannot be sustained as a inspection law, where flour made in the state need not be inspected before offering it for sale. Ibid.

Whether a state statute establishing a board of flour inspectors at a certain port to inspect all flour coming there "for sale" discriminates in favor of persons importing flour for their own use, and hence is an unauthorized interference with interstate or foreign commerce, is so doubtful that a demurrer to a bill to enjoin its enforcement will be overruled, to allow proof of

A statute may be void by reason of its operation, although valid on its face.

Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 295, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962.

A specific tax obliging mining companies to pay more upon mineral obtained in the state, and exported before it is smelted, than on that which is smelted within the state, is a tax on interstate and foreign commerce, and is void.

Jackson Min. Co. v. Auditor General, 32 Mich. 488.

The law in question, in charging a fee of 10 cents per hide for an inspection made, as we contend, at the port of shipment, where hides must be assumed to be in existence in shipping quantities or car-load lots, imposes a charge which is apparently largely in excess of the cost of such inspection.

American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

This statute imposes the burden of inspection, and the payment of 10 cents per hide, only upon hides offered to a common carrier for shipment to a market without the territory.

Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 65, 35 L. ed. 639, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855.

The validity of the act of the legislative assembly of the territory of Utah, making the office of the auditor of public accounts elective by the joint vote of the two houses of the legislative assembly, was called in question in Clayton v. Utah, 132 U. S. 632, 33 L. ed. 455, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, and this court took jurisdiction of the case.

In Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 33 L. ed. 945, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573, which was a mandamus proceeding, the validity of the acts of a territorial legislature was passed upon, although no money judgment whatever, exclusive of costs, could have been in the record.

See also United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 286, 34 L. ed. 702, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 350, 39 L. ed. 449, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

Messrs. Charles A. Spiess and A. C. Campbell argued the cause, and, with Mr. D. J. Leahey, filed a brief for appellee:

This court has, in numerous cases, held that it was without jurisdiction to review judgments such as this one, wherein was drawn in question, not the validity of a statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, but the validity of the thing done or act performed by the authority.

Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed.

its operation. Glover v. Flour Inspectors, 48 Fed. 348.

A state tobacco inspection law is not an unconstitutional regulation of commerce because it permits the exportation of tobacco in hogsheads by persons who pack it in the locality where grown, when marked with the owner's name, without opening the hogsheads for the internal inspection required if otherwise exported, or because it does not apply to tobacco which is to remain in the state, as to which the state laws only prescribe that it shall not be passed or accounted lawful tobacco unless it is packed in hogsheads of a specified size. Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

Discrimination against interstate traffic was unsuccessfully urged in NEW MEXICO EX REL. McLEAN v. DENVER & R. G. R. Co. to invalidate a territorial statute for the inspection of hides, which does not require hides not offered to a common carrier for transportation beyond the limits of the territory to be inspected after thirty days in slaughterhouses, and not at all outside of slaughterhouses.

An inspection law imposing a burden upon interstate commerce is not to be sustained simply because it applies alike to the people of all the states, including the people of the state enacting it. Minnesota v. Bar- ber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rehman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

III. Inspection fees.

Whether the prescribed fees and remuneration are excessive seems to be a question more properly for Congress than for the courts, if the law is really an inspection measure. But the charges may be so unreasonable and disproportionate to the services rendered as to justify the courts in invalidating the statute as not enacted in good faith as an inspection law. Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; NEW MEXICO EX REL. McLEAN v. DENVER & R. G. R. Co.

A state license tax on the privilege of selling fertilizers cannot be upheld as an inspection law in respect to fertilizers brought from another state, when the amount of the tax ($500 per annum) is in excess of what is required for the purpose of inspection, and the proceeds are applied to other uses. American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 In-

1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 152 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; Linford v. Ellison, 155 U. S. 503, 39 L. ed. 239, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

In order to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of this court the matter in dispute must have been money, or something the value of which can be estimated in money.

Perrine v. Slack, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. ed. 510, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Durham v. Seymour, 161 U. S. 235, 40 L. ed. 682, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 29 L. ed. 458, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Cafrey v. Oklahoma, 177 U. S. 346, 44 L. ed. 799, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; De Krafft v. Barney, 2 Black, 704, 17 L. ed. 350; Re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 39 L. ed. 401, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Re Heath, 144 U. S. 92, 36 L. ed. 358, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615; Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 32 L. ed. 616, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253; Sinclair v. District of Columbia, 192 U. S. 16, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212; Washington & G. R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. ed. 951, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Chapman v. United States, 164 U. S. 436, 41 L. ed. 504, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76.

The collateral effect of the judgment cannot be inquired into in this inquiry for the purpose of determining whether this court has jurisdiction. The judgment it-ters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609. See also supra, I. b, 2,—Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

The state inspection fee of 25 cents per ton on commercial fertilizers is not, as applied either to foreign or interstate commerce, so in excess of what is necessary to pay the cost of analysis, salaries of inspectors, cost of tags, and other charges, as to justify the imputation of bad faith and show that it is not a proper exercise of the police power. Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, supra; State ex rel. Goodwin v. Caraleigh Phosphate & Fertilizer Works, 119 N. C. 120, 25 S. E. 795. See also supra, I. b, 3,—Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

A state statute requiring persons desiring to sell fertilizers in the state to furnish a sample for analysis and test of its quality at the state experimental station does not levy an impost upon interstate commerce beyond what is necessary to secure the inspection, where the fees collected are to be used for the single purpose of supporting and maintaining such station. Vanmeter v. Spurrier, 94 Ky. 22, 21 S. W. 337.

The charge for outage to reimburse the state for expenses incurred in inspecting self must carry with it the elements which confer jurisdiction.

Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578, 27 L. ed. 249, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Bruce v. Manchester & K. R. Co. 117 U. S. 514, 29 L. ed. 990, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849; Durham v. Seymour, 161 U. S. 235, 40 L. ed. 682, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

All inspection laws which operate upon personal property at a period when such property is not interstate commerce, or not foreign commerce, as a matter of course do not come in collision with the commerce clauses of the Federal Constitution.

Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345-357, 43 L. ed. 191-195, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

There is complete analogy between the case at bar and the case of Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

This court has, in numerous cases, differentiated between legislative acts operating upon interstate or foreign commerce, and such acts which act upon articles about to become interstate commerce.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

This court has also drawn a distinction between "articles manufactured for export or intended to be exported to another state, and interstate commerce in such articles."

Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed.

tobacco intended for exportation, and in consideration of storage, is proper. Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

A city may, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, enact an ordinance under which coals imported from Great Britain must be inspected when sold within the city, at a cost of 25 cents a ton, to be paid the inspector for his services. Charleston v. Rogers, 2 McCord, L. 495, 13 Am. Dec. 751. See also supra, I. b, 3,—Green v. Savannah, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 368; I. b, 4,—Addison v. Saulnier, 19 Cal. 83; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 156 U. S. 590, 39 L. ed. 544, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 18, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

The charge of 10 cents per bale for inspecting and weighing hay does not, as applied to an interstate shipment, make the legislation imposing it repugnant to the Federal Constitution, whether or not it is absolutely necessary for executing the inspection law, because the charge is in no sense "an impost or duty on imports and exports," and, not being included in the prohibition, is not dependent for its validity upon a compliance with the rule of absolute necessity, laid down in the exception to that prohibition. Hay Inspectors v. Pleasants, 23 La. Ann. 349.

346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

This court has also directly distinguished between laws which act upon a product of the state while it is yet in the state, and products which are articles of interstate commerce, coming into the state

Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, supra; United States v. Boyer, 85 Fed. 425; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 13, 39 L. ed. 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418, 48 L. ed. 504, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 113; People v. Bishopp, 106 App. Div. 266, 94 N. Y. Supp. 774.

In Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527, this court held it to be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which everyone may so use his own as not to injure others, and that the police powers of a state justified the adoption of precautionary measures against social evils, and the enactments of such laws as would have immediate connection with the protection of persons and property against the noxious acts of others.

Even if the hides in question should be considered interstate commerce at the time the law acts upon them, still the act is not in collision with the commerce clause of the Constitution, and is valid, being a legitimate inspection law.

New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L. ed. 648; Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17-41, 49 L. ed. 925-935, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

The legislature and courts of New Mexico must be presumed to be perfectly familiar with conditions as they exist in New Mexico, and understand the necessities of her people in regard to legislation designed to protect the property of her citizens. Whether such a law as the one now in question is necessary should be referred to the legislative department of the territory. And, the legislature having enacted it, this court will hesitate to deny its validity.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 365, 369, 49 L. ed. 1085, 1088, 49 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676.

The scope of inspection laws can no more be defined or limited than can the scope of police power, of which it is a branch.

State ex rel. Barton County v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 32 Fed. 722; Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 62, 65, 35 L. ed. 638, 639, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 62, 21 L. ed. 394, 404.

The police power of a state justifies the adoption of precautionary measures against social evils. Under it a state may legislate to prevent the spread of crime or pauperism or disturbance of the peace. All these exertions of power are in immediate connection with the protection of persons and property against noxious acts of other persons, or such a use of property as is injurious to the property of others. They are self-defensive.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, supra.

The term "import," as used in that clause of the Constitution which says that no state shall levy any imposts or duties on imports or exports, does not refer to the articles imported from one state into another, but only to the articles imported from foreign countries into the United States.

Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382.

Upon principle, the states have a right to make inspection laws which operate upon interstate commerce.

Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 361, 43 L. ed. 197, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091.

The reasonableness of the fee charged for inspection is a matter for the determination of the legislature.

Neilson v. Garza, supra; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Turner v. Maryland, supra.

The fee of 10 cents per hide is not excessive.

Chester City v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 Pa. 464, 25 Atl. 1134; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 425, 47 L. ed. 243, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204.

Whenever the law operates alike upon all persons and property similarly situated, equal protection is not denied. All that is required is that all persons subject to a law shall be treated alike.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the judgment of the supreme court of New Mexico, affirming the judgment of the district court of Santa Fe county, sustaining a motion to quash an alternative writ of mandamus issued on the relation of E. J. McLean & Company against the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company.

*From the allegations of the writ it appears that the relators, the appellants here, had delivered to the railroad company at Santa Fe, New Mexico, a bale of hides consigned to Denver, Colorado, a point on the line of the defendant's railroad. The railroad company refused to receive and ship the hides for the reason that they did not bear the evidence of inspection required by the act of the legislature of New Mexico, approved March 19, 1901, which act, to be more fully noticed hereafter, made it an offense for any railroad company to receive hides for shipment beyond the limits of the territory which had not been inspected within the requirements of the law.

An objection is made to the jurisdiction of this court upon the ground that the case is not appealable under the act of Congress of March 3, 1885. 23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572).

Section 1 of the act provides, in substance, that no appeal or writ of error shall be allowed from any judgment or decree of the supreme court of a territory unless the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of $5,000. Section 2 of the act makes exception to the application of § 1 as to the sum in dispute, in cases wherein is involved the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under the United States, and in all such cases an appeal or writ of error will lie without regard to the sum or value in dispute.

Confessedly, $5,000 is not involved; and in order to be appealable to this court the case must involve the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, and also be a controversy in which some sum or value is involved. This court, in the case of United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280-285, 34 L. ed. 700-702, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114-116, laid down the test of the right to appeal under the statute in the following terms:

"The validity of a statute, or the validity of an authority, is drawn in question when the existence or constitutionality or legality of such statute or authority is denied, and the denial forms the subject of direct inquiry."

The right to legislate in the territories [48] is conferred, under *constitutional authority, by the Congress of the United States, and the passage of a territorial law is the exertion of an authority exercised under the United States. While this act was passed in pursuance of the authority given by the United States to the territorial legislature, it is contended by the relators below, appellants here, that it violates the Constitution of the United States, and is therefore invalid, although it is an attempted exercise of power conferred by Congress upon the territory. The objection of the relator to the law raises a controversy as to the right of the legislature to pass it under the broad power of legislation conferred by Congress upon the territory. In other words, the validity of an authority exercised under the United States in the passage and enforcement of this law is directly challenged, and the case does involve the validity of an authority exercised under the power derived from the United States. It is not a case merely involving the construction of a legislative act of the territory, as was the fact in Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059. The power to pass the act at all, in view of the requirements of the Constitution of the United States, is the subject-matter of controversy, and brings the case in this aspect within the 2d section of the act.

Is there any sum or value in dispute in this case? While the act does not prescribe the amount, some sum or value must be in dispute. Albright v. New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 L. ed. 346, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210. The matter in dispute is the right to have the goods which were tendered for shipment transported to their destination. As a common carrier, the railroad was bound to receive and transport the goods. Its refusal so to do was based upon the statute in question because of the noninspection of the goods tendered. The relators claimed the right to have their goods transported because the statute was null and void, being an unconstitutional enactment. The controversy, therefore, relates to the right of the appellants to have their goods transported by the railroad company to the place of destination. We think this was a valuable right, measurable *in money. At [49] common law, a cause of action arose from the refusal of a common carrier to transport goods duly tendered for carriage. Ordinarily, the measure of damages in such case is the difference between the value of the goods at the point of tender and their value at their proposed destination, less the cost of carriage. We are of the opinion that this controversy involves a money value within the meaning of the statute, and the motion to dismiss the appeal will be overruled.

Passing to the merits of the controversy, Congress has conferred legislative power upon the territory to an extent not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1851. It is contended that the act under consideration contravenes that part of article 1, § 10, of the Constitution of the United States, which reads: "No state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws." And also that part of the 8th section of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, which gives to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the states, and with the Indian tribes.

As to the objection predicated on § 10 of article 1, that section can have no application to the present case, as that provision directly applies only to articles imported or exported to foreign countries. Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345-350, 43 L. ed. 191-193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862, and cases cited. Moreover, that paragraph of the Constitution expressly reserves the right of the states to pass inspection laws, and if this law is of that character it does not run counter to this requirement of the Constitution.

The question principally argued is as to the effect of this law upon interstate commerce, and it is urged that it is in violation of the Constitution, because it undertakes to regulate interstate commerce, and lays upon it a tax not within the power of the local legislature to exact. It has been too frequently decided by this court to require the restatement *of the decisions, that the exclusive power to regulate interstate commerce is vested by the Constitution in Congress, and that other laws which undertake to regulate such commerce or impose burdens upon it are invalid. This doctrine has been reaffirmed and announced in cases decided as recently as the last term of this court. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. While this is true, it is equally well settled that a state or a territory, for the same reasons, in the exercise of the police power, may make rules and regulations not conflicting with the legislation of Congress upon the same subject, and not amounting to regulations of interstate commerce. It will only be necessary to refer to a few of the many cases decided in this court holding valid enactments of legislatures having for their object the protection, welfare, and safety of the people, although such laws may have an effect upon interstate commerce. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613-635, 42 L. ed. 878-885, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132. The principle decided in these cases is that a state or territory has the right to legislate for the safety and welfare of its people, and that this right is not taken from it because of the exclusive right of Congress to regulate interstate commerce, except in cases where the attempted exercise of authority by the legislature is in conflict with an act of Congress, or is an attempt to regulate interstate commerce. In Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, supra, it was directly recognized that the state might pass inspection laws for the protection of its people against fraudulent practices and for the suppression of frauds, although such legislation had an effect upon interstate commerce. The same principle was recognized in Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091,—a case decided by Mr. Justice Bradley on the circuit and quoted from at length with approval by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller in the Patapsco Case.

Applying the principles recognized in these cases to the *case at bar, does the act[51] in question do violence to the exclusive right of Congress to regulate interstate commerce? We take judicial notice of the fact that, in the territory of New Mexico, and in other similar parts of the West, cattle are required to be branded in order to identify their ownership, and that they run at large in great stretches of country with no other means of determining their separate ownership than by the brands or marks upon them. In view of these considerations, and for the purpose of protecting the owners of cattle against fraud and criminal seizures of their property, the territory of New Mexico has made provision, by means of a system of laws enacted for the purpose, for the protection of the ownership of cattle and the prevention of fraudulent appropriations of this kind of property. The legislation upon the subject in the territory is thus summarized in the opinion, in this case, of the supreme court of New Mexico (78 Pac. 74):

"The first act relating to inspection of hides was passed in 1884, and provided that all butchers should keep a record of all animals slaughtered, and keep the hides and horns of such animals for thirty days after slaughter, free to the inspection of all persons (Comp. Laws, § 84); and provided a penalty for failure to keep the record and the hides and horns (§ 86), and a penalty for refusal of inspection of the record or hides (§ 87). In 1891 all persons were required to keep hides for thirty days for the inspection of any sheriff, deputy sheriff, or any constable, or any board or inspector, or any officer authorized to inspect hides (§ 89), and provided a penalty (§ 90). In 1889, amended in 1895 (Laws 1895, chap. 29, § 4, p. 70), a cattle sanitary board was created (§ 183), with power to adopt and enforce quarantine regulations and regulations for the inspection of cattle for sale and slaughter (§ 184), and pay inspectors not to exceed $2.50 per day and their expenses (§ 190). In 1891 the cattle sanitary board was authorized and required to make regulations concerning inspection of cattle for shipment, and hides and slaughter-

[52]houses (§ 208), and there was provided *the details of arrangement for inspection of cattle (§ 212), and the duties of cattle inspectors were enlarged by providing: 'Every slaughterhouse in this territory shall be carefully inspected by some one of the inspectors aforesaid, and all hides found in such slaughterhouses shall be carefully compared with the records of such slaughterhouses, and a report in writing setting forth the number of cattle killed at any such slaughterhouse since the last inspection, . . . the names of the persons from whom each of said cattle was bought, the brands and marks upon each hide, and any information that may be obtained touching the violation by the owner of any such slaughterhouse, or any other person, of the provisions of an act entitled "An Act for the Protection of Stock, and for Other Purposes," approved April 1, 1884. For the purpose of making the inspection authorized by this act, any inspector employed by the said sanitary board shall have the right to enter, in the day or nighttime, any slaughterhouse or other place where cattle are killed in this territory, and to carefully examine the same, and all books and records required by law to be kept therein, and to compare the hides found therein with such records' (§ 213). In 1893 it was provided that the cattle sanitary board might fix fees for the inspection of cattle and hides (§ 221) (repealed in 1899 [Laws 1899 chap. 53, p. 107]) and that such fees shall be paid to the secretary of the board and placed to the credit of the cattle sanitary board (§ 222), and shall be used, together with funds realized from taxes levied and assessed, or to be levied and assessed, upon cattle only, to defray the expenses of the board (§ 220). Chapter 44, p. 94, of the Laws of 1899, makes no changes in the law material to the consideration of this case. Section 2, chap. 53, p. 107, of the Laws of 1899, provides a fee of 3 cents for inspection of cattle."

In pari materia with this legislation the act of 1901, now under consideration, was passed. Sections 3 and 4 of that act are as follows:

"Sec. 3. Hereafter it shall be unlawful [53]for any person, firm, *or corporation to offer, or any railroad company or other common carrier to receive, for the purpose of shipment or transportation beyond the limits of this territory, any hides that have not been inspected and tagged by a duly authorized inspector of the cattle sanitary board of New Mexico, for the district in which such hides originate. For each hide thus inspected there shall be paid by the owner or holder thereof a fee or charge of 10 cents, and such fee or charge shall be a lien upon the hides thus inspected, until the same shall have been paid. Each inspector of hides shall keep a complete record of all inspections made by him, and shall at once forward to the secretary of the cattle sanitary board, on blanks furnished him for that purpose, a complete report of each inspection, giving the names of the purchaser and shipper of the hides, as well as all the brands thereon, which said report shall be preserved by the secretary as a part of the records of his office.

203 U. S.

"Sec 4. Any person, firm, or corporation, common carrier, railroad company, or agent thereof, violating any provision of this act, or refusing to permit the inspection of any hides as herein provided, shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000 for each and every violation of the provisions of this act."

The purpose of these provisions is apparent, and is to prevent the criminal or fraudulent appropriation of cattle by requiring the inspection of hides and registration by a record which preserves the name of the shipper and purchaser of the hides, as well as the brands thereon, and by which is afforded some evidence, at least, tending to identify the ownership of the cattle. It is evident that the provision as to the shipment of the hides beyond the limits of the territory is essential to this purpose, for if the hides can be surreptitiously or criminally obtained and shipped beyond such limits, without inspection or registration, a very convenient door is open to the perpetration of fraud and the prevention of discovery.

*It is argued that this act lays a special [54]burden upon interstate commerce, because, under the law, hides not offered for transportation are not required to be inspected after thirty days in slaughterhouses and not at all outside of slaughterhouses. But legislation is not void because it meets the exigencies of a particular situation. Other statutory provisions apply to property remaining in the territory, where possibly it may be found and identified. When shipped beyond the limits of the territory the means of reaching it are beyond local control, and it is the purpose of §§ 3 and 4 of the act of 1901 to preserve within the territory a record of the brands identifying the property and naming the purchaser or shipper. Certainly we cannot judicially say that there can be no valid reason for making the inspection in question apply only to hides offered for transportation beyond the territory, and that for that reason the tax is an arbitrary discrimination against interstate traffic.

It is urged further that this is a mere revenue law and in no just sense an inspection law, and, therefore, not within the police power conferred upon the territory. It is true that inspection laws ordinarily have for their object the improvement of quality, and to protect the community against fraud and imposition in the character of the article received for sale or to be exported, but in the Patapsco Case, supra, it was directly recognized that inspection laws such as the one under consideration might be passed in the exercise of the police power, and such was the view of Mr. Justice Bradley in Nilson v. Garza, supra, decided on the circuit. We see no reason why an inspection law which has for its purpose the protection of the community against fraud and the promotion of the welfare of the people cannot be passed in the exercise of the police power, when the legislation tends to subserve the purpose in view. In the territory of New Mexico, and other parts of the country similarly situated, it is highly essential to protect large numbers of people against criminal aggression upon this class of property. The exercise of the police [55] power *may and should have reference to the peculiar situation and needs of the community. The law under consideration, designed to prevent the clandestine removal of property in which a large number of the people of the territory are interested, seems to us an obviously rightful exercise of this power. It is true it affects interstate commerce, but we do not think such was its primary purpose, and while it may have an effect to levy a tax upon this class of property, the main purpose evidently was to protect the people against fraud and wrong.

It is further urged that this law is invalid because it imposes an unreasonable fee for the inspection, which goes into the treasury of the sanitary board, and the allegations of the writ tend to show that an inspector might make a considerable sum in excess of day's wages in the work of inspecting hides under the provisions of this act. The law being otherwise valid, the amount of the inspection fee is not a judicial question; it rests with the legislature to fix the amount, and it can only present a valid objection when it is shown that it is so unreasonable and disproportionate to the services rendered as to attack the good faith of the law. Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345-350, 43 L. ed. 191-193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

We are of the opinion that the allegations of the relator as to the cost of inspection, compared with the fees authorized to be charged, and the profit which might accrue to the inspector, in view of other and necessary incidental expense connected with the inspection and registration, do not bring the case within that class which holds that, under the guise of inspection, other and different purposes are to be subserved, thus rendering the legislation invalid.

Upon the whole case, we are of the opinion that, in the absence of congressional legislation covering the subject, and making a different provision, the act in controversy is a valid exercise of the police power of the territory, and not in violation of the Constitution giving exclusive power to Congress in the regulation of interstate commerce.

Affirmed.

*CHARLES S. LANDRAM and John A. [56]
Broadus, Executors of Constance K.
Vertner, Deceased, and Lillie K. Vertner, Apts.,

v.

GABRIELLA K. JORDAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 56-64.)

Appeal—questions reviewable—who may be heard.

1. One who succeeds, on a bill of review, in having upheld as to her alone a trust declared void by the original decree, cannot, on appeal, where she does not herself appeal, go beyond supporting the modified decree and opposing every assignment of error.

Testamentary trust—effect of partial invalidity—perpetuities.

2. An equitable life estate given to a niece of the testator in the income from a specified piece of land excepted from the general scheme for the creation of a trust fund from the rents of the testator's real property for the benefit of his grandchildren does not fail because of the repugnancy of this scheme to the rule against perpetuities, the effect of which is to give the testator's daughter all the rest of the property, including the remainder in the life estate; nor does this result follow because the trustees are directed to keep such income up to $40

NOTE.—As to bills of review generally—see Bank of United States v. Ritchie, 8 L. ed. U. S. 891.

On the right to maintain a bill of review as dependent upon interest—see note to Thorington v. Thorington, 36 L.R.A. 385.

per month from the other property included in the trust.

Bill of review—parties.

3. The objection that the widow of the testator's son should have been made a party to a bill to review a decree declaring that a trust created by the will in favor of the testator's grandchildren violated the rule against perpetuities is too late when first raised on the hearing of a demurrer to the bill of review, where the fact of her existence does not appear of record.

[No. 179.]

Argued October 9, 1906. Decided October 22, 1906.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, modifying, on demurrer to a bill of review, a decree which declared a trust to violate the rule against perpetuities, and upholding such trust as to the party filing such bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 291.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John J. Hemphill argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Hemphill, filed a brief for appellants:

If the trust attempted to be created by the testator covering the Washington property is void, does the provision for the appellee fall with it?

The answer to this question depends upon the further inquiries as to whether the attempted trust embodies the main scheme or plan of the testator as to his Washington property; and whether the $40 per month which the trustees are directed to pay to appellee, out of the income from the trust property, is dependent upon, or connected with, his general plan or scheme.

Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 393; Pitzel v. Schneider, 216 Ill. 87, 74 N. E. 779; Lawrence v. Smith, 163 Ill. 149, 45 N. E. 259; Harris v. Clark, 7 N. Y. 242; Barnum v. Barnum, 26 Md. 119, 90 Am. Dec. 88; Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend. 265; Re Christie, 133 N. Y. 473, 31 N. E. 515; Amory v. Lord, 9 N. Y. 403; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 866.

The rule holding that one trust may be valid and another void is applied only in aid and assistance of the manifest intent of the testator, and never where it would lead to a result contrary to the purpose of the will, or work injustice among the beneficiaries, or defeat the testator's scheme for the disposal of his property.

Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, 14 L.R.A. 33, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880.

Mary B. Kearney, widow of Edmund Kearney, son of the testator, who died after his father, is a necessary party to the bill of review.

Debell v. Foxworthy, 9 B. Mon. 228; Turner v. Berry, 8 Ill. 541; Bank of United States v. White, 8 Pct. 262, 268, 8 L. ed. 938, 940; Story, Eq. Pl. 420; Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 6th ed. § 1580; Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. 349; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 264; Creed v. Lancaster Bank, 1 Ohio St. 1; Fletcher, Eq. Pl. § 925.

Parties who have not appealed are not entitled to be heard in this court, except in support of the decree in the court below.

The Slavers (Coggeshall v. United States) 2 Wall. 383, 17 L. ed. 911; Loudon v. Taxing District, 104 U. S. 771, 774, 26 L. ed. 923, 924; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 527, 25 L. ed. 699, 702; Chittenden v. Brewster, 2 Wall. 196, 17 L. ed. 841; United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 186, 39 L. ed. 114, 116, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; 2 Enc. Pl. & Pr. pp. 157, 158.

Mr. Charles F. Wilson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank W. Hackett, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Frank Sprigg Perry filed a brief on behalf of Mary B. Kearney, widow of Edmund Kearney:

Upon a bill of review all parties in interest should be made parties defendant to the suit.

Friley v. Hendricks, 27 Miss. 412; Ralston v. Sharon, 51 Fed. 703; Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 140, 15 L. ed. 158, 160; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 563, 22 L. ed. 184.

Where the complainants have no rights separable from, or independent of, the rights of persons not made parties, and where a final decision cannot be made between the parties litigant without directly affecting and prejudicing the rights of others, not made parties, a court of equity will not proceed to a decree.

Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 193, 198, 6 L. ed. 599, 600; Cameron v. M'Roberts, 3 Wheat. 591, 4 L. ed. 467.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia affirming a decree of the supreme court upon a bill of review brought by Gabriella K. Jordan, the appellee. The decree under review was rendered in a suit for the construction of the will of Thomas Kearney and for the determination of the validity of a trust created by it, so far as the same concerned land in the District of Columbia. That decree declared the trust bad as attempting to create a perpetuity. Under the bill of review the decree was modified, on demurrer, to the extent of the interest of Gabriella K. Jordan, and the trust was declared valid as to her. 25 App. D. C. 291. The executors of the testator's heirs and a daughter of the said heir appealed to this court.

Thomas Kearney died on July 5, 1896. The will disposes of land in various places.

[61] In item 3 it enumerates the testator's* property in Washington. In item 5 it devises this and other property upon a trust to be continued until January 1, 1928, and there and elsewhere, with the following exception, makes a fund from the Washington rents and profits to be disposed of as directed in the will. Item 6 is as follows:

"I hereby authorize and direct that my said trustee shall, during the natural life of my beloved niece, Gabriella K. Jordan, pay over to her regularly each month, as soon as collected, all rents and revenues collected or derived from that certain property described in the third item hereof as lot No. 611 'M' Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.; but, in case said rents and revenues shall at any time be less than the sum of $40 for any one or more months, then my said trustees are hereby authorized and instructed to add to the sum so collected a sufficient amount to make the said amount of $40 for each and every month; it being my desire that she shall have a regular income of at least $40 per month, and that the same shall be paid over to her monthly; but if the income derived from said premises shall amount to a sum in excess of $40 per month, she shall have the whole thereof." (Rec. 10.)

Item 7 directs the trustee to let all the Washington property, except 611 M street, and out of the rents to pay $90 a month to the testator's daughter, Constance K. Vertner, as ordered in item 5; the residue, so far as necessary, to be applied to the support and education of her three children, named, with further provisions. Item 8 gives the remainder in fee of 611 M street to the testator's grandson, provided that if Gabriella Jordan dies before January 1, 1928, he shall only receive the rents and profits, and if she dies before the grandson reaches the age of twenty-two the rents shall be disposed of as provided in item 7 as to other Washington property. In item 21, the testator, "for fear that there may be some difficulty in construing the different provisions" of the will, states his in-

[62] tention that all the money* arising from the Washington rents, "except that which is to go to Gabriella K. Jordan, shall be placed in a common fund for the payment (1) of taxes, insurance and repairs on said property and of the premises at Luray, Virginia; (2) of (90) ninety dollars per month to my said daughter, Constance K. Vertner, during her natural life; (3) for the support, education, and maintenance of my said three Vertner grandchildren until Lillie K. Vertner shall have arrived at the age of nineteen years, and until Edmund K. and Thomas K. shall have arrived at the age of twenty-two years respectively."

The persons in whose favor were made the provisions which were adjudged bad were one of the testator's heirs, his daughter, Constance K. Vertner, and the children of Constance. The daughter pleaded that the other heir, Edmund Kearney, also provided for in the will, died, leaving her his heir, that the trust was bad, and, by implication, that she was entitled to the property which it embraced. She now is dead. By the original decree the whole trust fund, including that given to Gabriella Jordan, went to the testator's heirs as property undisposed of by the will. The only person dissatisfied with that decree was Gabriella Jordan, and, on the other hand, the executors and the children of Constance are the only appellants from the decree on review. According to the rule that has been laid down in this court, Gabriella, as she did not appeal, cannot go beyond supporting the decree and opposing every assignment of error. Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 527, 25 L. ed. 699, 702; The Stephen Morgan (The Stephen Morgan v. Good) 94 U. S. 599, 24 L. ed. 266; Chittenden v. Brewster, 2 Wall. 191, 196, 17 L. ed. 839, 841; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 621, 48 L. ed. 1142, 1153, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784. We assume this rule to be correct. Although her counsel attempted to argue the validity of the trust as a whole, and other questions, we assume, without deciding, the decree to be unimpeachable and right except so far as appealed from. Therefore we shall confine ourselves to considering whether the gift to Gabriella is so intimately connected with the failing scheme as to fail with it.

*It would be a strong thing to say that [63] we gather from this will an intent that, if the trust so far as it concerns the testator's descendants should fail because they prefer to take the property by intestacy free from the limitations of the will, therefore the one gift outside his family should be defeated also. The trust is not a metaphysical entity or a Prince Rupert's drop which flies to pieces if broken in any part. It is a provision to benefit descendants and a niece. There is no general principle by which the benefits must stand or fall together. It is true that all the Washington property was given to the trustees in one clause and that a part of the scheme in favor of the testator's grandchildren was the creation of a fund from the rents. But, as is stated in item 21, 611 M street was excepted from the scheme, and the whole income of this lot, or, in other words, an equitable estate in the specified land, is given to Gabriella Jordan for life by item 6. If that were all we see no reason for a doubt that that gift would be good, whether the gift to the other beneficiaries were good or not. The fact that the testator's daughter takes all the rest of the property, instead of her children getting a postponed interest in a part, is no ground for denying to the niece the life estate given to her in an identified and excepted piece of land. It does not make the case any worse that a part of the property thus going to the testator's daughter is the remainder in the estate given to his niece.

The appellants lay hold of the instructions to the trustees to add to the rents enough to make Gabriella's income up to $40 a month, and argue as if the gift were in substance only a gift of $40 a month from a fund that cannot be established. Such is not the fact. The gift is primarily and in any event a gift of the income of 611 M street. But whatever may be the fate of the rest of the trust we see nothing to hinder the trustees from keeping the income up to $40 from the other property devised to them. Of course, they could not derive income from property not included in the trust, and only the property in-

[64]cluded is charged with the liability. The decree may be modified by inserting after the words "against his entire estate" the words "in the District of Columbia."

It is objected in argument, although not in the pleadings, that the widow of Edmund Kearney has a right of dower in the Washington estate which descended to him, and that she should have been made party to the bill of review. The fact of the widow's existence does not appear of record as against the appellees, and we agree with the court of appeals that the objection is made too late.

Decree affirmed.

FIDELITY MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM H. CLARK, Morris A. Spooner, Charles A. Culberson, and Phillips Investment Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 64-75.)

Judgment—fraud—notice.

1. Notice of the fraud in recovering a judgment on a policy of life insurance which induces the payment into court of the amount of recovery, out of which the clerk of court pays over the sums called for in certain assignments by way of contingent fees for professional services in collecting the insurance, cannot be established by the mere fact that, while the assignees held an interest in the policy only, they were assignees of a chose in action, and took it subject to the equities.
203 U. S.

Judgment—fraud—notice.

2. Notice of the denial of the death of the insured in the answer in an action on a policy of insurance is not notice of the fraud in recovering judgment on the policy while the insured was alive which will impeach such judgment as to the parties to whom the clerk of court pays over, out of the money paid into court in satisfaction of such judgment, the sums called for in certain assignments of an interest in the policy by way of contingent fees for professional services, rendered in good faith in collecting the insurance.

[No. 25.]

Argued October 15, 16, 1906. Decided October 29, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas to review a decree enjoining the setting up of a judgment at law on policies of life insurance as to the beneficiary, but dismissing the bill as against the assignees of partial interests in the policies. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maurice E. Locke argued the cause, and, with Mr. Eugene P. Locke, filed briefs for appellant:

A court of equity will grant relief under such circumstances as we have here.

Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Graver v. Faurot, 64 Fed. ed. 241, 73 Fed. 1022, 162 U. S. 435, 40 L. ed. 1030, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799, 22 C. C. A. 156, 46 U. S. App. 263, 76 Fed. 257; Maddox v. Apperson, 14 Lea, 596; Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 362; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 780, 26 L. ed. 608; Coddington v. Webb, 2 Vern. 240; Wonderly v. Lafayette County, 150 Mo. 635, 45 L.R.A. 386, 73 Am. St. Rep. 474, 51 S. W. 745; Guild v. Phillips, 44 Fed. 461; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Fields, 2 Story, 59, Fed. Cas. No. 10,406; Trefz v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 8 Fed. 177; Stowell v. Eldred, 26 Wis. 504; State v. Fraker, 148 Mo. 143, 49 S. W. 1017.

If one person gets possession of another's money by fraud, the law raises a promise to return it, and upon such implied promise an action may be maintained.

Bishop, Contr. § 226; Moses v. Macferlan, 2 Burr. 1005; Buller v. Harrison, 2 Cowp. 565; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Elliott, 5 Fed. 225; National L. Ins. Co. v. Minch, 53 N. Y. 144; Gaines v. Miller, 111 U. S. 395, 28 L. ed. 466, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426; Merryfield v. Willson, 14 Tex. 224, 65 Am. Dec. 117; Michigan v. Phoenix Bank, 33 N. Y. 9.

The fraud in this case consisted in obtaining, by wrongful means, a judgment that William A. Hunter had died, thereby rendering the plaintiff liable to Mrs. Smythe. Whether he had so died was the question directly in issue in the action at law, and the verdict and judgment therein are conclusive between the parties and privies, save upon such direct or collateral attack as may be permissible under the circumstances.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 90; Outram v. Morewood, 3 East, 346; Hazen v. Reed, 30 Mich. 331; Monks v. McGrady, 71 Tex. 134, 8 S. W. 617; McGrady v. Monks, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 611, 20 S. W. 959.

The Federal courts and the courts of all the states in which the various defendants reside agree in holding that a judgment cannot be collaterally attacked for fraud.

Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 18 L. ed. 475; Peninsular Iron Co. v. Eells, 15 C. C. A. 189, 32 U. S. App. 348, 68 Fed. 24; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 468, 47 U. S. App. 1, 76 Fed. 429; Lake County v. Platt, 25 C. C. A. 87, 49 U. S. App. 216, 79 Fed. 567; Maddox v. Summerlin, 92 Tex. 483, 49 S. W. 1033, 50 S. W. 567; Anderson v. Anderson, 8 Ohio, 109; State ex rel. Klotz v. Ross, 118 Mo. 23, 23 S. W. 196.

Moreover, the Federal decisions probably are controlling in this matter, as the judgment was rendered by a Federal court.

Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

The defendants Clark, Culberson, Spoonts, and Phillips Investment Company are all privies to the judgment by assignment of interests in its subject-matter, and are protected by it to the same extent as Mrs. Smythe.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 142-149; 2 Black, Judgm. §§ 549, 550; Lake County v. Platt, supra; Porter v. Bagby, 50 Kan. 412, 31 Pac. 1058.

Therefore, as to all the defendants, equitable relief is necessary and proper in the case, if the facts are sufficient to warrant interfering with the judgment.

In the present case, having jurisdiction to restrain the defendants from setting up the judgment as an adjudication, the court should not turn the plaintiff over to sundry law courts in Texas, Ohio, and Missouri, for the recovery of its money, but, if otherwise proper, itself should administer full relief by ordering the return of the money.

1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 64K-71, 456, 457; 2 Id. § 885; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 181, 231, 236; 2 Id. § 910; Roy v. Beaufort, 2 Atk. 190; Rickle v. Dow, 39 Mich. 91; Young v. Sigler, 48 Fed. 182; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Fields and Michigan v. Phoenix Bank, supra.

When property has been obtained by fraud, its true owner may recover it from any person except a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice. The authorities on this subject are numerous, and are believed to be unanimous in support of the proposition.

Buller v. Harrison, supra; Thurston v. Blanchard, 22 Pick. 18, 33 Am. Dec. 700; Devoe v. Brandt, 53 N. Y. 462.

The exception relates only to those kinds of property whose purchasers for value are protected by the policy of the law from equities outstanding against their vendors of which they had no notice. Such are money, negotiable paper, land, and merchantable chattels, naming them in a descending scale of negotiability. A judgment is not such property. The policy of the law is to protect litigants, not outsiders dealing with judgments. The assignee of a judgment takes it subject to all equities existing between the litigants, whether he had notice of the same or not, and regardless of the consideration paid therefor.

2 Black, Judgm. §§ 953, 955; 1 High, Inj. § 190; Taylor v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 86 Tenn. 228, 6 S. W. 393; Blakesley v. Johnson, 13 Wis. 530; Independent School District v. Schreiner, 46 Iowa, 172; Rea v. Forrest, 88 Ill. 275; Northam v. Gordon, 23 Cal. 255; Weber v. Tschetter, 1 S. D. 205, 46 N. W. 201; Ellis v. Kerr (Tex. Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 1050, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 349, 32 S. W. 444; Wright v. Treadwell, 14 Tex. 255; Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. v. Holz, 10 N. D. 16, 84 N. W. 581; Brisbin v. Newhall, 5 Minn. 273, Gil. 217; McJilton v. Love, 13 Ill. 486, 54 Am. Dec. 449; Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257; Jeffries v. Evans, 6 B. Mon. 119, 43 Am. Dec. 158; Devoll v. Scales, 49 Me. 320; Padfield v. Green, 85 Ill. 529; Mulford v. Stratton, 41 N. J. L. 466; Magin v. Lamb, 43 Minn. 80, 19 Am. St. Rep. 216, 44 N. W. 675; Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Hansen, 104 Iowa, 307, 73 N. W. 827; Ricaud v. Alderman, 132 N. C. 62, 43 S. E. 543; Frankel v. Garrard, 160 Ind. 209, 66 N. E. 687.

A policy of insurance is not a negotiable instrument, and the purchaser of it takes it subject to all equities. 1 May, Ins. 386; 3 Joyce, Ins. § 2326. The same is true of an order drawn against a specific fund therein named. 7 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 578. Nor do we see how it can be contended that a fund of money deposited in the registry of a court, or which it is expected will be so deposited, possesses any of the elements of negotiability. The assignee of an interest in such a fund, it seems to us, takes only the title which the assignor had.

An order drawn against a particular fund constitutes an equitable assignment thereof pro tanto; and, if such be the intention of the parties it will be so held, even though the order be general in its form. The fund so assigned need not be actually in existence at the time of the giving of the order, provided it is to come into existence as the result of arrangements already made.

3 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1280-1284; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 41 L. ed. 855, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Brill v. Tuttle, 81 N. Y. 454, 37 Am. Rep. 515.

Any fact which clearly proves it to be unconscionable to execute the judgment, and of which the judgment debtor might have availed himself at law, but was prevented by fraud or accident, unmixed with any fault or negligence in himself or his agents, will justify an application to a court of chancery.

Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 362; Graver v. Faurot, 22 C. C. A. 156, 46 U. S. App. 268, 76 Fed. 257; Stowell v. Eldred, 26 Wis. 504; Birch v. Birch [1902] P. 62, 130; Boswell v. Coaks, 6 Reports, 167; Cole v. Langford [1898] 2 Q. B. 36; Priestman v. Thomas, L. R. 9 Prob. Div. 210; Barnesly v. Powel, 1 Ves. Sr. 119, 284; Bandon v. Becher, 9 Bligh, N. R. 532.

Mr. F. M. Etheridge argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander & Thompson, McLaurin & Wozencraft, Spoonts, Thompson, & Barwise, and Etheridge & Baker, filed a brief for appellees:

A circuit court of the United States, sitting in equity, will not re-examine and revise a judgment at law, simply upon an allegation of fraud intrinsic in the law judgment.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 68, 25 L. ed. 93, 96; Greene v. Greene, 2 Gray, 361, 61 Am. Dec. 454; Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 111 U. S. 505, 28 L. ed. 498, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Pico v. Cohn, 91 Cal. 129, 13 L.R.A. 336, 25 Am. St. Rep. 159, 25 Pac. 970, 27 Pac. 537; Pepin v. Lautman, 28 Ind. App. 74, 62 N. E. 60; Homer v. Fish, 1 Pick. 435, 11 Am. Dec. 218; United States v. Gleeson, 33 C. C. A. 272, 62 U. S. App. 311, 90 Fed. 778; Friese v. Hummel, 26 Or. 145, 46 Am. St. Rep. 610, 37 Pac. 458; Smith v. Lowry, 1 Johns. Ch. 320; Cotzhausen v. Kerting, 29 Fed. 821, 140 U. S. 678, 35 L. ed. 754, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 207, 40 L. ed. 123, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; Vanee v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 929; Steele v.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Dixon v. Graham, 16 Iowa, 310; Haas v. Billings, 42 Minn. 63, 43 N. W. 797; Loucheine v. Strouse, 49 Wis. 623, 6 N. W. 360; Moffatt v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Gray v. Barton, 62 Mich. 196, 28 N. W. 813; Amador Canal & Min. Co. v. Mitchell, 59 Cal. 179; United States v. White, 9 Sawy. 125, 17 Fed. 561; United States v. Hancock, 30 Fed. 558; Marriot v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269; Richards v. Symes, 2 Atk. 319; Sewel v. Freeston, 1 Ch. Cas. 65; Flower v. Lloyd, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 327.

The respondents here obtained none of the company's funds until the alleged duty of inquiry imputed to them had been prosecuted to the very highest source and exploded.

Bank of United States v. Bank of Washington, 6 Pet. 8, 8 L. ed. 299; Holly v. Missionary Soc. 180 U. S. 284, 45 L. ed. 531, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395; Merchants Ins. Co. v. Abbott, 131 Mass. 397; Walker v. Conant, 69 Mich. 321, 13 Am. St. Rep. 391, 37 N. W. 292; Langley v. Warner, 3 N. Y. 327; Stephens v. Board of Education, 79 N. Y. 183, 35 Am. Rep. 511; Justh v. National Bank, 56 N. Y. 483; Webb v. Burney, 70 Tex. 322, 7 S. W. 841; Rector v. Fitzgerald, 8 C. C. A. 277, 19 U. S. App. 423, 59 Fed. 808; Eylar v. Eylar, 60 Tex. 315; McAusland v. Pundt, 1 Neb. 211, 93 Am. Dec. 358; Steele v. Renn, 50 Tex. 467, 32 Am. Rep. 605; Wadhams v. Gay, 73 Ill. 415; Glover v. Coit, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 104, 81 S. W. 136; Gould v. McFall, 118 Pa. 455, 4 Am. St. Rep. 606, 12 Atl. 336; Macklin v. Allenberg, 100 Mo. 337, 13 S. W. 350.

Wrongful conduct of the party sued is an essential element of his liability, and, without such showing, he cannot be held.

Schneider v. Sellers, 98 Tex. 380, 84 S. W. 417; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1051; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 499, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282.

Where the funds have become once lawfully titled in an outsider, the party injured cannot follow them, and, by his action, make illegal that which had a lawful inception.

Winston v. Masterson, 87 Tex. 200, 27 S. W. 768; McDonald v. Napier, 14 Ga. 89; Little v. Bunee, 7 N. H. 485, 28 Am. Dec. 363; Wright v. Aldrich, 60 N. H. 161; Florida C. R. Co. v. Bisbee, 18 Fla. 66; Kalmbach v. Foote, 86 Mich. 240, 49 N. W. 132; Gray v. Alexander, 7 Humph. 16; Costigan v. Newland, 12 Barb. 456; Butcher v. Henning, 90 Hun, 565, 35 N. Y. Supp. 1006.

The complainant has proceeded throughout in the prosecution of this suit upon the theory that it was coerced into paying off the Hunter policies. The contrary, however, is established. Being a voluntary payment, made not under duress, nor under mistake of law or fact, the company could not prevail in this proceeding, even if the equities of these respondents did not so greatly preponderate.

Gould v. McFall, supra; Dickerman v. Lord, 21 Iowa, 338, 89 Am. Dec. 579; McDonald v. Napier, Kalmbach v. Foote, and Butcher v. Henning, supra; Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U. S. 210, 24 L. ed. 409; Elston v. Chicago, 40 Ill. 514, 89 Am. Dec. 361; Groves v. Sentell, 13 C. C. A. 386, 30 U. S. App. 119, 66 Fed. 179.

There has been a payment, and the complainant seeks to reopen the payment, and recover, not the judgment, which has been discharged, but money that has been paid in the transaction.

People's Sav. Bank v. Bates, 120 U. S. 556, 30 L. ed. 754, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Youngs v. Lee, 12 N. Y. 551; Meads v. Merchants' Bank, 25 N. Y. 143, 82 Am. Dec. 331; Padgett v. Lawrence, 10 Paige, 170, 40 Am. Dec. 232; Struthers v. Kendall, 41 Pa. 214, 80 Am. Dec. 610; Goodman v. Simonds, 20 How. 343, 15 L. ed. 934.

The jurisdiction of the United States circuit court having been invoked and acquired entirely on the ground of diversity of citizenship by appellant, it should have appealed to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and not to this court.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 325, 44 L. ed. 486, 488, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 436, 42 L. ed. 531, 533, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 477, 45 L. ed. 280, 285, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

In order to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction direct from the circuit court on a constitutional question, it must appear that the suit is one in which the question was really involved in the rendition of the judgment complained of, and that the question was controlling, or, at least, material.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 37 L. ed. 1120, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 48 L. ed. 795, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 38 L. ed. 764, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

The fact that this suit was brought in the circuit court to vacate the judgment of the same court in the law case does not make this a suit arising under the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States, or give this court jurisdiction.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. supra; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Pope v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 173 U. S. 573, 43 L. ed. 814, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

The party defeated on final judgment in the circuit court must elect whether he will go to the Supreme Court on the question of jurisdiction alone, or to the circuit court of appeals on the whole case.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.

To give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court under the 5th section of the 7th Amendment, there must be an assignment or specification of error, stating the error committed by the court below. Appellant has no such assignment or specification of error in the record, for the good reason the court below ruled in its favor in reference to the "constitutional question" on demurrer, in chambers, before answer and trial, and appellant has no right to now import the question into the cause to give this court jurisdiction.

Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

The appellant, in its bill of complaint in the circuit court, depended, to support the jurisdiction of that court, upon diversity of citizenship between it and the respondents. It also suggests, by way of argument, in its brief herein on the merits, that its bill was in the nature of an ancillary bill to the original action. That circumstance does not, of course, affect the jurisdiction of this appeal.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1043, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

The question of jurisdiction may not be made the basis of a direct appeal to this court at the instance of the party in whose favor it was decided in the trial court; and a certificate from the circuit court, presenting the question to this court, is indispensable.

Courtney v. Pradt, 196 U. S. 89, 49 L. ed. 398, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity, brought in the circuit court to enjoin the setting up of a judgment at law recovered in the same circuit court upon three policies of life insurance, on the ground that the judgment was obtained by fraud. It also seeks to compel the plaintiff in the action at law, and other parties to whom interests in the policies were assigned, to repay the sums which they received upon them. The judgment was rendered in a case which came before this court, and the dramatic circumstances of the alleged death are set forth in the report. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662. The appellant is the plaintiff in error in that case, having changed its name. After the date of the judgment the appellant discovered that Hunter, the party whose life was insured, was alive, and that the recovery was the result of a deliberate plot. Thereupon it forthwith brought this bill. One of the defenses set up and argued below and here was that, by the 7th Amendment to the Constitution, no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law. On the facts alleged and proved the circuit court entered a decree against the plaintiff at law, Mettler, now Smythe, but dismissed the bill as against the assignees of partial interests in the policies. The insurance company appealed to this court.

The material facts are these: By way of a contingent fee for the services in collecting the insurance, Mrs. Mettler assigned to the present defendant Clark and his partners one-third interest in the policies, with an additional sum in case statutory damages and attorney's fees were recovered. This afterwards came to Clark alone. Clark and Mrs. Mettler assigned $500 each, from [73] their respective *interests, to the defendant Culberson, as a contingent fee for argument and services in this court. Clark also employed the defendant Spoons, it would seem, on a contingent fee. Finally he mortgaged his right to the Phillips Investment Company. When the judgment was recovered, before execution, the insurance company paid the amount ($24,028.25) into court. Out of this the clerk paid to Mrs. Mettler $11,616; to Clark, $8,346; to Spoons on Clark's order, $1,500; to Culberson, $1,026; and to the Phillips Investment Company, 203 U. S.

$1,540.24. It is these sums, other than that paid to Mrs. Mettler, that are in question here.

It will not be necessary to consider the constitutional question under the 7th Amendment, to which we have referred, or some other questions which were raised, because we are of opinion that the appellees are entitled to keep their money, even if the judgment can be impeached for fraud. They all got the legal title to the money which was paid to them, or, what is the same thing, got the legal title transferred to their order. That being so, the appellant must show some equity before their legal title can be disturbed. It founds its claim to such an equity on the mode in which the judgment which induced it to part with the title to its money was obtained. But fraud, of course, gives rise only to a personal claim. It goes to the motives, not to the formal constituents, of a legal transfer (Rodliff v. Dallinger, 141 Mass. 1, 6, 55 Am. Rep. 439, 4 N. E. 805), and the rule is familiar that it can affect a title only when the owner takes with notice or without having given value (Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 133, 3 L. ed. 162, 177; 2 Wms. Vend. & P. 674. See The Eliza Lines, 199 U. S. 119, 131, 50 L. ed. 115, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8). The question is whether the appellant can make out such a case as that.

It is said that the title of the appellees stands on the judgment, and that if the judgment fails the title fails. But that mode of statement is not sufficiently precise. The judgment hardly can be said to be part of the appellees' title. It simply afforded the appellant a motive for its payment into court. *The appellees derive their [74] title immediately from Mrs. Mettler, and remotely from the act of the appellant. They stand exactly as if the appellant had handed over the $24,000 in gold to her and she thereupon had handed their proportion to them. We are putting no emphasis on the fact that the thing transferred was money. The appellees knew from what fund they were paid, from what source it came, and why it was paid to Mrs. Mettler. We are insisting only that the title had passed to them. But we repeat that, as the title had passed, the appellant must find some equity before it can disturb it, and we now add that, as there is no question that the appellees took for value, that is, in payment for their services, or, if it be preferred, in performance of Mrs. Mettler's contingent promise, the equity must be founded upon notice.

The notice to be shown is notice of the fact that the judgment which induced the appellant's payment was obtained by fraud. But notice cannot be established by the mere fact that, while the appellees held an interest in the policies only, they were assignees of choses in action, and took them subject to the equities. That is due to a chose in action not being negotiable. It does not stand on notice. The general proposition was decided in United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 333, 334, 50 L. ed. 499, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; and United States v. Clark, 200 U. S. 601, 607, 608, 50 L. ed. 613, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; and earlier in Judson v. Corcoran, 17 How. 612, 615, 15 L. ed. 231, 232; and, we have no doubt, is the law of England. Of course, the assignee of an ordinary contract can only stand in the shoes of the party with whom the contract was made. In the discussions of the rule which we have seen we have found no other reason offered, as no other is necessary. But the assumption of the good faith of the assignee occurs in more cases than one.

The principle which we apply is further illustrated by the priority given to the later of two equitable titles, if the legal title be added to it (2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. §§ 727, 768) by the doctrine of tacking, and, in [75] some degree, by the great distinction *recognized in other respects between the holder of title under an executed contract and a party to a contract merely executory. See 1 Wms. Vend. & P. 540, and cases cited. We may add further that, even if we were wrong, the equities to which an assignee takes subject are equities existing at the time of the assignment (1 Wms. Vend. & P. 584), and that the notice with which he is supposed to be charged as assignee can be of nothing more. Therefore, merely as assignees, the appellees had not notice of the, as yet, unaccomplished fraud in obtaining the judgment. The policies were honest contracts, and it was an interest in the policies which was assigned, at least to Clark.

The appellant is driven, therefore, to contend, as it did contend at the argument, that notice of the denial that Hunter was dead, in the suit on the policy, was notice of the fraud. But it is admitted that the appellees all acted in good faith; that they believed the plaintiff's case. In such circumstances, even if the answer had gone further, and had charged the plaintiff with all that the present bill charges against her, when a jury had decided that the charges were groundless, a judgment had been entered on the verdict, and the insurance company had accepted the result by paying the money into court without waiting for an execution, it would be impossible to say that the supposed notice was not purged. The appellees were not bound to contemplate future discoveries of what they honestly believed untrue, and a bill to impeach the final act of the law. See Bank of United States v. Bank of Washington, 6 Pet. 8, 19, 8 L. ed. 299, 304.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice White dissent.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the decision of this case.

*DANIEL RED BIRD et al., Citizens of the Cherokee Nation by Blood, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 125.)

CHEROKEE NATION, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 126.)

FRANCIS B. FITE et al., Intermarried White Persons, Claiming to be Entitled to Citizenship in the Cherokee Nation, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 127.)

PERSONS CLAIMING RIGHTS IN THE CHEROKEE NATION BY INTERMARRIAGE, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 128.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 76-96.)

Cherokee enrolment—rights of intermarried whites.

1. White persons residing in the Cherokee Nation who became Cherokee citizens under the Cherokee laws by intermarriage with Cherokees by blood prior to November 1, 1875, when a Cherokee law became effective which declared that such persons by intermarriage acquired no rights of soil or interest in the vested funds of the Nation, are equally interested, and have equal per capita rights with Cherokee Indians by blood in the lands constituting the public domain of the Cherokee Nation, and are entitled to be enrolled for that purpose.

Cherokee enrolment—rights of intermarried whites.

2. No rights, interest, or share in any funds belonging to the Cherokee Nation, except where such funds were derived by lease, sale, or otherwise from the lands of the Cherokee Nation conveyed to it by the United States by the patent of December, 1838, were acquired by white persons residing in the Cherokee Nation who became Cherokee citizens under the Cherokee laws by intermarriage with Cherokees by blood prior to November 1, 1875, when a Cherokee law became effective which declared that such persons by intermarriage acquired no rights of soil or interest in the vested funds of the Nation.

Statutes—effect of compilation.

3. The original Cherokee law as duly passed and approved must prevail as against omissions in subsequent compilations, where the acts providing for such compilations did not declare that they should be effective as laws of the Cherokee Nation.

Indians—rights of adopted whites.

4. Civil and political, and not property, rights, were alone within the purview of the amendment made in 1866 to the 5th section of the Cherokee Constitution of 1839, relating to eligibility to a seat in the National Council, by which "whites legally members of the Nation by adoption" were declared to be citizens of the Cherokee Nation.

Cherokee enrolment—rights of intermarried whites.

5. White persons who intermarried with Cherokees after November 1, 1875, when a Cherokee law became effective which declared that such persons by intermarriage acquired no right of soil or interest in the vested funds of the Cherokee Nation, are not entitled to share in the allotment of the lands or in the distribution of any of the funds belonging to such Nation, and are not entitled to be enrolled for that purpose.

Indians—rights of intermarried whites.

6. The ratification by the Cherokee Nation of the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), which in § 26 declares that no white person intermarried since December 16, 1895, shall be entitled to enrolment or to participate in the distribution of the tribal property of the Cherokee Nation, does not amount to a concession of property rights by the Indians to all who intermarried prior to that date.

Cherokee enrolment—rights of intermarried whites.

7. White persons who have intermarried with Delaware or Shawnee citizens of the Cherokee Nation, not thereby becoming citizens themselves under the Cherokee laws, have no part or share in the Cherokee property, and are not entitled to participate in the allotment of the lands or in the distribution of the funds belonging to such Nation, and are not entitled to be enrolled for that purpose.

Cherokee enrolment—rights of intermarried whites — married out and abandoned whites.

8. White persons who intermarried with Cherokees by blood, and, after the death of the Cherokee wife or husband, intermarried with persons not of Cherokee blood, and white men who, having married Cherokee women, abandoned them, have no part or share in the Cherokee property, and are not entitled to share in the allotments of the lands or in the distribution of any of the funds belonging to the Cherokee Nation, or to be enrolled for that purpose, although the proceedings in the nature of office found authorized by the Cherokee laws have not been instituted to deprive them of the rights and privileges acquired by intermarriage.

[Nos. 125, 126, 127, 128.]

Argued February 19, 20, 1906. Decided November 5, 1906.

A PPEALS from the Court of Claims to review a decree which adjudged that only such white persons as intermarried with Cherokees by blood prior to November 1, 1875, were entitled to any share in the Cherokee property, or to be enrolled for that purpose. Affirmed.

See same case below, 40 Ct. Cl. 411.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

*The subject-matter of this suit consists of [77] 4,420,406 acres of land in the Cherokee country about to be allotted among the Cherokee people entitled to participate in the distribution of the common property of the Cherokee Nation. The case was transmitted to the court of claims by the Secretary of the Interior, on the 24th of February, 1903, the nature of the controversy being thus stated:

"A controversy has arisen as to the rights of white persons intermarried with Cherokee citizens, and a protest has been filed with this Department on behalf of a large number of citizens of the Cherokee Nation by blood against the enrolment of intermarried persons, 'so as to recognize their right to participate in the distribution of any of the common property of the Cherokee Nation of whatever kind or character.' It is asserted, on the one hand, that the Cherokee laws have never recognized the right of 'intermarried citizens' to share in the distribution of the property of the Nation, and, on the other hand, that the Cherokee laws as well as the laws of Congress recognize those persons who have been married to Cherokee citizens in accordance with the laws of the Cherokee Nation relating to marriage as full citizens of such nation, entitled to share equally with full blooded citizens in the property of the tribe."

Thereafter, Congress, by the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1048, 1071, chap. 1479), provided as follows:

"That in the case entitled 'In the Matter of Enrolment of Persons Claiming Rights in the Cherokee Nation by Intermarriage against the United States, Departmental, Numbered Seventy-six,' now pending in the court of claims, the said court is hereby authorized and empowered to render final judgment in said case, and either party feeling itself aggrieved by said judgment shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of United States within thirty days from the filing of said judgment in the court of claims. And the said Supreme Court of the United States shall advance said case on its calendar for early hearing."

[78] *The court of claims filed its opinion May 15, 1905, and on May 18 findings of fact and conclusions of law, and on that day entered its decree as follows:

"This case having been transmitted to this court by the Secretary of the Interior by letter dated February 24, 1903, for the findings and opinion of the court in accordance with the provisions of § 2 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1883, entitled 'An Act to Afford Assistance and Relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the Investigation of Claims and Demands against the Government' (22 Stat. at L. 485, chap. 116, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 748), and Congress, by the act of March 3, 1905, entitled 'An Act Making Appropriations for the Current and Contingent Expenses of the Indian Department and for Fulfilling Treaty Stipulations with Various Indian Tribes for the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1906, and for Other Purposes,' having made the following enactment:

"That in the case entitled 'In the Matter of Enrolment of Persons Claiming Rights in the Cherokee Nation by Intermarriage against the United States, Departmental, Numbered Seventy-six,' now pending in the court of claims, the said court is hereby authorized and empowered to render final judgment in said case, and either party feeling itself aggrieved by said judgment shall have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States within thirty days from the filing of said judgment in the court of claims. And the said Supreme Court of the United States shall advance said case on its calendar for early hearing;'

"And the cause coming on to be heard upon the petition, answers, agreed facts, proofs, and arguments submitted by the attorneys of the parties to the cause, respectively, and the court having heard and fully considered the same;

"And it appearing to the court that all those white persons who married Cherokee Indians by blood subsequently to the enactment of the Cherokee law which became effective November 1, 1875, and which declared that such persons by intermarriage acquired no rights of soil or interest in the

[79] *vested funds of the Nation, had due notice of the limitations set upon their rights and privileges as citizens; and that those white persons who married Cherokee citizens by blood prior to said date acquired rights as citizens in the lands belonging to the Nation and held and owned as national lands, except such of these intermarried persons as lost their rights as Cherokee citizens by abandoning their Cherokee wives or by marrying other white or nontribal men or women having no rights of citizenship by blood in said Cherokee Nation:

"It is by the court ordered, adjudged, and decreed that such white persons residing in the Cherokee Nation as became Cherokee citizens under Cherokee laws by intermarriage with Cherokees by blood prior to the 1st day of November, 1875, are equally interested in and have equal per capita rights with Cherokee Indians by blood in the lands constituting the public domain of the Cherokee Nation, and are entitled to be enrolled for that purpose; but such intermarried whites acquired no rights and have no interest or share in any funds belonging to the Cherokee Nation except where such funds were derived by lease, sale, or otherwise from the lands of the Cherokee Nation conveyed to it by the United States by the patent of December, 1838; and that the rights and privileges of those white citizens who intermarried with Cherokee citizens subsequent to the 1st day of November, 1875, do not extend to the right of soil or interest in any of the vested funds of the Cherokee Nation, and such intermarried persons are not entitled to share in the allotment of the lands or in the distribution of any of the funds belonging to said Nation, and are not entitled to be enrolled for such purpose; that those white persons who intermarried with the Delaware or Shawnee citizens of the Cherokee Nation, either prior or subsequent to November 1, 1875, and those who intermarried with Cherokees by blood, and, subsequently, being left a widow or widower by the death of the Cherokee wife or husband, intermarried with persons not of Cherokee blood, and those white men who, having married Cherokee women and subsequently abandoned *their Cherokee wives, [80] have no part or share in the Cherokee property, and are not entitled to participate in the allotment of the lands or in the distribution of the funds of the Cherokee Nation or people, and are not entitled to be enrolled for such purpose."

Cherokee citizens by blood took an appeal to this court from so much of that decree as adjudged that persons intermarrying with Cherokee citizens prior to November 1, 1875, were entitled to share in the Cherokee property, which appeal is numbered in this court 125; and the Cherokee Nation prosecuted a similar appeal, numbered 126. Then certain intermarried whites appealed from the decree except that portion which held that the whites who intermarried prior to November 1, 1875, were entitled to share, numbered 127. And thereafter other intermarried whites appealed generally, numbered 128.

The case is reported in 40 Ct. Cl. 411, where will be found an elaborate statement of the facts, including the acts of the Cherokee National Council, etc., bearing on the subject-matter.

Mr. John J. Hemphill argued the cause, and, with Mr. K. S. Murchison, filed a brief on behalf of Cherokee citizens by blood.

Mr. Edgar Smith argued the cause and filed a brief for the Cherokee Nation.

Messrs. James S. Davenport and William T. Hutchings argued the cause and filed a brief on behalf of persons claiming rights in the Cherokee Nation by intermarriage.

Mr. William Henry White also argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. E. L. Leckie, filed a brief on behalf of the intermarried whites.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Article 1 of the treaty of 1846 declared "that the lands now occupied by the Cherokee Nation shall be secured to the whole Cherokee people for their common use and benefit" [9 Stat. at L. 871]; and article 4, that these lands "shall be and remain the common property of the whole Cherokee people."

Section 2 of article 1 of the Cherokee Constitution (1839) provided that "the lands of the Cherokee Nation shall remain common property."

The amendments of 1866 (art. 1, § 2) declared that the lands of the Cherokee Nation "shall remain common property until the National Council shall request the survey and allotment of the same, in accordance with the provisions of article 20 of the Treaty of 19th of July, 1866 [14 Stat. at L. 799], between the United States and the Cherokee Nation." This request was subsequently duly made and an allotment is taking place accordingly.

The intermarried whites have not acquired the right to share in the lands or funds of the Cherokee Nation by grant in express terms, but that right is claimed in virtue of an alleged citizenship in the Cherokee Nation derived from intermarriage under Cherokee laws.

The Nation, under the treaties, possessed the right of local self-government with authority to make such laws as it deemed necessary for the government and protection of persons and property within the country, belonging to its people, "or such persons as have connected themselves with them." Treaty, Dec. 29, 1835, art. 5, 7 Stat. at L. 478. And § 14 of article 3 of the Cherokee Constitution provided: "The National Council shall have power to make all laws and regulations which they shall deem necessary and proper for the good of the Nation, which shall not be contrary to this Constitution."

Prior to 1855 certain white persons had married Cherokees, which had given rise to serious questions respecting the status of these persons and the jurisdiction of the Nation over them. The act of Congress of June 30, 1834 [4 Stat. at L. 729, chap. 161] (carried forward into §§ 2134, 2135, 2147, and 2148 of the Revised Statutes), provided that a citizen of the United States should not go "into the Indian country without a passport, and that he might be removed therefrom as an intruder. The promise of the United States to remove unauthorized citizens from the Nation appears in the treaties, and even as late as 1893, in the convention by which the Cherokee outlet was ceded to the United States. But the Council could permit certain white persons to reside in the Nation, subject to its laws, though free from the laws relating to intruders.

In these circumstances the Cherokee act of 1855 "regulating intermarriage with white men" was passed. Its purpose is plain and is disclosed by the preamble in these words: "Whereas the peace and prosperity of the Cherokee people require that, in the enforcement of the laws, the jurisdiction should be exercised over all persons whatever who may, from time to time, be privileged to reside within the territorial limits of this Nation, therefore," etc., etc. The act was administrative and aimed at subjecting the intermarried whites to the control and dominion of the Cherokee laws instead of leaving them responsible solely to the laws and authorities of the government of the United States. It contains nothing indicating the intention to confer property rights on intermarried whites. But in respect of the public domain, the court of claims, in the present case, because of the opinion in Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55, assumed that the acquisition of citizenship under Cherokee laws carried the right to share therein, unless forbidden by such legislation. And Mr. Chief Justice Mott, speaking for the court, said: "In 1874 the rapidly growing value of the Cherokee lands was becoming perceptible. On the one hand there were white men who desired to marry into the tribe, and, marrying and residing in the Nation, desired the rights and privileges of citizens; on the other hand, there were white adventurers desiring to share in the wealth of the Nation, soon, it was believed, to become available to individual citizens. The public welfare might be benefited by allowing the one, and most certainly [83] would be conserved by excluding the *other. No restriction appeared to exist in the Constitution which would forbid the National Council from admitting white men to citizenship upon the condition that they should not acquire an estate or interest in the communal or common property of the Nation."

Accordingly, in 1874, the Cherokee National Council adopted a new code containing sections relating to intermarriage, which became effective November 1, 1875, and carried a provision in article XV., § 75, reading as follows:

"Provided, also, that the rights and privileges herein conferred shall not extend to right of soil or interest in the vested funds of this Nation, unless such admitted citizen shall pay into the general funds of the national treasury a sum of money, to be ascertained and fixed by the National Council, equal to the 'pro rata' share of each native Cherokee in the lands and vested wealth of the Nation, estimated at $500, and thereafter conform to the Constitution of the Nation, and the laws made or to be made in pursuance thereof, in which case he shall be deemed a Cherokee to all intent, and be entitled to all the rights of other Cherokees."

On November 28, 1877, the Council amended this proviso by striking out all after the words "this Nation" in the second line thereof, so that the proviso read:

"Provided, also, that the rights and privileges herein conferred shall not extend to right of soil or interest in the vested funds of this Nation."

The court of claims found that the Cherokee law remained unchanged, in this particular, from 1877 to the date of the decree. Something is said about certain compilations of the Cherokee laws of 1880 and 1892, which omitted this part of § 75, but we agree that this omission did not operate to change the existing law, as the acts providing for the compilations did not provide that they should be effective as laws of the Nation, and, where an error was committed by the compiler, the original law, as duly passed and approved, must prevail.

[84] *Thus it is seen that the privilege of paying $500 into the Cherokee treasury and becoming thereby entitled to "all the rights of other Cherokees" existed only from November 1, 1875, to November 28, 1877. Assuming that the National Council had authority, under the Cherokee Constitution of 1839 and the amendments of 1866, to confer on white intermarried citizens the privilege of purchasing a right in the soil and funds of the Nation, that privilege was withdrawn in two years, and, according to the facts found, was only availed of by two persons, neither of whom was an individual party to the suit. No right in the Nation's property flowed from the Cherokee citizenship act, which merely subjected the white man to the jurisdiction of the Nation, but that right resulted from express grant and the payment of a price. As to the Delawares and Shawnees, their participation was specifically provided for by convention, approved by the United States, and depended upon payments made. As to the freedmen, their participation in property distribution was secured by the terms of the treaty of 1866 (the result of the Civil War), and of the constitutional amendments thereupon adopted. The court of claims referred to them thus: "These constitutional amendments were brought about by the action of the United States at the close of the Civil War in dictating that the slaves or freed persons of color in the Cherokee country should not only be admitted to the rights of citizenship, but to an equal participation in the communal or common property of the Cherokees. The Cherokees seem to have veiled their humiliation by these general declarations of the persons who should be taken and deemed to be citizens; but be that as it may, the overthrow of the Cherokee Nation and the treaty of peace, 1866, and the terms dictated by the United States, whereby their former slaves were made their political equals, and the common property of the Cherokees was to be shared in with their servants and dependents, was in effect a revolution. The constitutional amendment quoted was simply declaratory of the new order *of things. It is not necessarily pro-[85]spective, and does not impose limitations upon the legislative power with regard to the naturalization or future adoption of aliens as citizens. Under the polity of the Cherokees, citizenship and communal ownership were distinct things. The citizen who annually received an annuity derived from the communal fund held by the United States, and the citizen who never received a dollar from the fund, or never so much as thought of receiving it, form a concrete object lesson in constitutional law not easily effaced from the common mind."

Section 5 of article 3 of the Constitution of 1839 was as follows:

"Sec. 5. No person shall be eligible to a seat in the National Council but a free Cherokee male citizen, who shall have attained to the age of twenty-five years.

"The descendants of Cherokee men by all free women, except the African race, whose parents may have been living together as man and wife according to the customs and laws of this Nation, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of this Nation, as well as the posterity of Cherokee women by all free men. No person who is of negro or mulatto parentage, either by the father's or mother's side, shall be eligible to hold any office of profit, honor, or trust under this government.

"Sec. 6. The electors and members of the National Council shall in all cases, except those of treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at elections and at the National Council in going to and returning."

The amendment of § 5, in 1866, reads:

"Sec. 5. No person shall be eligible to a seat in the National Council but a male citizen of the Cherokee Nation, who shall have attained to the age of twenty-five years and who shall have been a bona fide resident of the district in which he may be elected at least six months immediately preceding such election. All native-born Cherokees, all Indians and whites legally members of the Nation by adoption, and all freedmen *who have [86] been liberated by voluntary act of their former owners, or by law, as well as free colored persons who were in the country at the commencement of the Rebellion and are now residents therein, or who may return within six months from the 19th day of July, 1866, and their descendants who reside within the limits of the Cherokee Nation, shall be taken and deemed to be citizens of the Cherokee Nation."

We cannot accept the view that this amendment amounted to a grant of property rights, or operated to enlarge the authority of the National Council in respect of the readmission of former members of the Nation.

The amendment (found in that part of the Constitution in respect to offices and elections) must be taken as a whole, and related to eligibility to a seat in the National Council, and not to property rights. The contention that the words "citizens of the Cherokee Nation" should be construed as relating to the constitutional provision of 1839, that the lands of the Nation should be common property, is without merit in view of the provisions themselves.

By § 2 of article 1 of the Constitution of 1839 it was provided that "whenever any citizen shall remove with his effects out of the limits of this Nation, and becomes a citizen of any other government, all his rights and privileges as a citizen of this Nation shall cease; provided, nevertheless, that the National Council shall have power to readmit, by law, to all the rights of citizenship, any such person or persons who may, at any time, desire to return to the Nation, on memorializing the National Council for such readmission." By its terms this referred to those who had been citizens, and their readmission gave no rights not originally possessed, and this was true under the amendments of 1866. Many special Cherokee laws demonstrate that the Council did not venture to assume, nor desire to assume, the power to impart to the white adopted citizen other than civil and political rights.

For instance, the acts of 1878, readmitting Greenway and his children and Allen and his family "to all the rights and *priv-[87] leges of citizens of the Cherokee Nation" specifically provided that no rights should be acquired except such as attach to white men, "adopted citizens of the Cherokee Nation."

The acts relating to intermarriage with whites contained many restrictions, but by the act in respect of the intermarriage of Cherokees with other Indians no such restrictions were imposed. Cherokee act of Nov. 27, 1880. That act provided that the marriage should be contracted according to the law regulating marriages between "our own citizens," and declared that such Indian "shall be and is hereby deemed a Cherokee to all intents and purposes, and entitled to the rights of other Cherokees." There is no such language in the acts relating to intermarried whites.

The treaty of 1866, between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, provided as to the former slaves, that they should be free and they "and their descendants shall have all the rights of native Cherokees." [Art. 9.]

Article 15 of the same treaty, after providing for the settlement of friendly Indians amongst the Cherokees and the manner in which the latter shall be paid therefor, then stipulates that "they shall be incorporated into and ever after remain a part of the Cherokee Nation on equal terms in every respect with native citizens." When the Delawares were about to be moved into the Cherokee country as friendly Indians, it was stipulated in the agreement that "on the fulfilment by the Delawares of the foregoing stipulations, all the members of the tribe registered as above provided, shall become members of the Cherokee Nation, with the same rights and immunities and the same participation (and no other) in the national funds as native Cherokees. . . . And the children hereafter born of such Delawares so incorporated into the Cherokee Nation shall in all respects be regarded as native Cherokees." Later, when an agreement was made with the Shawnees, were the amount of money to be paid was provided for, the rights of Shawnees were defined as follows: "and that *the said Shaw-[88] nees shall be incorporated into and ever after remain a part of the Cherokee Nation, on equal terms in every respect and with all the privileges and immunities of native citizens of said Cherokee Nation."

These intermarried whites show no grant of equal rights as members of the Cherokee Nation by treaty or otherwise, nor have they (excepting the two individuals heretofore referred to) paid any sum into the Nation's treasury for a pro rata share of its money and lands.

The Delawares, the Shawnees, and the freedmen acquired their property rights by the express words of treaties, but the intermarried whites cannot point out any such in their favor. Doubtless because of this they have heretofore asserted no claim, although the Cherokee courts were open to them to do so, and have allowed repeated payments of money to be made to every other citizen without question.

The distinction between different classes of citizens was recognized by the Cherokees in the differences in their intermarriage law, as applicable to the whites and to the Indians of other tribes; by the provision in the intermarriage law that a white man intermarried with an Indian by blood acquires certain rights as a citizen, but no provision that if he marries a Cherokee citizen not of Indian blood he shall be regarded as a citizen at all; and by the provision that if, once having married an Indian by blood, he marries the second time a citizen not by blood, he loses all of his rights as a citizen. And the same distinction between citizens as such and citizens with property rights has also been recognized by Congress in enactments relating to other Indians than the Five Civilized Tribes. Act August 9, 1888, 25 Stat. at L. 392, chap. 818; act May 2, 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 96, chap. 182; act June 7, 1897, 30 Stat. at L. 90, chap. 3.

In Whitmire v. Cherokee Nation, 30 Ct. Cl. 138, 152, the court of claims said: "Here it should be noted that when the treaty was made there had long been a peculiar class of citizens in the Cherokee country,— [89] white men who became *citizens by intermarriage." And, after quoting the proviso to § 75, art. 15, of the Cherokee Code of 1874, the court added: "The idea, therefore, existed both in the mind and in the laws of the Cherokee people, that citizenship did not necessarily extend to or invest in the citizen a personal or individual interest in what the Constitution termed the 'common property,'—'the lands of the Cherokee Nation.'"

In Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, 738, this court, in respect of certain acts of Congress, observed:

"It may be remarked that the legislation seems to recognize, especially the act of June 28, 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 517], a distinction between admission to citizenship merely and the distribution of property to be subsequently made, as if there might be circumstances under which the right to a share in the latter would not necessarily follow from the concession of the former."

Referring to this, the court of claims said in its opinion in the present case, 40 Ct. Cl. 411, 442:

"It cannot be supposed for a moment that Congress intended by this legislation to take away from some of the Cherokee people property which was constitutionally theirs, or to confer upon white citizens property which they were not legally entitled to have. The term 'citizens' in these statutes of the United States must be construed to mean those citizens who were constitutionally or legally entitled to share in the allotment of the lands."

The doctrine is familiar that the language of a statute is to be interpreted in the light of the particular matter in hand and the object sought to be accomplished, as manifested by other parts of the act, and the words used may be qualified by their surroundings and connections.

In accepting the conclusion of the court of claims in this regard we, nevertheless, deem it proper to somewhat consider the congressional legislation relied on by the claimants.

The act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), ratified by the Cherokee Nation, August 7, 1902, and often called the Cherokee agreement, contained these sections:

"Sec. 25. The roll of citizens of the Cherokee Nation shall be made as of September first, nineteen hundred and two, and the names of all persons then living and entitled to enrolment on that date shall be placed on said roll by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes. [90]

"Sec. 26. The names of all persons living on the first day of September, nineteen hundred and two, entitled to be enrolled as provided in section twenty-five hereof, shall be placed upon the roll made by said Commission, and no child born there after to a citizen, and no white person who has intermarried with a Cherokee citizen since the sixteenth day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, shall be entitled to enrolment or to participate in the distribution of the tribal property of the Cherokee Nation.

"Sec. 27. Such rolls shall, in all other respects, be made in strict compliance with the provisions of section twenty-one of the act of Congress approved June twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight (30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 517), and the act of Congress approved May thirty-first, nineteen hundred (31 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 598).

"Sec. 28. No person whose name appears upon the roll made by the Dawes Commission as a citizen or freedman of any other tribe shall be enrolled as a citizen of the Cherokee Nation.

"Sec. 29. For the purpose of expediting the enrolment of the Cherokee citizens and the allotment of lands as herein provided, the said Commission shall, from time to time, and as soon as practicable, forward to the Secretary of the Interior lists upon which shall be placed the names of those persons found by the Commission to be entitled to enrolment. The lists thus prepared, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall constitute a part and parcel of the final roll of citizens of the Cherokee tribe, upon which allotment of land and distribution of other tribal property shall be made. When there shall have been submitted to and ap-[91] proved by the *Secretary of the Interior lists embracing the names of all those lawfully entitled to enrolment, the roll shall be deemed complete. The roll so prepared shall be made in quadruplicate, one to be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior, one with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, one with the principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, and one to remain with the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes.

"Sec. 30. During the months of September and October, in the year nineteen hundred and two, the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes may receive applications for enrolment of such infant children as may have been born to recognized and enrolled citizens of the Cherokee Nation on or before the first day of September, nineteen hundred and two, but the application of no person whomsoever for enrolment shall be received after the thirty-first day of October, nineteen hundred and two.

"Sec. 31. No person whose name does not appear upon the roll prepared as herein provided shall be entitled to in any manner participate in the distribution of the common property of the Cherokee tribe, and those whose names appear thereon shall participate in the manner set forth in this act: Provided, That no allotment of land or other tribal property shall be made to any person, or to the heirs of any person, whose name is on said roll and who died prior to the first day of September, nineteen hundred and two. The right of such person to any interest in the lands or other tribal property shall be deemed to have become extinguished and to have passed to the tribe in general upon his death before said date, and any person or persons who may conceal the death of any one on said roll as aforesaid for the purpose of profiting by said concealment, and who shall knowingly receive any portion of any land or other tribal property or of the proceeds so arising from any allotment prohibited by this section, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall be proceeded against as may be provided in other cases of felony, and the penalty for this offense shall be confinement at hard *labor for a [92] period of not less than one year nor more than five years, and in addition thereto a forfeiture to the Cherokee Nation of the lands, other tribal property, and proceeds so obtained."

It thus appears that the roll of citizens of the Cherokee Nation was to be made up as of September 1, 1902, of the persons then living and entitled to enrolment on that date; that all such persons should be placed upon the roll, and that (§ 29) on the lists to be finally approved by the Secretary of the Interior there should be placed only the names of those persons found to be entitled to enrolment. In all other respects the roll was to be made in compliance with § 21 of the Act of Congress of June 28, 1898, and of the Act of Congress of May 31, 1900.

Section 21 provided: "That in making rolls of citizenship of the several tribes, as required by law, the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes is authorized and directed to take the roll of Cherokee citizens of eighteen hundred and eighty (not including freedmen) as the only roll intended to be confirmed by this and preceding acts of Congress, and to enroll all persons now living whose names are found on said roll, . . . with such intermarried white persons as may be entitled to citizenship under Cherokee laws." The roll of 1880, made by the Cherokees, was a census roll, and its confirmation was not intended to create any rights which citizens of the Cherokee Nation had not before enjoyed, but merely to furnish the basis for making up the roll of citizens. Section 21 was in reality a statement that no previous act of Congress was intended to confirm any other roll of the Cherokee Nation.

The act of May 31, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 221, 236, chap. 598), provided: "That said Commission shall continue to exercise all authority heretofore conferred on it by law. But it shall not receive, consider, or make any record of any application of any person for enrolment as a member of any tribe in Indian territory who has not been a recognized citizen thereof, and duly and lawfully enrolled or admitted as such, and its refusal *of such application shall be final when ap- [93] proved by the Secretary of the Interior." Section 31 of the act of July 1, 1902, says that no person whose name does not appear on the roll made by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes "shall be entitled to in any manner participate in the distribution of the common property of the Cherokee tribe, and those whose names appear thereon shall participate in the manner set forth in this act." In other words, the roll must be made up of citizens who, under the laws of the Cherokee Nation, were entitled to participation in the distribution of the common property of the Cherokee tribes.

The concluding words of § 21, "with such intermarried white persons as may be entitled to citizenship under Cherokee laws," emphatically indicate that Congress had the Indian citizen in mind in all that went before and limited enrolment of white persons to such as might be entitled to citizenship under Cherokee laws.

Counsel for claimants speak of the act of 1902 as a "treaty," but it is only an act of Congress, and can have no greater effect. It is a singular commentary on the situation that the majority of the native Cherokees voted against its acceptance, which was carried by the vote of the whites. The suggestion is wholly inadmissible that they could vote themselves an interest in the property of the Cherokee people, including a share in the money paid in by the Delawares and the Shawnees, and become thereby wards of this government.

Referring to § 26 of the act of 1902, which declares that no white person intermarried since December 16, 1895, shall be entitled to enrolment or to participate in the distribution of the tribal property of the Cherokee Nation, and to an act of the Cherokee Council to the same effect, approved December 16, 1895, counsel contend that the act of Congress shows that there was a class of persons who, having married prior to December 16, 1895, were to be enrolled, embracing all lawfully married according to the law of the Nation, and were to participate in the distribution of the tribal property. [94] *The doctrine that the denial of a right is the grant of a right is a poor basis for a grant of land. Not a single word of the act intimates that these intermarried persons have or are to have any interest in the property of the Nation, and to hold that because the act of 1902 declares that white persons intermarrying after 1895 should acquire no property rights the Indians, in accepting the act, conceded property rights to all who intermarried prior thereto, would put a construction on the act utterly inconsistent with the settled rule that, as between the whites and the Indians, the laws are to be construed most favorably to the latter.

After the decision in Journeycake's Case, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55, and in that of Whitmore v. Cherokee Nation, 30 Ct. Cl. 138, 180, the Cherokee National Council passed the act of December 16, 1895, amending certain sections of the compiled laws, from which the provisions of the act of November, 1877, which denied intermarrying whites any right in Cherokee property, had been erroneously omitted, by re-enacting the same, but this only evidenced the determination to prevent the encroachment of the whites upon the property rights of the Cherokee people. The act was clearly passed out of abundant caution, and was quite unnecessary in view of the fact that the act of 1877 remained in force, as was found by the court of claims.

We are dealing with the right of enrolment so as to entitle the persons enrolled to participate in the distribution of the lands and vested funds of the Cherokee Nation, and not with questions arising in respect of improvements on the public domain. As to improvements, they seem to have been treated as those of a tenant who had made them under an agreement that they should remain his. Any citizen of the Nation could use the public domain, and it is not asserted that the intermarried whites failed to obtain their share of such use, but because they have enjoyed that benefit, free from tax or burden, is no reason for giving them a share in the lands and vested funds, which has never been granted to them, and for which they have never paid.

*We concur in the conclusions of the court [95] of claims, including the disposition of the particular contention presented in appeal No. 128.

This involved certain claimants, before the court, known as "married out and abandoned whites," who alleged that they became citizens of the Cherokee Nation by intermarriage, but conceded that they had since married persons having no rights of Cherokee citizenship by blood, or had abandoned their Cherokee wives. They contended that they could not be deprived of the rights and privileges acquired by intermarriage save by proceedings in the nature of office found. As to this the court of claims said:

"These intermarried whites are not grantees or devisees seised and in possession of land, occupying the position of defendants. They occupy the contrary position—of plaintiffs seeking to recover money—and it is obligatory upon them to establish their right to it. To say that a white man can share in the property of the Cherokees for the reason that at one time in his life he was the husband of a Cherokee woman, and to say that this court or the Secretary of the Interior must hold that he is still the husband of a Cherokee woman because the contrary has not been established in another proceeding, is an appeal to technicality which the court cannot uphold. These claimants, like other plaintiffs, must prove their case; asserting a present right, they must establish present conditions. The laws and usages of the Cherokees, their earliest history, the fundamental principles of their national policy, their Constitution and statutes, all show that citizenship rested on blood or marriage; that the man who would assert citizenship must establish marriage; that when marriage ceased (with a special reservation in favor of widows or widowers), citizenship ceased; that when an intermarried white married a person having no rights of Cherokee citizenship by blood, it was conclusive evidence that the tie which bound him to the Cherokee people was severed and the very basis of his citizenship obliterated.

[96] *"The Cherokee statute which has been cited (Laws of 1892, § 669) gives a proceeding in the nature of office found, but, nevertheless, is confirmatory of the views hereinbefore expressed. It relates to cases where the Cherokee government takes the initiative to accomplish a purpose. That is to say, where an intermarried white man has forfeited his rights of citizenship in the Nation by acts which declare such forfeiture 'and the Nation requires his removal beyond the limits of its territory,' this proceeding must be resorted to, to be followed by a call on the United States Indian agent 'to remove such a white man.' It is in principle precisely like the common-law procedure of office found, and exists for the same reason,—that the government may exercise a right dependent upon only the alienage of a person living within its territory, presumably a citizen."

Decree affirmed.

IN THE MATTER OF GEORGE MORAN, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 96-105.)

Habeas corpus—grounds—jurisdiction below.

1. The failure to specify a building in the order of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma fixing Lawton as the place where the district court should be held in and for the county of Comanche, there being at the time of making the order and at the time of trial no county or court buildings in such county, did not go to the

NOTE.—On habeas corpus in the Federal courts—see notes to Re Reinitz, 4 L.R.A. 236; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to questions reviewable by habeas corpus—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 373; Bion's Appeal, 11 L.R.A. 694; United States v. Hamilton, 1 L. ed. U. S. 490; Re Carll, 27 L. ed. U. S. 288; Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; Pearee v. Texas, 39 L. ed. U. S. 164; and Glass v. The Betsey, 1 L. ed. U. S. 489.

On collateral attack by habeas corpus on decision against constitutional rights—see note to Hovey v. Elliott, 39 L.R.A. 450.

203 U. S.

jurisdiction of such district court so as to justify relief by habeas corpus in favor of a person convicted of crime therein who makes no showing of any opportunities lost because no building was named.

Habeas corpus—grounds—selection of grand jurors.

2. A person imprisoned under a conviction in an Oklahoma court is not entitled to his release on habeas corpus, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 753, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 592, because the grand jurors were summoned from the body of the county, which resulted in the selection as such jurors of persons who were not electors nor residents of the territory, since the Federal Constitution does not control the method of selection, and if any laws have been violated by this method they are territorial enactments, which are not laws of the United States.

Habeas corpus—grounds—jurisdiction below.

3. Disobeying the law governing the selection of grand jurors does not affect the jurisdiction of the court so as to justify the release by habeas corpus of a person convicted under an indictment found by such jurors.

Venue—of criminal trial.

4. The trial in Comanche county, Oklahoma, of an offense committed within territory which, at the time of trial, had been organized as such county, with a term of court fixed for it by order of the territorial supreme court, satisfies the requirements of the organic act of May 2, 1890, chap. 182, § 10, that crimes shall be tried in the county to which territory not embraced in any organized county "shall be attached," although at the date of the commission of the offense Comanche county had not been organized, but was attached for judicial purposes to Canadian county.

Territories—jurisdiction over land not open to settlement.

5. Land now embraced within the limits of Comanche county, Oklahoma, had become part of that territory on August 4, 1901, so as to make a murder committed therein on that date an offense against the territorial rather than the Federal statutes, although the land had not then been opened for settlement.

Habeas corpus—grounds—jurisdiction below.

6. Compelling the accused to stand up and walk before the jury, and stationing the jury during a recess so as to observe his size and walk, even if contrary to the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, do not affect the jurisdiction of the court so as to justify relief by habeas corpus.

[No. 8, Original.]

Argued October 15, 1906. Decided November 5, 1906.

ORIGINAL PETITION for habeas corpus and certiorari brought by a person imprisoned on a conviction for murder. Rule discharged. Writs denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Finis E. Riddle argued the cause, and, with Mr. William I. Cruce, filed a brief for petitioner:

A court created by the legislature can only be organized in the manner and as provided by the law creating it, and if it is not organized as provided by the law creating it, then it has no power or authority to try cases and to render a valid judgment.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 284; Hobart v. Hobart, 45 Iowa, 503; Columbus v. Hydraulic Woollen Mills Co. 33 Ind. 436; Greenwood v. Bradford, 128 Mass. 296; King v. King, 1 Penr. & W. 19; Re Allison, 13 Colo. 535, 10 L.R.A. 790, 16 Am. St. Rep. 224, 22 Pac. 820; 21 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 608; Northrup v. People, 37 N. Y. 203; Ex parte Branch, 63 Ala. 383; Boynton v. Nelson, 46 Ala. 510; Garlick v. Dunn, 63 Ala. 404; Wightman v. Karsner, 20 Ala. 446; Napper v. Noland, 9 Port. (Ala.) 218; Nabors v. State, 6 Ala. 200; Neal v. Shinn, 49 Ark. 227, 4 S. W. 771; State ex rel. Butler v. Williams, 48 Ark. 227, 2 S. W. 843; Grimmett v. Askew, 48 Ark. 151, 2 S. W. 707; Chaplin v. Holmes, 27 Ark. 414; Hellem v. State, 22 Ark. 207; Brumley v. State, 20 Ark. 77; Ex parte Jones, 27 Ark. 349; Ex parte Osborn, 24 Ark. 479; Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 229, 35 Am. Dec. 54; Bates v. Gage, 40 Cal. 183; Clelland v. People, 4 Colo. 244; American F. Ins. Co. v. Pappe, 4 Okla. 110, 43 Pac. 1085; Irwin v. Irwin, 2 Okla. 180, 37 Pac. 548.

While it is a case of error, yet it is such error that renders the judgment of the court void.

Re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 176, 182, 33 L. ed. 118, 120, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107-116, 35 L. ed. 635-638, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. ed. 332; Virginia v. Rives (Ex parte Virginia) 100 U. S. 333, 25 L. ed. 675; Ex parte Carll, 106 U. S. 521, 27 L. ed. 288, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 328, 28 L. ed. 1005, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Re Cuddy, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. ed. 154, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 849, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Re Swan, 150 U. S. 648, 37 L. ed. 1209, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Re Elmira Steel Co. 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505, 109 Fed. 456; Adams v. Terrell, 4 Woods, 337, 4 Fed. 796; Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 540, 8 L. ed. 1189; Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 7 L. ed. 164; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. ed. 547; Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. 475, 9 L. ed. 500; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet.

511, 10 L. ed. 270; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Brown, Jurisdiction of Courts, 2d ed. §§ 101-103, pp. 377-379.

The failure of the court to substantially follow the provisions of the statute, and in purposely disregarding the statute in the manner of organizing a grand jury, renders that body and its proceedings void.

Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 1075, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731.

The pretended indictment upon which the petitioner was convicted, under all the authorities was no indictment at all. It is the same as though he had been convicted without an indictment. It was wholly insufficient to give the court jurisdiction over the person of the defendant.

Re Bonner, 151 U. S. 254, 38 L. ed. 150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105, 10 Pac. 272; People v. Thurston, 5 Cal. 69; Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239, 28 Pac. 341; State v. Babeock, 1 Conn. 401; 2 Hawk. P. C. chap. 25, §§ 26-28; Nicholls v. State, 5 N. J. L. 543; Couch v. Alabama, 63 Ala. 163; Doyle v. State, 17 Ohio, 224; Vattier v. State, 4 Blackf. 73; McQuillen v. State, 8 Smedes & M. 587; Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621; State v. Williams, 5 Port. (Ala.) 130; Lott v. State, 18 Tex. App. 627; People v. Coffman, 24 Cal. 230; McNeese v. State, 19 Tex. App. 48; Portis v. State, 23 Miss. 578; 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 6; Thompson & M. Juries, §§ 492-494, 500, 520; United States v. Antz, 4 Woods, 174, 16 Fed. 119; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 71, 27 L. ed. 859, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; State v. McNamara, 3 Nev. 75; Brown v. State, 9 Neb. 163, 2 N. W. 378; Rainey v. State, 19 Tex. App. 481; Finley v. State, 61 Ala. 201; Nordan v. State, 143 Ala. 13, 39 So. 406; State v. Feazell, 114 La. 533, 38 So. 444; State v. Mercer, 101 Md. 535, 61 Atl. 220; United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 226; Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 390; Dutell v. State, 4 G. Greene, 125; Thorp v. People, 3 Utah, 441 Appx., 24 Pac. 908; State v. Marks, 21 La. Ann. 251.

The petitioner was compelled by the court to furnish evidence against himself.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 818; Agnew v. Jobson, 133 Cox, C. C. 625; Blackwell v. State, 67 Ga. 76, 44 Am. Rep. 717; People v. McCoy, 45 How. Pr. 216; State v. Jacobs, 50 N. C. (5 Jones, L.) 259; Day v. State, 63 Ga. 667; People v. Mead, 50 Mich. 228, 15 N. W. 95; Stokes v. State, 5 Baxt. 619, 30 Am. Rep. 72; 30 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1160; Cooper v. State, 86 Ala. 610, 4 L.R.A. 766, 11 Am. St. Rep. 84, 6 So. 110; Davis v. State, 131 Ala. 10, 31 So. 569; State v. Garrett, 71 N. C. 85, 17 Am. Rep. 1; State v. Graham, 74 N. C.

616, 21 Am. Rep. 493; Walker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; State v. Nordstrom, 7 Wash. 506, 35 Pac. 382; Underhill, Crim Ev. p. 65, § 53, p. 67, § 54; Blackwell v. State, 67 Ga. 76, 44 Am. Rep. 717; Rice v. Rice, 47 N. J. Eq. 559, 11 L. R.A. 591, 21 Atl. 286; People v. Wolcott, 51 Mich. 612, 17 N. W. 78; Emery's Case, 107 Mass. 181, 9 Am. Rep. 22; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616-641, 29 L. ed. 746, 754, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547-586, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

If the errors were such that the trial court failed to obtain jurisdiction over the petitioner, or lost jurisdiction by errors committed in invading the petitioner's constitutional rights and in transcending plain statutes enacted for the guidance of the court and the protection of the petitioner, then this court will not fail to do its duty and release the petitioner, simply because the trial court committed grievous errors, which errors resulted in the unconstitutional and void conviction, especially as the petitioner has exhausted every other remedy given him under the law.

Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 256, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. ed. 796, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 42 L. ed. 461, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Re Frederick, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. ed. 653, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793.

Mr. Don C. Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. O. Cromwell, filed a brief for respondent:

Excepting in cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state is a party, this court can issue the writ of habeas corpus only in aid of its appellate jurisdiction.

Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 75, 2 L. ed. 554; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 202, 7 L. ed. 653; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307-328, 15 L. ed. 421-431; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. ed. 332.

This court having no jurisdiction of criminal cases by writ of error or appeal cannot discharge, on habeas corpus, a person imprisoned under the sentence of a circuit or district court in a criminal case, unless the sentence exceeds the jurisdiction of that court, or there is no authority to hold him under the sentence.

Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 420, 29 L. ed. 90, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 184, 185, 33 L. ed. 118, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672.

203 U. S.

Even if this court should be of the opinion that the method of selecting these grand jurors was irregular or unauthorized by law, yet the fact remains that they were a part of the machinery of the court, acting, at least, under color of authority, and, if not a de jure grand jury, were at least a de facto grand jury, and their acts cannot be collaterally attacked, nor the jurisdiction of the court devested on habeas corpus.

Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782-784, 30 L. ed. 824, 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; State ex rel. Dunn v. Noyes, 87 Wis. 340, 27 L.R.A. 776, 41 Am. St. Rep. 45, 58 N. W. 386; People v. Petrea, 92 N. Y. 128; People v. Dolan, 6 Hun, 232; Dolan v. People, 6 Hun, 493, 64 N. Y. 485; Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 483; Thompson v. People, 6 Hun, 135; People v. Jewett, 3 Wend. 314; Cox v. People, 80 N. Y. 500; Friery v. People, 2 Keyes, 450; Ferris v. People, 31 How. Pr. 145; People v. Fitzpatrick, 65 How. Pr. 365; Re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541, 11 Pac. 240; Ex parte Haymond, 91 Cal. 545, 27 Pac. 859; State v. Belvel, 89 Iowa, 405, 27 L.R.A. 846, 56 N. W. 545; Ex parte Springer, 1 Utah, 214; Re Burke, 76 Wis. 357, 45 N. W. 24; Re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575-585, 35 L. ed. 513-517, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 375, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Bigelow, 113 U. S. 330, 331, 28 L. ed. 1006, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18-23, 23 L. ed. 787; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. ed. 690, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 421, 29 L. ed. 90, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Miller v. People, 183 Ill. 430, 56 N. E. 60.

There is a complete analogy between the case of a de facto judge and a de facto grand jury. The proposition that a de facto judge may lawfully preside in the trial of a criminal case and impose a valid sentence has been settled beyond any controversy.

Ex parte Ward, 173 U. S. 452-456, 43 L. ed. 765, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459; Sheehan's Case, 122 Mass. 445, 23 Am. Rep. 374; Fowler v. Bebee, 9 Mass. 231, 6 Am. Dec. 62; People ex rel. Ballou v. Bangs, 24 Ill. 184; Re Burke, 76 Wis. 357, 45 N. W. 24; Re Manning (Manning v. Weeks) 139 U. S. 504, 35 L. ed. 264, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Church, Habeas Corpus, 256, 257, 259.

The district court of Comanche county, being a court of general original jurisdiction, clothed not only with these powers specially conferred by statute, but with common-law jurisdiction by the organic law of the territory, bestowed upon it by the act of Congress creating the territorial government, and having authority for the redress of all wrongs committed against the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the territory, as a necessary incident to the exercise of the jurisdiction and powers conferred upon said court, was necessarily clothed with the inherent power to summon for its use those integral elements of the machinery of the court which were necessary for the carrying into effect of the express powers granted to it.

Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477-488, 29 L. ed. 179-183, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; 1 Chitty, Crim. Law, 518; 2 Hale, P. C. 265, 266; United States v. Hill, 1 Brook. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 15,364; Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13; Stone v. People, 3 Ill. 326; Straughan v. State, 16 Ark. 37; Wilburn v. State, 21 Ark. 198; Gibson v. Com. 2 Va. Cas. 111; Shaffer v. State, 1 How. (Miss.) 238; Woodsides v. State, 2 How. (Miss.) 655; Thompson & M. Juries, chap. 22; 2 Cooley's Bl. Com. p. 301, ¶ 2, chap. 23.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus and a writ of certiorari, brought by a person imprisoned on a conviction for murder, alleging that the judgment under which he is held is void. A rule to show [103] cause was issued and the case *was heard on the petition and answer. The various grounds upon which the petition is supported are alleged to go to the jurisdiction of the trial court. Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 30 L. ed. 824, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780. See New v. Oklahoma, 195 U. S. 252, 49 L. ed. 182, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68. A writ of habeas corpus for the same causes was heard by the circuit court of appeals and discharged. Ex parte Moran, 144 Fed. 594. The judgment also was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory in which the petitioner was tried. 14 Okla. 544, 78 Pac. 111.

The petitioner was tried in the district court for Comanche county in the territory of Oklahoma. The first ground now relied upon is that the court was not duly organized under the act of Congress requiring the supreme court to define the judicial districts, and to fix the times and places at each county seat where the district court shall be held. The order of the supreme court went no further in the way of fixing the place than to specify Lawton for the county of Comanche. This order was made on January 15, 1902, about six months after the land, which had been Indian territory, was opened for settlement and the county created. At that time and at the time of the trial there were no county or court buildings in the county. The order of the supreme court was as precise as the circumstances permitted it to be, and the failure to specify a building did not go to the jurisdiction of the trial court. There is no pretense that the petitioner lost any opportunities by reason of no building being named.

The next ground argued is that the laws of the territory were not followed in the selection of the grand jury, because the persons selected were not electors of the territory, and some of them were nonresidents, with other subordinate matters. The order for the summons stated the reason, which was that there had been no election held in the county, and there were no names of jurors in the jury box; whereupon the presiding judge ordered the sheriff to summon twenty persons from the body of the county. We have heard no answer to the material portion of the reasoning of the circuit court of appeals *upon this point. If the legisla-[104] ture of Oklahoma had prescribed the method of selection followed, that method would not have violated the Constitution or any law or treaty of the United States. If it did prescribe a different one, a departure from that was a violation of the territorial enactment alone. The acts of the legislature of Oklahoma are not laws of the United States within the meaning of Rev. Stat. § 753, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 592. If any laws have been violated it is the latter one.† Therefore the petitioner is not entitled to release on this ground under Rev. Stat. § 753. The 5th Amendment, requiring the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, does not take up unto itself the local law as to how the grand jury should be made up, and raise the latter to a constitutional requirement. See Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 L. ed. 899, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560. It is unnecessary to consider whether the judge went beyond his powers under the circumstances. See Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 477, 29 L. ed. 179, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949. But it is proper to add that while the reason which we have given is logically the first to be considered by this court, we do not mean to give any countenance to the notion that, if the law was disobeyed, it affected the jurisdiction of the court. Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 30 L. ed. 824, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. ed. 513, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870.

The third ground on which the jurisdiction of the trial court is denied is that, on August 4, 1901, the date of the commission of the crime, the place was within territory not embraced in any organized county, and was attached for judicial purposes to Canadian county. By the Oklahoma organic act, May 2, 1890, chap. 182, § 9 (26 Stat. at L. 85, 86), this is provided for, and by § 10 such offenses shall be tried in the county to which the territory "shall be attached." It is argued that there had been no law passed changing the place of trial or affecting the order of the supreme court attaching the territory to Canadian county. But the very words quoted from § 10 look to the state of things at the time of trial. At that time Comanche county had been organized, and a term of court fixed for it by the order of the supreme court dated January 15, 1902. The [105] meaning of this order, so far as the *power of the supreme court went, is plain. The statute gave the petitioner no vested right to be tried in Canadian county, and his trial in Comanche county conformed to its intent. See Post v. United States, 161 U. S. 583, 40 L. ed. 816, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

†[Obviously the court here intended to convey the idea that, if any law has been violated, the territorial enactment is the one.—Ed.]

The fourth ground is that, as the crime was committed on August 4, 1901, two days before the opening of the land for settlement, the place was still under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, and therefore the crime was punishable under Rev. Stat. § 5339, U. S. Comp. Stat., 1901, p. 3627, alone. The order of the President with regard to the conditions of settlement and entry are referred to as confirming the argument. But those orders were intended merely to carry out the acts of Congress governing the matter. There is no doubt that Congress was exercising control so far as settlement was concerned. But there is equally little doubt that the title to the territory had passed, that it had become part of the territory of Oklahoma, and, as such, no longer under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States within Rev. Stat. § 5339. Act of May 2, 1890, chap. 182, §§ 1, 4, 6, 26 Stat. at L. 81; act of June 6, 1900, chap. 813, 31 Stat. at L. 677; act of March 3, 1901, chap. 846, 31 Stat. at L. 1093. See Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471; Buster v. Wright, 68 C. C. A. 505, 135 Fed. 947, 952; Ex parte Moran, 144 Fed. 594, 602. Therefore the application of the territorial statute was not excluded and the murder was a violation of the territorial law.

Finally it is contended that the petitioner was compelled to be a witness against himself, contrary to the 5th Amendment, because he was compelled to stand up and walk before the jury, and because, during a recess, the jury was stationed so as to observe his size and walk. If this was an error, as to which we express no opinion, it did not go to the jurisdiction of the court. Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

Rule discharged. Writs denied.

203 U. S.

*NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY OF [106]
LONDON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

GRAND VIEW BUILDING ASSOCIATION.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 106-108.)

Judgment—full faith and credit.

1. A judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States to the effect that a policy of fire insurance could not be recovered upon as it stood nor be helped out by any doctrine of the common law is not denied full faith and credit by an adjudication of a state court that such judgment is not a bar to a suit in equity to reform the policy so that it will express consent to concurrent insurance, and to recover upon such policy as reformed.

Election of remedies.

2. The prosecution of an action at law upon a policy of fire insurance to final judgment denying recovery, upon the ground that the policy could neither be recovered upon as it stood nor be helped out by any doctrine of the common law, is not an election which bars a suit in equity to reform the policy so that it will express consent to concurrent insurance, and to recover upon such policy as reformed.

[No. 40.]

Argued October 18, 19, 1906. Decided November 5, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Lancaster County in that state, reforming a policy of fire insurance so as to express consent to concurrent insurance, and enforcing the policy as so reformed, notwithstanding a prior judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in an action at NOTE.—As to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L. R.A. 79; Cumington v. Belchertown, 4 L. R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; and Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

As to conclusiveness and effect of judgments as between Federal and state courts—see notes to Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 478; and Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 49 C. C. A. 468.

As to election of remedies generally—see notes to Fowler v. Bowery Sav. Bank, 4 L.R.A. 145; Conrow v. Little, 5 L.R.A. 693; Crossman v. Universal Rubber Co. 13 L.R.A. 91; and Mills v. Parkhurst, 13 L. R.A. 472.

law denying any recovery on the policy. Affirmed.

See same case below (Neb.) 102 N. W. 246.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles J. Greene argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ralph W. Breckenridge, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In the present proceeding, the building association seeks to establish an agreement which conflicts with the agreement expressed in the written policy, and which we submit has, by the judgment of this court, been conclusively determined to have been in force at the time of the fire.

Steinbach v. Relief F. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 498, 33 Am. Rep. 655.

Where a plaintiff brings an action upon a written contract in a law court, he elects to stand upon the contract as written; and if he prosecutes his action to final judgment, and is defeated, he cannot afterwards have his written contract reformed in chancery.

Black, Judgm. § 518, p. 615, §§ 632, 678, p. 816; Sanger v. Wood, 3 Johns. Ch. 416; Thomas v. Joslin, 36 Minn. 1, 1 Am. St. Rep. 624, 29 N. W. 344; Gaffney v. Megrath, 23 Wash. 476, 63 Pac. 520; Ward v. Green, 88 Tex. 177, 30 S. W. 864; Kearney Mill & Elevator Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 97 Iowa, 719, 59 Am. St. Rep. 434, 66 N. W. 1059; Thompson v. Howard, 31 Mich. 312; Thomas v. United Firemen's Ins. Co. 108 Ill. App. 378.

Mr. Joseph R. Webster argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Halleck F. Rose and Wilmer B. Comstock, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of the United States, sitting in a particular state, are to be accorded in the courts of that state such effect, only, as would be accorded, in similar circumstances, to the judgments and decrees of a state tribunal of equal authority.

Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union, S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 146, 30 L. ed. 616, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 644, 36 L. ed. 576, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 676, 38 L. ed. 863, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 645, 44 L. ed. 621, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

The opinion below, so far from being a departure from the rules giving effect to the judgments of the courts of the state, is definitely rested upon prior authority defining the effect which, in like circumstances, is given to the judgments of the state courts.

The present record does not present a case for the application of the doctrine of election, because the plaintiff did not have a choice of remedies. There was but one remedy open, and this was misconceived.

Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670-697, 33 L. ed. 696-706, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; 7 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 366; State v. Bank of Commerce, 61 Neb. 25, 84 N. W. 406; Omaha v. Redick, 61 Neb. 163; 85 N. W. 46; Simons v. Fagan, 62 Neb. 287, 87 N. W. 21; Gayer v. Parker, 24 Neb. 643, 8 Am. St. Rep. 227, 39 N. W. 845; Pekin Plow Co. v. Wilson, 66 Neb. 115, 92 N. W. 178; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bigley, 1 Neb. (Unof.) 225, 95 N. W. 344; Pinkham v. Pinkham, 60 Neb. 600, 83 N. W. 837; Lansing v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. 4 Neb. (Unof.) 140, 93 N. W. 756.

The institution or the prosecution of a suit to judgment is not an essential or decisive fact in determining the applicability of the doctrine of election, as the law is administered in the forum where this suit was tried.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bigley, supra.

The judgment here assailed merely involves the exercise of one of the exclusive powers of equity, under circumstances which meet with the express sanction of the rule of this court; and the pleas of res judicata and election were disposed of according to time-honored doctrines, borrowed from the decisions of this court.

Parker v. Circuit Court Judges, 12 Wheat. 561, 6 L. ed. 729; Smith v. M'Iver, 9 Wheat. 532, 6 L. ed. 152; Tilton v. Cofield, 93 U. S. 167, 23 L. ed. 859; Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 370-383, 25 L. ed. 855-860; McComb v. Frink, 149 U. S. 629-644, 37 L. ed. 876-882, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 148, 44 L. ed. 109, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

General authority also supports the doctrines of this court and those of the judgment under review.

Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. New Jersey Rubber Co. 64 N. J. Eq. 338, 51 Atl. 451; Jenkins v. Harrison, 66 Ala. 345; Scully v. Lowenstein, 56 Miss. 652; Mosby v. Wall, 23 Miss. 81, 55 Am. Dec. 71; Hawley v. Simons, 102 Ill. 115; Schrepfer v. Rockford Ins. Co. 77 Minn. 291, 79 N. W. 1005; Conyers v. Mericles, 75 Ind. 443; Cramer v. Moore, 36 Ohio St. 347; Hill v. Combs, 92 Mo. App. 243; Re Van Norman, 41 Minn. 496, 43 N. W. 334; Bunch v. Grave, 111 Ind. 351, 12 N. E. 514; Fifield v. Edwards, 39 Mich. 266; Marsh v. Masterton, 101 N. Y. 407, 5 N. E. 59; Stowell v. Chamberlain, 60 N. Y. 272; Snow v. Alley, 156 Mass. 193, 30 N. E. 691; Kelsey v. Murphy, 26 Pa. 78; Morris v. Rexford, 18 N. Y. 557; McLaughlin v. Austin, 104 Mich. 489, 62 N. W. 719; Gould v. Blodgett, 61 N. H. 115; Smith v. Bricker, 86 Iowa, 285, 53 N. W. 250; Madden v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 66 Miss. 258, 6 So. 181; Standard Oil Co. v. Hawkins, 33 L.R.A. 739, 20 C. C. A. 468, 46 U. S. App.

115, 74 Fed. 395; White v. Whiting, 8 Daly, 23; Bowdish v. Page, 81 Hun, 170, 30 N. Y. Supp. 691; Kittredge v. Holt, 58 N. H. 191.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to reform a policy and to recover upon it as reformed. An action at law upon the same instrument, between the same parties, has come before this court heretofore. 183 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 213, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133. In that case it was held that the plaintiff could not recover. The question before us at the present time is whether the supreme court of Nebraska failed to give full faith and credit to the judgment in the former case by holding that it was no bar to the relief now sought. (Neb.) 102 N. W. 246.

[107] The policy was conditioned to be void in case of other insurance, unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed or added; and it stated, in substance, that no officer or agent had power to waive the condition except by such indorsement or addition. There was other insurance and there was no indorsement. The plaintiff alleged a waiver and an estoppel. The jury found that the agent who issued the policy had been informed on behalf of the insured and knew of the outstanding insurance. But this court held that the attempt to establish a waiver was an attempt to contradict the very words of the written contract, which gave notice that the condition was insisted upon and could be got rid of in only one way, which no agent had power to change. The judgment based upon this decision is what is now relied upon as a bar. Metcalf v. Watertown, 153 U. S. 671, 676, 38 L. ed. 861, 863, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 947; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 645, 44 L. ed. 619, 621, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Whether sufficient grounds were shown for the relief which was granted is a matter with which we have nothing to do. But the state court was right in its answer to the question before us. The former decision, of course, is not an adjudication that the contract cannot be reformed. It was rendered in an action at law, and only decided that the contract could not be recovered upon as it stood, or be helped out by any doctrine of the common law. If it were to be a bar it would be so, not on the ground of the adjudication as such, but on the ground of election, expressed by the form in which the plaintiff saw fit to sue. As an adjudication it simply establishes one of the propositions on which the plaintiff relies,—that it cannot recover upon the contract as it stands. The supposed election is the source of the effect attributed to the judgment. If that depended on matter in pais it might be a question, at least, as was argued, whether such a case fell within either U. S. Const. art. 4, § 1, or Rev. Stat. § 905, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677. It may be doubted whether the election must not at least necessarily appear on the face of the record as matter of law in order to give the judgment a standing under Rev. Stat. § 905.

*We pass such doubts, because we are of opinion that, however the election be stated, it is not made out. The plaintiff in the former action expressed on the record its reliance upon the facts upon which it now relies. It did not demand a judgment without regard to them and put them on one side, as was done in Washburn v. Great Western Ins. Co. 114 Mass. 175, where this distinction was stated by Chief Justice Gray. Its choice of law was not an election, but an hypothesis. It expressed the supposition that law was competent to give a remedy, as had been laid down by the supreme court of Nebraska and the circuit court of appeals for the circuit. Home F. Ins. Co. v. Wood, 50 Neb. 381, 386, 69 N. W. 941; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Norwood, 16 C. C. A. 136, 32 U. S. App. 490, 69 Fed. 71. So long as those decisions stood the plaintiff had no choice. It could not, or at least did not need to, demand reformation, if a court of law could effect the same result. It did demand the result, and showed by its pleadings that the path which it did choose was chosen simply because it was supposed to be an open way. Snow v. Alley, 156 Mass. 193, 195, 30 N. E. 691.

A question argued as to the obligation of the contract having been impaired by a statute as construed was not taken below, and is not open here.

Decree affirmed.

*COVINGTON & CINCINNATI BRIDGE [109]
CO. Plff. in Err.,

v.

S. W. HAGER, Auditor of Public Accounts of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 109-111.)

Mandamus—original jurisdiction of circuit courts.

The Federal circuit courts have no jurisdiction of an original action in mandamus to compel the return of a franchise tax collected under the authority of a state statute, although the basis of the relief sought is the alleged repugnancy of the tax to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[No. 37.]

Submitted October 17, 1906. Decided November 5, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Kentucky to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, the petition in an original action in mandamus to compel the return of a franchise tax collected under the authority of a state statute, on the ground that such tax was a burden on interstate commerce. Modified so as to show that the case was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, and, as so modified, affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Shelley D. Rouse submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Charlton B. Thompson was on the brief.

Mr. N. B. Hays submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. John W. Ray and C. H. Morris were on the brief.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case an original action in mandamus was begun in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Kentucky. It was brought by the bridge company to compel the auditor of public accounts for the state to issue his warrant on the state treasury for the amount of a franchise tax collected under authority of §§ 4079 and 4080 of the Kentucky statutes. The return of the tax was asked upon the ground that it levied a burden on the interstate commerce business of the bridge company, pertaining exclusively to commerce between Kentucky and Ohio, and was therefore repugnant to the Federal Constitution.

The auditor appeared by counsel, and, by general demurrer, raised the question of the sufficiency of the allegations of the petition, and by special demurrer challenged the jurisdiction of the court to entertain the action. The circuit court, passing the question of jurisdiction, held that levying the tax in question did not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, as it was a tax upon property, and not upon the business of the company, sustained the general demurrer, and dismissed the petition.

We are of opinion that the court below had no jurisdiction of this action. It has been too frequently decided in this court to require the citation of the cases that the circuit courts of the United States have no jurisdiction in original cases of mandamus, and have only power to issue such writs in aid of their jurisdiction in cases already pending, wherein jurisdiction has been acquired by other means and by other process.

[111] *Many of the cases are collected in 4 Fed. Stat. Annotated, 503.

The question was before this court recently in Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 197 U. S. 536, 49 L. ed. 870, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep.

538, an action by the Interstate Commerce Commission, by petition for mandamus in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, against the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad Company, to compel it to file reports required by the act to regulate interstate commerce. It was argued for the government that while decisions of this court under the judiciary act of 1789 (1 Stat. at L. 73, chap. 20) and the act of 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508) had been construed to confer no original jurisdiction in mandamus in the United States courts, yet the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), in view of the modern development in proceedings by mandamus, should be held to confer the jurisdiction upon the circuit courts to entertain original suits in mandamus. The contention was rejected and the prior cases adhered to.

We deem it settled beyond controversy, until Congress shall otherwise provide, that circuit courts of the United States have no power to issue a writ of mandamus in an original action brought for the purpose of securing relief by the writ, and this result is not changed because the relief sought concerns an alleged right secured by the Constitution of the United States.

It follows that the circuit court should have dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction instead of determining it upon the merits. The judgment dismissing the petition is therefore modified so as to show that the case was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, and, as thus modified, the judgment is affirmed.

*COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF WICO-[112] MICO COUNTY

v.

SAMUEL BANCROFT, JR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 112-119.)

Courts—following decisions of state courts.

1. Whether a repealable exemption from

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L.R.A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235.

state taxation has been in fact repealed by a subsequent state statute is a question of state law, upon which the decisions of the highest courts of the state, in the absence of any contract rights, are binding on the Federal courts.

Taxes—exemption—repeal.

2. The withdrawal of a repealable exemption from state taxation of the property of a reorganized railway company, if any such exemption existed, was effected by Md. Acts 1896, chap. 120, which directs a new assessment for taxation of the property in the state, and expressly declares that the property of every railroad shall be assessed for county and municipal purposes, and contains a proviso that nothing therein contained shall be held to discharge, release, or impair any irrepealable contract or obligation then existing, which sufficiently evidences the legislative intent to repeal exemptions from taxation which were not protected by binding contracts beyond legislative control, and to bring all property within the taxing power of the state.

[No. 129.]

Argued and submitted October 9, 1906. Decided November 5, 1906.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland, enjoining state taxation of certain railway property. Reversed and remanded to the Circuit Court with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 70 C. C. A. 287, 135 Fed. 977.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James E. Ellegood argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners:

Is not the rule of construction adopted by the court of appeals of Maryland the rule of construction for this court?

Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 342, 12 L. ed. 181; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 223, 32 L. ed. 913, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 110, 40 L. ed. 94, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575-617, 23 L. ed. 663-674; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 412, 46 L. ed. 618, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 68, 46 L. ed. 87, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The repugnancy between the exemption in the statute, and the statute which was intended as a revision of the laws upon the subject of taxation, repeals the exemption.

Columbia Mfg. Co. v. Vanderpoel, 4 Cow. 556; State v. Northern C. R. Co. 90 Md. 472, 45 Atl. 465, 187 U. S. 266, 47 L. ed. 170, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

Mr. Nicholas P. Bond submitted the cause for respondent. Messrs. Ralph Robinson and Edward Duffy were on the brief:

The organization of the Baltimore, Chesapeake, & Atlantic Railway Company and the contracts between the railway and its bondholders had been entered into, and the rights of the bondholders thereon and arising therefrom, had accrued, at a time when the decisions in question had not been made. It is, we submit, the right of a complainant, under this state of facts, to have the independent judgment of this court upon his rights. It is to that very end that the courts of the United States are given authority to administer the laws of the state in controversies between citizens of different states.

Mercantile Trust Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 51 Fed. 536.

We fully admit the doctrine that where a state statute has been construed, or a rule of property established, at the time a transaction is entered into, or rights accrued, such construction or rule will bind the parties as fully as though written into the transaction; but, where no such construction was then in force, we are entitled to have this statute construed by the independent judgment of this court.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp. 116 U. S. 356, 29 L. ed. 633, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413.

This respondent is entitled to have his rights determined according to the law as it existed on September 1, 1894, at which time the rights of bondholders accrued.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 334, 47 U. S. App. 36, 76 Fed. 296.

The part of § 2, chap. 120, of the Acts of 1896, relied upon by the petitioners to show a clear intention on the part of the legislature to repeal the exemption conferred by the act of 1886, chap. 133, is not sufficient for that purpose.

1st. Because this language is no broader than that to be found in § 155 of art. 81, which was in force at the time the exemption secured by chapter 133 of the Acts of 1886 was granted the Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company, and, in so far as it can be held to imply a repeal of this exemption, is copied word for word from § 155.

2d. Because this part of § 2 of chap. 120 of the Acts of 1896 is unconstitutional, being an attempt to incorporate into an amendment of § 2 a distinct section of article 81, which is not named in the title of the act.

Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151, 61 Am. Dec. 331; Stiefel v. Maryland Inst. 61 Md. 144.

When the sections to be amended are specified, matter cannot be introduced by way of amendment to such sections, which is provided elsewhere in the act.

State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 106 La. 553, 31 So. 181; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. p. 239.

Every one of the sections of chapter 120 of the Acts of 1896, which are relied upon by the petitioners to show an intention on the part of the legislature to repeal by this general law the special law of chapter 133 of the acts of 1886, is merely copied without change from the law as it stood when chapter 133 of the Acts of 1886 was passed, and is not considered by the well-recognized rule of legislative construction as repealed and re-enacted, but to have been the law all along.

When there is an express repeal from an existing statute and a re-enactment of it at the same time, or a repeal or re-enactment of a portion of it, the re-enactment neutralizes the repeal so far as the old law is continued in force. It operates without interruption where the re-enactment takes effect at the same time.

State ex rel. Birdsey v. Baldwin, 45 Conn. 134; United Hebrew Benev. Assn. v. Ben-shimol, 130 Mass. 325; Middleton v. New Jersey West Line R. Co. 26 N. J. Eq. 269; Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Lyons, 133 Cal. 114, 65 Pac. 329; Re Prime, 136 N. Y. 347, 18 L.R.A. 713, 32 N. E. 1091; State Trust Co. v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. 115 Fed. 367; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; Fuller v. United States, 48 Fed. 654; Moore v. Kenockec Twp. 75 Mich. 335, 4 L.R.A. 555, 42 N. W. 944; Hancock v. Perry, 78 Iowa, 550, 43 N. W. 527; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. pp. 443-445.

This is a well-settled rule of legislative construction, and is said to be especially true if the intermediate law is special or particular and the re-enactment law is a general law on the same subject.

State ex rel. Gates v. Public Land Comrs. 106 Wis. 584, 82 N. W. 549; Olsen v. Haritwen, 6 C. C. A. 608, 15 U. S. App. 229, 57 Fed. 846; Harrison Twp. v. Schoolcraft County, 117 Mich. 215, 75 N. W. 456; Hawes v. Fliegler, 87 Minn. 319, 92 N. W. 223; Bentley v. Adams, 92 Wis. 386, 66 N. W. 505; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. pp. 524, 525.

That a general act is not to be construed to repeal a previous particular act, unless there is some express reference to the previous statute on the subject, or unless there is a necessary inconsistency in the two acts standing together, is a rule of construction recognized and applied by this court.

South Carolina v. Stoll, 17 Wall. 425, 21 L. ed. 650; Cass County v. Gillett, 100 U. S.

585, 25 L. ed. 585; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca) 109 U. S. 566, 27 L. ed. 1034, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 87, 88, 46 L. ed. 818, 819, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The respondent, Samuel Bancroft, Jr., began an action in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Maryland to enjoin the county commissioners of Wicomico county from levying taxes on the property of the Baltimore, Chesapeake, & Atlantic Railway Company, alleging that he was the holder of twenty bonds secured by mortgage upon the company's property, which, under the laws of the state, had been exempted from taxation. Such proceedings were had that a decree was entered enjoining taxation of certain property of the railway company. Upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals, the judgment was affirmed (70 C. C. A. 287, 135 Fed. 977), and the case was brought here by writ of certiorari.

*The case was tried upon an agreed state-[115]ment of facts, from which the following, pertinent to the determination of the case, may be extracted: The Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company, organized to build a line of road from Eastern Bay, in Talbot county, to Salisbury, Wicomico county, in the same state, by act of the legislature of Maryland, was granted certain privileges (Acts of the Assembly, 1886, chap. 133), §§ 2, 4, and 5 being as follows:

"Sec. 2. And be it enacted. That said corporation shall have perpetual existence, and its franchises, property, shares of capital stocks, and bonds shall be exempt from all state, county, or municipal taxation for the term of thirty years, counting from the date of the completion of said road between the termini mentioned in its charter."

"Sec. 4. And be it enacted, That the said Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company aforesaid shall have power to unite, connect, and consolidate with any railroad company or companies, either in or out of this state, so that the capital stock of said companies so united, connected, and consolidated (respectively) may, at the pleasure of the directors, constitute a common stock, and the respective companies may thereafter constitute one company and be entitled to all the property, franchises, rights, privileges, and immunities which each of them possess, have, and enjoy under and by virtue of their respective charters.

"Sec. 5. And be it enacted, That the Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company shall have power to lease or purchase and operate any railroad or railroads, either in or out of this state, for the purpose of carrying on their business, and any other railroad company in this state shall have the right to lease or sell its railroad or other property to the said Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company."

[116] The Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company accepted the provisions of the act and completed the construction of its road between the termini named in August, 1891. In June, 1890, it purchased the property of the *Wicomico & Pocomoke Railroad Company, extending from Salisbury to Ocean City. Afterwards, the Baltimore & Eastern Shore Railroad Company mortgaged the entire property to secure $1,600,000 of mortgage bonds. This mortgage was foreclosed in 1894, and the purchaser proceeded to organize a new corporation—the Baltimore, Chesapeake, & Atlantic Railway Company—the respondent becoming the holder of some of its mortgage bonds. This reorganization was under § 187 and 188 of art. 23, Maryland Code of 1888, which provides as follows:

Section 187, that in case of the sale of any railroad under foreclosure of mortgage, the purchaser may form a corporation for the purpose of owning, possessing, maintaining, and operating such railroad, by filing in the office of the secretary of state a certificate, of the name and style of such corporation, the number of directors, etc.

"Sec. 188. Such corporation shall possess all the powers, rights, immunities, privileges, and franchises in respect to such railroad, or the part thereof included in such certificate, and in respect to the real and personal property appertaining to the same, which were possessed or enjoyed by the corporation which owned or held such railroad previous to such sale under or by virtue of its charter, and any amendments thereto, and of [any] other laws of this state," etc.

Under authority of the Maryland statutes the Baltimore, Chesapeake, & Atlantic Railway Company issued the mortgage bonds of which respondent is the holder. The county commissioners of Wicomico county have levied and assessed taxes upon the railroad company's property, and threatened to sell the same for nonpayment thereof. The circuit court held, and the circuit court of appeals affirmed the judgment, that §§ 187 and 188 of the Maryland Code, extending immunities to the new company, had the effect to exempt from taxation certain property of the reorganized company, and that the exemption constituted a contract between the state and the company entitled to protection under the contract *clause of the Federal Constitution, against the subsequent attempt of the county commissioners to levy taxes upon the property.

203 U. S.

Notwithstanding this decision of the circuit court of appeals, it is now conceded in the brief of the respondent's counsel, so far as this argument is concerned, that there was no binding contract upon the state entitled to protection under the Federal Constitution (article 1, § 10) against state impairment of the obligation of the contract. In view of the provisions of the Maryland Constitution this concession would seem in harmony with the right reserved in that instrument to amend, repeal, and alter charters. Northern C. R. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258, 47 L. ed. 167, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62. And see Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107. But it is insisted, conceding that the exemption from taxation was merely a bounty or gratuity, it extended to the reorganized company by force of the Maryland statutes above quoted, and has never been repealed nor withdrawn by the state, and, therefore, the bondholder, being directly interested in the property, has a right to be protected by injunction against the levying of such taxes so long as the act remains in force.

The questions arising in this case, as to the construction and force of the acts of the legislature of the state, have been before the supreme court of Maryland in three cases: Baltimore, C. & A. R. Co. v. Ocean City, 89 Md. 89, 42 Atl. 922; Baltimore C. & A. R. Co. v. Wicomico County, 93 Md. 113, 48 Atl. 853; and Baltimore, C. & A. R. Co. v. Wicomico County, 63 Atl. 678. In these cases it was held that the exemption from taxation provided for by the laws above quoted did not extend to the reorganized company, and in the last case, decided March 27, 1906, since the decision in the circuit court of appeals, it was held that the general assessment law of 1896 (Acts of 1896, chap. 120) declaring that the property of every railroad should be assessed for county and municipal purposes, and providing that nothing *in the act [118] should discharge or release any irrepealable contract or obligation existing at the date of the passage of the act, amounted to a recall of the immunity granted by the former law, which had at all times been subject to repeal by the state, and that, conceding the immunity extended to the reorganized company under § 187 of the statute, the repeal of the exemption did not violate any contract with the state, entitled to the protection of the Federal Constitution.

As we have said, the argument addressed to this court is rested upon the proposition that the subsequent law of 1896, imposing taxes upon the property of the railroad company in general terms, did not repeal prior legislation, which, properly construed, gives the privilege of exemption from taxation to the property of the reorganized railroad company. We, therefore, are to consider a case wherein there is no contention that a valid and binding contract has been impaired by state action, and the questions are as to the proper construction of the statute, and whether a repealable exemption from taxation has been withdrawn by subsequent legislation of the state.

Previous decisions of this court have settled the proposition that whether such exemption has been in fact repealed by a subsequent state statute is a question of state law in which the decisions of the highest courts of the state, in the absence of a contract, are binding; and that it is only where the exemption is irrepealable, thus constituting a contract, that it becomes the duty of this court to decide for itself whether the subsequent act did or did not impair the obligation of the contract. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66-74, 46 L. ed. 86-90, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Northern C. R. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258, 266, 267, 47 L. ed. 167, 170, 172, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62. It is contended, however, that inasmuch as the respondent acquired his bonds in 1896, which were issued in 1894, at a time when none of the Maryland decisions above referred to had been made, the first of them being in 1899, the construction of the statutes and their continued force are questions for the Federal courts having jurisdiction of the cause and the parties. And further, [119] that while *the Federal tribunals will differ reluctantly from the state courts upon a question of the validity of state statutes, and will "lean towards an agreement of views with the state courts," nevertheless, they must in such cases exercise an independent judgment in determining the force and validity of state statutes. Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 23, 27 L. ed. 359, 361, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 193 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 778, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, and cases cited in the opinion in that case.

If we could concede the soundness of this contention, we are of opinion that the court of appeals of Maryland was right in holding that the legislation of 1896 (Acts of 1896, chap. 120), directing a new assessment of the property of the state, and expressly declaring that the property of every railroad in the state should be valued and assessed for county and municipal purposes, had the effect to withdraw the prior exemption from taxation if a proper construction of the legislation of the state would extend it to the property of the reorganized company. The act contains the significant proviso that nothing therein contained shall be held to discharge, release, impair, or affect any irrepealable contract or obligation of any kind whatsoever existing at the date of the passage of the act. This proviso evidences the legislative intent to repeal exemptions from taxation which were not protected by binding contracts beyond legislative control, if any such existed, and to bring all property within the taxing power of the state. We agree with the reasoning expressed by the court of appeals of Maryland upon this branch of the case. Baltimore, C. & A. R. Co. v. Wicomico County, 63 Atl. 683.

From this view it follows that the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be reversed and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court with directions to dismiss the bill.

*CHARLES M. TAYLOR, Appt., [120]

v.

THOMAS BURNS, John A. Duncan, and
S. R. Kauffman.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 120-126.)

Deeds—what constitutes.

1. No transfer of title was effected by an instrument which recites that the party of the first part "sells" certain mining claims to the party of the second part for a specified consideration, and "upon the terms and consideration following," and which, in its subsequent provisions, authorizes the party of the second part to sell and negotiate the mines for any sum above $45,000, and retain out of the purchase price seven eighths of the excess, the party of the first part agreeing to execute any conveyance thereafter necessary to convey a good title, and the party of the second part assuming no obligations except a general one by which both parties mutually agree to aid each other in the negotiation and sale; such document is not a deed, but simply a power of attorney, and, as such, subject to revocation.

Power of attorney—revocation.

2. An interest in the property upon which the power is to operate, and not merely an interest in the exercise of the power, is essential to make a power of attorney one coupled with an interest, so as not to be subject to revocation.

[No. 28.]

Submitted October 16, 1906. Decided November 12, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the County of Cochise, in that territory, in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title to certain mining claims. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.) 76 Pac. 623.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On March 26, 1901, Thomas Burns, the owner of three mining claims, as party of the first part, and Charles M. Taylor, as party of the second part, made the following agreement:

"The said party of the first part, in consideration of the sum of $1, lawful money of the United States of America in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and for the further consideration of money and labor heretofore expended and of labor to be hereafter expended in and upon the Magnet mining claim, the Comet mining claim, and the Victor mining claim, situate in the California mining district, in the Chiricahua mountains, Cochise county, Arizona territory, sells to the said party of the second part the said mining claims upon the terms and consideration following, to wit:

"The said party of the second part shall pay to the party of the first part, whenever he shall negotiate, sell, or place said mines to any assignee of the said party of the second part, forty-five thousand dollars [121] (\$45,000), and in addition thereto *one-eighth ($\frac{1}{8}$) of whatever price the said party of the second part may be able to sell, place, or negotiate the said mines, for a consideration in excess of said \$45,000; that is to say, the party of the second part is authorized to sell and negotiate the said mines for any price above the sum of \$45,000, and may retain out of the said purchase price seven eighths ($\frac{7}{8}$) of said selling price above such sum of \$45,000.

"The said parties hereto hereby mutually agree to aid each other in the negotiation and sale of said mining claims to the end that the same may be sold and the consideration realized as quickly as possible. And the said party of the first part hereby agrees to execute any deed or deeds or conveyances that may be hereafter necessary to convey a good title to said mining claims. This contract is to take the place of and supersede any and all other contract or contracts heretofore made by said parties hereto with reference to said mining claims."

On November 9, 1901, Burns deeded a one fourth interest in the mining claims to John A. Duncan, and on March 9, 1903, Burns and Duncan conveyed the entire property to S. R. Kauffman as trustee. On February 27, 1903, Thomas Burns executed and filed for record a revocation of all authority given by the agreement to Taylor, and notified him by letter of such revocation. On April 6, 1903, Taylor filed his bill of complaint in the district court for the county of Cochise, territory of Arizona, against Burns, Duncan, and Kauffman, alleging that he was the owner of the mining claims, that defendants claimed to have some interest in them, and praying to have his title thereto quieted. The defendants answered, and also filed a cross bill, alleging in substance that plaintiff had no title whatever, and praying that their title be quieted as against him. A trial in the district court resulted in a decree in favor of the defendants, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory (76 Pac. 623), and thereupon the case was brought here on appeal.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives submitted the cause for appellant:

Mining claims can be transferred orally, unless statutes exist requiring them to be in writing.

Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. v. Taylor. 100 U. S. 37, 25 L. ed. 541; Lockhart v. Rollins, 2 Idaho, 540, 21 Pac. 413.

Actual possession is not necessary for the protection of title acquired by valid location; it is simply the right to possession while the paramount title remains in the United States.

Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313; Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735.

Such a right is transferred by the term "sell," without any regard to the character of the fee or of the title; and the word "sell" in a contract is a word of assignment of all the right to possession of the party who is the seller, and the ordinary words of conveyance—"grant, bargain, and sell"—are not required. The terms "grant and bargain" are not necessary, because the term "sell" implies and carries with it all right of the locator to the possession of the claims.

2 Kent, Com. 468.

Whatever the court may decree this instrument to be, it certainly did vest in Taylor a right coupled with an interest, and therefore was not revocable at the will of Burns.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 175, 5 L. ed. 590.

That a power of attorney coupled with an interest is irrevocable, and binds the party giving it, and may be executed after his death, see the note to this case as reported in 5 L. ed. U. S. 589. Where an authorization or power of attorney is coupled with an interest, or where it is given for valuable consideration, it is, from its own nature and character, irrevocable.

Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige, 205, 40 Am. Dec. 241; 2 Kent, Com. 643; Bonney v. Smith, 17 Ill. 533; Raymond v. Squire, 11 Johns. 47.

Mr. William Herring and Sarah Herring Sorin submitted the cause for appellees:

The instrument under which plaintiff claims title is not a deed of conveyance. Though an instrument contains words expressing an absolute transfer, it will not be construed as a deed if, by taking the whole instrument together, it appears that such was not the intention of the parties. Particular words may not be isolatedly considered, but the instrument must be considered as a whole in order to ascertain the intention and obligation of the parties.

Jackson ex dem. Ludlow v. Myers, 3 Johns. 388, 3 Am. Dec. 504; Jackson ex dem. Shipley v. Moncrief, 5 Wend. 26; Dunaway v. Day, 163 Mo. 415, 63 S. W. 731; Stewart v. Lang, 37 Pa. 201, 78 Am. Dec. 414; Sherman v. Dill, 4 Yeates, 295, 2 Am. Dec. 408; Wallace v. Wilcox, 27 Tex. 60; Peterson v. McCauley (Tex. Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 826; Ives v. Ives, 13 Johns. 236; Jackson ex dem. Green v. Clark, 3 Johns. 424; Devlin, Deeds, 2d ed. § 7; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 76, 42 L. ed. 667, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 297, 42 L. ed. 473, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Morrison v. Wilson, 30 Cal. 344.

Courts will refuse to construe an instrument as a deed where, from the instrument itself, it is manifest that further conveyances are contemplated.

Jackson ex dem. Shipley v. Moncrief, Williams v. Paine, and Peterson v. McCauley, supra; Devlin, Deeds, 2d ed. § 8.

The only one who can convey a good title is he in whom the title is vested.

To "convey" real estate is, by a proper instrument, to transfer the legal title to it from the present owner to another.

Abendroth v. Greenwich, 29 Conn. 365; Cross v. Weare Commission Co. 153 Ill. 510, 46 Am. St. Rep. 902, 38 N. E. 1038.

A mining claim is real estate, and the title thereto can only be conveyed by deed.

Hopkins v. Noyes, 4 Mont. 550, 2 Pac. 280; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650, 43 L. ed. 320, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Manual v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Gillis v. Downey, 29 C. C. A. 286, 56 U. S. App. 567, 85 Fed. 483; Belk v. Mcagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735; Harris v. Equator Min. & Smelting Co. 3 McCrary, 14, 8 Fed. 863.

The authority conferred upon Taylor by the agreement of March 26, 1901, was not a power coupled with an interest. The interest is merely in that which is to be produced by the exercise of the power. Such an interest does not make the power irrevocable.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 174, 5 L. ed. 589; Mansfield v. Mansfield, 6 Conn. 559, 16 Am. Dec. 76; Trickey v. Crowe (Ariz.) 71 Pac. 965; Hall v. Gambrill, 88 Fed. 709; Tinsley v. Dowell, 87 Tex. 23, 26 S. W. 948; Blackstone v. Buttermore, 53 Pa. 266; Hartley's Appeal, 53 Pa. 212, 91 Am. Dec. 207; Stitt v. Huidekoper, 17 Wall. 385, 21 L. ed. 644; Durkee v. Gunn, 41 Kan. 496, 13 Am. St. Rep. 300, 21 Pac. 637; Mechem, Agency, § 207.

It was merely an authorization to Taylor to negotiate a sale of the mining claims for any price over \$45,000 and to retain as his commission $\frac{1}{3}$ of such excess. No time being fixed for the duration of the contract, either party was at liberty to terminate it at will.

Trickey v. Crowe, supra; Coffin v. Landis, 46 Pa. 426; Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co. 83 N. Y. 378, 38 Am. Rep. 441; Rowan v. Hull, 55 W. Va. 335, 104 Am. St. Rep. 998, 47 S. E. 92; Mechem, Agency, § 210; Cadigan v. Crabtree, 186 Mass. 7, 66 L.R.A. 982, 104 Am. St. Rep. 543, 70 N. E. 1033; Knox v. Parker, 2 Wash. 34, 25 Pac. 909.

The agent did not have the exclusive right to negotiate a sale, and therefore there was nothing to prevent the principal from making a sale of his own property.

York v. Nash, 42 Or. 321, 71 Pac. 59; Baars v. Hyland, 65 Minn. 150, 67 N. W. 1148; Golden Gate Packing Co. v. Farmers' Union, 55 Cal. 606.

The existence of a consideration would not of itself operate to transfer the title from Burns to Taylor, and could not alter the effect of the instrument nor aid in its construction.

Mansfield v. Mansfield, supra.

There was, however, no consideration for the agreement.

An executed or past consideration is no consideration for a promise unless it is a promise which the law will imply.

1 Parsons, Contr. 5th ed. 468, 472, 473; Comstock v. Smith, 7 Johns. 87; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 690, 691.

Where there is an executory consideration in an agreement, until the performance of the condition of the promise there is no consideration and the promise is nudum pactum.

Miller v. McKenzie, 95 N. Y. 575, 47 Am. Rep. 85.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This case turns upon the scope and effect of the agreement of March 26, 1901. It is claimed by plaintiff that it is a conveyance, *passing title; by defendants, that [125]

it is simply a power of attorney, subject to revocation. Its meaning is to be determined by a consideration of all its terms, and not by any particular phrase. The first paragraph recites a consideration, and states that for the consideration the first party "sells" the claims to the party of the second part. If this were all it would suggest a purpose to pass title, but the paragraph closes with a reference to further stipulations, its language being "sells to the said party of the second part the said mining claims upon the terms and consideration following, to wit." The next paragraph authorizes the party of the second part to "sell and negotiate" the mines for any sum above $45,000, and to retain out of this purchase price seven eighths of the excess of $45,000, while in the last paragraph the party of the first part "agrees to execute any deed or deeds or conveyances that may be hereafter necessary to convey a good title to said mining claims."

Nowhere in the instrument does the party of the second part assume any obligations, except the general one in the third paragraph, by which both parties mutually agree to aid each other in the negotiation and sale of the mining claims. The instrument does not in terms grant or convey. The nearest approach to a word of conveyance is "sells." This is more apt in describing the passing of the title of personal than of real property. Not that this is decisive, for not infrequently it is held to manifest an intent to convey the title to the property named, whether real or personal. But when the purpose of the transaction is stated the word will ordinarily have no more effect upon the title than is necessary to accomplish the purpose. The purpose here named was the giving of authority to make a sale to some third party at not less than a named price, which price would belong to Burns, less the commission on the sale. For this it was not necessary to pass title with the authority. And it is not ordinarily to be expected that an owner will part with title before receipt of purchase [126] price, or security therefor. *Appellant contends that by this instrument he became owner, while Burns was only an equitable mortgagee. But no time is fixed for the sale, and therefore no time for the maturity of the supposed debt, nor is any liability cast upon Taylor for the payment of any portion thereof. Indeed, its amount is uncertain, whether $45,000, or $45,000 plus one eighth of a price which should or could be realized on a sale. If it were true that title passed, then Taylor could immediately convey to a third party, who, by payment of $45,000, would acquire the property. We need not inquire whether there was a breach of contract for which Taylor could recover damages. The question here is the effect of the contract upon the title. While it may be conceded that the meaning and scope of the instrument are not perfectly clear, yet it seems more reasonable to hold that it was simply a grant of authority to Taylor to "sell and negotiate" the mines, and not also a transfer to him of the title to the property.

As such an instrument it was subject to revocation. It was not a power of attorney coupled with an interest. By the phrase "coupled with an interest," is not meant an interest in the exercise of the power, but an interest in the property on which the power is to operate. Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 174, 5 L. ed. 589. Now, as we construe this contract, Taylor was to receive, in case he made a sale, seven eighths of the price in excess of $45,000,—that is, he was to be paid for making the sale. It was an interest in the exercise of the power, and not an interest in the property upon which the power was to operate.

We see no error in the ruling of the Supreme Court of the territory of Arizona, and its judgment is affirmed.

*WILLIAM H. ANDREWS, Plff. in Err., [127]
v.

EASTERN OREGON LAND COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 127-129.)

Error to state court—review of decree setting aside finding of fact.

A judgment of the highest court of a state, which, reversing the trial court, upholds as against a pre-emptor a patent from the United States under the Dalles military wagon road grant made by the act of February 25, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 77), resting its conclusion upon the general proposition that there was no competent proof to impeach the records of the Land Department or to overthrow the presumption of validity which attends a patent from the United States, will not be reversed upon

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be any presumption as to what might have been the testimony upon which the trial court made its finding that the land was situated entirely outside the limits of the grant, where such testimony, though taken and reported by a referee, is not preserved in the record.

[No. 48.]

Argued October 19, 1906. Decided November 12, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a judgment which, reversing the Circuit Court of Sherman County, in that state, upholds a patent from the United States under the Dalles military wagon road land grant as against one claiming title as a pre-emptor. Affirmed.

See same case below, 45 Or. 203, 77 Pac. 117.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. M. Stockslager argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James F. Moore and George C. Heard, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alexander Britton, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The sole matter of fact here involved and clearly ruled as such in the court below cannot raise a Federal question of law reviewable here.

Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 688, 37 L. ed. 610, 612, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 507, 44 L. ed. 864, 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This case brings before us a judgment of the supreme court of the state of Oregon. 45 Or. 203, 77 Pac. 117. It involves the title to lot 3 and the east $\frac{1}{2}$ of the southwest $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 7, township 1 north, range 17 east of the Willamette meridian. The plaintiff in error claims title as a preemptor; the defendant in error under a patent from the United States. The land was patented as a part of the grant made by act of Congress, approved February 25, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 77), of three alternate sections on each side of the road. to the Dalles Military Wagon Road Company, a full account of which is to be found in Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 368, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269. If the patent was valid the title to the land was in the defendant, *and the judgment of the supreme court of Oregon was correct. There being no conflicting land grant, the question whether the land was within the territorial limits of that to the road company is apparently one of fact only, and the decision of the Land Department on matters of fact is ordinarily conclusive in the courts.

The difficulty in the case arises from the condition of the record. This shows that by the trial court findings of fact and conclusions of law were made, one of the findings being that the land is situated entirely outside the limits of the grant, and more than 3 miles from the road as actually surveyed, platted, and constructed by the company, and certified by the governor of the state to the Land Department. No testimony is preserved, although it appears that the case was referred to a referee, who took and reported the testimony. The supreme court reversed the judgment of the trial court, and, while making no special findings, in its opinion discusses certain matters of evidence, and, after stating that the testimony tends to show that the land was in fact within the limits of the grant, rests its conclusion upon the general proposition that there is no competent proof to impeach the records of the Land Department or overthrow the presumption of validity which attends a patent of the United States. The certificate of the clerk of the supreme court states that the transcript is the full and complete record filed in that court and upon which the appeal was heard; while the certificate of the clerk of the trial court to the record sent to the supreme court is "that the same is a full, true, and correct of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

copy of the complaint, amended answer, demurrer to the amended answer, reply, findings of fact and conclusions of law, undertaking on appeal, notice of appeal filed in my office in the above-entitled cause, and of all journal entries made in said cause, and of the whole thereof."

[129] From this it is contended that the supreme court, without any evidence before it, set aside the findings of fact made by the trial court. But it is the judgment of the supreme court *whose validity we are to consider, and while it made no special findings, its statement of what was before it for consideration and its conclusions therefrom are sufficient to sustain its judgment. True, the record fails to show how the facts were brought to its knowledge, but it is the highest court of the state, and we may not ignore its recital of what it considered, especially as it appears that testimony was taken and preserved. Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300. And when its conclusions are in harmony with the general rule of the effect to be given to a patent of the United States, we are not justified in setting aside the judgment upon any presumption of what might have been the testimony upon which the trial court made its findings.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of the state of Oregon is affirmed.

ALFRED H. BURT and Joseph J. Sindele, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM W. SMITH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 129-135.)

Error to state court—necessity of raising Federal question.

1. A decision of a state court that there was probable cause for beginning a trademark infringement suit in the Federal courts in which a final decree was entered dismissing the bill on the merits after a temporary injunction had been dissolved is not reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States, where the record does not show that any claim of right under the Federal Constitution or laws was made in the state court, on the theory that such court, by its reasoning, implies that it finds probable cause, in its own opinion, that the decree of the Federal court was wrong, whereas not to assume it to be correct is to fail to give it the full faith and credit which U. S. Rev. Stat. § 905, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677, requires.

Error to state court—Federal question.

2. Whether or not a state court exceeded its functions under the state Constitution cannot give rise to a question respecting due process of law which will sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States.

[No. 67.]

Argued October 29, 1906. Decided November 12, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of New York to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of that state, Fourth Department, affirmed a judgment of a Trial Term of the Supreme Court held in and for the County of Erie granting a nonsuit in an action for malicious prosecution. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. See same case below, 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Norris Morey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph H. Morey, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Any right, question, or fact in issue and directly adjudicated upon, or necessarily involved in the determination of a court of competent jurisdiction in which a judgment or decree is rendered upon the merits, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies; and the rule is the same whether the second suit is for the same or for a different cause of action.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 49-52, 42 L. ed. 355, 377, 378, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 396-401, 42 L. ed. 202, 210-212, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Webb v. Buckelew, 82 N. Y. 555; Ex parte Watkins. 3 Pet. 193, 203, 7 L. ed. 650, 653.

NOTE.—Error to state courts in cases involving questions of due process of law.

A Federal question, i. e., a controversy which will sustain the exercise by the Supreme Court of the United States of its appellate jurisdiction over a state court, is involved in the contention that the due-process-of-law clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., constitutes a bar to mandamus proceedings. Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

203 U. S.

A claim in a state court that reputation is property, of which the owner will be deprived without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, if a decision should be rendered against his right of action for libelous matter contained in a pleading, raises a Federal question. Abbott v. National Bank, 175 U. S. 409, 44 L. ed. 217, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153.

A contention in a state court that notice of a reassessment was insufficient, and that, by reason thereof, defendant's prop-

A judgment estops not only as to every ground of recovery or defense actually presented in the action, but also as to every ground which might have been presented under the pleadings.

Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 339, 340, 38 L. ed. 463, 467, 468, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 233-237, 46 L. ed. 157, 169, 170, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

A dismissal of the bill absolutely, and without words of restriction, is presumed to be upon the merits, and is conclusive upon all the material issues presented by the pleadings, whether the dismissal be by default, before taking of depositions, or after a hearing on depositions.

Durant v. Essex Co. 7 Wall. 107, 19 L. ed. 154; Leary v. Long, 131 U. S. cexviii.

erty was sought to be taken without due process of law, and in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, raises a Federal question. Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 314, 43 L. ed. 460, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

A claim in a state court that property is taken without due process of law when condemned under a special statute for the abolition of grade crossings, because it authorizes an increase in the number of tracks, and requires the city to pay a portion of the expense incurred for that purpose, which, it is contended, would amount to a donation to a railroad corporation, in violation of the state Constitution, raises a Federal question for the purpose of a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court. Wheeler v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 178 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 1085, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949.

But where a state statute providing for condemnation proceedings has been construed by the state courts as requiring notice, no Federal question with respect to due process of law can be based upon the objection that such statute allows condemnation without notice. Baltimore Traction Co. v. Baltimore Belt R. Co. 151 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 102, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294.

Where the Supreme Court of the United States can see that there has been no taking of property, it will dismiss a writ of error to a state court which is sought to be sustained because of a decision adverse to the contention that property has been taken without due process of law. Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

It is rather difficult to see why the question whether there has been a taking of property within the meaning of the due-process-of-law clause is not as much a Federal question as the further question as to the constitutionality of the procedure. Perhaps the best explanation of these decisions is the one suggested in div. IV. e, 5, in the note appended to Apex Trans. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts; viz., that, as the judgment below was not to be disturbed, it was of little importance whether that result was reached by dismissal or affirmance.

Appx. and 26 L. ed. 301; Lyon v. Perin & G. Mfg. Co. 125 U. S. 698, 31 L. ed. 839, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1024; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Hubbell v. United States, 171 U. S. 203, 43 L. ed. 136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 125, 45 L. ed. 776, 780, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Barber v. Kendall, 158 N. Y. 401, 53 N. E. 1; Goebel v. Iffla, 111 N. Y. 170, 18 N. E. 649; Reich v. Cochran, 151 N. Y. 127, 37 L.R.A. 805, 56 Am. St. Rep. 607, 45 N. E. 367; Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

Where there is a dismissal of the complaint it is presumed that the judgment of dismissal is upon the merits, and covers every question put in issue by the pleadings.

Hubbell v. United States, 171 U. S. 203,

The question must be a real and substantial one (see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. R. & H. R. Co. post, p. 231), and it must not be merely an abstract one. Hence the objection that persons may be deprived of their rights without due process of law, under the Massachusetts Torrens act for land registration, because it provided for adjudicating the rights of certain classes of persons who are notified only by posting notices, registered letters, or by publication, and for the registration of dealings with the land after the original registration, cannot be raised, so as to give jurisdiction on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, by a person who is not affected by those provisions because he has had the requisite notice. Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206.

A taxpayer who admits that his own tax is correct cannot, on the ground that he will be deprived of his property without due process of law, and denied the equal protection of the laws, contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, have a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court to review a construction by the supreme court of the state of the statutes thereof, as exempting, in whole or in part, certain corporations from the payment of taxes. Missouri v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 48 L. ed. 133, 63 L. R.A. 571, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53.

A decree of the state court requiring defendants to vacate certain lands, and en-

209, 43 L. ed. 136, 138, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 691, 692, 39 L. ed. 859, 863, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733.

The Supreme Court must ascertain for itself what questions of law were presented by the record, and whether the court of appeals, in order to reverse the order of the appellate division, and grant final judgment, did not disregard and misinterpret the law of its own state, and also whether it did not, to reach that end, rely, in whole or in part, upon conclusions contrary to those determined by the former judgment.

Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

So, a question of the proper interpretation of a state ordinance was held involved in the question whether proceedings under it were in conflict with United States laws and Constitution.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

To ascertain what was really decided, resort may be had to the pleadings and to the opinion of the court.

National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 217-234, 46 L. ed. 158-169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Baker v. Cummings, supra.

Even though the United States circuit court had not jurisdiction of the alleged infringement of the common-law trademark, nevertheless its judgment is conclusive thereon upon the parties before it, and could not be questioned by them, or either of them, collaterally, or otherwise than on writ of error or appeal.

joining them from further mining thereon, which was the relief prayed in a bill proceeding on the theory that the corporation holding a mining lease under which defendants justified their occupation as its agents was no longer in existence, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court as involving a denial of the claim that, in proceeding to determine the case without making the corporation a party defendant, it will be deprived of its property without due process of law, since, not being a party, the rights of the corporation are not affected by such decree. Iron Cliffs Co. v. Negaunee Iron Co. 197 U. S. 463, 49 L. ed. 836, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474.

The question must be adequately presented to, and be decided by, the state court, or the Federal Supreme Court will be without jurisdiction.

A judgment of a state court in condemnation proceedings is not reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States on the theory that a question respecting due process of law was decided thereby, where there is nothing in the record which adequately shows that the state court was led to suppose that any claim was made under the Constitution of the United States, or that any ruling involved a decision against a right set up under that instrument. Hooker v. Los Angeles, 188 U. S. 314, 47 L. ed. 487, 63 L.R.A. 471, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395.

A question respecting due process of law is not specially set up or claimed in an eminent domain case, so as to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of the United States, by assignments of error in the state court which do not refer in any way to the Federal Constitution, but merely complain of the inadequacy of the damages. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 164 U. S. 454, 41 L. ed. 511, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129.

A decision of a state court that the formalities required by the tax laws were fully observed does not present a Federal question, where the contention is not that the statutes are unconstitutional, but that the manner of their observance was a denial of due process of law. French v. Taylor, 199 U. S. 274, 50 L. ed. 189, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76.

A general statement that the decision of a court was against the constitutional rights of a party or against the 14th Amendment, or that it is without due process of law, particularly when these objections appear only in specifications of error, so called, will not raise a Federal question. Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

A general allegation in a suit to vacate a decree that such decree was passed against some persons who were at the time dead, and against others who were necessary parties, but had no notice of the proceedings, does not, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, specially set up a right or immunity under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States forbidding a state to deprive any person of his property without due process of law. F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

The decision in the opinion of the highest state court, in reviewing a conviction of crime, of questions respecting due process of law, the equal protection of the laws, and cruel and unusual punishment, will not confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to the state court, in the absence of any claim to protection under the Federal Constitution made therein. Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

The right to trial by jury on the question of waiver of preliminary examination is not claimed as a Federal right in a state court by a plea in abatement to an information, alleging that the prosecution is in contravention of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, where this allegation evidently referred to prior paragraphs of the plea, which dealt only with the necessity of a prosecution by indictment

Dowell v. Applegate, supra; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 188, 197, 198, 49 L. ed. 1008, 1015, 1016, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

The question whether a state court has given due effect to a judgment of a court of the United States is a question arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499-515, 520, 48 L. ed. 276-282, 284, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 217, 233, 46 L. ed. 158, 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 507, 508, 46 L. ed. 657, 664, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Taylor, Jurisdiction, § 209.

There is a Federal question because the plaintiffs alleged and were required to prove, as an essential of their cause of action, the former judgment between the same parties in the United States circuit court.

Commercial Pub. Co. v. Beckwith, 188 U. S. 567, 569, 47 L. ed. 598, 599, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382.

All the proceedings in the United States circuit court in the injunction suit, including the judgments and orders and opinions, were pleaded and in evidence, and a part of the record. There can be no claim or argument that they were not before the court of appeals.

Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 66-68, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 369, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

A failure or refusal to consider the Federal question is equivalent to a decision against the Federal right involved therein.

Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Home-to constitute due process of law. Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287.

No Federal question which will confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court is involved in a contention in the highest state court that, by the judgment of the trial court, private property is taken for public use without just compensation, in violation of the 5th Amendment of the Federal Constitution, since this Amendment operates solely as a restriction upon Federal powers, and not upon those of the several states. Winous Point Shooting Club v. Caspersen, 193 U. S. 189, 48 L. ed. 675, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

An exception to the denial of a motion for a new trial on the ground that a state statute violates the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, securing due process of law, is not the equivalent of a claim of the benefit of the due-process-of-law clause of the 14th Amendment. Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

A Federal question, even if presented by the claim, on a motion for a new trial in a state court, that a state statute takes property without due process of law, which the highest state court expressly refrained from passing upon because it regarded the objection waived by failure to cite authorities or advance argument in support thereof, cannot be deemed necessarily to have been decided by that court, where the record does not show that the question was there raised. Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

A judgment of a state court dismissing a bill to enjoin municipal interference with a toll gate, which rests on the ground that the individual grantee of the franchise of the toll road corporation in a deed executed under legislative authority took only a life estate, determines no question as to the impairment of contract obligations, or the deprivation of property without due process of law. Snell v. Chicago, 152 U. S. 191, 38 L. ed. 408, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33, on How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

The doctrine of the cases holding that it is for the state courts alone to construe their own laws (see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts) does not require the Supreme Court of the United States, on writ of error to a state court, to accept that court's construction of a state statute or a statute enacted by the territory before its admission into the Union as a state, when the question is whether such statute provides for the notice required to constitute due process of law. Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

The Federal Supreme Court is no more bound by the state court's construction of the enactment under these conditions than when the question is whether the statute created a contract which has been impaired by a subsequent law of the state, or whether the original liability created by the statute was such that a judgment upon it had not been given due faith and credit in the courts of another state. Scott v. McNeal, supra.

A similar exception was recognized in Hoadley v. San Francisco (Clark v. San Francisco) 124 U. S. 639, 31 L. ed. 553, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659, where one of the questions involved on a writ of error to a state stead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 531, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446.

If a Federal question appears in the record and was actually decided, or was necessarily involved, in the decision as made by the state court, this court has jurisdiction.

Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 488, 489, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 526, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Wedding v. Meyler, 192 U. S. 573, 48 L. ed. 570, 66 L.R.A. 833, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 440, 37 L. ed. 1136, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 231, 41 L. ed. 979, 982, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173.

Mr. Norris Morey also filed a supplemental brief for plaintiffs in error on the question of jurisdiction.

It has been uniformly held that this court will and must ascertain for itself from the record—including the pleadings, the decree, and the opinion—what questions were, in fact, decided or involved in the decision of the court below.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 163 U. S. 44, 45, 49–52, 42 L. ed. 375, 377, 378, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 45 L. ed. 776, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 217, 234, 46 L. ed. 158, 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

Mr. Milton A. Fowler argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for malicious prosecution, brought by the plaintiffs in error, in court was whether property was taken without due process of law by certain state legislation.

Errors of state courts in respect to the details of assessments by municipal corporations for street improvements which are claimed not to furnish due process of law cannot be considered by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to the state court. The only inquiry open is whether sufficient provision has been made by law for contesting the assessment by an appropriate proceeding in the ordinary courts of justice. Corry v. Campbell, 154 U. S. 629, Appx. and 24 L. ed. 926, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1183.

On writ of error to a state court to review a judgment in an action in the nature of quo warranto alleged not to constitute due process of law the question before the Supreme Court of the United States is not whether the courts below, having jurisdiction of the case and of the parties, have followed the law, but whether the law, if followed, would have furnished the protection guaranteed by the Federal Constitution. Irregularities and mere errors in the proceedings must be corrected in the state court. The Supreme Court of the United States will only examine the power of the court below to proceed at all. Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478.

Proceedings had in the state court under state authority for the appropriation of private property to public purposes may be examined by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to a state court so far as to inquire whether that court prescribed any rule of law in disregard of the owner's right to just compensation. But it is not every error occurring in a state court in the administration of its law concerning condemnation of private property for public purposes that may be reviewed, and the court is not called upon to search the record simply to inquire whether there may or may not be errors in the proceeding. The limit of interference is reached when it appears that no fundamental rights have been disregarded by the state tribunals. Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

In Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064, the question presented on a writ of error to a state court was whether due process of law, or the equal protection of the laws, was denied the Chinese by proceedings under certain municipal ordinances providing that it should be unlawful for any person to engage in the laundry business in wooden buildings within the corporate limits "without having first obtained the consent of the board of supervisors." The state court considered these ordinances as vesting in the board of supervisors a not unusual discretion in granting or withholding their assent to the use of wooden buildings as laundries, to be exercised in reference to the circumstances of each case, with a view to the protection of the public against the dangers of fire. The Federal Supreme Court, however, held that the power conferred by these ordinances was a naked and purely arbitrary power, acknowledging neither guidance nor restraint. "The determination of the question whether the proceedings under these ordinances and in enforcement of them are in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States," said Mr. Justice Matthews, in delivering the unanimous opinion of the court, "necessarily involves the meaning of the ordinances, which, for that purpose, we are required to ascertain and adjudge."

which the New York court of appeals ordered judgment for the defendant in error. 181 N. Y. 1, 73 N. E. 495. The suit complained of was a bill brought by the defendant in error in the United States circuit court to restrain the infringement of a registered trademark. A preliminary injunction was granted in that suit. An appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals where the injunction was dissolved, and, the plaintiff making default at the final hearing, a decree was entered by the circuit court, expressed to be upon the merits, and dismissing the bill. The special damage alleged in the present action is the interruption of the plaintiffs' business by the injunction while it was in force.

In the case at bar the trial court ordered a nonsuit on the ground that the granting of the injunction by the circuit court established probable cause. The principle of the decision in Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472, that a final decree of the circuit court has that effect, even if subsequently reversed, was thought to extend to a preliminary decree. See also Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 511, 48 L. ed. 276, 280, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. The [134] decision of the trial court *was reversed by the appellate division. The defendant then took the case to the court of appeals, assenting, as required, that, if the order should be affirmed, judgment absolute should be rendered against him. As we have said, the order was reversed. The ground on which a review is asked here is that the court of appeals by its reasoning implies that it finds probable cause in its own opinion that the decree in the former case was wrong, whereas not to assume it to be correct is to fail to give it the faith and credit required by Rev. Stat. § 905, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677.

It is unnecessary to consider whether a court bound by a previous judgment would not be warranted in saying that if the question had come before it in the first instance it would have decided the case the other way, and therefore that there was probable cause for a mistake of law into which it would have fallen itself. A mistaken view of the law may constitute probable cause in some instances, as is shown by the case cited above. Probable cause does not mean sufficient cause. But this last proposition shows that the former decree could not have decided the question now before the court, and therefore that the case is not properly here. The former decree was conclusive on the merits of the suit in which it was rendered, of course (Lyon v. Perin & G. Mfg. Co. 125 U. S. 698, 31 L. ed. 839, 8 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 1024), but it only decided that that suit was brought without sufficient cause. It decided nothing as to whether the plaintiff had probable cause for expecting to prevail. If the court of appeals had affirmed the judgment of the trial court for the reason that a preliminary injunction fairly obtained from any court conclusively established probable cause, or that there was no evidence of a want of it, there would have been nothing to bring here, whether that reason was right or wrong. The only ground on which our jurisdiction is maintained is that the opinion of the court of appeals shows that it gave a different and inadmissible reason for the result to which it came.

No doubt an opinion may be resorted to for the purpose of *showing that a court [135] actually dealt with a question presented by the record, or that a right asserted in general terms was maintained and dealt with on Federal grounds. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 534, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 179, 180, 47 L. ed. 765, 766, 768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 48 L. ed. 373, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221. But it would be going further than we are prepared to go if we took jurisdiction upon the ground stated in this case. Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 137, 48 L. ed. 121, 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49. The record discloses no question under the Constitution or laws of the United States until we come to the assignment of errors in this court. Then it was too late. Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 280, 50 L. ed. 1026, 1028, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617. It is true that the complainants allege the decree, but that was merely to show that the litigation complained of was ended, as was required by the law of New York (Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590, 595), not to suggest a Federal question, which at that moment probably was not dreamed of. Even the opinion of the court of appeals, which is not part of the record in New York, does not disclose that there had been presented to it any argument or claim of right based upon the effect due to the previous final decree under the Revised Statutes, or indeed, in a specific way, upon the effect of the decree in any light. Furthermore, notwithstanding a few broad words relied upon by the plaintiffs in error, we doubt if the court of appeals meant to lay down the proposition which we have said that we would not discuss, or to go further than to decide that the whole evidence was not sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to go to the jury in an action for malicious prosecution, as that action is limited in New York.

It is argued that the court of appeals exceeded its functions under the Constitution of the state, and in that way denied the plaintiffs due process of law. We see no reason to think so, but with that question we have nothing to do. French v. Taylor, 199 U. S. 274, 50 L. ed. 189, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 L. ed. 899, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560.

Writ dismissed.

[136] *UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
GEORGE RIGGS & CO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 136-141.)

Duties—on figured cotton cloth.

Figured cotton cloth valued at over 11, 12, and 12½ cents per square yard is liable, in addition to the specific duty imposed by the act of July 24, 1897 (chap. 11, 30 Stat. at L. 175, 178, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1655, 1659), § 313, to the ad valorem tax imposed by §§ 306, 307, upon similar plain cotton cloth above those values.

[No. 167.]

Argued October 23, 1906. Decided November 12, 1906.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, reversing a decision of a board of United States general appraisers as to the duty chargeable on figured cotton cloth. Reversed.

See same case below, 69 C. C. A. 357, 136 Fed. 583.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner.

Mr. W. Wickham Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. John K. Maxwell, filed a brief for respondents.

[138] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here on a certiorari granted to bring up a decision of the circuit court of appeals affirming the decision of the circuit court and reversing that of a board of United States general appraisers. The respondents imported "cotton cloth in which other than the ordinary warp and filling threads have been introduced in the process of weaving to form a figure," to quote the words of paragraph 313 203 U. S.

of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (chap. 11, 30 Stat. at L. 175, 178, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1655, 1659). The collector and board of general appraisers decided that this cloth was liable to a duty of 2 cents per square yard, under that paragraph and also, the different items being valued at over 11, 12, and 12½ cents per square yard, to the ad valorem tax imposed by paragraphs 306 and 307 upon similar plain cloth above those values. The circuit court of appeals, while admitting its belief that Congress intended to place an extra duty on figured cloth, felt bound to decide, upon the language of paragraph 313, that the tax placed by it upon figured cloth was to be added only to specific taxes imposed on less valuable cloths by paragraphs 306 and 307.

To explain: By paragraph 306 cotton cloth not bleached, etc., exceeding 100 and not exceeding 150 threads to the square inch, etc., and not exceeding 4 square yards to the pound, pays 1½ cents per square yard, with an increasing rate as the number of yards to the pound increases. But a proviso substitutes for the foregoing a different set of duties on all cotton cloth with the same count of threads, not bleached, etc., if valued above a certain sum; for instance, if over 9 cents per square yard, 30 per centum ad valorem; if over 11, 35, etc. Paragraph 307 is similar in form for cloths with between 150 and 200 threads.

By paragraph 313 figured cloth "shall pay, in addition to the duty herein provided for other cotton cloth of the same *descrip-[139] tion, or condition, weight, and count of threads to the square inch, one cent per square yard if valued at not more than seven cents per square yard, and two cents per square yard if valued at more than seven cents per square yard." In the judgment appealed from it is assumed that the cloth in question, as figured cloth, is liable to this duty, and that, in deciding what such cloth shall pay, the collector must start from this paragraph. This paragraph must decide to what other duty the one here levied shall be added. If it stopped with the words "other cotton cloth of the same description, or condition," no doubt the tax might be added to an ad valorem tax when that would be required by paragraph 306 or 307. Those words might be taken to indicate cloth of similar value in cases within the provisos as well as goods of similar weight taxed under the first part of paragraphs 306 and 307. But, as general words, they would include weight as readily as value; and the mention of weight and count shows that they are used in a narrower sense; for instance, to indicate quality, as bleached or otherwise. Hence the criteria for the duty to which that under 313 is to be added all point to a specific duty alone; and these criteria therefore must determine for figured cloths the duty to which they are liable under paragraphs 306 and 307. You must not alter words in the interest of the imagined intent, and the importers are entitled to the benefit of even a doubt.

In spite of this reasoning, no one, we take it, has any serious doubt that paragraph 313 was not intended to affect or cut down duties already imposed in clear though general terms. The provisos of the earlier paragraphs are made applicable to "all cotton cloths" of the sorts described, in so many words. The qualified reading is due to scruples that hardly would occur except to the professional mind. As against those scruples, it is to be observed, in the first place, that the clauses to which we have referred and their neighbors, to go no further into the general scheme of the tariff act, consistently raise the amount of [140] the tax on cotton cloth *as the cloth becomes more expensive, and that it would reverse the tendency and go counter to the intent expressed everywhere else, if, in this instance, the more valuable goods were withdrawn from the general tax imposed upon their class. It is said that, in some cases, the construction contended for even would make the duty on figured cotton of a high price less than that on cheap cloth.

In the next place, if the language of paragraph 313 is not broad enough to apply to both classes of duty previously imposed, the easier contention would seem to be that the additional duty created by it was put only upon the first class, that of the cheaper goods taxed by weight, rather than that it cut down what already had been made clear. Such a notion would be disposed of by the fact that paragraph 313 applies to all cotton cloth and to all values, higher as well as lower than seven cents, and by other considerations not necessary to state. But, if anything had to yield it would be paragraph 313.

The artificial doubt is raised by assuming that the collector must start with the first part of paragraph 313 and find out what his assessments are to be from that alone. That is a mistake. He has before him the whole act. He has been told in the earlier paragraphs in unmistakable language that all cotton cloth, with this number of threads and above a certain value must pay 30 or 35 cents ad valorem. Then comes this paragraph, which on its face purports to make an addition to some tax which it assumes to have been imposed by the earlier ones. It is intended to hit all cotton cloths and all values, and it is intended to be added to a tax already imposed. But this would not be the case if the presence of a figure in the cloth changed the rate established by the preceding scheme.

The truth is, as pointed out in the argument for the government, that the element of value is woven through the whole tissue of the act. The collector does not know what duty to assess, even under 313, without a valuation. It cannot *be found out [141] what "the duty herein provided" is, or whether it is specific or ad valorem, without making a valuation under the previous paragraphs, just as if 313 did not exist. Paragraphs 306 and 307 tell the collector to make it on all cotton and to assess a duty on all cotton above a certain value after the valuation is made. Paragraph 313 assumes the duty imposed by 306 and 307 to have been assessed. As against these plain directions, coupled with the manifest intent of the act, the failure to mention value along with weight raises no serious doubt in our minds.

Decree reversed.

MARTIN CONBOY, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of the Phillip Semmer Glass Company, Limited, Bankrupt, Appt.,

v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF JERSEY CITY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 141-146.)

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—in bankruptcy case.

1. The allowance of an appeal from a circuit court of appeals in a bankruptcy case on certificate of a justice of the Supreme Court cannot operate as an adjudication that such appeal is taken within the thirty days allowed by general order in bankruptcy No. 36.

Appeal—from order denying rehearing.

2. No appeal lies from an order denying a petition for rehearing.

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—in bankruptcy case.

3. The thirty days' limitation prescribed by general order in bankruptcy No. 36 for taking an appeal from a final order of a circuit court of appeals in a bankruptcy case cannot be extended by filing a petition for rehearing after the thirty days have expired, although there may be but one term of that court, and, by its rules of practice, petitions for rehearing may be presented at any time during the term.

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

On appeal or review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

[No. 54.]

Argued October 23, 1906. Decided November 19, 1906.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review an order affirming an order of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, which had affirmed an order of a referee in bankruptcy, allowing a claim against the bankrupt's estate. Dismissed because not taken in time.

See same case below, 67 C. C. A. 551, 135 Fed. 77.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Martin Conboy argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The petition for rehearing was addressed to the discretion of the court. The court duly considered it. By this the effect of the final decree was suspended. Substantially, the decree was not final until the 24th of May, 1905, within thirty days from which date the appeal was perfected.

Brockett v. Brockett, 2 How. 238, 11 L. ed. 251.

The time to appeal from the final decree did not begin to run until the petition for rehearing had been decided.

Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Voorhees v. John T. Noye Mfg. Co. 151 U. S. 135, 38 L. ed. 101, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Slaughterhouse Cases, 10 Wall. 273, 19 L. ed. 915; Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Washington) 7 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 274; Memphis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 715, 24 L. ed. 244; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 488, 28 L. ed. 492, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co. 170 U. S. 675, 678, 42 L. ed. 1192, 1193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786. Of course, if the petition for a rehearing is not presented by a party who is entitled to present it, as in Sage v. Central R. Co. 93 U. S. 412, 418, 419, 23 L. ed. 933, 935, or if it is not presented at the proper term, as in Cambuston v. United States, 95 U. S. 285, 287, 24 L. ed. 448, 449, so that the court cannot entertain it, then the court's disposition of it does not affect the original judgment. But the disposition of such a motion or petition when it is presented by a party entitled to do so, within the proper time, is, in effect, a re-entry of the original judgment appealed from.

A judgment or decree must be properly entered in order to start the statute of limitation of the time to appeal.

Polleys v. Black River Improv. Co. 113 203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

U. S. 81, 83, 28 L. ed. 938, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 6 Wall. 153, 18 L. ed. 762; Yznaga del Valle v. Harrison, 93 U. S. 233, 23 L. ed. 892; United States v. Gomez, 1 Wall. 690, 17 L. ed. 677.

Mr. William G. Wilson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a final order of the circuit court of *appeals for the second [143] circuit affirming an order of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, filed June 7, 1904, affirming an order of a referee in bankruptcy, "In the matter of Phillip Semmer Glass Company, Limited, Bankrupt," dated May 7, 1904, allowing the claim of the First National Bank of Jersey City against the bankrupt's estate.

The final order of the circuit court of appeals was entered January 23, 1905. The trustee petitioned that court, April 25, to recall its mandate and vacate the order therefor, and the application was denied. On May 8 a petition for rehearing was filed, which was denied May 17, and an order to that effect entered May 24. A petition, dated the same day, was thereupon presented to a justice of this court, praying an appeal "from the whole of the said order of affirmance of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, dated the 23d day of January, 1905, and from the whole of the said order of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, dated the 25th day of April, 1905, denying the motion of your petitioner to recall the mandate of said court and cancel the order for same, and from the whole of the said order of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, dated the 24th day of May, 1905, denying the petition of the said trustee for a rehearing;" and for the reversal of "said orders and decrees, etc., and every part thereof."

Appeal was allowed and certificate granted under § 25b, par. 2, of the bankruptcy act [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432], May 27, 1905. Thereafter and on June 14, 1905, findings of fact and conclusions of law were filed by the circuit court of appeals, "nunc pro tunc, as though the same were made and filed at the time of entry of the judgment of this court on the 23d day of January, 1905."

The following provisions of the bankruptcy act are applicable:

"Sec. 25b. From any final decision of a court of appeals, *allowing or rejecting a [144] claim under this act, an appeal may be had under such rules and within such time as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the following cases and no other:

"2. Where some justice of the Supreme Court of the United States shall certify that, in his opinion, the determination of the question or questions involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim is essential to a uniform construction of this act throughout the United States."

Paragraphs 2 and 3 of general orders in bankruptcy, 36, read:

"2. Appeals under the act to the Supreme Court of the United States from a circuit court of appeals, or from the supreme court of a territory, or from the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or from any court of bankruptcy whatever, shall be taken within thirty days after the judgment or decree, and shall be allowed by a judge of the court appealed from, or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"3. In every case in which either party is entitled by the act to take an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, the court from which the appeal lies shall, at or before the time of entering its judgment or decree, make and file a finding of the facts, and its conclusions of law thereon, stated separately; and the record transmitted to the Supreme Court of the United States on such an appeal shall consist only of the pleadings, the judgment or decree, the finding of facts, and the conclusions of law."

The law provides that appeals shall be taken "within such time as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States," and by general order 36 this court prescribed the time and limited it to thirty days, in harmony with the policy of the bankruptcy act, requiring prompt action and the avoidance of delay.

[145] The limitation has the same effect as if written in the statute, *and the allowance of an appeal on certificate cannot operate as an adjudication that it is taken in time.

The present appeal was allowed four months "after the judgment or decree" appealed from and three months after the time to appeal had expired.

But it is said that the limitation should be referred to the date of the order denying the petition for rehearing, and the trustee prayed an appeal from that order as well as from the judgment of January 23.

No appeal lies from orders denying petitions for rehearing, which are addressed to the discretion of the court and designed to afford it an opportunity to correct its own errors. Brockett v. Brockett, 2 How. 238, 17 L. ed. 251; Wylie v. Coxe, 14 How. 1, 14 L. ed. 301. Appellant might have made his application for rehearing and had it determined within the thirty days, and still have had time to take his appeal. But he let the thirty days expire, as it did February 22, 1905, and did not file his petition until May 8, 1905. The right of appeal had then been lost and appellant could not reinvest himself with that right by filing a petition for rehearing.

The cases cited for appellant, in which it was held that an application for a rehearing, made before the time for appeal had expired, suspended the running of the period for taking an appeal, are not applicable when that period had already expired. "When the time for taking an appeal has expired, it cannot be arrested or called back by a simple order of court. If it could be, the law which limits the time within which an appeal can be taken would be a dead letter." Credit Co. v. Arkansas C. R. Co. 128 U. S. 258, 261, 32 L. ed. 448, 449, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107, 108.

In the circumstances, the suggestion that there is but one term of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, and that, by the rules of practice of that court, petitions for rehearing may be presented at any time during the term, and therefore that this petition operated to enlarge the limitation of the bankruptcy act, is without merit.

*The petition was denied. Whether it [146] could have been granted in view of the terms and spirit of the bankruptcy act, or the effect, if it had been, we are not called upon to discuss.

Appeal dismissed.

JAMES GOUDY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

EDWARD MEATH, Assessor of Pierce County, Washington.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 146-150.)

Taxes—exemption—Indian allotments.

Land allotted under an Indian treaty which exempts such land from levy, sale, or forfeiture until the state legislature shall, with the consent of Congress, remove the restriction, can no longer escape taxation after the Indian patentee has become a citizen under the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), which, in addition to the grant of citizenship, provides that "Indians to whom allotments have been made, shall have the benefit of, and be subject to, the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state or territory in which they may reside," and the ten years during which Congress, by the act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 612, 633, chap. 209), postponed the operation of the provision of Wash. Laws 1889, 1890, p. 499, granting the power of alienation "in like manner and with like effect as any other person may do under the laws of the United States and of this state," and removing all restrictions in reference thereto, have expired.

NOTE.—On exemption of Indians from taxation—see note to Allen County v. Simons, 13 L.R.A. 512.

[No. 53.]

Submitted October 23, 1906. Decided November 19, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Pierce County, in that state, denying the claim of an Indian allottee to exemption from taxation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Wash. 126, 80 Pac. 295.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This case is before us on error to the supreme court of Washington. 38 Wash. 126, 80 Pac. 295. It was submitted to the state courts on an agreed statement of facts, and involves the question of the liability of the land of the plaintiff, now plaintiff in error, to taxation for the year 1904. He is a Puyallup Indian, and claims exemption under and by virtue of the treaty of December 26, 1854. 10 Stat. at L. 1132. That treaty provided for an allotment of land in severalty to such members of the tribe as were willing to avail themselves of the privilege, on the same terms, and subject to the same regulations, as were named in the treaty [147] with the Omahas. *The latter treaty, March 16, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 1043), authorized the President to issue a patent for any allotted land, "conditioned that the tract shall not be aliened or leased for a longer term than two years; and shall be exempt from levy, sale, or forfeiture, which conditions shall continue in force until a state constitution, embracing such lands within its boundaries, shall have been formed, and the legislature of the state shall remove the restrictions. . . . No state legislature shall remove the restrictions herein provided for without the consent of Congress." Under this treaty, on January 30, 1886, a patent to the plaintiff was issued. One of the facts agreed upon is the following:

"That since the issuance of said patent, and by an act of Congress passed and approved on the 8th day of February, 1887, plaintiff became and now is a citizen of the United States, and entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens. Said act is found in the United States Statutes at Large, vol. 24, chapter 119, at page 388."

In 1889, Washington was admitted as a state. Its first legislature enacted:

"Section 1. That the said Indians who now hold, or who may hereafter hold, any of the lands of any reservation, in severalty, located in this state, by virtue of treaties made between them and the United States, shall have power to lease, encumber, grant, and alien the same in like manner and with like effect as any other person may do under the laws of the United States and of this state, and all restrictions in reference thereto are hereby removed." Laws 1889, 1890, p. 499.

In 1893, Congress passed an act (27 Stat. at L. 612, 633, chap. 209) authorizing the appointment of a commission with power to superintend the sale of the allotted lands, with this proviso:

"That the Indian allottees shall not have power of alienation of the allotted lands not selected for sale by said commission for a period of ten years from the date of the passage of this act."

Construing these several acts, the Secretary of the Interior. *on February 14, 1903, [148] wrote to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, summing up his conclusions in these words:

"I am of the opinion that the requirements of the treaties with respect to these lands have been fully met, and that the provisions of the act of the legislature of the state of Washington of March 22, 1890, and the Indian appropriation act of March 3, 1893, referred to above, together operate to remove all restrictions upon the alienation or sale thereof by the allottees. I have therefore to direct that the Puyallup commissioner be instructed to continue the selection and appraisal of such portions of the Puyallup allotted lands, but only with the consent of the Indians, as provided in the act of March 3, 1893, until the expiration of the ten-year period mentioned, to wit, March 3, 1903, after which date, in my judgment, the Puyallup Indian allottees will have power to lease, encumber, grant, and alien the same in like manner and like effect as any other person may do under the laws of the United States, and of the state of Washington.

"You are further directed to instruct the commissioner to take the necessary steps to complete and close up the business of his office as soon as practicable after March 3, next."

Mr. Walter Christian submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Walter M. Harvey submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Charles O. Bates was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

In the brief filed by the plaintiff in error no question is made of his right to sell and convey the land. The supreme court of the state, in its opinion, says: "It is conceded that the Indians may now sell their lands voluntarily and convey a title in fee, and that thereupon the lands so sold are subject to taxation in the hands of parties not Indians." [38 Wash. 129, 80 Pac. 296.] But the contention is that although he has the [149] power of voluntary sale *and conveyance, yet, until he has exercised that power, the land is not subject to taxation or forced sale. His argument rests mainly upon the contention that there is no express repeal of the exemption provided in the original treaty, "from levy, sale, or forfeiture." That Congress may grant the power of voluntary sale while withholding the land from taxation or forced alienation may be conceded. For illustration, see treaty of January 31, 1855, with the Wyandotts (10 Stat. at L. 1159, 1161). But while Congress may make such provision, its intent to do so should be clearly manifested, for the purpose of the restriction upon voluntary alienation is protection of the Indian from the cunning and rapacity of his white neighbors, and it would seem strange to withdraw this protection and permit the Indian to dispose of his lands as he pleases, while at the same time releasing it from taxation,—in other words, that the officers of a state enforcing its laws cannot be trusted to do justice, although each and every individual acting for himself may be so trusted.

But further, by the act of February 8, 1887, plaintiff became and is a citizen of the United States. That act, in addition to the grant of citizenship, provided that "Indians to whom allotments have been made shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state or territory in which they may reside." Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Among the laws to which the plaintiff as a citizen became subject were those in respect to taxation. His property, unless exempt, became subject to taxation in the same manner as property belonging to other citizens, and the rule of exemption for him must be the same as for other citizens,—that is, that no exemption exists by implication, but must be clearly manifested. No exemption is clearly shown by the legislation in respect to these Indian lands. The original treaty provided that they should be exempt from levy, sale, or forfeiture until the legislature of the state should, with the consent of Congress, remove the restriction. This, of course, *meant involuntary as well [150] as voluntary alienation. When the state was admitted and its constitution formed, its legislature granted the power of alienation "in like manner and with like effect as any other person may do under the laws of the United States and of this state, and all restrictions in reference thereto are hereby removed." What restrictions? Evidently those upon alienation. The Indian may not only voluntarily convey his land (authority to do that is provided by the use of the word "grant"), but he may also permit its alienation by any action or omission which, in due course of law, results in forced sale. Congress postponed the operation of this statute for ten years. When the ten years expired (and they had expired before this tax was attempted to be levied) all restriction upon alienation ceased. It requires a technical and narrow construction to hold that involuntary alienation continues to be forbidden while the power of voluntary alienation is granted; and it is disregarding the act of Congress to hold that the Indian having property is not subject to taxation when he is subject to all the laws, civil and criminal, of the state.

We see no error in the ruling of the Supreme Court of the state of Washington, and its judgment is affirmed.

*NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE JUNIOR [151] ORDER OF UNITED AMERICAN MECHANICS OF THE UNITED STATES OF NORTH AMERICA et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

STATE COUNCIL OF VIRGINIA, JUNIOR
ORDER OF UNITED AMERICAN MECHANICS OF THE STATE OF VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 151-164.)

Constitutional law—impairing contract obligations.

1. No contract obligations of a foreign benevolent society are impaired by a state

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

On recognition or exclusion of foreign corporations—see notes to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole, 24 L.R.A. 289; and McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13.

statute incorporating a local society with the same name as that of a previously existing voluntary state association whose charter from the foreign corporation had been withdrawn, and conferring upon it the exclusive right of granting subcharters in the state.

Constitutional law—due process of law—excluding foreign corporation.

2. No existing property rights are taken without due process of law by a state statute, passed in the exercise of its power over foreign corporations, incorporating a local benevolent society with the same name as that of a voluntary state association whose charter had been withdrawn by the foreign corporation that issued it, and conferring upon such society the exclusive right of granting subcharters in the state.

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—excluding foreign corporation.

3. The equal protection of the laws is not denied by a state statute, passed in the exercise of its power over foreign corporations, incorporating a local benevolent society with the same name as that of a voluntary state association whose charter had been withdrawn by the foreign corporation that issued it, and conferring upon such society the exclusive right of granting subcharters in the state.

[No. 89.]

Argued November 7 and 8, 1906. Decided November 19, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review a decree affirming, with a slight modification, a decree of the Chancery Court of Richmond, in that state, enforcing the rights of a local benevolent society under its charter. Affirmed.

See same case below, 104 Va. 197, 51 S. E. 166.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. V. Meredith and Ellis G. Kinkead argued the cause, and, with Smith W. Bennett, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

It cannot be successfully contended that a corporation like that of the plaintiff in error, the National Council, is of so idealistic a nature, so far removed from property interests, that the right to defend its name from wrongful use does not exist as it does in strictly business corporations.

Supreme Lodge K. of H. v. Oeters, 95 Va. 610, 29 S. E. 322; State v. Dunn, 134 N. C. 663, 46 S. E. 949; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 532; Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' Protective & Benev. Union, 75 Cal. 308, 7 Am. St. Rep. 156, 17 Pac. 217; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, K. of P. 102 Ind. 262, 1 N. E. 571; Dolan v. Court Good Samaritan, No. 5910. A. O. of. F. 128 Mass. 437; Lavalley v. Société St. Jean Baptiste, 17 R. I. 689, 16 L.R.A. 203 U. S.

392, 24 Atl. 467; Blair v. Supreme Council A. L. of H. 208 Pa. 262, 101 Am. St. Rep. 934, 57 Atl. 564; Ludowski v. Polish Roman Catholic St. S. K. Benev. Soc. 29 Mo. App. 337; State ex rel. Waring v. Georgia Medical Soc. 38 Ga. 608, 95 Am. Dec. 408; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 699, 4 L. ed. 674; Great Hive, L. of M. v. Supreme Hive, L. of M. 135 Mich. 392, 97 N. W. 779, 99 N. W. 26; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 173, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 Pac. 781.

If the alleged inability to get protection against the wrongful use of it exists, it can only be upon the ground that it is a foreign corporation; for it will not be disputed that, if the National Council were a Virginia corporation, it could undoubtedly get protection against such wrongful use by others.

International Committee, Y. W. C. A. v. Young Women's Christian Asso. 194 Ill. 194, 56 L.R.A. 888, 62 N. E. 551; Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. v. Graham, 96 Iowa, 592, 31 L. R.A. 138, 65 N. W. 837; McFadden v. Murphy, 149 Mass. 341, 21 N. E. 868; Kane v. Shields, 167 Mass. 392, 45 N. E. 758; Altman v. Benz, 27 N. J. Eq. 331; Gorman v. O'Connor, 155 Pa. 239, 26 Atl. 379; Niblack, Ben. Soc. § 90; Smith v. Smith, 3 Desauss. Eq. 581; Young Women's Christian Asso. v. St. Louis Y. W. C. A. 115 Mo. App. 228, 91 S. W. 171; Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. Boston Rubber Co. 149 Mass. 436, 21 N. E. 875; Spiritual & Philosophical Temple v. Vincent, 127 Wis. 93, 105 N. W. 1026; Re First Presby. Church, 2 Grant, Cas. 240; Edison Storage Battery Co. v. Edison Automobile Co. 67 N. J. Eq. 44, 56 Atl. 861; Hendriks v. Montagu, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 638.

A state has no right to take anyone's property without due process of law, no matter whether said property is within or without the state.

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 440, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

It was beyond the lawful power of the legislature of Virginia to take away the right of the National Council, the Pennsylvania corporation, to continue to control and to use, through its subordinate body, the Virginia voluntary association, the title or name "State Council of Virginia, Junior Order United American Mechanics."

Peck Bros. & Co. v. Peck Bros. Co. 62 L. R.A. 81, 51 C. C. A. 257, 113 Fed. 291; Ottoman Cahvey Co. v. Dane, 95 Ill. 203; Investor Pub. Co. v. Dobinson, 72 Fed. 603; Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Goodyear's India Rubber Glove Mfg. Co. 22 Blatchf. 421, 21 Fed. 276.

The statute creating the defendant in error, making it an independent organization and releasing it from all its duties and obligations to the National Council, was the authorization of a breach of contract.

Supreme Lodge K. of H. v. Oeters, supra; Kern v. Arbeiter Unterstuetzungs Verein, 139 Mich. 233, 102 N. W. 746; Kuhl v. Meyer, 42 Mo. App. 474; Supreme Lodge K. of P. v. La Malta, 95 Tenn. 157, 30 L.R.A. 838; 31 S. W. 493; Baldwin v. Hosmer, 101 Mich. 119, 25 L.R.A. 743, 59 N. W. 432; Bacon, Ben. Soc. § 37; Knights of Maccabees v. Nitsch, 69 Neb. 372, 95 N. W. 626; Union Benev. Soc. No. 8 v. Martin, 113 Ky. 25, 67 S. W. 39; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 693, 34 L. ed. 314, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

The defendant in error is mistaken in the narrow construction it gives to the word "contract" as used in the Constitution of the United States.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 630, 644, 645, 4 L. ed. 629, 657, 661; Bryan v. Board of Education, 151 U. S. 650, 38 L. ed. 302, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; People ex rel. Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 458; Kern v. Arbeiter Unterstuetzungs Verein, supra; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 820, 25 L. ed. 1080; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150-153, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616-635, 29 L. ed. 746-752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Fuller v. Academic School Trustees, 6 Conn. 532.

There are many rights of enjoyment, privileges, and personal benefits growing out of agreement or contract, which, though having "no actual market value," the courts will enforce because of the mutual obligations contained in such agreement or contract, provided they are not of a "governmental" nature, like marriage and divorce, or similar rights.

Medical & Surgical Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; Com. v. St. Patrick Benev. Soc. 2 Binn. 441, 4 Am. Dec. 453; Evans v. Philadelphia Club, 50 Pa. 107; Society for Visitation of Sick v. Com. 52 Pa. 125, 91 Am. Dec. 139; People ex rel. Deverell v. Musical Mut. Protective Union, 118 N. Y. 101, 23 N. E. 129; State ex rel. Sibley v. Carteret Club, 40 N. J. L. 295; Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' Protective & Benev. Union, supra; Savannah Cotton Exchange v. State, 54 Ga. 668; Fisher v. Keane, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 353; Lambert v. Eddison, 46 L. T. N. S. 20; Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 653, 667, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135.

The rights of every individual must stand or fall by the same rule or law that governs every other member of the body politic, or land, under similar circumstances, and every partial or private law which directly proposes to destroy or affect individual rights, or does the same thing by affording remedies leading to similar consequences, is unconstitutional and void, as against the "law of the land."

Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 556, 24 Am. Dec. 511; State ex rel. Stoutmeyer v. Duffy, 7 Nev. 349, 8 Am. Rep. 713; Budd v. State, 3 Humph. 483, 39 Am. Dec. 189; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 301, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 396, 6 Am. Dec. 174; State v. Pennoyer, 65 N. H. 113, 5 L.R.A. 709, 18 Atl. 878; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 556, 557, 559; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The law of the land and "due process of law" are virtually synonymous.

State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 174, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781.

Here, after passing a general statute inviting the plaintiffs in error by name to exist and operate in the state, along with certain other similar organizations, the legislature of Virginia undertakes to pass a law applicable solely to the plaintiffs in error, not only hampering and restricting the plaintiffs in error, but giving their rights, powers, privileges, and property interests to another organization.

Such an injustice and injury cannot be said to have been done according to the "law of the land," or under "due process of law."

Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326, cited in Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 559.

The equal protection of the laws is a pledge of the protection of equal laws.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540-559, 46 L. ed. 679-689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

The state of Virginia invited the plaintiff in error, the National Council, to exist and continue within its limits. When it so acted, it was with knowledge as to the character of its organization. It knew that it would so exist within those limits by means of a state council and subordinate councils, composed of the citizens of that state.

State ex rel. Poulson v. Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. 8 Mo. App. 148.

This court will look beyond the act of incorporation, and ascertain what was the object of the discrimination.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356-366, 30 L. ed. 220-225, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 105, 43 L. ed. 913, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Especially is this true where the nature of the corporation brings it so clearly and forcibly within the jurisdiction of the state.

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239-261, 43 L. ed. 432-440, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

No state need allow the corporations of other states to do business within its jurisdiction unless it chooses, but, if it does, without limitation, express or implied, the corporation comes in as it has been created. Every corporation necessarily carries its charter wherever it goes, for that is the law of its existence.

Relfe v. Rundle (Life Asso. of America v. Rundle) 103 U. S. 222-225, 26 L. ed. 337-339.

Being within the jurisdiction of the state at the time of the adoption of the statute complained of, and not having been driven without its jurisdiction by said statute, as declared by the supreme court of Virginia, in construing the same, the National Council was entitled to the equal protection of the laws.

Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 389, 38 L. ed. 751, 756, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 382, 38 L. ed. 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362-410, 38 L. ed. 1014-1027, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 105, 46 L. ed. 107, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 153, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540-558, 46 L. ed. 679-689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

The individual plaintiffs in error, for themselves, without regard to the rights of the National Council, insist that the said act is void as to them for the same reasons above given as to the National Council.

The Virginia statute deprives them of their civil and political liberties, and directly invades their vested property rights.

Vanzant v. Waddel, 2 Yerg. 260; Butcher's Union S. H. & S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 757, 28 L. ed. 591, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 172, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 423, 45 N. E. 313; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 107, 109, 46 L. ed. 92, 107, 108, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; State v. Seougal, 3 S. D. 55, 15 L.R.A. 477, 44 Am. St. Rep. 756, 51 N. W. 858; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 320, 18 L. ed. 362; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 587, 588, 41 L. ed. 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; People ex rel. Valentine v. Berrien Circuit Judge (People ex rel. Valentine v. Coolidge) 124 Mich. 664, 50 L.R.A. 493, 83 Am. St. Rep. 352, 83 N. W. 594; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L.R.A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1103; Brannon, 14th Amendment, p. 296.

203 U. S.

Messrs. Frank W. Christian and Samuel A. Anderson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The provision of the Federal Constitution in respect to state legislation impairing the obligation of contracts has always been limited by the Supreme Court of the United States and applied only to cases of contracts creating some right in respect to property or subjects of pecuniary value.

Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402, 416, 13 L. ed. 472, 478; Maryland use of Washington County v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 How. 534, 11 L. ed. 714; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. ed. 1079; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 210, 31 L. ed. 658, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Hunt v. Hunt, 131 U. S. clxv. Appx. and 24 L. ed. 1109; Black, Constitutional Prohibitions, p. 51, § 4; Bishop's Fund v. Rider, 13 Conn. 87.

Even if there were a contract of that nature, it was made subject to the inherent reserved power of the state of Virginia at any time to pass an act of the nature of that of February 17, 1900, excluding the National Council from further operation, through its agents, within the state of Virginia.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 410, 19 L. ed. 972; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Missouri v. Doekery, 191 U. S. 165, 48 L. ed. 133, 63 L.R.A. 571, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Travelers Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 50 L. ed. 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Lehigh Valley Coal Co. v. Hamblen, 23 Fed. 225; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Warwick, 20 Gratt. 614, 3 Am. Rep. 218; Slaughter v. Com. 13 Gratt. 767.

It was only by the comity of Virginia that the National Council had ever operated through its agencies within Virginia, and the General Assembly of Virginia had the right and power, at any time, at its mere pleasure, to withdraw these privileges, and, of course, therefore, to confer them upon some other body selected by it.

Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 78, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to reverse a decree in favor of the defendant in error, the original plaintiff, and hereinafter called the plaintiff. 104 Va. 197, 51 S. E. 166. The plaintiffs in error will be called the defendants. The plaintiff is a Virginia corporation. The principal defendant is a

Pennsylvania corporation. The other defendants are alleged to be officers of a voluntary association, calling itself by the plaintiff's name, and are acting under a charter from the Pennsylvania corporation. The latter was incorporated in 1893, the articles of association reciting that the associates comprise the national council, the supreme head of the order in the United States (where it previously had existed as a voluntary association). Its objects were to promote the interests of Americans and shield them from foreign competition, to assist them in obtaining employment, to encourage them in business, to establish a sick and funeral fund, and to maintain the public school system, prevent sectarian interference with the same, and uphold the reading of the Holy Bible in the schools. As the result of internal dissensions the Virginia corporation was chartered in 1900, with closely similar objects, omitting those relating to the public schools. It seems to have consisted of the [159] dominant portion of a former *voluntary state council of the same name, from which a charter issued by the Pennsylvania corporation had been withdrawn. The act of incorporation declared that the new body "shall be the supreme head of the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics in the state of Virginia," and provides that it "shall have full and exclusive authority to grant charters to subordinate councils, Junior Order United American Mechanics, in the state of Virginia, with power to revoke the same for cause." The plaintiff and the voluntary organization of the defendants both have granted and intend to grant charters to subordinate councils in Virginia, and are obtaining members and fees which each would obtain but for the other, and are holding themselves out as the only true and lawful state council of the Virginia Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

The plaintiff sued for an injunction, and the defendants, in their answer, asked cross relief. The plaintiff obtained a decree enjoining the defendant corporation and the other defendants (declared to be shown by their answers to be its agents and representatives) as officers of the Virginia voluntary association, from continuing within the state the use of the plaintiff's name or any other name likely to be taken for it; from using the plaintiff's seal; from carrying out under such name the objects for which the plaintiff and the Virginia voluntary association were organized; from granting charters to subordinate councils in the state as the head of the order in the state; from interfering in any way with the pursuit of its objects by the plaintiff within the state; and from designating their officers within the state by applications set forth as used by the plaintiff. On appeal the decree was affirmed, with a modification, merely by way of caution, providing that nothing therein contained should, in anywise, interfere with any personal or property rights that might have accrued before the date of the Virginia charter. The defendants had set up in their answer and insisted that the charter impaired the obligation of the contract existing between the plaintiff *and the principal defendant,[160] contrary to article 1, § 10, of the Constitution, and also violated § 1 of the 14th Amendment, and they took a writ of error from this court.

The bill and answer state the two sides of the difference which led to the split, at length. But those details have no bearing that needs to be considered here. The only question before us is the constitutionality of the act of the Virginia legislature granting the charter. The elements of that question are the appropriation of the name of the previously existing voluntary society and the exclusive right of granting subcharters in Virginia conferred by the words that we have quoted. Whether the persons who were using that name when they got themselves incorporated were using it rightly or wrongly does not matter if the legislature had the right to grant the name to them in either case. On the other hand, we do not consider the question stated to be disposed of by the limitation put upon the decree by the supreme court of appeals. Unless the saving of personal and property rights existing at the date of the charter be read as a construction of the charter, it does not affect the scope or validity of the act. And if so read, still it cannot be taken to empty the specific prohibitions in the decree of all definite meaning and to leave only an indeterminate injunction to obey the law at the defendants' peril. That injunction remains, and imports what the words of the charter import, that the plaintiff has been granted certain defined exclusive rights which the court will enforce.

The decree, however, goes beyond the rights which we have mentioned as given by the charter. In that respect the discussion here must be limited again. Whether the plaintiff is using paraphernalia, or a ritual, or a seal, which it should not be allowed to use, is not before us here. The charter says nothing about them, and its validity is not affected by any abuse of rights of property or of confidence which the plaintiff or its members may have practised. This court, we repeat, *cannot go beyond a decision upon[161] the constitutionality of the charter granted, and we address ourselves to that.

The contract of which the obligation is alleged to have been violated is a contract between the plaintiff and the principal defendant. What that contract is supposed to have been is not stated, but manifestly there was none. It would have had to be a contract not to come into existence, at least with the plaintiff's present functions and name. There have been cases where administration was taken out on a prematurely born child and a suit brought for causing it to be born, per quod it died, but they have failed. Dietrich v. Northampton, 138 Mass. 14, 52 Am. Rep. 242. See Walker v. Great Northern R. Co. Ir. L. R. 28 Eq. 69. An antenatal contract presents greater difficulties still. Even if we should substitute an allegation of a contract with the members of the plaintiff, the contention would fail. The contract, if any there was, was not that they would not become incorporated, but must be supposed to be that they would retain their subordination to the national council, or something of that sort. It is going very far to say that they contracted not to secede, but whether they did so or not, it was a matter outside the purview of the charter. There was nothing in that to hinder their returning to their allegiance. Whether any, and if any, what, contract was made (National Council, J. O. of U. A. M. v. State Council J. O. of U. A. M. 64 N. J. Eq. 470, 473, 53 Atl. 1082, 66 N. J. Eq. 429, 57 Atl. 1132), and whether, if made, it must not be taken to have been made subject to the powers of the state, with which we are about to deal, are questions which we may pass. See Pennsylvania College Cases (Jefferson College v. Washington & J. College) 13 Wall. 190, 218, 20 L. ed. 550, 554; Bedford v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. 181 U. S. 227, 45 L. ed. 834, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597.

The most serious aspect of the defense is presented by the matter of the plaintiff's name. If the legislation of a state undertook to appropriate to the use of its own creature a trade name of known commercial value, of course the argument would be very strong that an act of incorporation could not interfere with existing property rights. [162] And, no doubt, *within proper limits, the argument would be as good for a foreign corporation as for a foreign person. But that is not what has been done in this case.

The name in question is not the name of the principal defendant, but distinguished from that name as state and national councils no doubt generally are distinguished by members of similar institutions. It is the name of a voluntary association of which the officers are defendants. But it is not used even by that association in its own right, but only under a charter from, and in the right of, the Pennsylvania corporation. Furthermore, the name is not associated with a product of any kind. Its only value to the defendants, in a property sense, is as tending to invite membership in a club which professes to derive its existence and its powers from the Pennsylvania company. It does not seem likely that anyone would join the plaintiff, and certainly no member could be retained, in ignorance of its alienation from the national council. As the national council has its branches elsewhere, and as the plaintiff is, on its face, a state organization, competition outside the state appears improbable. So that the claim of the defendants comes down to a claim of right to compete within the state, and a right, as we have said, of or in behalf of the Pennsylvania corporation, which controls the existence of its subordinate Virginia councils. Thus the question as to the grant of the name passes over into the question as to the exclusive right of the plaintiff to issue charters, which was the other legislative grant.

The supreme court of appeals was right, therefore, in treating the constitutional question as depending on the power of the state with regard to foreign corporations. That must decide the case. Now it is true, of course, that an unconstitutional law no more binds foreign corporations than it binds others. Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 409, 50 L. ed. 246, 249, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66. And no doubt a law specially directed against a foreign corporation might be unconstitutional, for instance, as depriving it of its property without due process of law. See *Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. [163] 239, 260, 43 L. ed. 432, 440, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165. But when the so-called property consists merely in the value that there might be in extending its business or membership into a state, that property, it hardly needs to be said, depends upon the consent of the state to let the corporation come into the state. The state of Virginia had the undoubted right to exclude the Pennsylvania corporation and to forbid its constituting branches within the Virginia boundaries. As it had that right before the corporation got in, so it had the right to turn it out after it got in. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 50 L. ed. 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619. It follows that the state could impose the more limited restriction that simply forbade the granting of charters to "subordinate councils, Junior Order United American Mechanics, in the state of Virginia."

It is argued that the power of the state in this case was less than it otherwise might have been, because it did not turn the Pennsylvania corporation out. The supreme court of appeals says that the plaintiff's charter leaves the whole order of things as it existed unaffected except by the exclusive right of the plaintiff to issue subordinate charters. It is said that the general statutes recognized the defendant and authorized such associations to continue within the state. A subordinate council of the order had been granted a special charter, which is not revoked. The conclusion is drawn that the restrictions upon the defendant which flow from the charter to the plaintiff amount to a denial of the equal protection of the laws of Virginia to a person within its jurisdiction. But the power of the state as to foreign corporations does not depend upon their being outside of its jurisdiction. Those within the jurisdiction, in such sense as they ever can be said to be within it, do not acquire a right not to be turned out except by general laws. A single foreign corporation, especially one unique in character, like the national council, might be expelled by a special act. It equally could be restricted in the more limited way.

There were many difficult questions presented to the state court which cannot be reviewed here. As to the constitutionality of the plaintiff's charter, we are of opinion that the court was right.

Decree affirmed.

CHARLES W. CLARK, Plff. in Err.,

v.

P. O. WELLS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 164-173.)

Judgment—jurisdiction—service of process.

1. No valid judgment in personam can be rendered against a defendant without personal service upon him in a court of competent jurisdiction, or waiver of summons, and voluntary appearance therein.

Appearance—for purpose of removing cause—effect.

2. A defendant in a suit in a state court does not, by a special appearance for the sole purpose of removing the cause to a Federal circuit court, before service of summons, submit himself to the jurisdiction of the state court, nor, upon removal to the Federal court, deprive himself of the right to object to the manner of service upon him in that court.

Appearance—effect of removing cause to Federal court.

3. The exercise of the right of removing a cause from a state to a Federal circuit court before service of summons by a defendant who appeared specially for that

NOTE.—As to the validity of personal judgments rendered upon constructive service of process—see notes to Moyer v. Bucks, 16 L.R.A. 231; Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 7 L. ed. U. S. 923.

As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

138

sole purpose does not amount to a general appearance.

Writ and process—substituted service in the Federal courts.

4. Service by publication in the manner prescribed by the state statutes for non-resident defendants cannot be had in the Federal circuit court to which a suit in which an attachment has issued has been removed from a state court before service of summons.

Removal of causes—enforcing attachment—effect of lack of service of process.

5. The want of any jurisdiction over the person of defendant in a case removed to a Federal circuit court from a state court before service of summons, on a special appearance by defendant for that sole purpose, does not, in view of the provision of the removal act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 471, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 511), § 4, preserving the lien of attachments in the state courts, prevent the Federal court from entering a judgment enforceable against the real property of defendant which had been attached before the case was removed, where the state court might, but for such removal, have rendered such a judgment on giving notice to defendant.

[No. 42.]

Submitted October 18, 1906. Decided November 19, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Montana to review a judgment against defendant in a cause which had been removed to that court before service of summons from the District Court of the First Judicial District in and for Lewis and Clark County, in that state. Modified by making the judgment collectible only from property which had been attached in the state court, and, as so modified, affirmed.

See same case below on motion to quash summons, 136 Fed. 462.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Walter M. Rickford and George F. Shelton submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. William A. Clark, Jr., was on the brief:

The attachment of his property in the state of Montana did not give the state court jurisdiction to proceed to render a judgment against the plaintiff in error without personal service of process upon him within the state of Montana.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker (New Mexico ex rel. Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker) 196 U. S. 445, 49 L. ed. 545, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 521, 39 L. ed. 517, 518, 15 Sup. Ct.

203 U. S.

Rep. 559; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 705, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 623, 9 L. ed. 1220; Harris v. Hardeman, 14 How. 334, 14 L. ed. 444.

Nor did the state court have jurisdiction to render a judgment collectible out of the property attached alone, without publication of summons or substituted service in the manner required by the Code of Civil Procedure of the state of Montana.

Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 281; Barber v. Morris, 37 Minn. 194, 5 Am. St. Rep. 836, 33 N. W. 559; Heffner v. Gunz, 29 Minn. 108, 12 N. W. 342; Walker v. Cottrell, 6 Baxt. 267; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker (New Mexico ex rel. Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker) 196 U. S. 432, 49 L. ed. 540, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

The filing of the petition and bond for removal in the state court did not constitute an appearance on the part of the plaintiff in error, and he was at liberty to assert, in the circuit court of the United States, the want of jurisdiction over his person, upon the ground that process had not been served upon him at all.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; National Acci. Soc. v. Spiro, 164 U. S. 281, 41 L. ed. 435, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 996; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 411, 47 L. ed. 1115, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Courtney v. Pratt, 196 U. S. 89, 92, 49 L. ed. 398, 399, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The service of process must have been personal upon the defendant within the state and district of Montana in order to enforce the attachment lien.

Perkins v. Hendryx, 40 Fed. 657; Toland v. Sprague, 12 Pet. 300, 330, 9 L. ed. 1093, 1105; Levy v. Fitzpatrick, 15 Pet. 167, 171, 10 L. ed. 699, 700; Herndon v. Ridgway, 17 How. 424, 425, 15 L. ed. 100, 101; Chaffee v. Hayward, 20 How. 208, 15 L. ed. 804; Harland v. United Lines Teleg. Co. 6 L.R.A. 252, 40 Fed. 308; Nazro v. Cragin, 3 Dill. 474, Fed. Cas. No. 10,062; Chittenden v. Darden, 2 Woods, 437, Fed. Cas. No. 2,688; Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 685; Day v. Newark India Rubber Mfg. Co. 1 Blatchf. 630, Fed. Cas. No. 3,685; Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co. 7 Blatchf. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 602; Sædler v. Hudson, 2 Curt. C. C. 7, Fed. Cas. No. 12,206; Anderson v. Shaffer, 10 Fed. 267; Noyes v. Canada, 30 Fed. 666; Treadwell v. Seymour, 41 Fed. 581; Ex parte Des Moines & M. R. Co. 103 U. S. 794, 796, 26 L. ed. 461, 462; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 521, 39 L. ed. 518, 15 Sup. Ct. 203 U. S.

Rep. 559; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, supra.

The state statute authorizing service of process by publication, or otherwise, upon absent and nonresident defendants, has no application to suits in personam.

Pennoyer v. Neff, and Goldey v. Morning News, supra; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

If Congress has legislated upon a given subject, and prescribed a definite rule for the government of the Federal courts, it is exclusive of any legislation of the states on the same subject.

Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 209, 36 L. ed. 942, 945, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Whitford v. Clark County, 119 U. S. 522, 50 L. ed. 500, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

The appearance was special and the jurisdiction of the court was properly attacked.

Mexican C. R. Co. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 705, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S. 476, 25 L. ed. 237.

Mr. N. W. McConnell submitted the cause for defendant in error:

It is no bar to the jurisdiction of the circuit court of a case removed to it from a state court that defendant was not a resident of the district, and that the state had acquired jurisdiction by foreign attachment, without any personal service.

Crocker Nat. Bank v. Pagenstecher, 44 Fed. 705; Richmond v. Brookings, 48 Fed. 241; Purdy v. Wallace Müller & Co. 81 Fed. 513.

The case having been removed to the circuit court upon the petition of the defendant, it does not lie in its mouth to claim that such court had no jurisdiction of the case, unless the court from which it was removed had no jurisdiction.

Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 583, 40 L. ed. 267, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127.

The jurisdiction which the state court acquired by attachment carries jurisdiction into the Federal court when it is removed, for the reason that by virtue of the attachment in the state court the res, or the property attached, is brought into the custody of the United States circuit court; it is not, then, a question of jurisdiction in the United States circuit court, for that has been acquired by the attachment in the state court; but it is a question of practice. It involves the procedure in the United States circuit court as to how notice shall be given to the defendant so as to enable the court to proceed to render judgment and subject the property attached to the payment of the debt so far as the proceeds realized from the sale thereof shall be sufficient to pay the same. While a judgment in form is rendered against the defendant for the amount of the debt, still it is limited, as to satisfaction, to the property attached.

Crocker Nat. Bank v. Pagenstecher, Richmond v. Brookings, Purdy v. Wallace Müller & Co., and Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. supra.

If the suit be one rightfully brought in the state court, and which the act of Congress authorizes to be removed thence into the Federal court, the very fact of the authority to remove empowers the Federal court to take jurisdiction and proceed in the cause; the only real question in that court being, Was the suit rightfully removed? If a cause has thus come into the Federal court, then § 4 of the removal act empowers and requires that court to go on with it, and the court to render such decree against the property attached as the state court should have given if the suit had remained there.

United States v. Ottman, 1 Hughes, 313, Fed. Cas. No. 15,977; 11 Myers, Fed. Dec. §§ 1638-1643; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L.R. A. 120, 46 C. C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 45.

After defendant had appeared in court by his petition and asked for the removal of the case into the United States circuit court, it seemed, as stated in Purdy v. Wallace Müller & Co. 81 Fed. 513, to render further notice an "idle formality."

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here upon a question of jurisdiction of the circuit court, duly certified under the act of March 3, 1891. 26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488.

The action below was commenced by Wells against Clark, September 20, 1904, in the district court of the first judicial district of Montana, in and for Lewis and Clark county, to recover on a promissory note in the sum of $2,500, with interest and costs. The summons in the action was re-[169]turned September 22, 1904, with the indorsement by the sheriff that Clark could not be found in his county.

An attachment was sued out under the statutes of Montana (Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 890 et seq.), and, on September 22, 1904, was levied upon all the right, title, and interest of the defendant Clark in certain lots in Butte, Silver Bow county, Montana.

On October 18, 1904, Clark, appearing for the purpose of obtaining an order of removal, and no other, and reciting that he waived no right to object to the jurisdiction of the court over his person or property, filed his petition in the district court of Lewis and Clark county for the removal of the cause to the circuit court of the United States for the district of Montana, upon the ground that he was a resident of San Mateo, California, and a citizen of that state, plaintiff being a citizen of Montana.

Upon bond filed such proceedings were had that the cause was ordered, on October 18, 1904, to be removed to the United States circuit court for the district of Montana.

After the filing of the record in the United States court an affidavit was filed on November 3, 1904, in the office of the clerk of the United States circuit court for an order for service by publication upon Clark as a nonresident, absent from the state, who could not be found therein. An order was thereupon made by the clerk of the United States court for service upon Clark by publication in a newspaper in the city of Helena, Lewis and Clark county, and the mailing of a notice to San Mateo, California, the alleged place of residence of the defendant. This method of procedure is in conformity with the Code of Civil Procedure of Montana, §§ 637, 638. Publication was made, and a copy of the summons and complaint was served upon Clark at San Mateo, California, by the United States marshal in and for the northern district of California. Mont. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 637, 638.

On December 6, 1904, Clark, appearing solely for that purpose, *filed a motion to [170] quash the service of summons upon two grounds:

"1. That the said summons has never at all or in any manner been served upon the defendant herein personally in the state and district of Montana, nor has the defendant ever at any time waived service of summons or voluntarily entered his appearance in this cause.

"2. That the publication of service herein, wherein and whereby the said summons has been published in a newspaper, does not give the court any jurisdiction over the said defendant, nor is such service by publication permissible or in accordance with the rules of procedure in the United States court, nor is the same sanctioned or authorized by any law of the United States, and the said pretended service of summons by publication is wholly and absolutely void under the laws of the United States."

The court overruled the motion and proceeded to render a judgment in personam against Clark for the amount of the note and costs.

It is contended by the plaintiff in error that inasmuch as the removal was made to the Federal court before service of a summons upon the defendant, and, as there was no personal service after the removal, there could be no valid personal judgment in that court for want of service upon the defendant. And it is insisted that the service by publication, if proper in such cases, could not be made under the state statute, but under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513), permitting the court to make an order for publication upon nonresident defendants in suits begun in the circuit court of the United States to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon a claim to real or personal property within the district where suit is brought.

It must be taken at the outset as settled that no valid judgment in personam can be rendered against a defendant without personal service upon him in a court of competent jurisdiction, or waiver of summons, and [171] voluntary appearance therein. Pennoyer v. Neff*, 95 U. S. 715, 25 L. ed. 565; Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker (New Mexico ex rel. Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker) 196 U. S. 432, 444, 49 L. ed. 540, 545, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375, and cases cited.

Nor did the petition for removal in the form used in this case have the effect to submit the person of the defendant to the jurisdiction of the state court, or, upon removal to the Federal court, deprive him of the right to object to the manner of service upon him (Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559), and the exercise of the right of removal did not have the effect of entering the general appearance of the defendant, but a special appearance only for the purposes of removal (Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271-279, 41 L. ed. 431-434, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126).

But we cannot agree with the contention of counsel for plaintiff in error, that, as a personal judgment can only be rendered upon personal service, and service by publication under the state statutes cannot be made in the Federal court, and that the United States statute (act of March, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513) is inapplicable to the case, the effect of the removal is to render nugatory the attachment proceedings in the state court.

The purpose not to interfere with the lien of the attachment in the state court is recognized and declared in the statute (§ 4 of the removal act, 18 Stat. at L. 471, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 511) providing that, when any suit is removed from a state court to the circuit court of the United States, an attachment of the goods or estate of the defendant, had in the suit in the state court, shall hold the goods or estate attached to answer the final judgment or decree in the same manner as by law it would have been held to answer the final judgment or decree had it been rendered by the court in which the suit was commenced, and preserving the validity of all bonds or security given in the state court.

The transfer of the cause to the United States court gave the latter court control of the case as it was when the state court was deprived of its jurisdiction. The lands were still held by the attachment to answer such judgment as might be rendered against the defendant.

The defendant had a right to remove to the Federal court, *but it is neither reasonable nor consonant with the Federal statute preserving the lien of the attachment, that the effect of such removal shall simply be to dismiss the action wherein the state court had acquired jurisdiction by the lawful seizure of the defendant's property within the state. [172]

When the jurisdiction of the state court was terminated by the removal, that court had seized upon the attached property, with the right to hold it to answer such judgment as might be rendered. In the absence of personal service the state statute provided for publication of notice of the pendency of the suit. If the defendant failed to appear the court might proceed to render a judgment, which would permit the attached property to be sold for its satisfaction. To render such a judgment in the absence of an appearance and defense the state court had only to require the statutory notice to the defendant, when its proceedings were interrupted by the removal to the Federal court on the application of the defendant.

The Federal court thus acquired jurisdiction of a cause of which the defendant had notice, as appears by his petition for removal and the action of the state court invoked by him. The defendant, it is true, had not been personally served with process or submitted his person to the jurisdiction of either the state or Federal court. But he did not attack the validity of the attachment proceedings, which appear to be regular and in conformity to the law of the state. There was no necessity of publication of notice in the Federal court in order to warn the defendant of the proceeding; he knew of it; and to a qualified extent had appeared in it.

Without further notice to him, the court had jurisdiction to enter a judgment enforceable against the attached property. The judgment purported to be rendered as upon personal service and after a finding by the court "that the so-called special appearance for the removal hereinbefore recited was an absolute and unqualified submission to the jurisdiction of this [the Federal] court."

[173] *There are expressions in the opinion of the learned judge of the circuit court to the effect that the judgment rendered was intended to be effectual only to subject the attached property (136 Fed. 462), and it seems to be in the form used in some jurisdictions, which recognize that the property attached is all that is reached by the judgment rendered. But the judgment is absolute upon its face, and entered after a finding of full jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. It is in such form as can be sued upon elsewhere and be pleaded as a final adjudication of the cause of action set forth in the petition, and be executed against other property of the defendant, whereas the court had only jurisdiction to render a judgment valid against the property seized in attachment.

We hold that, to the extent that it rendered a personal judgment absolute in terms, the court exceeded its jurisdiction in the case, not having, by service or waiver, personal jurisdiction of the defendant.

The judgment to that extent is therefore modified and made collectible only from the attached property. So modified, the judgment is affirmed.

[174] *FRED C. FISHER and Charles C. Cohn, on Behalf of Felix Barcelon, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

COLONEL DAVID J. BAKER, JR., and Captain John Doe Thompson.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 174-183.)

Appeal—moot question.

1. The validity of the action of the Philippine authorities in suspending the writ of habeas corpus is a moot question, which does not call for determination by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error, where the suspension was revoked on the day when copy of the petition for the writ of error was served on opposing counsel, and more than two months before the writ was issued.

Appeal—distinction between appeal and writ of error.

2. Appeal, and not writ of error, is the proper method of obtaining a review in the Supreme Court of the United States of a final order of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands in a habeas corpus case, under the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. chap. 1369, pp. 691, 695, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 154), § 10, providing that judgments and decrees of the latter court can only be reviewed "in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure, as far as applicable, as the final judgments and decrees of the circuit courts."

[No. 214.]

Argued October 9, 10, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a denial of an application for a writ of habeas corpus. Dismissed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic R. Coudert argued the cause, and, with Mr. Howard Thayer Kingsbury, filed briefs for plaintiffs in error.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Application for the writ of habeas corpus was made to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, August 2, 1905, on behalf of one Barcelon, seeking to be discharged from alleged illegal detention in the province of Batangas. An order to show cause was granted, returnable August 4, to which return was made, the cause heard, and the application denied on the ground that the writ of habeas corpus had been suspended, and *that the action of the Philippine au- [179]thorities in that regard was not open to judicial review.

Petition for the allowance of a writ of error from this court, dated October 19, and service of copy thereof acknowledged by respondents the same day, was filed January 3, 1906, and the writ of error thereupon allowed and issued on that day.

The second clause of § 9 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States provides: "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it."

The 7th paragraph of § 5 of the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. chap. 1369, pp. 691, 692), reads: "That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion, the public safety may require it; in either of which events the same may be suspended by the President, or by the governor, with the approval of the Philippine Commission, wherever, during such period, the necessity for such suspension shall exist."

The record discloses that on January 31, 1905, the Philippine Commission adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas certain organized bands of ladrones exist in the provinces of Cavite and Batangas, who are levying forced contributions upon the people, who frequently require them, under compulsion, to join their bands, and who kill or maim in the most barbarous manner those who fail to respond to their unlawful demands, and are therefore terrifying the law-abiding and inoffensive people of those provinces; and

NOTE.—On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

"Whereas these bands have, in several instances, attacked police and constabulary detachments, and are in open insurrection against the constituted authorities; and

"Whereas it is believed that these bands have numerous agents and confederates living within the municipalities of the said provinces; and [180] "Whereas, because of the foregoing conditions, there exists a state of insecurity and terrorism among the people which makes it impossible in the ordinary way to conduct preliminary *investigations before justices of the peace and other judicial officers:

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, 'That, the public safety requiring it, the civil governor is hereby authorized and requested to suspend the writ of habeas corpus in the provinces of Cavite and Batangas.'

Whereupon, on the same day, the civil governor issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas certain organized bands of lardrones exist in the provinces of Cavite and Batangas, who are levying forced contributions upon the people, who frequently require them, under compulsion, to join their bands, and who kill or maim in the most barbarous manner those who fail to respond to their unlawful demands, and are therefore terrifying the law-abiding and inoffensive people of those provinces; and

"Whereas these bands have, in several instances, attacked police and constabulary detachments, and are in open insurrection against the constituted authorities, and it is believed that the said bands have numerous agents and confederates living within the municipalities of the said provinces; and

"Whereas, because of the foregoing conditions, there exists a state of insecurity and terrorism among the people which makes it impossible in the ordinary way to conduct preliminary investigations before justices of the peace and other judicial officers:

"In the interest of the public safety, it is hereby ordered that the writ of habeas corpus is from this date suspended in the provinces of Cavite and Batangas."

But we must take notice of the fact that on October 19, 1905, the civil governor issued a proclamation revoking that of January 31, 1905, as follows:

"Whereas the lardrone bands which, up to a recent date, infested the provinces of Cavite and Batangas, have been practically destroyed, and the members thereof killed or captured or have surrendered, so that the necessity for the continuance of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in the *aforesaid provinces, which was made neces-[181] sary by the conditions therein prevailing on the 31st day of January last, no longer exists:
203 U. S.

"Now, therefore, I, Luke E. Wright, governor general of the Philippine Islands, being duly authorized and empowered thereto by the Philippine Commission, do hereby proclaim the revocation of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in the provinces of Cavite and Batangas which was made by me on the 31st day of January last."

This proclamation wiped out the basis of the decision sought to be reviewed on the day when the copy of the petition for writ of error was served on opposing counsel, and more than two months before the writ of error was issued. The question ruled by the court below, and solely argued before us, became, in effect, a moot question, not calling for determination here. Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

But the disposition of this writ of error must be rested on another ground.

The proceeding is in habeas corpus, and is a civil, and not a criminal, proceeding. Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 88, 36 L. ed. 896, 898, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22. Section 10 of the Philippine act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. chap. 1369, pp. 691, 695, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 154), provides:

"That the Supreme Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm the final judgments and decrees of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands in all actions, cases, causes, and proceedings now pending therein or hereafter determined thereby in which the Constitution or any statute, treaty, title, right, or privilege of the United States is involved, or in causes in which the value in controversy exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, or in which the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, is involved or brought in question; and such final judgments or decrees may and can be reviewed, revised, reversed, modified, or affirmed by said Supreme Court of the United States *on[182] appeal or writ of error by the party aggrieved, in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure, as far as applicable, as the final judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of the United States."

Final orders of the circuit or district courts of the United States in habeas corpus can only be reviewed by appeal, and not by writ of error. Re Morrissey (Morrissey v. Perry) 137 U. S. 157, 158, 34 L. ed. 644, 645, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 373, 45 L. ed. 577, 581, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, 407. In the latter case the court said:

"Motion is made to dismiss the appeal upon the ground that there is no provision of law allowing an appeal in this class of cases. Prior to the court of appeals act of 1891, provision was made for an appeal to the circuit court in habeas corpus cases 'from the final decision of any court, justice, or judge inferior to the circuit court' (Rev. Stat. § 763, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 594); and from the final decision of such circuit court an appeal might be taken to this court (Rev. Stat. § 764, as amended March 3, 1885, chap. 353, 23 Stat. at L. 437, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 595).

"The law remained in this condition until the court of appeals act of March, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549], was passed, the 5th section of which permits an appeal directly from the district court to this court 'in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, is drawn in question.' In this connection the appellee insists that an appeal will not lie, but that a writ of error is the proper remedy. In support of this we are cited to the case of Bucklin v. United States, 159 U. S. 680, 40 L. ed. 304, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182, in which the appellant was convicted of the crime of perjury, and sought a review of the judgment against him by an appeal, which we held must be dismissed, upon the ground that criminal cases were reviewable here only by writ of error. Obviously that case has no application to this, since, under the prior sections of the Revised Statutes, above cited, which are taken from the act of 1842, an appeal was allowed in habeas corpus cases. The observation made in the Bucklin Case that 'there was no purpose by [183] that act to *abolish the general distinction, at common law, between an appeal and a writ of error, may be supplemented by saying that it was no purpose of the act of 1891 to change the forms of remedies theretofore pursued. Re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 37 L. ed. 1120, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 41 L. ed. 572, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182."

Writ of error dismissed.

ST. MARY'S FRANCO-AMERICAN PETROLEUM COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 183-192.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—appointing state auditor to accept service upon corporation.

1. A domestic corporation whose principal office and works are outside the state is not deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law by W. Va. Acts 1905, chap. 39, requiring every foreign and nonresident domestic corporation to appoint the state auditor to accept service of process, and exacting an annual fee of $10 for his services, although the prior laws left it to the corporation to appoint an attorney for that purpose.

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—appointing state auditor to accept service upon corporation.

2. The equal protection of the laws is not denied to a domestic corporation whose principal office and works are outside the state, by W. Va. Acts 1905, chap. 39, requiring every foreign and nonresident domestic corporation to appoint the state auditor to accept service of process, and exacting an annual fee of $10 for his services.

[No. 98.]

Submitted November 5, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia to review a judgment awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel a nonresident domestic corporation to appoint the state auditor to accept service of process. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This is a writ of error to review a judgment of the supreme court of appeals of West Virginia awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus, commanding the St. Mary's Franco-American Petroleum Company, by power of attorney, duly executed, acknowledged, and filed in the office of the auditor for the state of West Virginia, "to appoint said auditor and his successors in office, attorney in fact to accept service of process and notice in this state for said St. Mary's Franco-American Petroleum Company, and [184] by the same instrument to declare its consent that service of any process or notice in this state on said attorney in fact, or NOTE.—As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

his acceptance thereof indorsed thereon, shall be equivalent for all purposes to, and shall be and constitute, due and legal service upon the said St. Mary's Franco-American Petroleum Company, and that the petitioner recover from the respondent her costs about the prosecution of her petition in this court in this behalf expended."

It was agreed by the parties that no rule to show cause need be issued on the petition for mandamus, nor any alternative writ, but that the petition might stand as such writ, and the case be determined on demurrer thereto, which was filed.

The petition, among other things, averred that the St. Mary's Company was "a non-resident domestic corporation, organized, chartered, existing, and carrying on its corporate business under and by virtue of the laws of the state of West Virginia, but having its principal office and place of business and chief works in the city of Lima, in the state of Ohio;" that the corporation "was organized, and now exists by virtue of a charter issued to it by the secretary of state of the state of West Virginia on the 18th day of January, 1902;" and that "on the 17th day of February, 1902, the said defendant corporation, by power of attorney, duly and legally executed, filed, and recorded, appointed one Wm. M. O. Dawson, a resident of the county of Kanawha in the state of West Virginia, to accept service on behalf of said corporation, and as a person upon whom service may be had of any process or notice, and to make returns of its property for taxation."

At the time the company was incorporated § 8 of chapter 53 of the state Code read:

"Where the legislature has the right to alter or repeal the charter or certificate of incorporation heretofore granted to any joint stock company, or to alter or repeal any law relating to such company, nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed to surrender or impair such right. And the right is hereby reserved to the legislature to [185] alter any charter or *certificate of incorporation hereafter granted to a joint stock company, and to alter or repeal any law applicable to such company. But in no case shall such alteration or repeal affect the right of the creditors of the company to have its assets applied to the discharge of its liabilities, or of its stockholders to have the surplus, if any, which may remain after discharging its liabilities and the expenses of winding up its affairs, distributed among themselves in proportion to their respective interests."

And § 24 of chapter 54:

"Every such corporation having its principal office or place of business in this state shall, within thirty days after organization, by power of attorney duly executed, appoint some person residing in the county in this state wherein its business is conducted, to accept service on behalf of said corporation, and upon whom service may be had of any process or notice, and to make such return for and on behalf of said corporation to the assessor of the county or district wherein its business is carried on, as is required by the 41st section of the 29th chapter of the Code. Every such corporation having its principal office or place of business outside this state shall, within thirty days after organizing, by power of attorney duly executed, appoint some person residing in this state to accept service on behalf of said corporation, and upon whom service may be had of any process or notice, and to make return of its property in this state for taxation as aforesaid. The said power of attorney shall be recorded in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county in which the attorney resides, and filed and recorded in the office of the secretary of state, and the admission to record of such power of attorney shall be deemed evidence of compliance with the requirements of this section. Corporations heretofore organized may comply with said requirements at any time within three months after the passage of this act. Any corporation failing to comply with said requirements within six months after the passage of this act shall forfeit not less than two hundred nor more *than five hun-[186] dred dollars, and shall, moreover, during the continuance of such failure, be deemed a nonresident of this state, and its property, real and personal, shall be liable to attachment in like manner as the property of non-resident defendants; any corporation failing so to comply within twelve months after the passage of this act shall, by reason of such failure, forfeit its charter to the state, and the provisions of § 8, chapter 20, Acts 1885, relative to notice and publication, shall apply thereto."

On the 22d day of February, 1905, the legislature of West Virginia passed an act—chapter 39 of the Acts of 1905—which is as follows:

"Sec. 1. The auditor of this state shall be, and he is hereby constituted, the attorney in fact for and on behalf of every foreign corporation doing business in this state, and of every nonresident domestic corporation. Every such corporation shall, by power of attorney, duly executed, acknowledged, and filed in the auditor's office of this state, appoint said auditor and his successors in office, attorney in fact to accept service of process and notice in this state for such corporations, and by the same instrument it shall declare its consent that service of any process or notice in this state on said attorney in fact, or his acceptance thereof indorsed thereon, shall be equivalent for all purposes to, and shall be and constitute, due and legal service upon said corporation.

"Sec. 2. Such foreign or nonresident domestic corporation shall, at the time of taking out its charter, or procuring its authority to do business in this state, as the case may be, pay to the auditor as its said attorney $10 for his services as such for the then current year ending on the 30th day of April next ensuing; and on or before the 1st day of May, for each year, such corporation shall pay to said auditor the like sum of $10 for his services as such attorney. And all such corporations as have heretofore taken out charters, or procured authority to do business in this state, shall, for the fiscal [187]year *commencing on the 1st day of May, 1905, pay the sum of $10 to the auditor as the fee for such attorney to receive service of process, and annually thereafter a like sum, and such corporation shall not be required to pay any fee to the person who may have been heretofore appointed its attorney to receive service of process. All moneys received by the auditor under this chapter shall belong to the state, and be by him immediately paid into the state treasury. The auditor shall keep in a well bound book in his office a true and accurate account of all moneys so received and paid over to him.

"Sec. 3. The postoffice address of such corporation shall be filed with the power of attorney, and there shall be filed with the auditor, from time to time, statements of any changes of address of said corporation. Immediately after being served with, or accepting, any such process or notice, the auditor shall make and file with said power of attorney a copy of such process or notice, with a note thereon indorsed of the time of service or acceptance, as the case may be, and transmit such process or notice by registered mail to such corporation at the address last furnished as aforesaid. But no such process or notice shall be served on the auditor or accepted by him less than ten days before the return thereof.

"Sec. 4. In addition to the auditor, any such company may designate any other person in this state as its attorney in fact, upon whom service of process or notice may be made or who may accept such service. And, when such local attorney is appointed, process in any suit or proceeding may be served on him to the same effect as, if the same were served on the auditor.

"Sec. 5. Failure to pay the attorney's fee as hereinbefore required shall have all the force and effect, and subject such corporation to the same penalties and forfeitures, as are or may be prescribed by law for failure to pay the license tax required to be paid by such corporation.

"Sec. 6. Any corporation failing to comply with the provisions *of this act in so far as [188] it relates to the appointment of the auditor as its statutory attorney, within ninety days from its incorporation, shall forfeit $100 as a penalty for such failure, and upon failure to pay such penalty, the charter of such corporation shall thereby be forfeited and void."

The company refused to comply with the act, and, thereupon, this proceeding was instituted.

Mr. W. E. Chilton submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Chilton, MacCorkle, & Chilton were on the brief:

This statute is justified by no public necessity, and is clearly that kind of legislation condemned in State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285 as sumptuary, and depriving a person of his rights and liberty of private contract.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 274, 45 L. ed. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343.

In discussing the constitutionality of the statute it is to be remembered that the question is to be determined, not by what has been done in any particular instance, but by what may be done under and by virtue of its authority. It is for the courts to determine what is due process of law, or what is the equal protection of the laws, and not for the legislature.

People ex rel. Tyroler v. Warden, 157 N. Y. 116, 43 L.R.A. 264, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Does not this act, then, deprive and deny to this corporation the equal protection of the laws?

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 484.

Is there any limitation to the power of a state in dealing with its own corporation, if, at the time the corporation was created, there was a statute of the state reserving to the legislature the right to alter or repeal?

Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583, 13 Blatchf. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,519.

There is another objection to this law; that is, that the statute fixes a tax upon this corporation for a private purpose, and not for a public purpose, and in so doing deprives this corporation of its property without due process of law.

Brannon, 14th Amendment, p. 160; Cole v. La Grange, 113 U. S. 1, 28 L. ed. 896, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 665, 22 L. ed. 461.

Mr. Clarke W. May submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The inhibition that no state shall deprive any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws was designed to prevent any person or class of persons from being singled out as a special subject for discrimination and hostile legislation.

Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Brannon, 14th Amendment, 323.

It only requires that the same means and methods shall apply to all constituents of a class, so that law may operate equally on all similarly situated. With the impotency of the law, the Constitution has no concern.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

The West Virginia statute is clearly not repugnant to the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 43, 44 L. ed. 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 652, 39 L. ed. 297, 298, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 579, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 242, 43 L. ed. 433, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, supra; Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 329, 46 L. ed. 569, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; Narron v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 122 N. C. 856, 40 L.R.A. 415, 29 S. E. 356; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 44 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Central Loan & T. Co. v. Campbell Commission Co. 173 U. S. 84, 43 L. ed. 623, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5
203 U. S.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Brannon, 14th Amendment, chap. 16.

The requirement that foreign and non-resident corporations pay to the auditor for the use of the state the sum of $10 does not vitiate or render the enactment unconstitutional.

Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; New York ex rel. New York Electric Lines Co. v. Squire, 145 U. S. 175, 35 L. ed. 666, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It is argued that the act of February 22, 1905, is invalid under the 14th Amendment, in that it deprives the company of liberty of contract and property without due process of law, and denies it the equal protection of the laws. But, in view of repeated decisions of this court, the contention is without merit. The state had the clear right to regulate its own creations, and a fortiori, foreign corporations permitted to transact business within its borders.

In this instance it put all nonresident domestic corporations, which elected to have their places of business and works outside of the state, and all foreign corporations coming into the state, on the same footing in respect of the service of process, and the law operated on all these alike.

Such a classification was reasonable, and not open to constitutional objection. Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 563, 43 L. ed. 552, 554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 43, 44 L. ed. 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Central Loan & T. Co. v. Campbell Commission Co. 173 U. S. 84, 43 L. ed. 623, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; National Council v. State Council, 203 U. S. 151, ante, 132, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46; Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 243, post, 168, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Brannon, 14th Amendment, chap. 16.

It is true that the prior law left it to the corporation to appoint an attorney to represent it, and that the act of February, 1905, changed this so as to make the auditor such attorney, but this, at the most, was no more than an amendment as to the appointment of an agent, and when the St. Mary's Company accepted its charter it did so subject to the right of amendment. And we agree with the state court that the *require-[192]ment of the payment of $10 to the auditor for the use of the state does not amount to a taking of property without due process, or an unjust discrimination. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; New York ex rel. New York Electric Lines Co. v. Squire, 145 U. S. 175, 36 L. ed. 666, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880. If the act is valid, that is.

The objections going to the expediency or the hardships and injustice of the act, and its alleged inconsistency with the state Constitution and laws, are matters with which we have nothing to do on this writ of error, and the question whether the provision that the corporation shall not be required to pay any fee to anyone theretofore appointed an attorney is invalid or not requires no consideration on this record.

Judgment affirmed.

GEORGE A. PETTIBONE, Appt.,
v.
JASPER C. NICHOLS, Sheriff.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 192-221.)

Extradition—fugitives from justice.

1. Independent proof, apart from the requisition papers, that the accused was a fugitive from justice, need not be demanded by the governor of the surrendering state before issuing his warrant of arrest in extradition proceedings.

Extradition—right to hearing before deportation.

2. Arranging and carrying out the arrest and deportation of the accused so as to leave him no opportunity to prove before the governor of the surrendering state that he was not a fugitive from justice, or to appeal to some court of that state to prevent his illegal deportation, does not violate the provisions of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, or U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597, relating to extradition proceedings.

Habeas corpus—in Federal courts—review of extradition proceedings.

3. A person held in actual custody by a state for trial in one of its courts under an indictment for a crime against its laws will not be released on habeas corpus by a Federal circuit court because the methods by which his personal presence in the state was secured may have violated the provisions of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, or U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, relating to extradition proceedings.

[No. 249.]

Argued October 10, 11, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Idaho to review a judgment refusing to discharge, on habeas corpus, a person held in custody to await a trial for murder, because of the methods by which his personal presence in the state was secured. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edmund F. Richardson and Clarence S. Darrow argued the cause, and, with Mr. John H. Murphy, filed a brief for appellant:

No man in this country is so high that he is above the law. No officer of the law may set that law at defiance with impunity. All the officers of the government, from the highest to the lowest, are creatures of the law and are bound to obey it.

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196-220, 27 L. ed. 171-182, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 1057, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

Jurisdiction of the subject-matter in a court is one thing; jurisdiction of a person in any wise related to that subject-matter is quite another.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.

A conspiracy is defined to be "the corrupt agreeing together of two or more persons to do, by concerted action, something unlawful, either as a means or an end."

2 Bishop, Crim. Law, § 171.

No provision of law exists for the extradition of one who is charged to have constructively committed an offense, in a state in which he was not present. The Constitution and the law guards even an offender in such a case as that against extradition.

State v. Hall, 115 N. C. 811, 28 L.R.A. 289, 44 Am. St. Rep. 501, 20 S. E. 729.

This arrest, and the jurisdiction over the person which attached by reason of the arrest, is in violation of the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which provides that no person shall be deprived of liberty without due process of law.

3 Words & Phrases Judicially Defined, pp. 2227 et seq.; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 104, 24 L. ed. 616, 619; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512-519, 29 L. ed. 463-465, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A.

NOTE.—As to what papers are necessary to obtain the surrender of a fugitive from another state—see note to Ex parte Hart, 28 L.R.A. 801.

As to who are fugitives from justice under extradition laws—see notes to Re Strauss, 63 C. C. A. 104; Cook v. Hart, 36 L. ed. U. S. 934, and State v. Hall, 28 L. R.A. 289.

As to abduction or wilfully bringing of criminal into jurisdiction as a defense to prosecution—see note to Kingen v. Kelley, 15 L.R.A. 177.

As to scope of review on habeas corpus to procure release of persons sought to be extradited—see notes to Bruce v. Rayner, 62 C. C. A. 506; and Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464.

265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627; People v. Adirondaek R. Co. 160 N. Y. 225, 54 N. E. 689; State v. Hammer, 116 Iowa, 284, 89 N. W. 1083; Jenkins v. Ballantyne, 8 Utah, 245, 16 L.R.A. 689, 30 Pac. 760.

The arrest and detention of these prisoners is in direct violation of clause 2 of § 2 of art. 4, of the Constitution of the United States, and § 5278 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), made in pursuance thereof.

Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66-110, 16 L. ed. 717-730; People ex rel. Corkran v. Hyatt, 172 N. Y. 176, 60 L.R.A. 774, 92 Am. St. Rep. 706, 64 N. E. 825, 188 U. S. 691-713, 47 L. ed. 657-662, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Munsey v. Clough, 196 U. S. 364, 49 L. ed. 515, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Tennessee v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 370, 36 Fed. 258.

No lawful thing founded upon a wrongful act can be supported.

Ilseley v. Nichols, 12 Pick. 270, 22 Am. Dec. 425; Luttin v. Benin, 11 Mod. 50.

The employment of any subterfuge, scheme, enterprise, pretense, or design by which defendant is brought into the state for the purpose of arresting him must fail, unless warranted by the laws of the land. This is familiar law. The question does not depend upon the honest conviction of the persons engaged in the project, but upon the legality of the act.

Smith v. Meyers, 1 Thomp. & C. 665; Re Lagrave, 45 How. Pr. 301; 2 Wharton, Confl. L. § 849 and note; Re Allen, 13 Blatchf. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 208; Hooper v. Lane, 6 H. L. Cas. 443; Hill v. Goodrich, 32 Conn. 588; Re Robinson, 29 Neb. 135, 8 L.R.A. 398, 26 Am. St. Rep. 378, 45 N. W. 267; Re Walker, 61 Neb. 803; Compton v. Wilder, 40 Ohio St. 130; Adrianee v. Lagrave, 59 N. Y. 110, 17 Am. Rep. 317; Browning v. Abrams, 51 How. Pr. 173; Kendall v. Aleshire, 28 Neb. 707, 26 Am. St. Rep. 367, 45 N. W. 167.

The only lawful method by which the bodies of these defendants could have been obtained within the jurisdiction of the state of Idaho was by virtue of § 5278 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, made under and pursuant to clause 2, § 2, of art. 4 of the Constitution.

Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 537, 37 L. ed. 549, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Re Cook, 49 Fed. 833.

In Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148, this court held that a defendant in extradition had the right to insist upon proof that he was within the demanding state at the time he is alleged to have committed a crime charged, and subsequently withdrew from her jurisdiction, so that he could not be reached by her criminal process.

The 14th Amendment forbids any arbitrary deprivation of liberty.

Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624-632, 34 L. ed. 796-799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262-273, 42 L. ed. 461-464, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

The question is one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the prisoners have the right to the independent judgment of the Federal courts upon the subject of their detention. The Federal courts have sometimes required the prisoner to await the action of the state courts, upon the theory that the state courts were as likely to administer the law as were the courts of the United States; and they have sometimes withheld relief on writs of habeas corpus, and required defendants, who were convicted, to sue out writs of error; but they have never denied the authority of the Federal courts in the premises.

Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 28 L. ed. 542, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Bruce v. Rayner, 62 C. C. A. 501, 124 Fed. 481; Ex parte Hart, 28 L.R.A. 801, 11 C. C. A. 165, 25 U. S. App. 22, 63 Fed. 249; Re Roberts, 24 Fed. 132; Ex parte Brown, 28 Fed. 653; Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 298; Ex parte Robb, 9 Sawy. 568, 19 Fed. 26; Re Doo Woon, 9 Sawy. 417, 18 Fed. 898; Ex parte McKean, 3 Hughes, 23, Fed. Cas. No. 8,848.

We are without any manner of remedy, in any way, shape, or form, except in this tribunal; and, under the circumstances of this case, the time to take jurisdiction is now. The circumstances warrant it, and the decisions of this court uphold it.

Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

We know that habeas corpus cannot usurp the functions of a writ of error, but habeas corpus is pre-eminently the writ on which to test jurisdiction, not error within jurisdiction. A fatal defect in jurisdiction itself is the question presented by this record.

Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 50 L. ed. 693, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 L. ed. 963, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; Re Wood (Wood v. Brush) 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738.

Whatever the usual rule may be, it has recently been held that special circumstances authorize a departure from it.

Re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 50 L. ed. 984, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602.

Mr. James H. Hawley argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. E. Borah, filed a brief for appellee:

There is no right of asylum in a sister state by one who commits a crime against the laws of a state, either while personally on its soil or while in a foreign jurisdiction, and acting through some other agency or medium.

Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 715, 32 L. ed. 288, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204; Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 543, 37 L. ed. 551, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Re Moore, 75 Fed. 824.

This court will not interfere to relieve persons who have been arrested and taken by violence from the territory of one state to that of another, where they are held under process legally issued from the courts of the latter state. The question of the applicability of this doctrine to a particular case is as much within the province of a state court as a question of common law or of the law of nations, as it is of the courts of the United States.

Mahon v. Justice, and Ker v. Illinois, supra.

The question as to how the accused person has come within the state wherein the crime was committed cannot be inquired into by the courts of such state. It is not a cause of exemption from prosecution for a crime that the accused was illegally arrested or unlawfully brought within the jurisdiction.

13 Enc. Law & Proc. p. 99; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 607; Church, Habeas Corpus, 461; Ex parte Ker, 18 Fed. 167; Ex parte Barker, 87 Ala. 4, 13 Am. St. Rep. 17, 6 So. 7; State v. Smith, 1 Bail. L. 283, 19 Am. Dec. 679; State v. Ross, 21 Iowa, 467; Dows's Case, 18 Pa. 37; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 36 L. ed. 934, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Re Johnson, 167 U. S. 120, 42 L. ed. 103, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735.

No case is here presented that can properly be said to come within the exception to the prohibition contained in § 753 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 592), or which will authorize the issuance of the writ by a United States court.

Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436-442, 444, 30 L. ed. 421-425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; State v. Brewster, 7 Vt. 118; Dows's Case, supra; Re Miles, 52 Vt. 609; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 707-712, 32 L. ed. 285-287, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204; Re Mahon, 34 Fed. 525.

There is no limitation or restriction upon the crime for which a man may be extradited in interstate extradition; that duty is equally imperative as to all crimes, and no right of return is provided for or necessarily implied.

2 Moore, Extradition, §§ 643, 644; New Jersey v. Noyes, Fed. Cas. No. 10,164; Ham v. State, 4 Tex. App. 645; Harland v. Washington, 3 Wash. Terr. 153, 13 Pac. 453; Dows's Case, supra; State ex rel. Brown v. Stewart, 60 Wis. 587, 50 Am. Rep. 383, 19 N. W. 429; Ex parte Barker, supra; William v. Weber, 1 Colo. App. 191, 28 Pac. 21; State v. Brewster, 7 Vt. 120; Adrian v. Lagrave, 59 N. Y. 110, 17 Am. Rep. 317; United States v. Caldwell, 8 Blatchf. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 14,707; United States v. Lawrence, 13 Blatchf. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 15,573; People v. Rowe, 4 Park. Crim. Rep. 253; Re Miles, supra; Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 32 L. ed. 283, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204.

The court will not inquire into the legality of arrest. That the accused is in court is sufficient to require him to answer the indictment against him.

12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 598; Ex parte Scott, 9 Barn. & C. 446; Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 442, 444, 30 L. ed. 421-425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; State v. Kealy, 89 Iowa, 94, 56 N. W. 283; State v. Patterson, 116 Mo. 505, 22 S. W. 696; Mahon v. Justice, State v. Smith, New Jersey v. Noyes, Ex parte Barker, State v. Ross, and Dows's Case, supra.

Irrespective of the methods pursued in securing the person wanted after the requisition has been honored, and the prisoner is within the jurisdiction of the demanding state, complaint comes too late when relief is asked for in the courts of the demanding state, questioning the regularity of the proceedings.

Mahon v. Justice, supra.

And, when that has happened, no Federal question remains.

Re Cook, 49 Fed. 841, 146 U. S. 183, 36 L. ed. 934, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The fact of the governor of either state having acted wrongfully or in collusion is not material.

People v. Pratt, 78 Cal. 349, 20 Pac. 731.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Idaho, refusing, upon habeas corpus, to discharge the appellant, who alleged that he was held in custody by the sheriff of Canyon county, in that state, in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

It appears that on the 12th day of February, 1906, a criminal complaint verified by the oath of the prosecuting attorney of that county and charging Pettibone with having murdered Frank Steunenberg at Caldwell, Idaho, on the 30th day of December, 1905, was filed in the office of the probate judge. Thereupon, a warrant of arrest based upon that complaint having been issued, application was made to the governor of Idaho for a requisition upon the governor of Colorado (in which state the accused was alleged then to be) for the arrest of Pettibone, and his delivery to the agent of Idaho, to be conveyed to the latter state and there dealt with in accordance with law. The papers on which the governor of Idaho based his requisition distinctly charged that Pettibone was in that state at the time Steunenberg was murdered and was a fugitive from its justice.

A requisition by the governor of Idaho was accordingly issued and was duly honored by the governor of Colorado, who issued a warrant commanding the arrest of Pettibone and his delivery to the authorized agent of Idaho, to be conveyed to the latter state. Pettibone was arrested under that warrant and carried to Idaho by its agent, and was there delivered by order of the probate judge into the custody of the [194] warden *of the state penitentiary, the jail of the county being deemed at that time an unfit place.

On the 23d day of February, 1906, Pettibone sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the supreme court of Idaho. The warden made a return, stating the circumstances under which the accused came into his custody, and also that the charge against Pettibone was then under investigation by the grand jury. To this return the accused made an answer embodying the same matters as were alleged in the application for the writ of habeas corpus, and charging, in substance, that his presence in Idaho had been procured by connivance, conspiracy, and fraud on the part of the executive officers of Idaho, and that his detention was in violation of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States and of the act of Congress relating to fugitives from justice.

Subsequently, March 7th, 1906, the grand jury returned an indictment against Pettibone, William D. Haywood, Charles H. Moyer, and John L. Simpkins, charging them with the murder of Steunenberg on the 30th of December, 1905, at Caldwell, Idaho. Having been arrested and being in custody under that indictment, the officer holding Pettibone made an amended return stating the fact of the above indictment, and that he was then held under a bench warrant based thereon.

At the hearing before the supreme court of the state the officers having Pettibone in custody moved to strike from the answer of the accused all allegations relating to the manner and method of obtaining his presence within the state. That motion was sustained March 12th, 1906, and the prisoner was remanded to await his trial under the above indictment. The supreme court of Idaho held the action of the governor of Colorado to be at least quasi judicial and, in effect, a determination that Pettibone was charged with the commission of a crime in the former state and was a fugitive from its justice; that, after the prisoner came within the jurisdiction of the demanding state, he could not raise in its courts the question whether he was or had been, as a matter of fact, a fugitive from *the justice [195] of that state; that the courts of Idaho had no jurisdiction to inquire into the acts or motives of the executive of the state delivering the prisoner; that "one who commits a crime against the laws of a state, whether committed by him while in person on its soil, or absent in a foreign jurisdiction, and acting through some other agency or medium, has no vested right of asylum in a sister state," and the fact "that a wrong is committed against him in the manner or method pursued in subjecting his person to the jurisdiction of the complaining state, and that such wrong is redressible either in the civil or criminal courts, can constitute no legal or just reason why he himself should not answer the charge against him when brought before the proper tribunal." Ex parte Moyer, 85 Pac. 897; Ex parte Pettibone, 85 Pac. 902.

From the judgment of the supreme court of Idaho a writ of error was prosecuted to this court. That case is No. 265 on the docket of the present term, but the record has not been printed. But the parties agree that the same questions are presented on this appeal as arise in that case, and as this case is one of urgency in the affairs of a state, we have acceded to the request that they may be argued and determined on this appeal.

On the 15th of March, 1906, after the final judgment in the supreme court of Idaho, Pettibone made application to the circuit court of the United States, sitting in Idaho, for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that he was restrained of his liberty by the sheriff of Canyon county, in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States. As was done in the supreme court of Idaho, the accused set out numerous facts and circumstances which, he contended, showed that his personal presence in Idaho was secured by fraud and connivance on the part of the executive officers and agents of both Idaho and Colorado, in violation of the constitutional and statutory provisions relating to fugitives from justice. Consequently, it was argued, the court in Idaho did not acquire jurisdiction over his person. The [196] officer having Pettibone in *custody made return to the writ that he then held the accused under the bench warrant issued against him. It was stipulated that the application for the writ of habeas corpus might be taken as his answer to the return. Subsequently, on motion, that answer was stricken out by the circuit court as immaterial, the writ of habeas corpus was quashed, and Pettibone was remanded to the custody of the state.

As the application for the writ of habeas corpus was, by stipulation of the parties, taken as the answer of the accused to the return of the officer holding him in custody, and as that answer was stricken out by the court below as immaterial, we must, on this appeal, regard as true all the facts sufficiently alleged in the application, which, in a legal sense, bear upon the question whether the detention of the accused by the state authorities was in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States.

That application is too lengthy to be incorporated at large in this opinion. It is sufficient to say that its allegations present the case of a conspiracy between the governors of Idaho and Colorado, and the respective officers and agents of those states, to have the accused taken from Colorado to Idaho under such circumstances and in such way as would deprive him, while in Colorado, of the privilege of invoking the jurisdiction of the courts there for his protection against wrongful deportation from the state, [201]—it being alleged that the governor *of Idaho, the prosecuting attorney of Canyon-county, and the private counsel who advised them, well knew all the time that “he was not in the state of Idaho on the 30th day of December, 1905, nor at any time near that date.” The application also alleged that the accused “is not and was not a fugitive from justice; that he was not present in the state of Idaho when the alleged crime was alleged to have been committed, nor for months prior thereto, nor thereafter, until brought into the state as aforesaid.”

In the forefront of this case is the fact that the appellant is held in actual custody for trial under an indictment in one of the courts of Idaho for the crime of murder, charged to have been committed in that state, against its laws, and it is the purpose of the state to try the question of his guilt or innocence of that charge.

Undoubtedly, the circuit court had jurisdiction to discharge the appellant from the custody of the state authorities if their exercise of jurisdiction over his person would be in violation of any rights secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States. But that court had a discretion as to the time and mode in which, by the exercise of such power, it would, by its process, obstruct or delay a criminal prosecution in the state court. The duty of a Federal court to interfere, on habeas corpus, for the protection of one alleged to be restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, must often be controlled by the special circumstances of the case; and unless in some emergency demanding prompt action, the party held in custody by a state, and seeking to be enlarged, will be left to stand his trial in the state court, which, it will be assumed, will enforce—as it has the power to do equally with a court of the United States (Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637, 28 L. ed. 542, 546, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544)—any right secured by the supreme law of the land. “When the state court,” this court has said, “shall have finally acted upon the case, the circuit court has still a discretion whether, under all the circumstances then existing, the accused if convicted, shall be *put to his [202] writ of error from the highest court of the state, or whether it will proceed, by writ of habeas corpus, summarily to determine whether the petitioner is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States.” Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 251-253, 29 L. ed. 868, 871, 872, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734. To the same effect are numerous cases in this court, among which may be named Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 29 L. ed. 994, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 848; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 93, 39 L. ed. 80, 82, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 192, 36 L. ed. 934, 939, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. ed. 639, 640, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 47 L. ed. 116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 549, 50 L. ed. 303, 304, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147. This rule, firmly established for the guidance of the courts of the United States, is applicable here, although it appears that the supreme court of Idaho has already decided some of the questions now raised. But the question of Pettibone’s guilt of the crime of having murdered Steunenberg has not, however, been finally determined, and cannot be except by a trial under the laws and in the courts of Idaho. If he should be acquitted by the jury, then no question will remain as to a violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States by the methods adopted to secure his personal presence within the state of Idaho.

The appellant, however, contends that the principle settled in Ex parte Royall and other like cases can have application only where the state has legally acquired jurisdiction over the person of the accused, and cannot apply when, as is alleged to be the case here, his presence in Idaho was obtained by fraud and by a violation of rights guaranteed by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Under such circumstances, it is contended, no jurisdiction could legally attach for the purpose of trying the accused under the indictment for murder.

In support of this view we have been referred to that clause of the Constitution of the United States providing that if "a person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime." Art. 4, § 2; *also, to § 5278 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), in which it is provided that "whenever the executive authority of any state or territory demands any person as a fugitive from justice, of the executive authority of any state or territory to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any state or territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state or territory from whence the person so charged has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the state or territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear. If no such agent appears within six months from the time of the arrest, the prisoner may be discharged. All costs or expenses incurred in the apprehending, securing, and transmitting such fugitive to the state or territory making such demand shall be paid by such state or territory."

Looking, first, at what was alleged to have occurred in the state of Colorado touching the arrest of the petitioner and his deportation from that state, we do not perceive that anything done there, however hastily or inconsiderately done, can be adjudged to be in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States. We pass by, both as immaterial and inappropriate, any consideration of the motives that induced the action of the governor of Colorado. This court will not inquire as to the motives which guided the chief magistrate of a state when executing the functions of his office. Manifestly, whatever authority may have been conferred upon the governor of Colorado by the Constitution or laws of his state, he was not required, indeed, was not authorized, by the Constitution or laws of the United States, to have the petitioner arrested, unless, within the meaning of such Constitution *and laws, he was a fugitive from the justice of Idaho. Therefore he would not have violated his duty if it had been made a condition of surrendering the petitioner that evidence be furnished that he was a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States. Upon the governor of Colorado rested the responsibility of determining, in some proper mode, what the fact was. But he was not obliged to demand proof of such fact by evidence apart from the requisition papers. As those papers showed that the accused was regularly charged by indictment with the crime of murder committed in Idaho, and was a fugitive from its justice, the governor of Colorado was entitled to accept such papers, coming, as they did, from the governor of another state, as prima facie sufficient for a warrant of arrest. His failure to require independent proof of the fact that petitioner was a fugitive from justice cannot be regarded as an infringement of any right of the petitioner under the Constitution or laws of the United States. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 652, 653, 29 L. ed. 250, 253, 254, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148. In Munsey v Clough, 196 U. S. 364, 372, 49 L. ed. 515, 516, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282, this court said that the issuing of a warrant of arrest by the governor of the surrendering state, "with or without a recital therein that the person demanded is a fugitive from justice, must be regarded as sufficient to justify the removal, until the presumption in favor of the legality and regularity of the warrant is overthrown by contrary proof in a legal proceeding to review the action of the governor. Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 95, 29 L. ed. 544, 549, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456." See also Re Keller, 36 Fed. 681, 686.

203 U. S.

But the petitioner contends that his arrest and deportation from Colorado was, by fraud and connivance, so arranged and carried out as to deprive him of an opportunity to prove, before the governor of that state, that he was not a fugitive from justice, as well as opportunity to appeal to some court in Colorado to prevent his illegal deportation from its territory. If we should assume, upon the present record, that the facts are as alleged, it is not perceived that they make a case of the *violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States. It is true, as contended by the petitioner, that if he was not a fugitive from justice, within the meaning of the Constitution, no warrant for his arrest could have been properly or legally issued by the governor of Colorado. It is equally true that, even after the issuing of such a warrant, before his deportation from Colorado, it was competent for a court, Federal or state, sitting in that state, to inquire whether he was, in fact, a fugitive from justice, and, if found not to be, to discharge him from the custody of the Idaho agent, and prevent his deportation from Colorado. Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 630, 28 L. ed. 542, 547, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ex parte Reggel, supra; Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 719, 47 L. ed. 657, 664, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Munsey v. Clough, 196 U. S. 364, 374, 49 L. ed. 515, 517, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282. But it was not shown by proof before the governor of Colorado that the petitioner, alleged in the requisition papers to be a fugitive from justice, was not one, nor was the jurisdiction of any court sitting in that state invoked to prevent his being taken out of the state and carried to Idaho. That he had no reasonable opportunity to present these facts before being taken from Colorado constitutes no legal reason why he should be discharged from the custody of the Idaho authorities. No obligation was imposed by the Constitution or laws of the United States upon the agent of Idaho to so time the arrest of the petitioner, and so conduct his deportation from Colorado, as to afford him a convenient opportunity, before some judicial tribunal sitting in Colorado, to test the question whether he was a fugitive from justice, and, as such, liable, under the act of Congress, to be conveyed to Idaho for trial there. In England, in the case of one arrested for the purpose of deporting him to another country, it is provided that there shall be no surrender of the accused to the demanding country until after the expiration of a specified time from the arrest, during which period the prisoner has an opportunity to institute habeas corpus proceedings. Extradition Act of 1870, 33 and 34 Vict. chap. 52, § 11; 2 Butler, Treaty-Making Power, § 436; 1 Moore, Extradition, 741, 742. There is no similar act of Congress [206] in respect of a person *arrested in one of the states of the Union as a fugitive from the justice of another state. The speediness, therefore, with which the Idaho agent removed the accused from Colorado, cannot be urged as a violation of a constitutional right, and constitutes no legal reason for discharging him from the custody of the state of Idaho.

We come now to inquire whether the petitioner was entitled to his discharge upon making proof in the circuit court of the United States, sitting in Idaho, that he was brought into that state as a fugitive from justice when he was not, in fact, such a fugitive. Of course, it cannot be contended that the circuit court, sitting in Idaho, could rightfully discharge the petitioner upon proof simply that he did not commit the crime of murder charged against him. His guilt or innocence of that charge is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Idaho state court. The constitutional and statutory provisions referred to were based upon the theory that, as between the states, the proper place for the inquiry into the question of the guilt or innocence of an alleged fugitive from justice is in the courts of the state where the offense is charged to have been committed. The question, therefore, in the court below, was not whether the accused was guilty or innocent, but whether the Idaho court could properly be prevented from proceeding in the trial of that issue, upon proof being made in the circuit court of the United States, sitting in that state, that the petitioner was not a fugitive from justice, and not liable, in virtue of the Constitution and laws of the United States, to arrest in Colorado under the warrant of its governor, and carried into Idaho. As the petitioner is within the jurisdiction of Idaho, and is held by its authorities for trial, are the particular methods by which he was brought within her limits at all material in the proceeding by habeas corpus?

It is contended by the state that this question was determined in its favor by the former decisions of this court. This is controverted by the petitioner, and we must therefore, and particularly because of the unusual character of this case and *the im-[207] portance of the questions involved, see what this court has heretofore adjudged.

In Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225, it appeared that at the trial in an Illinois court of a person charged with having committed a crime against the laws of that state, the accused sought, by plea in abatement, to defeat the jurisdiction of the court upon the ground that, in violation of law, he had been seized in Peru, and forcibly brought against his will into the United States, and delivered to the authorities of Illinois; all of which the accused contended was in violation, not only of due process of law, as guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, but of the treaty between the United States and Peru, negotiated in 1870, and proclaimed in 1874. One of the articles of that treaty bound the contracting countries, upon a requisition by either country, to deliver up to justice persons who, being accused or convicted of certain named crimes committed within the jurisdiction of the requiring party, should seek an asylum or should be found within the territories of the other, the fact of the commission being so established "as that the laws of the country in which the fugitive or the person so accused shall be found would justify his or her apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime had been there committed." 18 Stat. at L. 719, 720. The plea stated, among other things, that the defendant protested against his arrest, and was refused opportunity, from the time of his being seized in Peru until he was delivered to the authorities of Illinois, of communicating with any person, or seeking any advice or assistance, in regard to procuring his release by legal process or otherwise.

The court overruled the plea of abatement, and the trial in the state court proceeded, resulting in a verdict of guilty. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of Illinois, and this court affirmed, upon writ of error, the judgment of the latter court. It was held by the unanimous judgment of this court that, so far as any question of Federal right was involved, no error was committed by the state court; and that, notwithstanding the illegal methods pursued in bringing *the accused within the jurisdiction of Illinois, his trial in the state court did not involve a violation of the due process clause of the Constitution, nor any article in the treaty with Peru, although the case was a clear one "of kidnapping within the dominion of Peru, without any pretense of authority under the treaty or from the government of the United States." The principle upon which the judgment rested was that, when a criminal is brought, or is in fact within the jurisdiction and custody of a state, charged with a crime against its laws, the state may, so far as the Constitution and laws of the United States are concerned, proceed against him for that crime, and need not inquire as to the particular methods employed to bring him into the state. The case, the court said, "does not stand, when the party is in court, and required to plead to an indictment, as it would have stood upon a writ of habeas corpus in California, or in any state through which he was carried in the progress of this extradition, to test the authority by which he was held." In meeting the contention that the accused Ker, by virtue of the treaty with Peru, acquired by his residence a right of asylum, this court said: "There is no language in this treaty, or in any other treaty made by this country on the subject of extradition, of which we are aware, which says in terms that a party fleeing from the United States to escape punishment for crime becomes thereby entitled to an asylum in the country to which he has fled; indeed, the absurdity of such a proposition would at once prevent the making of a treaty of that kind. . . . It is idle, therefore, to claim that, either by express terms or by implication, there is given to a fugitive from justice in one of these countries any right to remain and reside in the other; and if the right of asylum means anything, it must mean this. The right of the government of Peru voluntarily to give a party in Ker's condition an asylum in that country is quite a different thing from the right in him to demand and insist upon security in such an asylum. The treaty, so far as it regulates the right of asylum at all, is intended to limit this right in the case of one who is proved to *be a criminal fleeing from justice[209] so that, on proper demand and proceedings had therein, the government of the country of the asylum shall deliver him up to the country where the crime was committed. And to this extent, and to this alone, the treaty does regulate or impose a restriction upon the right of the government of the country of the asylum to protect the criminal from removal therefrom. . . . We think it very clear, therefore, that, in invoking the jurisdiction of this court upon the ground that the prisoner was denied a right conferred upon him by a treaty of the United States, he has failed to establish the existence of any such right."

If Ker, by virtue of the treaty with Peru, and because of his forcible and illegal abduction from that country, did not acquire an exemption from the criminal process of the courts of Illinois, whose laws he had violated, it is difficult to see how Pettibone acquired, by virtue of the Constitution and laws of the United States, an exemption from prosecution by the state of Idaho, which has custody of his person.

An instructive case on this subject is Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 32 L. ed. 283, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204. The governor of Kentucky made a requisition upon the governor of West Virginia for Mahon, who was charged with the crime of murder in Kentucky, and was alleged to have fled from its jurisdiction and taken refuge in West Virginia. While the two governors were in correspondence on the subject, a body of armed men, without warrant or other legal process, arrested Mahon in West Virginia, and by force and against his will conveyed him out of West Virginia, and delivered him to the jailer of Pike county, Kentucky, in the courts of which he stood indicted for murder. Thereupon the governor of West Virginia, on behalf of that state, applied to the district court of the United States for the Kentucky district for a writ of habeas corpus and his return to the jurisdiction of West Virginia. This court, after observing that the states of the Union were not absolutely sovereign, and could not declare war or authorize reprisals on other states, and that their ability to prevent the forcible ab-

[210]duction of persons from *their territory consists solely in their power to punish all violations of their criminal laws committed within it, whether by their own citizens or by citizens of other states, said: "If such violators have escaped from the jurisdiction of the state invaded, their surrender can be secured upon proper demand on the executive of the state to which they have fled. The surrender of the fugitives in such cases to the state whose laws have been violated is the only aid provided by the laws of the United States for the punishment of depredations and violence committed in one state by intruders and lawless bands from another state. The offenses committed by such parties are against the state; and the laws of the United States merely provide the means by which their presence can be secured in case they have fled from its justice. No mode is provided by which a person unlawfully abducted from one state to another can be restored to the state from which he was taken, if held upon any process of law for offenses against the state to which he has been carried. If not thus held he can, like any other person wrongfully deprived of his liberty, obtain his release on habeas corpus. Whether Congress might not provide for the compulsory restoration to the state of parties wrongfully abducted from its territory upon application of the parties, or of the state, and whether such provision would not greatly tend to the public peace along the borders of the several states, are not matters for present consideration. It is sufficient now that no means for such redress through the courts of the United States have as yet been provided. The abduction of Mahon by Phillips and his aids was made, as appears from the return of the respondent to the writ, and from the findings of the court below, without any warrant or authority from the governor of West Virginia. It is true that Phillips was appointed by the governor of Kentucky as agent of the state to receive Mahon upon his surrender on the requisition; but no surrender having been made, the arrest of Mahon and his abduction from the state were lawless and indefensible acts, for which Phillips and his

[211]aid may justly be *punished under the laws of West Virginia. The process emanating from the governor of Kentucky furnished no ground for charging any complicity on the part of that state in the wrong done to the state of West Virginia." Again: "It is true, also, that the accused had the right, while in West Virginia, of insisting that he should not be surrendered to the governor of Kentucky by the governor of West Virginia, except in pursuance of the acts of Congress, and that he was entitled to release from any arrest in that state not made in accordance with them; but, having been subsequently arrested in Kentucky under the writs issued on the indictments against him, the question is not as to the validity of the proceeding in West Virginia, but as to the legality of his detention in Kentucky. There is no comity between the states by which a person held upon an indictment for a criminal offense in one state can be turned over to the authorities of another, though abducted from the latter. If there were any such comity, its enforcement would not be a matter within the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States. By comity nothing more is meant than that courtesy on the part of one state, by which within her territory the laws of another state are recognized and enforced, or another state is assisted in the execution of her laws. From its nature the courts of the United States cannot compel its exercise when it is refused; it is admissible only upon the consent of the state, and when consistent with her own interests and policy. Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519. 589, 10 L. ed. 274, 308; Story, Conf. Laws, § 30. The only question, therefore, presented for our determination, is whether a person indicted for a felony in one state, forcibly abducted from another state, and brought to the state where he was indicted, by parties acting without warrant or authority of law, is entitled, under the Constitution or laws of the United States, to release from detention under the indictment by reason of such forcible and unlawful abduction."

After a review of the authorities, including the case of Ker v. Illinois, above cited, the court concluded: "So, in this case, *it is [212] contended that, because, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, a fugitive from justice from one state to another can be surrendered to the state where the crime was committed, upon proper proceedings taken, he has the right of asylum in the state to which he has fled, unless removed in conformity with such proceedings, and that this right can be enforced in the courts of the United States. But the plain answer to this contention is, that the laws of the United States do not recognize any such right of asylum, as is here claimed on the part of a fugitive from justice in any state to which he has fled; nor have they, as already stated, made any provision for the return of parties who, by violence and without lawful authority, have been abducted from a state. There is, therefore, no authority in the courts of the United States to act upon any such alleged right. In Ker v. Illinois, the court said that the question of how far the forcible seizure of the defendant in another country, and his conveyance by violence, force, or fraud to this country could be made available to resist trial in the state court for the offense charged upon him, was one which it did not feel called upon to decide, for in that transaction it did not see that the Constitution, or laws, or treaties of the United States guaranteed to him any protection. So in this case we say that, whatever effect may be given by the state court to the illegal mode in which the defendant was brought from another state, no right secured under the Constitution or laws of the United States was violated by his arrest in Kentucky, and imprisonment there, upon the indictments found against him for murder in that state."

These principles determine the present case and require an affirmance of the judgment of the circuit court. It is true, the decision in the Mahon Case was by a divided court, but its authority is none the less controlling. The principle upon which it rests has been several times recognized and reaffirmed by this court, and is no longer to be questioned. It was held in Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 192, 36 L. ed. 934, 939, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40, that the cases of Ker v. Illinois and Mahon v. Justice established [213] these propositions: "1. *That this court will not interfere to relieve persons who have been arrested and taken by violence from the territory of one state to that of another, where they are held under process legally issued from the courts of the latter state. 2. That the question of the applicability of this doctrine to a particular case is as much within the province of a state court, as a question of common law or of the law of nations, as it is of the courts of the United States;" in Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 537, 543, 37 L. ed. 549, 551, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687, that it was settled in the Ker and Mahon Cases that, "except in the case of a fugitive surrendered by a foreign government, there is nothing in the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States which exempts an offender, brought before the courts of a state for an offense against its laws, from trial and punishment, even though brought from another state by unlawful violence, or by abuse of legal process;" and in Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 596, 48 L. ed. 575, 579, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372 (the same cases being referred to), that "if a person is brought within the jurisdiction of one state from another, or from a foreign country, by the unlawful use of force, which would render the officer liable to a civil action, or in a criminal proceeding, because of the forcible abduction, such fact would not prevent the trial of the person thus abducted in the state wherein he had committed an offense." See also Re Johnson, 167 U. S. 120, 127, 42 L. ed. 103, 105, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735, in which the court recognized the principle that when a party in a civil suit has, by some trick or device, been brought within the jurisdiction of a court, he may have the process served upon him set aside; but that a different rule prevails in criminal cases involving the public interests.

To the above citations we may add Re Moore, 75 Fed. 821, in which it appeared or was alleged that one accused of crime against the laws of a state, and in the custody of its authorities for trial, was brought back from another state as a fugitive from justice by means of an extradition warrant procured by false affidavits. In his application to the circuit court of the United States for a writ of habeas corpus the petitioner *stated facts and circumstances tending to [214] show that he was not a fugitive from justice. The application was dismissed. After stating that the executive warrant issued by the surrendering state had performed its office, and that the petitioner was not held in virtue of it, the court said: "His imprisonment is not illegal unless his extradition makes it so, and an illegal extradition is no greater violation of his rights of person than his forcible abduction. If a forcible abduction from another state and conveyance within the jurisdiction of the court holding him is no objection to his detention and trial for the offense charged, as held in Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 712, 32 L. ed. 287, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204, and in Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 437, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225, no more is the objection allowed if the abduction has been accomplished under the forms of law. The conclusion is the same in each case. The act complained of does not relate to the restraint from which the petitioner seeks to be relieved, but to the means by which he was brought within the jurisdiction of the court under whose process he is held. It is settled that a party is not excused from answering to the state whose laws he has violated because violence has been done him in bringing him within the state. Moreover, if any injury was done in this case in issuing the requisition upon the state of Washington without grounds therefor, the injury was not to the petitioner, but to that state whose jurisdiction was imposed upon by what was done. The United States do not recognize any right of asylum in the state where a party charged with a crime committed in another state is found, nor have they made any provision for the return of parties who, by violence and without lawful authority, have been abducted from a state, and, whatever effect may be given by a state court to the illegal mode in which a defendant is brought from another state, no right secured under the Constitution and laws of the United States is violated by his arrest and imprisonment for crimes committed in the state into which he is brought. Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 715, 32 L. ed. 288, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204."

The principle announced in the Mahon and [215] other cases above *cited was not a new one. It has been distinctly recognized in the courts of England and in many states of the Union. In Ex parte Scott (1829) 9 Barn. & C. 446, one accused of crime against the laws of England, and who was in custody for trial, sought to be discharged upon habeas corpus because she had been improperly apprehended in a foreign country. Lord Tenterden, Ch. J., said: "The question, therefore, is this: Whether, if a person charged with a crime is found in this country, it is the duty of the court to take care that such a party shall be amenable to justice, or whether we are to consider the circumstances under which she was brought here. I thought, and still continue to think, that we cannot inquire into them. If the act complained of were done against the law of the foreign country, that country might have vindicated its own law. If it gave her a right of action she may sue upon it." Some of the American cases, to the same general effect, are cited in Mahon v. Justice, namely: State v. Smith, 1 Bailey, 283, 19 Am. Dec. 679; State v. Brewster, 7 Vt. 118; State v. Ross, 21 Iowa, 467. See also Dow's Case, 18 Pa. 37; State v. Kealy, 89 Iowa, 94, 97, 56 N. W. 283; Ex parte Barker, 87 Ala. 4, 8, 13 Am. St. Rep. 17, 6 So. 7; People v. Pratt, 78 Cal. 345, 349, 20 Pac. 731; Church, Habeas Corpus, § 483, and authorities cited in notes, and note to Re Fetter, 57 Am. Dec. 389, 400.

It is said that the present case is distinguishable from the Mahon Case in the fact that the illegal abduction complained of in the latter was by persons who neither acted nor assumed to act under the authority of the state into the custody of whose authorities they delivered Mahon; whereas, in this case, it is alleged that Idaho secured the presence of Pettibone within its limits through a conspiracy on the part of its governor and other officers. This difference in the cases is not, we think, of any consequence as to the principle involved; for the question now is—and such was the fundamental question in Mahon's Case—whether a circuit court of the United States when asked, upon habeas corpus, to discharge a person held in actual custody by a state for [216] trial in one of its courts *under an indictment charging a crime against its laws, can properly take into account the methods whereby the state obtained such custody. That question was determined in the negative in the Ker and Mahon Cases. It was there adjudged that in such a case neither the Constitution nor laws of the United States entitled the person so held to be discharged from custody and allowed to depart from the state. If, as suggested, the application of these principles may be attended by mischievous consequences, involving the personal safety of individuals within the limits of the respective states, the remedy is with the lawmaking department of the government. Congress has long been informed by judicial decisions as to the state of the law upon this general subject.

In this connection it may be well to say that we have not overlooked the allegation that the governor and other officers of Idaho well knew at the time the requisition was made upon the governor of Colorado, that Pettibone was not in Idaho on December 30th, 1905, nor at any time near that date, and had the purpose in all they did to evade the constitutional and statutory provisions relating to fugitives from justice. To say nothing of the impropriety of any such facts being made the subject of judicial inquiry in a Federal court, the issue thus attempted to be presented was wholly immaterial. Even were it conceded, for the purposes of this case, that the governor of Idaho wrongfully issued his requisition, and that the governor of Colorado erred in honoring it and in issuing his warrant of arrest, the vital fact remains that Pettibone is held by Idaho in actual custody for trial under an indictment charging him with crime against its laws, and he seeks the aid of the circuit court to relieve him from custody, so that he may leave that state and thereby defeat the prosecution against him without a trial. In the present case it is not necessary to go behind the indictment and inquire as to how it happened that he came within reach of the the process of the Idaho court in which the indictment is pending. And any investigation as to the motives which induced the action taken by *the governors of Idaho and Colo-[217] rado would, as already suggested, be improper as well as irrelevant to the real question to be now determined. It must be conclusively presumed that those officers proceeded throughout this affair with no evil purpose and with no other motive than to enforce the law.

We perceive no error in the action of the Circuit Court; and its final order is affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I am constrained to dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court. The principle announced, as I understand it, is that "a circuit court of the United States, when asked upon habeas corpus, to discharge a person held in actual custody by a state for trial in one of its courts under an indictment charging a crime against its laws, cannot properly take into account the methods whereby the state obtained such custody." In other words, and to illuminate the principle by the light of the facts in this case (facts, I mean, as alleged, and which we must assume to be true for the purpose of our discussion), that the officers of one state may falsely represent that a person was personally present in the state and committed a crime there, and had fled from its justice, may arrest such person and take him from another state, the officers of the latter knowing of the false accusation, and conniving in and aiding its purpose, thereby depriving him of an opportunity to appeal to the courts, and that such person cannot invoke the rights guaranteed to him by the Constitution and statutes of the United States in the state to which he is taken. And this, it is said, is supported by the cases of Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225, and Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 32 L. ed. 283, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204. These cases, extreme as they are, do not justify, in my judgment, the conclusion deduced from them. In neither case was the state the actor in the wrongs that brought within its confines the accused person. In the case at bar, the states, [218] through their officers, are the *offenders. They, by an illegal exertion of power, deprived the accused of a constitutional right. The distinction is important to be observed. It finds expression in Mahon v. Justice. But it does not need emphasizing. Kidnapping is a crime, pure and simple. It is difficult to accomplish; hazardous at every step. All of the officers of the law are supposed to be on guard against it. All of the officers of the law may be invoked against it. But how is it when the law becomes the kidnapper? When the officers of the law, using its forms, and exerting its power, become abductors? This is not a distinction without a difference,—another form of the crime of kidnapping, distinguished only from that committed by an individual by circumstances. If a state may say to one within her borders and upon whom her process is served, "I will not inquire how you came here; I must execute my laws and remit you to proceedings against those who have wronged you," may she so plead against her own offenses? May she claim that by mere physical presence within her borders, an accused person is, within her jurisdiction, denuded of his constitutional rights, though he has been brought there by her violence? And constitutional rights the accused in this case certainly did have, and valuable ones. The foundation of extradition between the states is that the accused should be a fugitive from justice from the demanding state, and he may challenge the fact by habeas corpus immediately upon his arrest. If he refute the fact he cannot be removed. Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456. And the right to resist removal is not a right of asylum. To call it so in the state where the accused is is misleading. It is the right to be free from molestation. It is the right of personal liberty in its most complete sense. And this right was vindicated in Hyatt v. New York, and the fiction of a constructive presence in a state and a constructive flight from a constructive presence, rejected. This decision illustrates at once the value of the right and the value of the means to enforce the right. It is to be hoped that our criminal jurisprudence will not need for its efficient administration the *destruction of either the [219] right or the means to enforce it. The decision in the case at bar, as I view it, brings us perilously near both results. Is this exaggeration? What are the facts in the case at bar as alleged in the petition, and which it is conceded must be assumed to be true? The complaint, which was the foundation of the extradition proceedings, charged against the accused the crime of murder on the 30th of December, 1905, at Caldwell, in the county of Canyon, state of Idaho, by killing one Frank Steunenberg, by throwing an explosive bomb at and against his person. The accused avers in his petition that he had not been "in the state of Idaho, in any way, shape, or form, for a period of more than ten years" prior to the acts of which he complained, and that the governor of Idaho knew accused had not been in the state the day the murder was committed, "nor at any time near that day." A conspiracy is alleged between the governor of the state of Idaho and his advisers, and that the governor of the state of Colorado took part in the conspiracy, the purpose of which was "to avoid the Constitution of the United States and the act of Congress made in pursuance thereof, and to prevent the accused from asserting his constitutional right under clause 2, § 2, of article 4, of the Constitution of the United States and the act made pursuant thereof." The manner in which the alleged conspiracy had been executed was set out in detail. It was in effect that the agent of the state of Idaho arrived in Denver, Thursday, February 15, 1906, but it was agreed between him and the officers of Colorado that the arrest of the accused should not be made until some time in the night of Saturday, after business hours,—after the courts had closed and judges and lawyers had departed to their homes; that the arrest should be kept a secret, and the body of the accused should be clandestinely hurried out of the state of Colorado with all possible speed, without the knowledge of his friends or his counsel; that he was at the usual place of business during Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, but no attempt was made to arrest him until 11:30 o'clock P. M. Saturday, *when his house was surrounded and he arrested. Moyer was arrested under the same circumstances at 8:45, and he and accused "thrown into the county jail of the city and county of Denver." It is further alleged that, in pursuance of the conspiracy, between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock on Sunday morning, February 18, the officers of the state and "certain armed guards, being a part of the forces of the militia of the state of Colorado," provided a special train for the purpose of forcibly removing him from the state of Colorado, and between said hours he was forcibly placed on said train and removed with all possible speed to the state of Idaho; that prior to his removal, and at all times after his incarceration in the jail at Denver, he requested to be allowed to communicate with his friends and his counsel and his family, and the privilege was absolutely denied him. The train, it is alleged, made no stop at any considerable station, but proceeded at great and unusual speed; and that he was accompanied by and surrounded with armed guards, members of the state militia of Colorado, under the orders and directions of the adjutant general of the state.

I submit that the facts in this case are different in kind and transcend in consequences those in the cases of Ker v. Illinois and Mahon v. Justice, and differ from and transcend them as the power of a state transcends the power of an individual. No individual or individuals could have accomplished what the power of the two states accomplished; no individual or individuals could have commanded the means and success; could have made two arrests of prominent citizens by invading their homes; could have commanded the resources of jails, armed guards, and special trains; could have successfully timed all acts to prevent inquiry and judicial interference.

The accused, as soon as he could have done so, submitted his rights to the consideration of the courts. He could not have done so in Colorado, he could not have done so on the way from Colorado. At the first instant that the state of Idaho relaxed its restraint-pus successively of the supreme court of the state and of the circuit court of the United States. He should not have been dismissed from court, and the action of the circuit court in so doing should be reversed.

[221]ing power, he invoked the aid of *habeas cor-
160

I also dissent in Nos. 250, 251, 265, 266, and 267.

CHARLES H. MOYER, Appt.,

v.

JASPER C. NICHOLS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 221, 222.)

This case is governed by the decision in Pettibone v. Nichols, ante, 148.

[No. 250.]

Argued October 10, 11, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Idaho to review a judgment refusing to discharge, on habeas corpus, a person held in custody to await a trial for murder, because of the methods by which his personal presence in the state was secured. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edmund F. Richardson and Clarence S. Darrow argued the cause, and, with Mr. John H. Murphy, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. James H. Hawley argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. E. Borah, filed a brief for appellee.

For their contentions see their briefs as reported in Pettibone v. Nichols, ante, 148.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case does not differ, in principle or in its facts, from Pettibone v. Nichols, just decided. Moyer was also charged with the murder of Stenmenberg, and was arrested in Colorado, upon the warrant of the governor of that state, and taken to Idaho, and delivered to its authorities. He was embraced in the same indictment with Pettibone, and was held in custody for trial under that indictment. He sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the supreme court of Idaho, but the writ was *dismissed by that court (Ex[222] parte Moyer, 85 Pac. 897), and a writ of error has been prosecuted to this court. That is case No. 266 on our present docket. He then sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the circuit court of the United States, and his discharge being refused by the court, he prosecuted the present appeal.

For the reason stated in Pettibone's Case, the final order is affirmed.

The final order of the circuit court of the
203 U. S.

United States for Idaho, in Haywood v. Nichols, No. 251, on appeal, is affirmed on the authority of Pettibone v. Nichols, 203 U. S. 192, ante, 148, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, from which, as to the facts or the questions involved, it does not differ. The orders in Pettibone v. Whitney, No. 265, Morey v. Whitney, No. 266, and Haywood v. Whitney, No. 267,—each of which cases is here upon writ of error to the supreme court of Idaho, involves the same question as those determined in Pettibone v. Nichols, and by agreement is to depend upon the judgment in that case,—must also be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

ARTHUR E. APPLEYARD, Appt.,
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHU-SETTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 222-232.)

Extradition—fugitives from justice.

1. The belief of the accused, when leaving the demanding state, that he had not committed any crime against the laws of that state, does not prevent his being a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the provision of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, and U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), relating to extradition proceedings.

Extradition—fugitives from justice.

2. To be a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the provisions of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2, and U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, relating to extradition proceedings, it is only necessary that the accused, having been in the demanding state when the crime was committed, thereafter leave that state and be found within the territory of another.

[No. 115.]

Submitted November 16, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment discharging a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under an order of arrest in extradition proceedings. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Benjamin S. Minor submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. Fred H. Williams was on the brief:

The appellant was not a fugitive from justice.

NOTE.—As to who are fugitives from justice under extradition laws—see notes to Re Strauss, 63 C. C. A. 104; Cook v. Hart, 36 L. ed. U. S. 934; and State v. Hall, 28 L.R.A. 289.

Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; United States v. O'Brian, 3 Dill. 381, Fed. Cas. No. 15,908; 24 Am. Jur. 226; 6 Pa. L. J. 418; Re Tod, 12 S. Dak. 386, 47 L.R.A. 566, 76 Am. St. Rep. 616, 81 N. W. 637.

Mr. Dana Malone submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Frederic B. Greenhalge was on the brief:

Whether or not Appleyard was a fugitive from justice is a pure question of fact.

Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 95, 29 L. ed. 544, 549, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 651, 29 L. ed. 250, 253, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148. See also Hyatt v. Cockran, 188 U. S. 691, 709, 47 L. ed. 657, 660, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

This court will not revise the findings of fact of the trial court if there is evidence adequate to justify them.

Zeckendorf v. Johnson, 123 U. S. 617, 31 L. ed. 277, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Hewitt v. Campbell, 109 U. S. 103, 27 L. ed. 871, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Jeffries v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 110 U. S. 305, 28 L. ed. 156, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.

Conscious guilt, or an intent to avoid the consequences of a known crime or a certain prosecution, is not an element which is essential to constitute a flight from justice within the meaning of the Constitution and statutes of the United States.

Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 97, 29 L. ed. 544, 549, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Re White, 5 C. C. A. 29, 14 U. S. App. 87, 55 Fed. 54; Re Bloch, 87 Fed. 981.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant was indicted in the supreme court of New York, county of Erie, for the crime of grand larceny, first degree, alleged to have been committed in that county on the 18th day of May, 1904.

Upon that indictment a warrant of arrest was issued, but the accused was not arrested, for the reason that he was not found within the state.

Then the district attorney of Erie county applied to the governor of New York for a requisition upon the governor of Massachusetts for Appleyard as a fugitive from justice. The application was based upon the above indictment and numerous accompanying affidavits, stating, among other things, that the accused was then in Massachusetts. A requisition was accordingly made upon the governor of that commonwealth for the apprehension of Appleyard, and his delivery to a named agent of New York, who was authorized to receive and convey him to the latter state, to be there dealt with according to law. With that requisition went properly authenticated copies of all the papers which had been submitted to the governor of New York by the district attorney of Erie county.

The governor of Massachusetts received the requisition, and, pursuant to the statutes of that commonwealth, referred it to the attorney general for examination and report. Giving the accused full opportunity [224] to be heard and to introduce *evidence, of which he availed himself, that officer examined the case and reported that the requisition was in regular and proper form and that there was no sufficient reason why it should not be honored. The governor thereupon issued a warrant for the arrest of Appleyard and his delivery to the agent of New York, to be taken to that state, the officer who should execute the warrant being required to give the accused such opportunity to sue out a writ of habeas corpus as was prescribed by the laws of Massachusetts in such cases. Appleyard, having been arrested, applied for a writ of habeas corpus to the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. This fact is stated in the return of the officer holding the accused, and is not denied. That court, after hearing an argument, denied the application, and remanded the petitioner to the custody of the agent of New York, to be held in accordance with the warrant issued by the governor of Massachusetts.

The accused then applied to the circuit court of the United States for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that the warrant of the governor of Massachusetts and the order for his delivery to the agent of New York were issued without authority of law, and contrary to the Constitution and laws, as well of the United States as of Massachusetts, and "especially contrary to § 2, article 4, of the Constitution of the United States, and of § 5278 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), in that your petitioner is not a fugitive from justice." The writ was issued and a return was made of the above facts.

At the hearing in the circuit court the accused requested a ruling that, on the evidence, it did not appear that, within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, he was a fugitive from justice, and, also, that he should be discharged from custody unless it appeared positively, by a preponderance of proof, that he "consciously fled from justice when he left the state of New York." Those requests were denied. But the court granted a request that the finding by the governor of Massachusetts as a fact that the accused was a fugitive from justice was not conclusive. The court refused *to find, as facts, that the [225] acts of Appleyard did not constitute a crime under the laws of New York; that no crime was committed by him in that state; and that Appleyard was not in New York on May 18th, 1904, the date of the alleged crime. It consequently discharged the writ of habeas corpus. From that order the present appeal was prosecuted.

It cannot be said that the appellant has not had ample opportunity to test the question whether his detention was in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States. He has had three hearings upon that question; first, before the executive authorities of Massachusetts, then before the supreme judicial court of that commonwealth, and finally before the circuit court of the United States. Upon each occasion he insisted that, within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, he could not be regarded as a fugitive from justice. The decision at each hearing was adverse to that contention, and, unless this court reverses the judgment of the circuit court, he must stand his trial upon the charge that he committed a crime against the laws of New York. In view of the history of this case from the time of the demand upon the governor of Massachusetts for the surrender of the appellant, this court should hesitate, by disturbing the ruling below, to further delay the administration by New York of its criminal laws through its own judicial tribunals. Regularly, the accused should have prosecuted a writ of error to the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts before *invoking the jurisdiction of [226] the circuit court of the United States upon habeas corpus. Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 251-253, 29 L. ed. 868, 871, 872, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. ed. 124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 502, 45 L. ed. 639, 640, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 47 L. ed. 116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89. But, in view of the long time which has elapsed since the governor of New York made his requisition for the surrender of the accused, and as the case is one which the public interests demand should be speedily determined, we think the ends of justice will be promoted if we proceed to a final judgment on this appeal.

Upon a careful scrutiny of the record we discover no ground for the assertion that the detention of the appellant is in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States. The crime with which he is charged is alleged in the indictment to have been committed at Buffalo, New York, on May 18th, 1904. It is, we think, abundantly established by the evidence that he was personally present in that city on that day, and that thereafter he left New York, although there was some evidence to the effect that on the particular day named he was not in the state. In his own affidavit, submitted and accepted as evidence, the accused specified several days when he was in Buffalo, prior to and subsequent to May 18th, 1904, but, as stated by the attorney general of Massachusetts in his report to the governor of that commonwealth, there was in that affidavit no statement directly denying that he was in New York at the time and place indicated in the indictment.

But the appellant contended below, as he does here, that he had no belief when leaving New York at any time that he had violated its criminal laws, and therefore, within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, he could not be deemed a fugitive from its justice. This contention cannot be sustained; indeed, it could not be sustained without materially impairing the efficacy of the constitutional and statutory provisions relating to fugitives from justice. An alleged fugitive may believe that he has not committed any crime against the laws of [227] the state in which he is indicted, *and yet, according to the laws of such state, as administered by its judicial tribunals, he may have done so, and his belief or want of belief may be without foundation in law. It is the province of the courts of New York to declare what its laws are, and to determine whether particular acts on the part of an alleged offender constitute a crime under such laws. The constitutional provision that a person charged with crime against the laws of a state, and who flees from its justice, must be delivered up on proper demand, is sufficiently comprehensive to embrace any offense, whatever its nature, which the state, consistently with the Constitution and laws of the United States, may have made a crime against its laws. Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 69, 16 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 650, 29 L. ed. 250, 252, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148. So that the simple inquiry must be whether the person whose surrender is demanded is in fact a fugitive from justice, not whether he consciously fled from justice in order to avoid prosecution for the crime with which he is charged by the demanding state. A person charged by indictment or by affidavit before a magistrate with the commission within a state of a crime covered by its laws, and who, after the date of the commission of such crime, leaves the state,—no matter for what purpose or with what motive, nor under what belief,—becomes, from the time of such leaving, and within the meaning of the Constitution and the laws of the United States, a fugitive from justice, and if found in another state must be delivered up by the governor of such state to the state whose laws are alleged to have been violated, on the production of such indictment or affidavit, certified as authentic by the governor of the state from which the accused departed. Such is the command of the supreme law of the land, which may not be disregarded by any state. The constitutional provision relating to fugitives from justice, as the history of its adoption will show, is in the nature of a treaty stipulation entered into for the purpose of securing a prompt and efficient administration of the criminal laws of the several states,—an object of the first concern to the people of the entire country, *and which each state is bound, in fidelity to [228] the Constitution, to recognize. A faithful, vigorous enforcement of that stipulation is vital to the harmony and welfare of the states. And while a state should take care, within the limits of the law, that the rights of its people are protected against illegal action, the judicial authorities of the Union should equally take care that the provisions of the Constitution be not so narrowly interpreted as to enable offenders against the laws of a state to find a permanent asylum in the territory of another state.

In Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 95, 97, 29 L. ed. 544, 549, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291, this court said that the act of Congress, § 5278 of the Revised Statutes, made it the duty of the executive authority of the state in which is found a person charged with crime against the laws of another state, and who has fled from its justice, “to cause the arrest of the alleged fugitive from justice whenever the executive authority of any state demands such person as a fugitive from justice, and produces a copy of an indictment found, or affidavit made before a magistrate of any state, charging the person demanded with having committed a crime therein, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state from whence the person so charged has fled. It must appear, therefore, to the governor of the state to whom such a demand is presented, before he can lawfully comply with it, first, that the person demanded is substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the state from whose justice he is alleged to have fled, by an indictment or an affidavit, certified as authentic by the governor of the state making the demand; and, second, that the person demanded is a fugitive from the justice of the state the executive authority of which makes the demand. The first of these prerequisites is a question of law, and is always open upon the face of the papers to judicial inquiry, on an application for a discharge under a writ of habeas corpus. The second is a question of fact, which the governor of the state upon whom the demand is made must decide, upon such evidence as he may deem satisfactory. How [229] far his decision may be *reviewed judicially in proceedings in habeas corpus, or whether it is not conclusive, are questions not settled by harmonious judicial decisions, nor by any authoritative judgment of this court. It is conceded that the determination of the fact by the executive of the state in issuing his warrant of arrest, upon a demand made on that ground, whether the writ contains a recital of an express finding to that effect or not, must be regarded as sufficient to justify the removal until the presumption in its favor is overthrown by contrary proof. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148."

Replying to the suggestion, in that case, that the fugitive was not within the demanding state subsequent to the finding of the indictment, the court further said: "The appellant in his affidavit does not deny that he was in the state of New York about the date of the day laid in the indictment when the offense is alleged to have been committed, and states, by way of inference only, that he was not in that state on that very day; and the fact that he has not been within the state since the finding of the indictment is irrelevant and immaterial. To be a fugitive from justice, in the sense of the act of Congress regulating the subject under consideration, it is not necessary that the party charged should have left the state in which the crime is alleged to have been committed, after an indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun, but simply that having within a state committed that which by its laws constitutes a crime, when he is sought to be subjected to its criminal process to answer for his offense, he has left its jurisdiction and is found within the territory of another." To the same effect are Ex parte Brown, 28 Fed. 653, 655; Re White, 5 C. C. A. 29, 14 U. S. App. 87, 55 Fed. 54, 57; Re Bloch, 87 Fed. 981, 983. It is suggested that Roberts v. Reilly was substantially modified in Streep v. United States, 160 U. S. 128, 134, 40 L. ed. 365, 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, in which the court had occasion to construe § 1045 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 726). But this is an error. Interpreting the words "fleeing from justice" as found in that section, the court expressly held that these words must receive [230] *the same construction as was given in Roberts v. Reilly to like words in § 5278 of the Revised Statutes, the inquiry in that case being whether the accused was a fugitive from justice.

In support of his contention, the appellant refers to Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456. That was the case of an arrest in New York, under the warrant of the governor of that state, of an alleged fugitive from the justice of Tennessee, in which state he stood charged by indictment with crime committed in that state. This court said (p. 719, L. ed. p. 664, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 462) that as the alleged fugitive "showed, without contradiction, and upon conceded facts, that he was not within the state of Tennessee at the times stated in the indictments found in the Tennessee court, nor at any time when the acts were, if ever, committed, he was not a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the Federal statute upon that subject, and upon these facts the warrant of the governor of the state of New York was improperly issued, and the judgment of the court of appeals of the state of New York, discharging the relator from imprisonment by reason of such warrant, must be affirmed." The present case is a wholly different one; for here the presumption arising from the recitals in the warrant of arrest in favor of its validity was not everthrown by the proof; on the contrary, it appeared, by a preponderance of evidence, that the accused was in the state of New York when the alleged crime was committed.

Similar views to those expressed in Roberts v. Reilly have been expressed by state courts. In Kingsbury's Case, 106 Mass. 223, 227, 228, the contention of the fugitive from justice was that, as she went into the demanding state and returned to her home in the other state before the alleged crime was known, she could not be deemed to have fled from justice. But the court said: "The material facts are, that the prisoner is charged with a crime in the manner prescribed, and has gone beyond the jurisdiction of the state, so that there has been no reasonable opportunity to prosecute him after the facts were known. The fact in this case, that she returned to her permanent home, cannot be material. . . . It is sufficient *that the [231] crime of larceny has been properly charged, and that the prisoner is a fugitive, and a requisition has been properly made." In State ex rel. Burner v. Richter, 37 Minn. 436, 438, 35 N. W. 9, the contention was that to constitute a fugitive from justice a person must have left the state where the crime was committed for the purpose of escaping the legal consequences of his crime. Referring to Roberts v. Reilly, above cited, as authoritative and binding, and as in accordance with its own views, the supreme court of Minnesota well said: "The sole purpose of this statute, and of the constitutional provision which it was designed to carry into effect, was to secure the return of persons who had committed crime within one state, and had left it before answering the demands of justice. The important thing is not their purpose in leaving, but the fact that they had left, and hence were beyond the reach of the process of the state where the crime was committed. Whether the motive for leaving was to escape prosecution or something else, their return to answer the charges against them is equally within the spirit and purpose of the statute; and the simple fact that they are not within the state to answer its criminal process, when required, renders them, in legal intentment, fugitives from justice, regardless of their purpose in leaving." In Re Voorhees, 32 N. J. L. 141, 150, the court said: "A person who commits a crime within a state, and withdraws himself from such jurisdiction without waiting to abide the consequences of such act, must be regarded as a fugitive from the justice of the state whose laws he has infringed. Any other construction would not only be inconsistent with good sense and with the obvious import of the word to be interpreted in the context in which it stands, but would likewise destroy, for most practical purposes, the efficacy of the entire constitutional provision." In Ex parte Swearingen, 13 S. C. 74, 80, the court held that the terms "fugitive from justice" "were intended to embrace not only a case where a party, after committing a crime, actually flees, in the literal sense of that term, from the state where such crime was committed, [232] but also a case where *a citizen of one state, who, within the territorial limits of another state, commits a crime, and then simply returns to his own home. The object of the Constitution was to enable a state whose laws had been violated, to secure the arrest of the person charged with such violation, even though such person might be beyond the reach of the ordinary process of such state." In Re Mohr, 73 Ala. 503, 512, 49 Am. Rep. 63, the court, referring to the words in the Constitution, "who shall flee from justice and be found in another state," said: "There is a difference of opinion as to what must be the exact nature of this flight on the part of the criminal, but the better view, perhaps, is that any person is a fugitive within the purview of the Constitution, 'who goes into a state, commits a crime, and then returns home.' " In Hibler v. State, 43 Tex. 197, 201, the court said: "The words 'fugitive from justice' as used in this connection, must not be understood in a literal sense, but in reference to the subject-matter, considering the general object of the Constitution and laws of the United States in relation thereto. A person who commits a crime in one state, for which he is indicted, and departs therefrom, and is found in another state, may well be regarded as a fugitive from justice in the sense in which it is here used."

Referring to the opinion in Pettibone v. Nichols (just decided) 203 U. S. 192 ante, 148, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, for a further discussion of the general subject, and perceiving no error in the action of the Circuit Court, its final order is affirmed.

*ANN FRANCIS, Plff. in Err., [233]

v.

PETER J. FRANCIS, William Francis, and Frank Francis.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 233-242.)

Indians—treaty as grant.

1. A title in fee may pass under a treaty with the Indians without the aid of an act of Congress, and without any patent from the United States.

Courts—following decisions of state courts.

2. Decisions of the courts of a state respecting the title acquired by individual Indians under the treaty of September 24, 1819, with the Chippewa Nation, to the lands therein reserved for their use, will not be disturbed by the Supreme Court of the United States, where they have become a rule of property, and do not clearly involve a misinterpretation of the words of the treaty.

Indians—treaty as grant.

3. An alienable title in fee simple which could not be affected by restrictions, in a subsequent patent, upon the power of alienation, passed under the reservation of 640 acres of land for the use of the children of Bokowtonden and their heirs, made by the treaty of September 24, 1819, with the Chippewa Nation, for the cession of Indian lands to the United States.

[No. 8.]

Submitted October 10, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Bay County, in that state, in favor of defendants in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

See same case below, 136 Mich. 288, 99 N. W. 14.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry M. Duffield and James Van Kleeck submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Thomas E. Webster was on the brief.

Mr. Nathaniel T. Crutchfield also submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. James Van Kleeck was on the brief.

Mr. Chester L. Collins submitted the cause for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This action of ejectment was brought to recover the possession of certain lands in Bay county, Michigan, which the plaintiff, Ann Francis, claims as tenant for her own life, and which are thus described in the declaration: "The east half, the Bokowtonden reserve, excepting land heretofore owned and occupied by F. A. Kaiser, and 10 acres heretofore owned and occupied by Edward McGuiness, being in Township Fourteen, north range four east, and being a part of the Bokowtonden reserve, conveyed by the United States to the children of Bokowtonden and their heirs, by patent, dated November 6th, A. D. 1827."

[237] The defendants pleaded the general issue, giving notice that they would show that for more than twenty years next preceding the commencement of this action they and their grantors had been in open, notorious, exclusive, and adverse possession *and occupancy of the lands in question under claim and color of title.

At the conclusion of the evidence the jury, by direction of the court, returned a verdict for the defendants, upon which judgment was rendered. That judgment was affirmed, upon writ of error, by the supreme court of Michigan.

By the treaty of September 24th, 1819, made at Saginaw in the territory of Michigan, and proclaimed March 25th, 1820, between the United States and the Chippewa Nation of Indians, the lands comprehended within certain boundaries were forever ceded to the United States. But from that cession certain tracts were reserved for the use of the Chippewa Nation of Indians. And by article 3 of the treaty it was provided that "there shall be reserved, for the use of each of the persons hereinafter mentioned and their heirs, which persons are all Indians by descent, the following tracts of land: . . . For the use of the children of Bokowtonden, six hundred and forty acres, on the Kawkawling river." 7 Stat. at L. 203.

Subsequently, November 6th, 1827, a patent was signed by President Adams. It purported to have been issued pursuant to that treaty, for a tract of 640 acres on Kawkawling river, described by metes and bounds, "unto the said children of Bokowtonden, and their heirs forever," the patent containing these words: "But never to be conveyed by them or their heirs without the consent and permission of the President of the United States."

The particular land here in question is a part of the 640 acres reserved by the above treaty for the use of the children of Bokowtonden and their heirs, and embraced by the patent of 1827. What rights were acquired, under and by virtue of the treaty, by those children? In Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 8, 21, 44 L. ed. 49, 52, 57, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, 4, 9, where one of the questions was as to the nature of the title that passed under an Indian treaty ceding lands to the United States, and which required a certain number of acres to be set apart from the ceded lands *for a named Indian chief, this court said: [238] "Was it a mere right of occupancy, with no power to convey the land except to the United States or by their consent? Or was it substantially a title in fee simple, with full power of alienation? Undoubtedly, the right of the Indian nations or tribes to their lands within the United States was a right of possession or occupancy only; the ultimate title in fee in those lands was in the United States; and the Indian title could not be conveyed by the Indians to anyone but the United States, without the consent of the United States."—citing Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 5 L. ed. 681; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 17, 8 L. ed. 25, 31; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 544, 8 L. ed. 483, 495; Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 463, 16 L. ed. 584, 586; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. ed. 210; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 381, 30 L. ed. 228, 230, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 67, 30 L. ed. 330, 335, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100. But in that case, after an extended review of previous decisions, this court further said: "The clear result of this series of decisions is that when the United States, in a treaty with an Indian tribe, and as part of the consideration for the cession by the tribe of a tract of country to the United States, make a reservation to a chief or other member of the tribe of a specified number of sections of land, whether already identified, or to be surveyed and located in the future, the treaty itself converts the reserved sections into individual property; the reservation, unless accompanied by words limiting its effect, is equivalent to a present grant of a complete title in fee simple; and that title is alienable by the grantee at his pleasure, unless the United States, by a provision of the treaty, or of an act of Congress, have expressly or impliedly prohibited or restricted its alienation."

Did an alienable title in fee simple pass to the children of Bokowtonden by virtue of the treaty of 1819, 1820? That question was under consideration in the courts of Michigan a long while ago and was answered in the affirmative; and it would seem that their construction of the provisions in question has become a rule of property in that state. In Stockton v. Williams, Walk. [239] Ch. (Mich.) 120, 129, decided in 1843, *the question was elaborately discussed and fully considered. The treaty in that case—the same one involved here—contained these words: "There shall be reserved for the use of each of the persons hereinafter mentioned and their heirs, which persons are all Indians by descent, the following tracts of land. . . . For the use . . . of Mokitchenoqua . . . each, six hundred and forty acres of land, to be located at and near the Grand Traverse of the Flint river in such manner as the President of the United States may direct." 7 Stat. at L. 204. The chancellor said: "It makes no mention of a patent, nor does it require the President or other officer of the government, after the lands have been located, to do any act whatever recognizing the right of the several reservees to the different sections. All it required of the President was to have the lands located, at and near a particular place pointed out by the treaty. To locate does not mean to patent, but to have the several sections surveyed and marked out, and a map made of them, showing the particular section belonging to each of the reservees. This was done; and, when it was done, this part of the treaty was fully executed on the part of the government. Nothing further was required to carry it into effect, and the title then vested in the respective reservees, unless we hold the treaty itself to be clearly defective in not providing for the execution of its several stipulations. A patent, although the usual, is by no means the only, mode in which the title to the public domain can pass from the government to an individual. It may pass by an act of Congress, or by a treaty stipulation, as well as by a patent. The Indian title to the land reserved did not pass to the United States by the treaty, which operated as a release, by both the Indians and government, of all interest either had in the lands reserved to the respective reservees, in fee simple; and it would be a violation of the treaty for the government to claim the land in question." Upon appeal the supreme court of Michigan, 1 Dougl. 546, 558, 564, said: "The first question to be determined is, What estate passed to the reservee *under the treaty? The 3d [240] article is in the following words: 'There shall be reserved for the use of each of the persons hereinafter mentioned, and their heirs, which persons are all Indians by descent, the following tracts of land,' etc. 'For the use of Mokitchenoqua, six hundred and forty acres of land, to be located at and near the Grand Traverse of the Flint river, in such manner as the President of the United States may direct.' It is very clear that, if a fee-simple estate was intended to be granted, the parties to the treaty were unfortunate in the choice of terms by which to give effect to that intention; and yet it is difficult to conceive that any other estate was in the contemplation of the parties at the time of its existence. Will, then, the 3d article warrant such a construction? It will be observed that the reservation is to the use of Mokitchenoqua and her heirs. No limitation as to the time of holding, or restriction upon the right of alienation, is contained in the grant. The use of the word heirs clearly implies that such an estate was granted as would, upon her death, descend to her legal representatives. Here, then, are all the essential elements of a fee-simple estate. This construction, we think, is justified by the words of the 3d article, and is strengthened by the fact that it corresponds not only with an opinion given by the Attorney General of the United States to the Secretary of War (Land Laws, pt. 2, pp. 96, 97), but with the opinion of the Senate,—a branch of the treaty-making power,—which is certainly entitled to great consideration. 3 Senate Doc. 1836, No. 197." Again, in the same case, the court said: "The location of the lands became a duty devolving on the President by the treaty. This duty he could execute without an act of Congress; the treaty, when ratified, being the supreme law of the land, which the President was bound to see executed. It was impossible to describe the tract granted to any of the reservees in the treaty, as it is matter of history that none of the lands ceded had ever been surveyed. But locality is given to the grant by the terms of the treaty, with an authority to locate afterwards by a survey *making it definite. Smith v. United [241] States, 10 Pet. 331, 9 L. ed. 444. This authority being executed, the grant then became as valid to the particular section designated by the President as though the description had been incorporated in the treaty itself. We are, therefore, of opinion that a fee simple passed to the reservee, Mokitchenoqua, by force of the treaty itself, and that the rights of the parties could in no wise be affected by the subsequent act of the President directing a patent to be issued."

In Dewey v. Campau, 4 Mich. 565, 566, the court, interpreting the same treaty, said: "A title in fee, under this clause of the treaty, passed, by this language, to the reservee. The term 'reservation' was equivalent to an absolute grant. The title passed as effectually as if the grant had been executed. The title was conferred by the treaty; it was not, however, perfect until the location was made; the location was necessary to give it identity. The location was duly made, and thus the title to the land in controversy was consummated by giving identity to that which was before unlocated." In Campau v. Dewey, 9 Mich. 381, 433, reference was made to Stockton v. Williams, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 546, above cited, the court saying: "This decision has, for sixteen years, been recognized as the law governing the titles under this treaty, at least, and these must be quite numerous, many of which have doubtless been bought and sold on the faith of this decision. We are therefore compelled to recognize it as a rule of property which we are not at liberty to disturb." These cases were not, in any sense, modified by Auditor General v. Williams, 94 Mich. 180, 53 N. W. 1097, which was the case of an Indian treaty which expressly provided that the land there in question should never be sold or alienated to any person or persons whomsoever, without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior for the time,—manifestly a different case from the present one, in which the treaty contained no restriction upon alienation.

The result of the cases cited is: 1. That this court and the highest court of Michigan concur in holding that a title in fee may pass by a treaty without the aid of an act [242] of Congress, *and without a patent. 2. That the construction of the treaty here involved, whereby the respective Indians named in its 3d article are held to have acquired by the treaty a title in fee to the land reserved for the use of themselves, has become a rule of property in the state where the land is situated. That rule of property should not be disturbed, unless it clearly involves a misinterpretation of the words of the treaty of 1819. We agree with the state court in holding that a title in fee passed by the treaty to the children of Bokowtonden, and that the patent issued in 1827 only located or made definite the boundaries of the tract reserved to them by the treaty. It follows that the words in the patent of 1827, "but never to be conveyed by them or their heirs without the consent and permission of the President of the United States," were ineffectual as a restriction upon the power of alienation. The President had no authority, in virtue of his office, to impose any such restriction; certainly not, without the authority of an act of Congress, and no such act was ever passed. The children of Bokowtonden having, then, obtained by the treaty the right to convey, there is no reason to doubt that title could be acquired by prescription. The evidence shows that the defendants and those through whom they claim have had peaceable, adverse possession of the premises in question continuously for more than half a century prior to the commencement of this action.

Without assigning other grounds in support of the ruling below, the judgment of the Supreme Court is affirmed.

Mr. Justice White did not participate in the decision of this case.

*NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL LIFE IN- [243]
SURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error,

v.

PAUL RIGGS and Eugene De Hart, Executors of the Estate of Eber B. Roloson, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 243-255.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—equal protection of the laws—state regulation of insurance.

A foreign life insurance company doing business in Missouri is neither deprived of its liberty or property without due process of law nor denied the equal protection of the laws by Mo. Rev. Stat. § 7890, which cuts off any defense by a life insurance company, domestic or foreign, based upon the false and fraudulent statements in the application, unless the matter misrepresented, in the judgment of the jury, actually contributed to the death of the insured.

[No. 34.]

Argued October 18, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action on two policies of life insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Stephen S. Brown argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. A. Kerr and John E. Dolman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error: The right to make contracts is an indispensable incident to property, without which it cannot be lawfully acquired as between living persons, nor effectively preserved or used.

NOTE.—On the incontestability of life insurance under provisions of the policy or of a statute—see note to Clement v. New York L. Ins. Co. 42 L.R.A. 247.

As to restrictions on business of foreign insurance companies—see note to State ex rel. Richards v. Ackerman, 24 L.R.A. 298.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 591, 41 L. ed. 832, 836, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 391, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Yick Wo. v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 559, 46 L. ed. 679, 685, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Shaver v. Pennsylvania Co. 71 Fed. 931; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781.

"Due process of law" and "law of the land," which are synonymous, necessarily refer to a pre-existing rule of conduct, and are intended to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of the government, unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice. These terms were intended to perpetuate old and well-established principles of right and justice by securing them from abrogation or violation.

Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 443; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 549, 41 L.R.A. 481, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624; Cooley, Const. Lim. 1st ed. 208; People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 5 L.R.A. 559, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, p. 149; McKinster v. Sager, 163 Ind. 671, 68 L.R.A. 273, 106 Am. St. Rep. 268, 72 N. E. 854.

Having these principles in mind it becomes a necessary "conclusion of reason" that a statute that has the effect to enable one to obtain the property of another by fraud, which "is even more odious than force" (1 Story, Eq. Jur. 15th ed. 200), and, when the fraud shall have been accomplished, vests the title in the wrongdoer, is obnoxious to that provision of the Constitution which forbids the state to deprive one of his property without due process of law.

Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524.

A contract may be avoided for fraud without reference to whom the fraud may be directed against,—whether it be one of the parties, a stranger to the agreement, or the public.

1 Bouvier, Law Dict. 690; Broom, Legal Maxims, 3d ed. 463, *572; Merritt v. Robinson, 35 Ark. 483; Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. 203 U. S.

Y. 506, 5 L.R.A. 340, 12 Am. St. Rep. 819, 22 N. E. 188; United States v. The Amistad, 15 Pet. 518, 594, 10 L. ed. 826, 854; Catts v. Phalen, 2 How. 376, 381, 11 L. ed. 306, 307; Cochran v. Cummings, 4 Dall. 250, 1 L. ed. 820; Carrollton Furniture Mfg. Co. v. American Credit Indemnity Co. 52 C. C. A. 671, 115 Fed. 77; Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co. 7 Cranch, 506, 3 L. ed. 421; Hubbard v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 40 C. C. A. 665, 100 Fed. 719; Mattson v. Modern Samaritans, 91 Minn. 434, 98 N. W. 330; Koerts v. Grand Lodge, O. of H. S. 119 Wis. 525, 97 N. W. 163; Rupert v. Supreme Court U. O. of F. 94 Minn. 293, 102 N. W. 715; Royal Neighbors of A. v. Wallae (Neb.) 102 N. W. 1020; Speiser v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 119 Wis. 530, 97 N. W. 207; Hanf v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Asso. 76 Wis. 450, 45 N. W. 315; Ketcham v. American Mut. Acci. Asso. 117 Mich. 521, 76 N. W. 5; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519, 29 L. ed. 934, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

It is a matter affecting the public morals and the policy of the state, and one may not even make a valid contract that he will stand bound by fraud.

Bridger v. Goldsmith, 143 N. Y. 424, 38 N. E. 458; Hoffin v. Moss, 14 C. C. A. 459, 32 U. S. App. 200, 67 Fed. 440; Wilcox v. Howell, 44 N. Y. 398; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 10 Pet. 507, 9 L. ed. 512.

The great end for which men entered into society was to secure their property. That right is preserved sacred and incommunicable in all instances where it has not been taken away or abridged by some public law for the good of the whole.

Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 627, 29 L. ed. 746, 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524.

The question whether one is sick or well at the time insurance is effected on his life is material to the risk, and a rule is at least reasonable which provides against the insurance of the lives of sick men.

Aloe v. Mutual Reserve Life Asso. 147 Mo. 561, 49 S. W. 553; McCollum v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. 55 Hun, 103, 8 N. Y. Supp. 249, 124 N. Y. 642, 27 N. E. 412; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. McTague, 49 N. J. L. 587, 60 Am. Rep. 661, 9 Atl. 766; United Brethren Mut. Aid Soc. v. O'Hara, 120 Pa. 256, 13 Atl. 932.

The police power of the state does not justify this statute.

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 297, 43 L. ed. 702, 706, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 689, 43 L. ed. 858, 861, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed. p. 459; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 431.

Messrs. Robert A. Hewitt, Jr., and W. H. Haynes argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Kendall B. Randolph and W. M. Fitch, filed a brief for defendants in error:

A foreign corporation is not a citizen within the meaning of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., and the states have a right to impose whatever conditions they see fit to impose upon foreign corporations doing business in the state.

Cable v. United States L. Ins. Co. 191 U. S. 288, 48 L. ed. 188, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

Were the application of the law as to foreign insurance companies otherwise than as stated above, even then the plaintiff in error would not be entitled to the relief asked, for the reason that Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, § 7890, applies to all persons in like circumstances and conditions, and all insurance companies, whether foreign or domestic.

Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 325, 48 L. ed. 195, 201, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625. See also Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176.

The courts of the United States are controlled as to the interpretation of state statutes by the decision of the court of last resort of the state, and will form an independent judgment as to their meaning only when no such construction has been had.

Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680, 30 L. ed. 523, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 177, 43 L. ed. 939, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 283, 46 L. ed. 200, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Sioux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 173 U. S. 107, 43 L. ed. 628, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

A foreign insurance company doing business in Missouri is governed by the laws of Missouri as to the interpretation of its contract. The laws of Missouri become a part of the contract.

Fletcher v. New York L. Ins. Co. 4 McCrary, 440, 13 Fed. 526; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519, 29 L. ed. 934, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus) 140 U. S. 233, 234, 35 L. ed. 500, 501, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action upon two policies of insurance issued by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, a Minnesota corporation doing business in Missouri, upon the life of Eber B. Roloson; one, dated November 21st, 1901, the other, May 14th, 1902; each for the sum of $5,000, payable to the estate of the insured within ninety days after the acceptance by the company of satisfactory evidence of his death while the policy was in full force.

Each policy contained these provisions: "This policy shall not be in force until the first premium is paid, and the policy delivered to and accepted by the insured while in good health. At any time when this policy has been two years continuously in force it will be incontestable, except for fraud and nonpayment of premiums as provided herein, if the age of the insured has been correctly stated in the application."

The application for insurance was made by reference a part of the policy, the latter providing that the statements and answers therein every person accepting or acquiring an interest in the policy "adopts as his own, and warrants to be full, complete, and true, and agrees to be material." The application provides: "No obligation shall arise under this application until the usual policy of insurance shall be issued and delivered to me, I being at that time in good health, and the first premium paid by me," also, "I warrant the statements and answers as written or printed herein, or in part two of this application, to be full, complete, and true, whether written *by my own hand or not, and [248] agree that every such statement and answer is material to the risk;" also, "That I am not afflicted with any disease or disorder; nor have I had any illness, local disease, or personal injury not herein set forth."

Among the questions propounded to the insured and his answers—embodied in the application—were the following: "Q. Has any company or association ever postponed or declined to grant insurance on your life? A. No. Q. If so, for what reason and by what company or association. A. No. Q. Has any physician ever given an unfavorable opinion upon your life with reference to life insurance or otherwise? A. No. Q. Have you ever had any illness, local disease, injury, mental or nervous disease or infirmity, or ever had any disease, weakness, or ailment of the head, throat, lungs, heart, stomach, intestines, liver, kidneys, bladder or any disease or infirmity whatever? A. No. Q. Give name and address of each physician who has prescribed for or attended you within the past ten years, and for what disease and ailments? Name, Dr. C. O. Patton, McFall, Missouri. (b.) For what disease or ailment? A. Bilious attack. Q. Has your husband or wife or any other immediate member of your family any tuberculous disease? A. Only sister had, as stated."

It was admitted at the trial that the insured died February 28th, 1903, having paid all premiums due upon his policies, and that proofs of his death were made, such proofs stating that he died of progressive anaemia.

The company denied all liability on its policies, upon the ground that each of the answers to the above questions was untrue, and known to be so by the applicant when he made them. And at the trial it was offered to be proved (and the offer was rejected, the company duly excepting) that such answers were not true, and when made were known to be untrue.

There was a verdict for the plaintiffs, the executors of the insured, for the amount due [249] on the two policies, namely, $11,050, *for which judgment was rendered against the company.

The case was brought here under the act of March 3d, 1891, chap. 517, which authorizes an appeal or writ of error directly to this court from a circuit or district court of the United States, in any case in which the Constitution or law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States. 26 Stat. at L. 826, 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549.

When the policies in question were issued it was provided by the statutes of Missouri, § 7890, that: "No misrepresentation made in obtaining or securing a policy of insurance on the life or lives of any person or persons, citizens of this state, shall be deemed material, or render the policy void, unless the matter misrepresented shall have actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy is to become due and payable, and whether it so contributed in any case shall be a question for the jury;"

203 U. S.

and by § 7891, that "in suits brought upon life policies, heretofore or hereafter issued, no defense based upon misrepresentation in obtaining or securing the same shall be valid unless the defendant shall, at or before the trial, deposit in court for the benefit of the plaintiffs, the premiums received on such policies."

These provisions were first enacted in 1874, appearing in the Revision of 1879 as §§ 5976 and 5977, in the Revision of 1889 as §§ 5849 and 7891, and in the present revision as §§ 7890 and 7891.

At the trial in the circuit court the insurance company made several requests for instructions. They embodied these propositions: That the statute of Missouri, § 7890, was not applicable to this case, and could not be applied to it consistently with the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; that the plaintiff could not recover on either policy if it appeared that it was not delivered to and accepted by him while he was in good health; that if the insured, at the time of making his application for a policy of insurance, knowingly, falsely, and fraudulently, with the purpose *to mis- [250] lead and deceive the company, misrepresented in the application any matter concerning his health, life, or physical condition, which would reasonably affect the action of the company, then the Missouri statute was not applicable to the case; that if, with the intention to deceive and mislead the company, the insured made in his application an untrue warranty or misrepresentation concerning anything material to the risk, or if, at the time of the application, he was in bad health, and knew such to be his condition, but fraudulently and falsely, with the intent to deceive, stated that he was then, and had been for twelve months, in good health, free from all ailments, diseases, weaknesses and infirmities, whereby the company was deceived into issuing the policy, when it would not otherwise have done so, he could not recover in this action.

The trial court refused each request of the company and an exception to its action was duly taken; and it charged the jury (the company excepting) that the Missouri statute was applicable to this case, and not unconstitutional, and that the defendant company could not avoid liability on its policy by reason of any representations by the insured in his application, unless the jury found that the matters to which such representations had reference actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy, by its terms, was to become due and payable.

Although the assignments of error are numerous, we do not deem it necessary to notice any questions except those growing out of the application of the Missouri statute to this case.

As to the purpose and scope of that statute, we need only refer to the decisions of the highest court of Missouri, whose province it is to declare its meaning and effect, while it is the province of this court to adjudge whether the statute, as interpreted, is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. We do not stop to inquire whether, having due regard to its words, the statute might not have been differently construed by the state court, but accept its judgment as indicating what it is to be taken to mean. In *Schuerman v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 165 Mo. 641, 653, 65 S. W. 723, reference was made to the history of business of life insurance in Missouri, the court saying: "While equality of rights and privileges should be the general aim of all laws, and special restrictions and burdens imposed its strict exception, yet laws have ever been enacted by the state, and sustained, since the adoption of our present Constitution, as before its adoption, which were made to operate against certain classes of the community only, when that class has occupied some peculiar position, or when it has been clothed with some peculiar opportunities not enjoyed by the remainder of the community. As said before, life insurance companies in this state, prior to the adoption of § 7890, could, and by a practice, almost universal, did, insert in their policies a stipulation to the effect that any untrue statement or answer made by the applicant for insurance (regardless of its materiality or regardless of the intent of the applicant in making same) should avoid the policy, and too frequently when demands were made upon them for the obligations of the policies the companies availed themselves of these harsh provisions without a return by them of the money which they had obtained from the insured in his lifetime, and when the untrue statements made had little, if any, effect upon the risk undertaken by the insurer. This doctrine of warranties, in the extent to which it had grown and was applied, was something peculiar to insurance companies, and was therefore thought the subject of special legislation, in a law which properly undertook to affect insurance companies alone in that particular. By a long and hurtful practice of a given policy peculiarly their own, insurance companies had stamped themselves as a class, to which alone legislation might properly address itself, in that regard."

In the subsequent case of Kern v. Supreme Lodge, A. L. of H. 167 Mo. 471, 487, 67 S. W. 252, the court, referring to the statute, said that it "was enacted to correct the evil that had grown up, of permitting insurance companies to make every statement or answer a warranty, and if any one, however trivial or however *foreign to the risk [252] or loss, turned out to be untrue, to avoid the policy without refunding the benefits the company had received. The statute draws no distinction between innocent and fraudulent misrepresentations, and the courts have no right to draw any such distinction. The test applied by the statute is whether 'the matter misrepresented shall have actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy is to become due and payable,' and the power to determine that question is vested by the statute in the jury, and not in the court." The case of Christian v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 143 Mo. 460, 45 S. W. 268, being called to the attention of the state court, it further said: "In that case no distinction was drawn, or intended to be permitted, between innocent and wilfully fraudulent misrepresentations. The purpose was to give full force and effect to the statute, and to hold that no misrepresentation, whether innocent or fraudulent, when based upon a warranty of truth by the terms of the policy or not, shall be a defense, 'unless the matter misrepresented shall have actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy is to become due and payable.'" See also Jenkins v. Covenant Mut. L. Ins. Co. 171 Mo. 375, 383, 71 S. W. 688.

We take it, then, that the statute, if enforced, cuts off any defense by a life insurance company, based upon false and fraudulent statements in the application, unless the matter misrepresented actually contributed to the death of the insured. Is the statute, therefore, to be held repugnant to the 14th Amendment? Does it, in such case, deprive the insurance company of its "liberty" or property without due process of law, or deny to it the equal protection of the laws? Although the statute in some degree restricts the company's power of contracting, and is so worded that the beneficiaries of its policy may sometimes reap the fruits of fraud practised upon it by the insured, we cannot, for that reason, hold that the state may not, so far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned, regulate the business of life insurance to the extent indicated. It is true that this court has said that the liberty *guaranteed by the 14th [253] Amendment against deprivation otherwise than by due process of law embraces the right to pursue a lawful calling and enter into all contracts proper, necessary, and essential to the carrying out of the purposes of such calling. Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. It is true, also, that a corporation of one state, doing business in another state, under such circumstances as to be directly subject to its process at the instance of suitors, may invoke the protection of that clause of the 14th Amendment which declares that no state shall "deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 260, 261, 43 L. ed. 432, 440, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165. But it is equally the doctrine of this court that the power, whether called police, governmental, or legislative, exists in each state, by appropriate legislation, not forbidden by its own Constitution or by the Constitution of the United States, to determine for its people all questions or matters relating to its purely domestic or internal affairs, and, "to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within its jurisdiction, and, therefore, to provide for the public convenience and the public good." Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 297, 43 L. ed. 702, 706, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465, and authorities there cited.

We are informed by the decisions of the supreme court of Missouri that life insurance companies doing business in that state often secured contracts under which they could defeat all recovery upon a policy, and retain all premiums paid by the insured, if it appeared in proof that the application for insurance contained an inaccurate or untrue statement, however innocently made, as to matters having no real or substantial connection whatever with the death of the insured, and which were in no sense material to the risk. This was deemed an evil practice, to be remedied by legislation. Of course, the state, if it had seen proper, might have excepted from the operation of the statute cases in which the insured, by his representations when obtaining a policy, perpetrated a fraud upon the company, or made [254] untrue statements in his application *as to matters material to the risk. But that remedy was deemed inadequate to prevent wrong and injustice. The state decided to go to the root of the evil, and therefore, in substance, it established, as a rule of conduct for all life insurance companies, domestic and foreign, doing business in the state, that representations, of whatever nature, made to the company by the insured, should not defeat recovery upon a policy unless such representations, in the judgment of a jury, actually contributed to the contingency or event on which it was to become due and payable. Surely the state could make such a regulation in relation to its own corporations; for a corporation cannot exert any power, nor make any contract, forbidden by the law of its being. Such a restriction as that founded in the Missouri statute, if embodied in the original charter of a life insurance corporation, would, of course, be binding upon it in the state granting such charter, and could not be disregarded. If, however, no such restriction was imposed by its charter, it could yet be imposed by subsequent legislation, unless the state had precluded itself from so doing by some contract (if a binding one could be made) which, as to its obligation, was protected by the Federal Constitution. The business of life insurance is of such a peculiar character, affects so many people, and is so intimately connected with the common good, that the state creating the insurance corporations and giving them authority to engage in that business may, without transcending the limits of legislative power, regulate their affairs, so far, at least, as to prevent them from committing wrong or injustice in the exercise of their corporate functions. The state may well say to its own corporate creatures engaged in the business of life insurance that they shall not refuse to pay what they agreed to pay simply because of some representation made by the insured which did not actually contribute to the contingency or event on which the agreement to pay depended. If a life insurance corporation does not approve such a restriction upon the conduct of its affairs it is its privilege to cease doing business. *Now, if the statute in question is not in-[255] valid as to life insurance corporations of Missouri, it is not perceived that the state may not make its provisions applicable to corporations of other states doing business in its territory with its sanction or under its license. That Missouri could forbid life insurance companies of other states from doing any business whatever within its limits, except upon the terms prescribed by the statute in question, cannot be doubted, in view of the decisions of this court. If it could go that far, why may it not declare, as it has in effect done, by this statute, that its provisions shall apply to foreign life insurance companies doing business in Missouri under its license? It would, indeed, be extraordinary if the state could compel its own life insurance companies to respect this statute, but could not enforce its provisions against a foreign corporation doing business within its limits, with its consent, express or implied—especially against one which, as is the case here, came into the state for purposes of business after such statutory provisions were enacted. As the present statute is applicable alike to all life insurance companies doing business in Missouri, after its enactment, there is no reason for saying that it denies the equal protection of the laws. Equally without foundation is the contention that the statute, if enforced, will be inconsistent with the liberty guaranteed by the 14th Amendment. The liberty referred to in that Amendment is the liberty of natural, not artificial, persons. Nor, in any true, constitutional sense, does the Missouri statute deprive life insurance companies doing business in that state of a right of property. This is too plain for discussion.

203 U. S.

What has been said disposes of the only questions we need to determine, and the judgment is affirmed.

[256]*ATLANTIC COAST LINE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF FLORIDA upon the Relation of W. H. ELLIS, as Attorney General of Said State, and J. M. Barrs, as Special Counsel for Jefferson B. Browne et al., Railroad Commissioners of Said State.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 256-260.)

Evidence — sufficiency — reasonableness of state regulation of railroad rates.

The evidence is insufficient to justify a refusal to enforce an order of a state railroad commission fixing local rates of carrying phosphates on any objection based on the due process of law and equal protection of the laws clauses of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, where there is no evidence from which a reasonable deduction can be made as to the cost of transportation, the amount of phosphates transported, or the effect which the rate established by the commission will have upon the income of the carrier.

[No. 9.]

Argued March 2, 5, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review a judgment awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus to enforce an order of the state railroad commission, fixing the local rates for carrying phosphates. Affirmed.

See same case below, 48 Fla. 146, 37 So. 657.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On December 17, 1903, the railroad commission of the state of Florida, after notice and a hearing, made an order:

"That the rate to be charged by all the railroads and common carriers doing business wholly or in part within the state of Florida, for the transportation of phosphate from points in the state to points within the state, shall not exceed 1 cent per ton per mile.

"Provided, however, that where the rate of 1 cent per ton per mile will raise any rate now in operation, that said rate of 1 cent per ton per mile shall not be effective, but the rate as now charged by the railroad companies is hereby adopted by the railroad commissioners as their rate between such points.

"It is therefore ordered, that where a shipment of phosphate shall pass over two or more railroads in reaching its destination within the state of Florida, the initial line may charge 1½ cents per ton per mile for the first ten miles which said phosphate shall be hauled."

The railroad company, plaintiff in error, which was a party to the *proceedings before [257] the commission, not complying with this order, application was made on March 7, 1904, to the supreme court of the state for a writ of mandamus to compel compliance, and on October 19, 1904, the peremptory writ was ordered by that court, as prayed for. 48 Fla. 146, 37 So. 657. Thereupon the railroad company sued out this writ of error.

No special findings of fact were made by the supreme court, but in its opinion it said:

"There is a total lack of positive proof that the commission rate is materially less than that now charged. The company proves merely that its books do not show that any local phosphate has been carried by it, but does not show what rate it charges on the interstate shipments of phosphate. There is some showing of the expensiveness of handling phosphate for foreign shipment, much of which would not enter into the local or intrastate business, should such be carried, but nothing is shown from which this court can say that the rate fixed by the commission is unreasonable. The evidence offered might tend to show that the rate is unnecessary or that it is speculative, but such questions the court is not called upon to decide.

"Taking the figures from the brief filed by the respondent, we find that the local business alone produces a net earning of at least 3 per cent on the total value of the

NOTE.—On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

As to reasonableness of state limitation of railroad rates—see note to Chicago, M. & 174

St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 44 L. ed. U. S. 417.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

road in Florida, charging against such income the whole of the taxes. While a state is not permitted to offset local business against interstate business, and to justify low local rates by reason of the profitability of the latter, yet the interstate and foreign business may and should be considered in determining the proportion of the value of the property of the company assignable to local business. There is no proper showing of the interstate and foreign business, so that we may determine on what fraction of the whole value of the property in Florida the company might be entitled to earn an income from local business; there is, however, a showing that the interstate and foreign business is large and, on a proper [258] showing and a proper proportioning *of the service between domestic and foreign business, this percentage of net income would be largely increased.

"Under the burden of proof cast by the law upon the respondent, we find that the rate in question is not unreasonable."

Mr. John E. Hartridge argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. M. Barrs argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Ellis, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Passing all matters of a local nature, in respect to which the decision of the state court is final, the Federal question is whether the order of the railroad commission, sustained by the supreme court of the state, deprived the company of its property without due process of law, or denied to it the equal protection of the law. The testimony taken before the commission was not preserved, but, by the law of the state, the rates established by such commission are to be taken in all courts as prima facie just and reasonable. Florida Laws 1899, chap. 4700, § 8, pp. 76, 82. We start, therefore, with the presumption in favor of the order.

The testimony on the hearing of the application in the supreme court is, however, in the record. That court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction of mandamus cases, determines questions of fact as well as of law. State ex rel. Columbia County [260] v. Suwannee County, 21 Fla. 1. *While it did not make any distinct findings of fact, yet its deductions from the testimony are clearly indicated by the quotations from its opinion. If it be said that, in the absence of special findings of fact, it is the duty of this court to examine the testimony upon which the judgment was entered, it 203 U. S.

is very clear that there was no sufficient evidence presented to that court to justify a refusal to enforce the order of the railroad commission.

And here we face this situation: The order of the commission was not operative upon all local rates, but only fixed the rate on a single article; to wit, phosphate. There is no evidence of the amount of phosphates carried locally; neither is it shown how much a change in the rate of carrying them will affect the income, nor how much the rate fixed by the railroads for carrying phosphate has been changed by the order of the commission. There is testimony tending to show the gross income from all local freights and the value of the railroad property, and also certain difficulties in the way of transporting phosphates, owing to the lack of facilities at the terminals. But there is nothing from which we can determine the cost of such transportation. We are aware of the difficulty which attends proof of the cost of transporting a single article, and, in order to determine the reasonableness of a rate prescribed, it may sometimes be necessary to accept as a basis the average rate of all transportation per ton per mile. We shall not attempt to indicate to what extent or in what cases the inquiry must be special and limited. It is enough for the present to hold that there is in the record nothing from which a reasonable deduction can be made as to the cost of transportation, the amount of phosphates transported, or the effect which the rate established by the commission will have upon the income. Under these circumstances it is impossible to hold that there was error in the conclusions reached by the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, and its judgment is affirmed.

*SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY, Plff. [261] in Err.,

v.

STATE OF FLORIDA upon the Relation of W. H. ELLIS, as Attorney General of Said State, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 261-270.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—state regulation of railroad rates.

1. State regulation of local freight rates for shipments to and from the Florida West Shore Railway and over the Seaboard Air Line Railway does not deprive the latter road of its property without due process of law, even if its total receipts from local freight rates are insufficient to meet what can properly be cast as a burden upon that business, where, so far as appears, such regulation may have no other effect than to make the rates on the Florida West Shore Railway the same as those obtaining generally in the state.

NOTE.—On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

Constitutional law—due process of law—state regulation of railroad rates.

2. Carriers may be forbidden by the state railroad commission to make their local freight rate for phosphates more than 1 cent per ton per mile without denying due process of law to a railway company whose transportation of phosphates constitutes about one sixth of its local freight business, where the rate so authorized is nearly 2 mills per ton larger than that company's average local freight rate.

[Nos. 10, 11.]

Argued March 2, 5, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review two judgments awarding peremptory writs of mandamus to enforce orders of the state railroad commission which respectively prescribe the local freight rates for a specified road and fix a local freight rate for phosphates. Affirmed.

See same case below, No. 10, 48 Fla. 129, 152, 37 So. 314, 658; No. 11, 48 Fla. 150, 37 So. 658.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

These cases resemble the one immediately preceding, in this: that review is sought in each of an award of a peremptory writ of mandamus by the supreme court of Florida to compel compliance with an order of the state railroad commission. In the first, the court sustained an order of the commission, made June 25, 1903, and to go into effect July 1, 1903, prescribing rates on the Florida West Shore Railway, charged to be under the control and management of the plaintiff in error (48 Fla. 129-152, 37 So. 314, 657, 658), the order being in these words: "It is hereby ordered and adjudged by the railroad commission of the state of Florida that the following schedule of freight tariffs shall be allowed and adopted [262] for freight shipments over the *Seaboard Air Line Railway, to apply only to shipments from or destined to points on the Florida West Shore Railway, and from points on the Florida West Shore Railway to points on the Florida West Shore Railway, and the same shall be put into operation and be effective on the 1st day of July, A. D. 1903," and followed by the schedule; and in the second, it enforced the order of the commission in respect to phosphates (which was noticed by us in the opinion in the preceding case). 48 Fla. 150, 37 So. 658.

The proceedings before the commission are not disclosed, nor is there anything to show upon what the orders were based. There was notice and a hearing. And in the pleadings in the first case appear the contracts between the plaintiff in error and the Florida West Shore Railway.

In the supreme court the relator presented no testimony, relying upon the statutory presumption which attends an order of the commission. The defendant introduced the report which it had made to the railroad commission for the year ending June 30, 1904, and the report of the railroad commission to the governor of the state for the year ending March 1, 1904, and upon these two reports the cases were considered by the supreme court.

Messrs. Hilary A. Herbert and George P. Raney argued the cause, and, with Mr. Benjamin Micou, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The order of the Florida commission in relation to phosphates is discriminatory, exceptional, and partial as to the particular subject-matter. On its face it is an irregular, unjust, and intolerable method of rate fixing.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 695, 696, 43 L. ed. 863, 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 188; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mississippi Railroad Commission, 74 Miss. 80, 21 So. 15.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway is not over-capitalized.

Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 683.

In estimating the value of the property on which a railroad company is entitled to earn a return from tariff rates, the following authorities show that the cost of bare physical reproduction is too narrow a basis.

Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 585; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dey, 38 Fed. 656.

Railway companies should be allowed to earn something by way of dividends in addition to paying operating and maintaining expenses, interest on outstanding bonds, and taxes.

As to reasonableness of state limitation of railroad rates—see note to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 44 L. ed. U. S. 417.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. supra; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 577; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 951; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. and Smyth v. Ames, supra; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236.

Interest on bonded debt is held by all authorities to be a proper charge upon income.

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 263.

An ordinance requiring a street railroad charging 5 cent fares to sell six tickets for 25 cents, or 25 tickets for $1, is unreasonable, when the road is only making yearly net earnings of 3.3 per cent to 4.5 per cent on its bona fide investment, and paying 5 per cent interest on its bonds in a city where the current rate of interest on first-mortgage real estate security is 6 per cent.

Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, supra.

The presumption which, according to the statutes of Florida, and, perhaps, according to common usage, generally arises in favor of the reasonableness of rates fixed by commissioners, is always rebuttable, and never conclusive.

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. supra. Lawson, Presumptive Ev. rule 120; Graves v. Colwell, 90 Ill. 615.

It is not always easy to determine the value of railroad property, and if there is no other testimony in respect thereto than the amount of stock and bonds outstanding, or the construction account, it may be fairly assumed that one or other of these represents it, and computation as to the compensatory quality of rates may be based upon such amounts.

Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 177.

Mr. J. M. Barrs argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Ellis, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The plaintiff in error has not shown sufficient facts to reverse the judgment of the supreme court of Florida, if the court should decide contrary to our contention, and that the points raised in the case are questions of mixed law and fact, and properly reviewable by this court.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; St. Louis & S.

F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 642, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

There are no special findings of facts in these cases, and only from an examination of the opinions filed by the supreme court can we ascertain what its conclusions were or upon what its judgments were based. It may well be doubted whether a railroad company can rely, as evidence in its own behalf, upon a report made and filed by it, and while a report of the railroad commission to the governor may undoubtedly be used against it in an application made at its instance to secure compliance with one of its orders, yet there is little in its report which throws light upon the questions in these cases.

Referring to the first case, in which is presented the reasonableness of an order made by the commission respecting local rates for business on, to, or from the Florida West Shore Railway, we find it stated in the brief of the plaintiff in error that the railroad commission on December 22, 1903, made an order, to go into effect July 1, 1904, reducing local freight rates generally; that from this order no appeal was taken; that in November, 1903, an order was made reducing by 10 per cent rates on certain freights going over two or more roads, and that from such order no appeal was taken. These are the *orders referred to in the re-[269] port of the commission to the governor. But the order in controversy was made on June 25, 1903, to go into effect July 1, 1903, and is applicable solely to the Florida West Shore road. Now, whether this order of June 25, 1903, was simply operative to make the rates on the Florida West Shore road the same as those then obtaining generally in the state, or whether it made them higher or lower than such rates, does not appear. For some reason, not disclosed, the order touched only the local freight rates to and from the Florida West Shore Railway and over the Seaboard Air Line Railway. Even if the total receipts by the latter company from local freight rates were insufficient to meet what could properly be cast as a burden upon that business, such insufficiency would not justify it in an inequality of rates between different parts of the state, in one part too high and in the other too low. The state might properly insist that there should be equality in the rates,—the conditions being the same,—and, if nothing more was accomplished by the order of the commission than to establish such equality, we cannot hold that the judgment of the supreme court was erroneous.

With reference to the second of these cases, the order made by the railroad commission is said by the plaintiff in error to be an "irregular, unjust, and unreliable method of rate fixing;" and this upon the theory that the order makes the rate per mile the same for any distance, whether one mile or a hundred miles. It appears that 16.43 per cent of all the local freight business of the company in Florida comes from the carrying of phosphates, and reference is made to several cases in which the courts have noticed the fact that the cost of moving local freight is greater than that of moving through freight, and the reasons for the difference. But evidently counsel misinterpret the order of the railroad commission. It does not fix the rate at 1 cent per ton per mile. It simply provides that it shall not exceed 1 cent per ton per mile,—prescribes a maximum which may be reduced by the railway company, and, if dis-[270]tance *demands a reduction, the company may and doubtless will make it. In addition it must be borne in mind that it is to be presumed that the railroad commission acted with full knowledge of the situation; that phosphates were in Florida possibly carried a long distance, the place of mining being far from the place of actual use or preparation for use. Further, when we turn to the report of the railroad company (which, of course, is evidence against it), we find that the company's average freight receipt per ton per mile in the state of Florida was $8\frac{15}{100}$ mills; so that the rate authorized for phosphates was nearly 2 mills per ton larger than such average. Under these circumstances it is impossible to say that there was error in the conclusions of the Supreme Court of the state, and its judgments are affirmed.

PAUL HEYMANN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 270-278.)

Commerce—in intoxicating liquors—state regulation—Wilson act.

1. Delivery of an interstate shipment of intoxicating liquors to the consignees is essential to constitute their arrival in the state within the meaning of the Wilson act of August 8, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177), subjecting all intoxicating liquors arriving in the state to the laws of such state enacted in the exercise of its police power.

Commerce—intoxicating liquors—state regulation—Wilson act.

2. The mere placing of an interstate shipment of intoxicating liquors in the carrier's warehouse to await delivery to the consignees does not constitute their arrival in the state within the meaning of the Wilson act of August 8, 1890, subjecting all intoxicating liquors arriving in the state to the laws of such state enacted in the exercise of its police power.

[No. 32.]

Submitted October 17, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which, on second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Richmond County, in that state, on appeal from a justice's court, in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages from a railroad company for failing to make the deliveries of shipments of intoxicating liquors as agreed in the bills of lading. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 122 Ga. 608, 50 S. E. 342; on first writ of error, 118 Ga. 616, 45 S. E. 491.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Milton Strasburger and Samuel H. Myers submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Joseph B. Cumming submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In March, 1902, P. B. Wise and H. D.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

State licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rotnernel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On commerce in intoxicating liquors—see notes to State v. Creeden, 7 L.R.A. 296; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L.R.A. 616; and Rhodes v. Iowa, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1089.

Harkins, residents of Charleston, South Carolina, each ordered a cask of whisky from Paul Heymann, a wholesale liquor dealer in Augusta, Georgia. The price of the whisky accompanied the orders, which were given upon the understanding that if, for any cause, delivery was not made to the consignees, the purchase price would be refunded.

The two casks of whisky, consigned to the respective purchasers at Charleston, were delivered to the Southern Railway Company at Augusta. In due course the packages of liquor reached Charleston, and were by the railroad company at once unloaded into its warehouse, ready for delivery. The record does not show that the consignees were notified of the arrival of the goods. Shortly after the goods were so placed in the warehouse of the railroad company they were seized and taken from its possession. The seizures were made without any warrant or other process, by constables asserting their right to do so under the authority of what is known as the dispensary law of South Carolina, which law was considered in Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674. The agent of the railroad company did not resist the seizure.

Thereafter, Heymann, the consignor, sued the railroad company for failing to make the deliveries as contracted in the bills of lading, and in the superior court of Richmond county, on appeal from a justice's court, obtained a verdict and judgment. The cause was appealed to the supreme court of Georgia, and by that court the judgment was reversed and the case remanded. 118 Ga. 616, 45 S. E. 491. On the second trial the defendant had a verdict and judgment; [272] and on appeal the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of Georgia upon the authority of its previous opinion. The case was then brought here.

The act of Congress of August 8, 1890 [26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177], commonly known as the Wilson act, provides that all intoxicating liquors "transported into any state or territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival in such state or territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state or territory, enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquids or liquors had been produced in such state or territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise."

The supreme court of Georgia held—although the goods had not been delivered to the consignees, and although there was no showing of notice to them from the carrier, or even if notice by the local law was unnecessary, of the lapse of a reasonable time for the consignees to call for and accept delivery—that the interstate transportation of the goods ended when they were placed in the warehouse, and the carrier was thenceforward liable only as a warehouseman, and that the goods ceased to be under the shelter of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution. This was based upon the conclusion that goods warehoused under the circumstances stated must be considered as having arrived, within the meaning of the Wilson act, and therefore the packages of liquor in question were lawfully seized because subject to the police authority of the state of South Carolina. The meaning thus affixed to the word "arrival," as employed in the Wilson act, was adopted after consideration of the opinion in Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664. While it was conceded by the learned court that language contained in the opinion in that case indicated that this court deemed delivery essential to constitute "arrival" within the Wilson act, yet, the expressions in the opinion to that effect were not binding, as they were merely obiter, since the Rhodes Case* was only concerned [273] with whether goods had come under the state authority on reaching their place of destination and before they had been warehoused by the carrier.
203 U. S.

We cannot concur in the view taken by the learned court of the decision in the Rhodes Case. In that case, a railroad employee at a town in Iowa was indicted under the law of that state because, after an interstate shipment of liquors had reached the depot of the final carrier, at the point of destination, he moved the package from the platform, where it had been placed on being unloaded, to a freight warehouse belonging to the railroad company, a few feet away. It was insisted on behalf of the state of Iowa that the effect of the Wilson act was to confer upon that state the power to subject to state regulations merchandise shipped from another state the moment it reached the boundary line of the state of Iowa. On the other hand, it was contended that an interstate shipment of liquor did not arrive within that state within the meaning of the Wilson act until the consummation of the shipment by delivery at its destination to the consignee. The case, therefore, necessarily involved deciding the meaning of the word "arrival" in the Wilson act, and this required an ascertainment of when goods shipped from one state to another, generally speaking, ceased to be controlled by the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution, and how far the general rule resulting from the power of Congress to regulate commerce had been limited, if at all, by the provisions of the Wilson act. Considering the first question, the elementary and long-settled doctrine was reiterated that delivery and sale in the original package was necessary to terminate interstate commerce, so far as the police regulations of the states were concerned. In passing upon the second question the court, referring to a previous case involving the Wilson law (Re Rahrer [Wilkerson v. Rahrer] 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865), pointed out that the contention which was made in that case, that the Wilson act was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States because it was an abdication by Congress of its power to [274] regulate commerce, *was held to be untenable, because the Wilson act was simply legislation by Congress creating a uniform rule applicable to all the states, by which liquor, when the subject of interstate commerce, could come under the power of a state at an earlier date than it otherwise would have done. Contemplating the grounds of the previous ruling upholding the constitutionality of the Wilson act, and coming to precisely determine the meaning of the word "arrival" as used in that act, it was said in the Rhodes Case (p. 426, L. ed. p. 1096, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 669):

"Interpreting the statute by the light of all its provisions, it was not intended to and did not cause the power of the state to attach to an interstate commerce shipment whilst the merchandise was in transit under such shipment, and until its arrival at the point of destination, and delivery there to the consignee."

And as a result of this ascertainment of the meaning of the Wilson act it was held that, as the act of moving the goods preceded the period affixed by the Wilson act at which the state power could attach, the conviction was erroneous.

The Rhodes Case involved, of necessity, a construction of the import of the Wilson act, and the mere fact that the particular conduct which happened in that case to be the subject of complaint occurred prior to the delivery did not operate to cause the affirmative construction which was given to the Wilson act, and which it was necessary to give, to be obiter, and therefore subject to be disregarded. And a case decided by this court on the same day as the Rhodes Case leaves no room for controversy concerning the affirmative construction given to the Wilson act in the Rhodes Case. The case referred to is Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct.

180

Rep. 674. The court said (p. 451, L. ed. p. 1105, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 679):

"The interstate commerce clause of the Constitution guarantees the right to ship merchandise from one state into another, and protects it until the termination of the shipment by delivery at the place of consignment, and this right is wholly unaffected by the act of Congress which allows state *authority to attach to the original package [275] before sale, but only after delivery. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 107, 41 L. ed. 632, 648, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265, 262, and Rhodes v. Iowa, supra. It follows that under the Constitution of the United States every resident of South Carolina is free to receive for his own use liquor from other states, and that the inhibitions of a state statute do not operate to prevent liquors from other states from being shipped into such state, on the order of a resident, for his use."

And in subsequent cases the construction adopted in the previous cases of the word "arrival" as employed in the Wilson act has been reaffirmed and applied. Thus, in American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182, in reviewing the Rhodes Case, the meaning of the Wilson act was again reiterated, the court saying (p. 142, L. ed. p. 421, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 184):

"The contention was that, as by the Wilson act the power of the state operated upon the property the moment it passed the state boundary line, therefore the state of Iowa had the right to forbid the transportation of the merchandise within the state, and to punish those carrying it therein. This was not sustained. The court declined to express an opinion as to the authority of Congress, under its power to regulate commerce, to delegate to the states the right to forbid the transportation of merchandise from one state to another. It was, however, decided that the Wilson act manifested no attempt on the part of Congress to exert such power, but was only a regulation of commerce, since it merely provided, in the case of intoxicating liquors, that such merchandise, when transported from one state to another, should lose its character as interstate commerce upon completion of delivery under the contract of interstate shipment, and before sale in the original packages."

Again, in Foppiano v. Speed, 199 U. S. 501, 50 L. ed. 288, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138, referring to the Wilson act and its previous construction, it was declared (p. 517, L. ed. p. 291, Sup. Ct. Rep. 140):

"This act was held to be constitutional in the case of Re Rahrer, supra, and that by virtue of said act state *statutes might operate upon the original packages of intoxicating liquors before sale in the state. Rhodes v.

203 U. S.

Iowa and Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. supra, held that the state statute must permit the delivery of the liquors to the party to whom they were consigned within the state, but that, after such delivery, the state had power to prevent the sale of the liquors, even in the original package."

As the general principle is that goods moving in interstate commerce cease to be such commerce only after delivery and sale in the original package, and as the settled rule is that the Wilson law was not an abdication of the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce, since that law simply affects an incident of such commerce by allowing the state power to attach after delivery, and before sale, we are not concerned with whether, under the law of any particular state, the liability of a railroad company as carrier ceases and becomes that of a warehouseman on the goods reaching their ultimate destination, before notice and before the expiration of a reasonable time for the consignee to receive the goods from the carrier. For, whatever may be the divergent legal rules in the several states concerning the precise time when the liability of a carrier, as such, in respect to the carriage of goods, ends, they cannot affect the general principle as to when an interstate shipment ceases to be under the protection of the commerce clause of the Constitution, and thereby comes under the control of the state authority.

Of course, we are not called upon in this case, and do not decide, if goods of the character referred to in the Wilson act, moving in interstate commerce, arrive at the point of destination, and, after notice and full opportunity to receive them, are designedly left in the hands of the carrier for an unreasonable time, that such conduct on the part of the consignee might not justify, if affirmatively alleged and proven, the holding that goods so dealt with have come under the operation of the Wilson act, because constructively delivered. We say we [277]*are not called upon to consider this question, for the reason that no facts are shown by the record justifying passing on such a proposition. And as in this case we deal only with the power of the state to enforce its police regulations against goods of the character of those enumerated in the Wilson act, the subject of interstate commerce, before delivery, we must not be understood as in any way limiting or restricting the ruling made in Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co., supra, upholding the right of a citizen of one state to bring from another state into the state of his residence, and keep therein, for his personal use, the merchandise referred to in the Wilson act. In other words, as in the case at bar, delivery had not taken place when the seizures were made, and the control of the state over the goods had not attached, we are not called upon to consider whether, if the power of the state had attached by delivery, the state might not have levied upon the goods on the charge that they had not been bona fide brought into the state, and were not held by the consignees for their personal use, and, therefore, were not within the ruling in Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. supra.

203 U. S.

The conclusion that the court below erred in declining to follow the prior rulings of this court construing the Wilson act disposes of the entire controversy arising on the record before us, for the following reasons: In its answer filed in the trial court the railroad company substantially defended alone upon the ground that the seizure was rightful. And the supreme court of Georgia treated the liability of the defendant as depending solely upon the validity of the seizure. The court said:

"If [the goods] . . . were still in the course of interstate transportation, the seizure by the constable was not even prima facie legal, for the very law under which the seizure was made had, prior to such seizure, been declared by the Supreme Court of the United States to be unconstitutional in so far as it interfered with interstate commerce. Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265. It therefore follows that if the shipment had not *been[278] completed at the time the goods were seized, the railroad company would have no right to defend on the ground that it submitted to the superior authority, granting that such a defense, if established, would relieve it from liability." [118 Ga. 618, 45 S. E. 492.]

Moreover, in this court, counsel, in their brief on behalf of the defendant in error, rely exclusively upon the correctness of the construction given to the Wilson act by the court below, and do not urge, in the event such construction be not sustained, that it was exempt for any reason whatever from liability.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

C. H. NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHARLES FRANSON.

(See E. C. Reporter's ed. 278-283.)

Error to circuit court—certificate—jurisdiction below.

1. The certificate of a Federal circuit court may be considered by the Supreme Court on the direct review authorized by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), for the purpose of supplying the failure of the record to show when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised, if the elements necessary to decide the question are in the record, although it is the better practice to make apparent on the record, by a bill of exceptions or other appropriate mode, the fact that the question of jurisdiction was raised and passed upon, and the elements upon which the decision of the question was based.

Error to circuit court—certificate—jurisdiction below.

2. In deciding the question of the jurisdiction below which is shown by the certificate of the Federal circuit court to have been raised, the Supreme Court cannot resort to the statements in the certificate for the purpose of supplying elements of decision which it could not properly consider in an action at law without a bill of exceptions.

Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—sufficiency of allegation to show alienage.

3. The alienage of the plaintiff is sufficiently alleged to sustain the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court by an averment in the complaint that "the plaintiff now is, and for more than one year last past has been, a resident of Washington and a citizen of Sweden," although, at the time the action was brought, Sweden was under a monarchical form of government, since the designation "citizen of Sweden" could only have been intended as a statement of the nationality of the plaintiff,—viz., the country to which he bore allegiance.

[No. 30.]

Argued and submitted October 17, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington to review a judgment for plaintiff in an action for personal injuries. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Carroll T. Bond argued the cause, and, with Mr. William L. Marbury, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The allegation in the complaint, that plaintiff was a "citizen of Sweden," is not a sufficient averment to confer jurisdiction on the ground of diversity of citizenship of parties.

NOTE.—On direct review in the Federal Supreme Court of judgments of circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247; Mason v. Dullag-

Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 212, 214, 34 L. ed. 691, 695, 696, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Stuart v. Easton, 156 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 341, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; Hennessy v. Richardson Drug Co. 189 U. S. 34, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Bishop v. Averill, 76 Fed. 386; Rondot v. Rogers Twp. 25 C. A. 145, 47 U. S. App. 290, 79 Fed. 676.

The statements of defendant in error in his testimony are equally insufficient for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction.

Thomas v. Ohio State University, 195 U. S. 218, 49 L. ed. 167, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. Edwards, 194 U. S. 377, 48 L. ed. 1027, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278, 285, 27 L. ed. 932, 935, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Horne v. George H. Hammond Co. 155 U. S. 393, 39 L. ed. 197, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167.

The motion of defendant in error to dismiss the writ of error should be denied.

Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382, 28 L. ed. 462, 463, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115, 120, 42 L. ed. 682, 684, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

Mr. Walter S. Fulton submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Martin J. Lund was on the brief:

It is no longer necessary to describe a party as an alien.

Hennessy v. Richardson Drug Co. 189 U. S. 25, 47 L. ed. 697, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

Sweden is a foreign state, and a citizen of Sweden is a foreign citizen. The court takes judicial notice of the existence of a foreign country.

12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 152; 9 Century Dict. p. 969.

While the term "citizen" is used to designate a member of a republic, it is not exclusively so, but is also appropriately used to designate a member of a monarchy, provided he is a freeman.

2 Johnson, Universal Enc. 581; Webster, International Dict. "Citizen;" 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 242; 2 Bouvier, Law Dict. P. 551; Robertson v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. 68 Fed. 176; Jennes v. Landes, 84 Fed. 74.

A certificate of questions upon jurisdiction cannot take the place of a bill of exceptions.

Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 54, 31 L. ed. 687, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759.

ham, 27 C. C. A. 296; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; and McDonald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287.

[280] *Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

A motion has been made to dismiss the writ of error, among others, on the ground of the absence of a bill of exceptions, and the character of the order appealed from. We pass to the merits of the case without stopping to review the grounds of the motion, as we think they will be substantially disposed of by the views which we shall hereafter express.

By this writ of error the C. H. Nichols Lumber Company seeks the reversal of a judgment obtained by Charles Franson in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Washington. Considering the record alone, and putting out of view for the moment the effect of statements contained in a certificate made by the court below on the allowance of the writ of error, the case is this: The action was brought to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained while in the employ of the defendant. The jurisdiction of the court below was invoked solely upon the ground of diversity of citizenship, it being alleged in the first paragraph of the complaint that the defendant was a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Washington, and doing business in the state of Washington, and that the plaintiff was, at the time of the filing of the complaint, and had been for more than a year prior thereto, "a resident of Washington and a citizen of Sweden." Admitting its incorporation, and that it was doing business in the state of Washington, the defendant, by its answer, specifically denied each and every other allegation of the first as well as other specified paragraphs of the complaint.

The cause was tried to a jury, and, after verdict and remittitur of a portion thereof, a judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff. The record does not contain a bill of exceptions, and in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error it is stated that none was prepared.

This writ of error, upon the ground solely of a want of jurisdiction in the trial court, [281] was prayed and allowed, and a *formal certificate was made by the judge, reciting to the time when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised and decided, accompanied with a statement of the pleadings and of the court's impression of certain testimony given at the trial by the plaintiff, deemed by the court pertinent to the elucidation of the question of jurisdiction. The certificate concludes with the statement of enumerated "questions of jurisdiction," which the court was of opinion arose for decision, all of them being based upon the overruling by the court of a motion to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, 203 U. S.

which motion, it is recited in the certificate, was made between verdict and judgment. And the only ground here assigned as error is predicated upon the action of the court in denying such motion to dismiss.

As the circuit court was without power to make a certificate containing a statement of facts as the basis for legal propositions upon which it desired the guidance of this court (Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 246, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; United States v. Rider, 163 U. S. 132, 41 L. ed. 101, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983), it follows, speaking in a general sense, that our right to review on a direct proceeding concerning the jurisdiction of that court must depend upon the record, and not upon the mere statement of facts made in the certificate prepared by the trial court. Applying this general rule, as it nowhere appears from the record that the issue as to jurisdiction presented by the motion to dismiss, the overruling of which is the sole ground for reversal relied upon in the assignment of error, was made or passed upon by the court, we should be constrained to dismiss this writ of error on the ground that the record did not disclose the presence in the case of the question of jurisdiction which is made the basis of the assignment of error. As, however, under the judiciary act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488], on a direct review of a question of jurisdiction, the trial judge is authorized to certify as to the existence of such question, we think we may look at his certificate for the purpose of ascertaining when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised, although, for the purpose of deciding the question *shown to have been thus [282] raised, we may not resort to the statements in the certificate for the purpose of supplying elements of decision which we could not properly consider in an action at law without a bill of exceptions. We have said that we may resort to the certificate, in the absence of a proper showing on the record as to when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised and decided, for the limited purpose stated, because the power to do so is implied in a previous decision of the court (North American Transp. & T. Co. v. Morrison, 178 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 1061, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869), and because of the general rule that it would be our duty, without action of the trial court or of the parties, to look at the record to determine whether or not the court below had jurisdiction of the action (Thomas v. Ohio State University, 195 U. S. 211, 49 L. ed. 164, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24). It is apparent, under the rule we have stated, that, whilst we must consider the record for the purpose of determining the question of jurisdiction which the certificate shows adequately to have been raised, we may not consider, in passing upon that question, in the absence of a bill of exceptions, the extraneous matter, such as the testimony of the plaintiff, etc., which forms no part of the record. The question, therefore, for decision under these circumstances is merely this: Does the record show jurisdiction in the court below? This solely depends upon the contention that the allegation in the complaint of the alienage of the plaintiff was insufficient.

The allegation was as follows: "That the plaintiff now is, and for more than one year last past has been, a resident of Washington and a citizen of Sweden." In brief, the argument is that at the time the action was brought Sweden was under a monarchical form of government, being, jointly with Norway, under the rule of the King of Sweden and Norway, and if the plaintiff owed allegiance to the government of Sweden he was not a "citizen" but a "subject" of that country. It is not, however, disputed that, although at the time of the bringing of this action Sweden, a limited monarchy, was united to Norway under the same king, and [283] the two countries were *bound to assist each other in the event of war, they were otherwise free and independent. 9 Century Dictionary and Encyclopedia, 969. The allegation that the plaintiff was a resident of the state of Washington clearly shows that the designation "citizen of Sweden" was not employed to indicate mere residence, and could only have been intended as a statement of the nationality of the plaintiff,—the country to which he bore allegiance. Whether, as contended for the defendant in error, the plaintiff, if he owed allegiance to the ruler of the Kingdom of Sweden, was properly described, in the strictest technical sense, as a citizen instead of as a subject of Sweden, we need not consider. The meaning of the pleader being evident, the objection is without merit. Hennessy v. Richardson Drug Co. 189 U. S. 25, 47 L. ed. 697, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

Whilst we hold that in a case of direct review under the judiciary act of 1891, when the record does not otherwise show when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised, the certificate of the circuit court may be considered for the purpose of supplying such deficiency when the elements necessary to decide the question are in the record, we deem it the better practice in every case of direct review on a question of jurisdiction to make apparent on the record, by a bill of exceptions or other appropriate mode, the fact that the question of jurisdiction was raised and passed upon, and the elements upon which the decision of the question was based.

Judgment affirmed.

*REUBEN L. MARTIN, Plff. in Err., [284]
v.
PITTSBURG & LAKE ÉRIE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 284-296.)

Postoffice—congressional power over post roads—state regulation.

1. The power of Congress to establish postoffices and post roads is not infringed by Pa. act of April 4, 1868, under which a railway postal clerk, injured in the course of his employment, can have no greater rights against the railway company than if he were an employee.

Commerce—state regulation.

2. Applying to interstate transportation the provisions of Pa. act of April 4, 1868, restricting, as against a railway company, the rights of persons injured in the course of their employment in or about the railroad to those which an employee of the railway company would have under like circumstances, does not make such statute repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Constitutional law—due process of law.

3. Due process of law is not denied a person injured in the course of his employment in or about a railroad by Pa. act of April 4, 1868, restricting his rights as against the railway company to those which an employee of such company would have under like circumstances.

Constitutional law—privileges and immunities.

4. Privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States are not denied by applying to interstate transportation the provisions of Pa. act of April 4, 1868, restricting, as against a railroad company, the rights of persons injured in the course of their employment in or about the railroad to those which an employee of the railway

NOTE.—On the liability of railroad companies for injuries received by postal clerks on their trains—see note to Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ketcham, 19 L.R.A. 339.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

company would have under like circumstances.

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—classification.

5. Restricting railway mail clerks and others whose employment in and about a railroad subjects them to greater peril than passengers in the strict sense to such right of action against the railway company for injuries received in the course of their employment as a railway employee would have under like circumstances is a reasonable classification, which sustains the provision of Pa. act of April 4, 1868, making it, as against the objection that such statute denies the equal protection of the laws.

[No. 66.]

Argued October 26, 29, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Mahoning County, in that state, which had in turn affirmed a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of that county, in favor of defendant, in an action by a railway postal clerk to recover from a railway company for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by reason of its negligence. Affirmed.

See same case below, 72 Ohio St. 659, 76 N. E. 1129.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Reuben L. Martin brought this action to recover compensation for personal injuries. At the time Martin was injured he was on a train of the railroad company, in the employ of the United States as a railway postal clerk on a route extending from Cleveland, Ohio, to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The *injuries arose from the derailing in Pennsylvania of the train, by the negligence of the crew of a work train, in permitting a switch leading to a side track to be open. Among other defenses the company pleaded a law of Pennsylvania passed April 4, 1868 (P. L. 58), which, it alleged, was applicable, and relieved from responsibility. In reply the plaintiff denied the existence and applicability of the statute, moreover, and defended on the ground that the statute, if existing and applicable, was void, first, because contrary to the power delegated to Congress to establish postoffices and post roads; second, because repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution; and, third, because in conflict with the equal protection and due process clauses of the 14th Amendment, and also the clause prohibiting a state from making or enforcing any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States.

203 U. S.

On trial before a jury the court held the statute in question to be applicable and valid, and hence operative to defeat a recovery. A verdict and judgment in favor of the railroad company was severally affirmed by the circuit court and by the supreme court of the state of Ohio.

Mr. Charles Koonce, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Robert B. Murray and William S. Anderson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Prior to the enactment of this statute everyone lawfully on a train who was not in fact an employee of the company was, and had the rights of, a passenger in the state of Pennsylvania.

Lockhart v. Lichtenhaler, 46 Pa. 151; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Henderson, 51 Pa. 315; Creed v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 86 Pa. 139, 27 Am. Rep. 693; Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Myers, 55 Pa. 288; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502; Gleeson v. Virginia Midland R. Co. 140 U. S. 435, 35 L. ed. 458, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; Yarrington v. Delaware & H. Co. 143 Fed. 565.

The same rule has been announced without exception in every other jurisdiction.

Cavin v. Southern P. Co. 69 C. C. A. 366, 136 Fed. 592; Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 68 C. C. A. 409, 135 Fed. 1015; Arrowsmith v. Nashville & D. R. Co. 57 Fed. 165; Collett v. London & N. W. R. Co. 15 Jur. 1053, 16 Q. B. 984; Mellor v. Missouri P. R. Co. 105 Mo. 460, 10 L.R.A. 36, 16 S. W. 849; Magoffin v. Missouri P. R. Co. 102 Mo. 540, 22 Am. St. Rep. 798, 15 S. W. 76; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 562, 47 Am. Rep. 75; Blair v. Erie R. Co. 66 N. Y. 313, 23 Am. Rep. 55; Yeomans v. Contra Costa Steam Nav. Co. 44 Cal. 71; Hammond v. North Eastern R. Co. 6 S. C. N. S. 130, 24 Am. Rep. 467; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 72 Md. 36, 6 L.R.A. 706, 20 Am. St. Rep. 454, 18 Atl. 1107; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kingman, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 82, 35 S. W. 264; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Crudup, 63 Miss. 291; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ketcham, 133 Ind. 346, 19 L.R.A. 339, 36 Am. St. Rep. 550, 33 N. E. 116; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Shott, 92 Va. 34, 22 S. E. 811.

It was also the established law of the state of Pennsylvania that a common carrier could not, by contractual stipulation, relieve itself of liability for the negligence of itself or its servants, whereby those carried by it were injured.

New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357-368, 21 L. ed. 627-636; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. 479, 49 Am. Dec. 533; Camden & A. R. Co. v. Baldauf, 16 Pa. 67, 55

Am. Dec. 481; Goldey v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 30 Pa. 242, 72 Am. Dec. 703; Powell v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 32 Pa. 414, 75 Am. Dec. 564; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Henderson, supra; Farnham v. Camden & A. R. Co. 55 Pa. 53; American Exp. Co. v. Sands, 55 Pa. 140; Empire Transp. Co. v. Wamsutta Oil Ref. & Min. Co. 63 Pa. 14, 3 Am. Rep. 515; Grogan v. Adams Exp. Co. 114 Pa. 523, 60 Am. Rep. 360, 7 Atl. 134; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. McCloskey, 23 Pa. 526; Phoenix Pot Works v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 139 Pa. 284, 20 Atl. 1058; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Raiordon, 119 Pa. 577, 4 Am. St. Rep. 670, 13 Atl. 324; The Kensington, 183 U. S. 263-268, 46 L. ed. 190-193, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

If this limitation of liability cannot be effected by contract, wherein there is a voluntary waiver on the part of the one carried, to recover damages against the carrier for negligence of itself or its servants, how can it be compelled by legislative enactment?

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684-693, 43 L. ed. 858-862, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

The authority of Congress to legislate with reference to the establishment of post-offices and post roads, and all matters of an executive and administrative character pertaining thereto, is exclusive.

Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564-583-593, 39 L. ed. 1092-1102-1105, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713-725, 18 L. ed. 96-99; Searight v. Stokes, 3 How. 151, 11 L. ed. 537; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727-732, 24 L. ed. 877-879; Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489-493, 30 L. ed. 694-696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299-319, 13 L. ed. 996-1004; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283-462, 12 L. ed. 702-777; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35-42, 18 L. ed. 745, 746; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418-430, 20 L. ed. 449-452; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232-279, 21 L. ed. 146-162; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465-469, 24 L. ed. 527-529; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691-697, 26 L. ed. 238, 239; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196-203, 29 L. ed. 158-161, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1-222, 6 L. ed. 23-76; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275-282, 23 L. ed. 347-350; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622-631, 29 L. ed. 257-260, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446-455, 29 L. ed. 691-694, 6 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 454; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204-212, 38 L. ed. 962-966, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. ed. 518, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160-162, 47 L. ed. 995-999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181-190, 31 L. ed. 650-654, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737.

But even if the right of Congress to legislate with reference to the rights and liabilities of the plaintiff were not exclusive, the state statute is in conflict with the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Kelley v. Rhoads and Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, supra; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485-489, 24 L. ed. 547, 548; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146.

The interstate passenger is comprehended by the constitutional provision as well as the interstate carrier.

Central R. Co. v. Murphy, 196 U. S. 194-206, 49 L. ed. 444-449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 388, 45 L. ed. 244, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Hart v. State, 100 Md. 595, 60 Atl. 457.

The statute denies the plaintiff the right of due process of law in that it abridges his liberty of contract.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45-53, 49 L. ed. 937-

940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Constr. Co. 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L.R.A. 775, 93 Am. St. Rep. 670, 65 N. E. 885; Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 423, 45 N. E. 313; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Low v. Rees Printing Co. 41 Neb. 127, 24 L.R.A. 702, 43 Am. St. Rep. 670, 59 N. W. 362; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L.R.A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 1, 42 L.R.A. 490, 68 Am. St. Rep. 736, 51 N. E. 257; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 58 Ark. 407, 23 L.R.A. 264, 41 Am. St. Rep. 109, 25 S. W. 75; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 136, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Long v. State, 74 Md. 565, 12 L.R.A. 425, 28 Am. St. Rep. 268, 22 Atl. 4; Luman v. Hitchens Bros. 90 Md. 25, 46 L.R.A. 393, 44 Atl. 1051; Ex parte Sing Lec. 96 Cal. 354, 24 L.R.A. 195, 31 Am. St. Rep. 218, 31 Pac. 245; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 28, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Re Hong Wah, 82 Fed. 623; Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, §§ 120-147; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 52 L.R.A. 283, 80 Am. St. Rep. 176, 58 N. E. 1007; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 562, 47 Am. Rep. 75.

The statute denies the plaintiff the right of due process of law in that it deprives him of his right of remedy for negligent injury.

Hanson v. Krehbiel, 68 Kan. 670, 64 L. R.A. 790, 104 Am. St. Rep. 422, 75 Pac. 1041; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Park v. Detroit Free Press. Co. 72 Mich. 560, 1 L.R.A. 599, 16 Am. St. Rep. 544, 40 N. W. 731; McGee v. Baumgartner, 121 Mich. 287, 80 N. W. 21; Osborn v. Leach, 135 N. C. 628, 66 L.R.A. 648, 47 S. E. 811.

It abridges plaintiff's privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States.

Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

It denies to him as a railway postal clerk within the jurisdiction of that state the equal protection of the laws.

Brannon, 14th Amendment, 322; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 188, 31 L. ed. 653, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Gulf, C. 203 U. S.

& S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722, 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604; Luman v. Hitchens Bros. Co. supra; State v. Walsh, 136 Mo. 400, 35 L.R.A. 231, 37 S. W. 1112; Ex parte Jentzsch, 112 Cal. 468, 32 L.R.A. 664, 44 Pac. 803; Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants (Dibrell v. Lanier) 89 Tenn. 497, 12 L.R.A. 70, 15 S. W. 87; Dixon v. Poe, 159 Ind. 492, 60 L.R.A. 308, 95 Am. St. Rep. 309, 65 N. E. 518; Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 33 L.R.A. 589, 36 S. W. 697; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168; Cooley, Const. Lim. 393.

Is the classification, and discrimination against the same, made by act of 1868, arbitrary, as relating to postal clerks?

State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 146, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 340; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard), 183 U. S. 107, 108, 46 L. ed. 107, 108, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The police power must be exercised subject to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45-64, 49 L. ed. 937-944, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11-25, 49 L. ed. 643-649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465-473, 24 L. ed. 527-531; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham), 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313-319, 34 L. ed. 455-457, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59-63, 27 L. ed. 383-385, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446-460, 29 L. ed. 691-695, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 1, 42 L.R.A. 490, 68 Am. St. Rep. 736, 51 N. E. 257; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; Block v. Schwartz, 27 Utah, 387, 65 L.R.A. 308, 101 Am. St. Rep. 971, 76 Pac. 22; State v. Missouri Tie & Timber Co. 181 Mo. 536, 65 L.R.A. 588, 103 Am. St. Rep. 614, 80 S. W. 933; State v. Walsh, supra; State v. Gardner, 58 Ohio St. 610, 41 L.R.A. 689, 65 Am. St. Rep. 785, 51 N. E. 136; Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 23, 29 L.R.A. 386, 53 Am. St. Rep. 622, 41 N. E. 263; Re Preston, 63 Ohio St. 428, 52 L.R.A. 523, 81 Am. St. Rep. 642, 59 N. E. 101; Miller v. Crawford, 70 Ohio St. 207, 71 N. E.

631; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 372, 30 L. ed. 227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Re Jacobs, supra; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 45, 38 L. ed. 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Limitation of the liability of a carrier for the negligence of itself or its servants is contrary to public policy.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Raiordan, 119 Pa. 577, 4 Am. St. Rep. 670, 13 Atl. 324; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 486, 14 L. ed. 509; The New World v. King, 16 How. 469-474, 14 L. ed. 1019-1021; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 378, 381, 384, 21 L. ed. 627, 639-641; The Kensington, 183 U. S. 263-268, 46 L. ed. 190-193, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1, 2 Am. Rep. 362.

If an attempt at limitation of liability by contractual stipulation cannot be permitted, on the ground that it contravenes public policy, a limitation by legislative enactment, whereby constitutional rights are infringed, for the same and more potent reasons, cannot be permitted; for persons may voluntarily contract to do what no legislature would have the right to compel them to do.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684-697, 43 L. ed. 858-864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

How this statute—even though it be held to have been enacted to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety—has any real or substantial relation to those objects, requires a power of discernment which is not given to mortals making their examination through the medium of fairness.

Lochner v. New York, supra.

Mr. James P. Wilson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Arrel, Wilson, & Harrington, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under the law of the state of Pennsylvania, the plaintiff did not sustain the relation of passenger to the defendant, either prior to or subsequent to the passage of the statute.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Price, 96 Pa. 256.

It may be conceded that the carrying of the United States mails is a matter relating to interstate commerce, and that the regulation of it rests with Congress. It is conceded that the plaintiff was in charge of the mails at the time of his injury. These admitted facts in no manner affect the question.

Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 113 U. S. 218-222, 28 L. ed. 980, 981, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

Congress not having legislated on this particular subject until long subsequent to the trial of this cause, the Pennsylvania statute under consideration in no manner violates the commercial clause of the Federal Constitution, or the clause relating to the establishment of post roads.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 700, 40 L. ed. 859, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Peirce v. Van Dusen, 69 L.R.A. 705, 24 C. C. A. 280, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 693; Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 440, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Boering v. Chesapeake Beach R. Co. 193 U. S. 442, 48 L. ed. 742, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Duncan v. Maine C. R. Co. 113 Fed. 508; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 75, 95; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 560, 21 L. ed. 710; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Willfong v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co. 116 Iowa, 548, 90 N. W. 358; Illinois C. R. Co. v. People, 143 Ill. 434, 19 L.R.A. 119, 33 N. E. 173; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

Long acquiescence by a state in the enforcement of a statute, and the repeated enforcement of it by the courts of that state, is a strong argument against the unconstitutionality of it when attempted to be raised.

8 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 737; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 77, 738 note.

An act of the legislature supported by a long line of adjudication, and treated by the government as constitutional, will not be inquired into.

Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

This statute has been upheld by the Pennsylvania courts.

Kirby v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 76 Pa. 506; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Price, 96 Pa. 256;

Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 154 Pa. 473, 26 Atl. 779.

A statute which is not violative of the Pennsylvania Constitution does not violate the germane provision of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 314, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579.

State statutes can make the peculiar circumstances which surround particular persons the ground for the imposition of certain liabilities or the relief from certain liabilities.

7 Cyc. Law & Proc. title "Const. Law," p. 1052.

A state may enlarge the liability of a master for the negligence of a servant without depriving him of property without due process of law.

8 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 1098; Levick v. Norton, 51 Conn. 461; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161.

This statute is clearly within the constitutional rights of the legislature of Pennsylvania or of any other state to enact laws which operate equally upon all of a certain class, and which affect all persons pursuing the same business under the same conditions, alike.

State v. Schlemmer, 42 La. Ann. 1166, 10 L.R.A. 135, 8 So. 307; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 208, 209, 32 L. ed. 108, 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 970; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 718, 25 L. ed. 496; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 133 Ind. 513, 18 L.R.A. 729, 33 N. E. 421; Sutton v. State, 96 Tenn. 696, 33 L.R.A. 589, 36 S. W. 697; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573; State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 202, 57 L.R.A. 863, 81 Am. St. Rep. 626, 58 N. E. 572.

The very large discretion accorded to the state legislatures and recognized by the Federal courts may be evidenced by a quotation from a few of the adjudicated cases.

Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 188, 44 L. ed. 728, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 701, 40 L. ed. 859, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 381, 388, 392, 42 L. ed. 787, 789, 791, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

It is not against public policy to permit an express messenger expressly to waive all right of compensation arising from the negligence of the railroad company's employees.

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 498, 44 L. ed. 560, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

It is not contrary to public policy for a person riding upon a gratuitous pass to waive negligence of the company.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 440, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Boering v. Chesapeake Beach R. Co. 193 U. S. 442, 48 L. ed. 742, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515.

The policy of including those workmen who voluntarily subject themselves to similar risks, in the same rule of liability as the company's employees themselves, and of according to them similar rights, is entirely consistent with the settled policy of the state of Pennsylvania in nearly a century of judicial history,—to wit, a recognition of the soundness of the policy which prevents a recovery by one servant for the personal negligence of another, even though that other be in control and direction over the injured servant.

New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Bell, 112 Pa. 400, 4 Atl. 50; Duffy v. Oliver Bros. 131 Pa. 203, 18 Atl. 872.

If we seek for the reason of the rule it will be found deep in the common law.

Priestly v. Fowler, 3 Mees. & W. 1; Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 49, 38 Am. Dec. 339.

It is no new thing in our common law to extend the principle of fellow servant to include employees of third persons, who, by their work, are in contact with the servants of the master, who is made defendant, and to deny liability to the servants of such third persons upon the principle, not that they assume the risk of the service, but that the public policy of the state is best subserved by a rule denying liability in such cases, and that its tendency is to induce a greater degree of vigilance upon the part of all operatives engaged in a common work.

Harkins v. Standard Sugar Refinery, 122 Mass. 400; Johnson v. Boston, 118 Mass. 114.

This statute is not invalid because it applies only to railroad companies, and is not applicable to other carriers of freight and passengers, such as steamship companies, stage coaches, and carriers of marine freight.

State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 210, 52 L.R.A. 863, 81 Am. St. Rep. 626, 58 N. E. 572; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161.

There has been no hesitation by the Supreme Court of the United States in upholding legislation increasing the liability of railroad companies, and the fact that such legislation abrogates the common law has never been considered to deny to railroad companies the equal protection of the law. The whole matter has been deemed to come under the head of police regulations committed wholly to the discretion of the state legislature.

8 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 1078, 1079; Misouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 210, 32 L. ed. 107, 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

If the statutes wiping out the common law and increasing the liability of railroad corporations to the exclusion of others did not contravene this fundamental law of the land, we suppose that laws upon the same subject, which, in the opinion of the highest state courts, fairly tend to accomplish the same result, to wit, an increased public safety, cannot be attacked upon any such ground, even though the common-law liability of such corporation be thereby diminished.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 716, note.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

We quote the Pennsylvania statute of April 4, 1868, upon which the case turns:

[292] *"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met: It is hereby enacted by the authority of the same that when any person shall sustain personal injury or loss of life while lawfully engaged or employed on or about the roads, works, depots, and premises of a railroad company, or in or about any train or car therein or thereon, of which company such person is not an employee, the right of action and recovery in all such cases against the company shall be such only as would exist if such person were an employee, provided that this section shall not apply to passengers."

As the application of the statute, if valid, presents no Federal question, we are unconcerned with that matter, although it may be observed in passing that it is conceded in the argument at bar that under the settled construction given to the statute by the supreme court of Pennsylvania the plaintiff, as a railway postal clerk, was not a passenger, and had no greater rights in the event of being injured in the course of his employment than would have had an employe of the railroad company.

Was the application of the statute thus construed to a railway postal clerk of the United States in conflict with the power of Congress to establish postoffices and post roads?

In Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 113 U. S. 221, 28 L. ed. 981, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, this question was in effect foreclosed against the plaintiff in error. That case was brought to this court from a judgment of the supreme court of Pennsylvania (96 Pa. 258), holding that a railway postal clerk was not a passenger within the meaning of the Pennsylvania act, and hence had no right to recover for injuries suffered by him in consequence of the negligence of an employe of the company. The Federal ground there relied upon was substantially the one here asserted; that is, the power of the government of the United States to establish postoffices and post roads, and the effect of the legislation of Congress and the act of the Postmaster General in appointing mail clerks thereunder. After fully considering the subject the case *was dismissed because no substantial Federal ground was involved, the court saying (113 U. S. 221, 28 L. ed. 981, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428):

"The person thus to be carried with the mail matter, without extra charge, is no more a passenger because he is in charge of the mail, nor because no other compensation is made for his transportation, than if he had no such charge; nor does the fact that he is in the employment of the United States, and that defendant is bound, by contract with the government, to carry him, affect the question. It would be just the same if the company had contracted with any other person who had charge of freight on the train to carry him without additional compensation. The statutes of the United States which authorize this employment and direct this service do not, therefore, make the person so engaged a passenger, or deprive him of that character, in construing the Pennsylvania statute. Nor does it give to persons so employed any right, as against the railroad company, which would not belong to any other person in a similar employment, by others than the United States."

This brings us to the second contention,—the repugnancy of the Pennsylvania statute to the commerce clause of the Constitution. It is apparent from the decision in the Price Case, just previously referred to, that in deciding that question we must determine the application of the statute to the plaintiff in error, wholly irrespective of the fact that at the time he was injured he was a railway postal clerk. In other words, the validity or invalidity of the statute is to be adjudged precisely as if the plaintiff was, at the time of the injury, serving for hire in the employment of a private individual or corporation.

Under the circumstances we have stated, the case of Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, clearly establishes the unsoundness of the contention that the Pennsylvania statute in question was void because in conflict with the commerce clause. In that case a horse was shipped from a point in the state of New York to a point in the state of Pennsylvania under a bill of lading which [294] limited the right of *recovery to not exceeding $100 for any injury which might be occasioned to the animal during the transit. The horse was hurt within the state of Pennsylvania through the negligence of a connecting carrier. In the courts of Pennsylvania, applying the Pennsylvania doctrine which denies the right of a common carrier to limit its liability for injuries resulting from negligence, a recovery was had in the sum of $10,000, the value of the animal. On writ of error from this court the judgment of the supreme court of Pennsylvania was affirmed, it being held that, at least, in the absence of legislation by Congress on the subject, the effect of the commerce clause of the Constitution was not to deprive the state of Pennsylvania of authority to legislate as to those within its jurisdiction concerning the liability of common carriers, although such legislation might, to some extent, indirectly affect interstate commerce. The ruling in the Hughes Case in effect but reiterated the principle adopted and applied in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, where an Iowa statute forbidding a common carrier from contracting to exempt itself from liability was sustained as to a person who was injured during an interstate transportation.

The contention that because, in the cases referred to, the operation of the state laws which were sustained was to augment the liability of a carrier, therefore the rulings are inapposite here, where the consequence of the application of the state statute may be to lessen the carrier's liability, rests upon a distinction without a difference. The result of the previous rulings was to recognize, in the absence of action by Congress, the power of the states to legislate, and of course this power involved the authority to regulate as the state might deem best for the public good, without reference to whether the effect of the legislation might be to limit or broaden the responsibility of the carrier. In other words, the assertion of Federal right is disposed of when we determine the question of power, and doing so does not involve considering the wisdom [295] *with which the lawful power may have been under stated conditions, exerted.

And the views previously stated are adequate to dispose of the assertion that the Pennsylvania statute is void for repugnancy to the 14th Amendment. If it be conceded, as contended, that the plaintiff in error could have recovered but for the statute, it does not follow that the legislature of Pennsylvania, in preventing a recovery, took away a vested right or a right of property. As the accident from which the cause of action is asserted to have arisen occurred long after the passage of the statute, it is difficult to grasp the contention that the statute deprived the plaintiff in error of the rights just stated. Such a contention, in reason, must rest upon the proposition that the state of Pennsylvania was without power to legislate on the subject,—a proposition which we have adversely disposed of. This must be, since it would clearly follow, if the argument relied upon were maintained, that the state would be without power on the subject. For it cannot be said that the state had authority in the premises if that authority did not even extend to prescribing a rule which would be applicable to conditions wholly arising in the future.

The contention that because plaintiff in error, as a citizen of the United States, had a constitutional right to travel from one state to another, he was entitled, as the result of an accident happening in Pennsylvania, to a cause of action not allowed by the laws of that state, is in a different form to reiterate that the Pennsylvania statute was repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. Conceding, if the accident had happened in Ohio, there would have been a right to recover, that fact did not deprive the state of Pennsylvania of its authority to legislate so as to affect persons and things within its borders. The commerce clause not being controlling in the absence of legislation by Congress, it follows, of necessity, that the plaintiff in error, as an incident of his right to travel from state to state, did not possess the privilege, as to an accident happening in Pennsylvania, to exert a cause *of ac-[296] tion not given by the laws of that state, and had no immunity exempting him from the control of the state legislation.

The proposition that the statute denied to the plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws because it "capriciously, arbitrarily, and unnaturally," by the classification made, deprived railway mail clerks of the rights of passengers, which they might have enjoyed if the statute had not been enacted, is without merit. The classification made by the statute does not alone embrace railway mail clerks, but places in a class by themselves such clerks and others whose employment in and about a railroad subjects them to greater peril than passengers in the strictest sense. This general difference renders it impossible in reason to say, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, that the legislature of Pennsylvania, in classifying passengers in the strict sense in one class and those who are subject to greater risks, including railway mail clerks, in another, acted so arbitrarily as to violate the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Judgment affirmed.

NATIONAL LIVE STOCK BANK OF CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF GENESEO, ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 296-310.)

Appeal—distinction between appeal and writ of error.

1. Writ of error is the proper method of reviewing a judgment of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma, affirming a judgment of the court below in an action of replevin tried by the court upon waiver of a jury.

Error—to territorial supreme court—statement of facts.

2. There is a finding of facts upon which a review can be had in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to the Oklahoma supreme court, where the latter court states in its opinion that on a prior appeal it had made "a full statement and findings of facts," and had enunciated the law as applied thereto, and that finding the record the same as stated in its former opinion, and being satisfied with the law as therein declared, no new question being raised, the judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

Chattel mortgage—assignment—record.

3. The provision for recording the satisfaction of a chattel mortgage by the mortgagee, his assigns or personal representative, which is made by Kan. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 4251, ¶ 36, does not make it necessary to record or file the assignment of a chattel mortgage in order to protect the assignee.

Chattel mortgage—assignment—record.

4. The failure of the Kansas laws to prohibit the recording of the assignment of a chattel mortgage given to secure a negotiable note does not make such action necessary in order to protect the assignee, but, in order to compel such action, there must be a law which provides for such record, either in express terms or by plain and necessary implication.

[No. 33.]

Argued October 17, 18, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

NOTE.—On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Woodward County, in that territory, in favor of defendant in an action of replevin. Affirmed.

See same case below, 15 Okla. 194, 79 Pac. 1134, on former appeal, 13 Okla. 719, 76 Pac. 130.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an action of replevin, brought by the plaintiff in error against the defendant in error, in the district court of Woodward county, in the then territory of Oklahoma, to recover possession of certain cattle, once belonging to one W. B. Grimes, and by him mortgaged. The trial resulted in a judgment for the defendant, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory, and the plaintiff has brought the case here by writ of error.

The action has been twice tried. The first trial ended in a judgment for the plaintiff. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the territory it was reversed and the case remanded, and a second trial had, resulting in the judgment for defendant now under review. Upon the second appeal to the supreme court of the territory a brief opinion was given, in which it was stated that upon appeal from the first judgment the court had "promulgated an opinion, in which it made a full statement and findings of facts and enunciated the law as applied thereto, reversed the judgment of the lower court, and remanded the case, directing a new trial. 13 Okla. 719, 76 Pac. 130." The court also stated in its opinion on the second appeal that it had been agreed upon between the parties in the trial court that a jury should be waived and the case submitted on the record as made *on the first trial, and that [298] "no new question is raised on this appeal. The record is the same as stated in our former opinion, and we are fully satisfied with the law as therein declared. The judgment of the lower court is hereby affirmed at the cost of the appellant." [(Okla.) 79 Pac. 1134.]

The following facts were found by the supreme court on the first appeal, and were adopted by it as the facts for review on the second appeal:

One W. B. Grimes, who at the time was a resident of Clark county, in Kansas, executed at that place, on the 27th day of June, 1900, and delivered to Siegel-Sanders Live Stock Commission Company, his negotiable promissory note for $11,111.23, due November 1, 1900, with interest from maturity at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. To secure the payment of this note he executed and delivered a chattel mortgage to the payee of the note on 526 cattle then in the county, and the mortgage was duly filed in the office of the register of deeds of Clark county on July 12, 1900. The note was then indorsed and delivered by the payee to the Geneseo Bank, the defendant in error. It does not appear that there was any separate assignment of the mortgage. No record of any assignment was ever made in the register's office of Clark county, Kansas. On the 24th day of November, 1900, although the Siegel-Sanders Company had already sold and delivered the note for $11,111.23 to the Geneseo Bank, the defendant in error, yet, notwithstanding such sale, the president of that company, Frank Siegel, without any authority, filed in the office of the register of deeds a pretended release of the mortgage, in which payment of the above debt was acknowledged.

On the 25th day of February, 1901, the Chicago Cattle Loan Company caused its agent to examine the records of Clark county as to chattel mortgages against Grimes, and upon this examination he found the record clear, except as to a mortgage executed by Grimes to the Siegel-Sanders Live Stock Company, October 24, 1900, and by [299] it assigned to the *Chicago Cattle Loan Company, and True so reported to the last-named company.

On April 17, 1901, Grimes executed two other notes to the Siegel-Sanders Company for $7,694.70 each, due October 27, 1901. These notes were probably renewals of notes previously given. To secure the payment of these two notes Grimes at the same time executed and delivered a chattel mortgage to the Siegel-Sanders Company on the cattle in question and other cattle. The two notes thus given were then sold by that company to the plaintiff in error for the amount named in the notes, and the plaintiff believed at the time it bought these notes that the mortgage securing them was the first lien on the cattle, and it secured this information through its agent, who personally examined the record.

It is further stated in the finding that there was practically no dispute as to the facts, and that the trial court expressly found that both parties to this action acted in good faith.

The release of the first mortgage, signed by the president of the Live Stock Commission Company and filed in the office of the register of deeds, as above stated, on November 24, 1900, was not acknowledged.

After the execution of these various instruments, and between the 25th of April and the 1st of May, 1901, without the knowledge or consent of either of the banks, parties to this suit, Grimes, the original owner of the cattle, moved them from the state of Kansas to the county of Woodward, in the territory of Oklahoma, at which latter place, between the 19th and 20th of May, 1901, they were seized and taken possession of by the Geneseo Bank, the defendant. The plaintiff, within one year from the filing of the first mortgage, dated June, 27, 1900, in the office of the register of deeds of Clark county, Kansas, commenced this suit in replevin in the district court of Woodward county, Oklahoma, to recover possession of the cattle, claiming under the mortgage which was executed and delivered to the Siegel-Sanders Company on April 17, 1901, and by it sold to plaintiff; while the *defendant claimed under the mortgage dated [300] June 27, 1900, a pretended release of which had been filed as already stated, but after the assignment to defendant.
203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

Upon these facts, as found by the supreme court of Oklahoma, judgment was rendered for the defendant in error.

Mr. Silas H. Strawn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick S. Winston, John Barton Payne, Ralph M. Shaw, Blackburn Esterline, and Earle W. Evans, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The failure of the Geneseo bank to take and record an assignment of the chattel mortgage left it within the power of the commission company to release the same of record. The Geneseo bank should abide by the consequences of its negligence, and sustain the loss; as it is the law that when one of two innocent parties must suffer, the loss should be borne by him through whose negligence it was brought about.

Lewis v. Kirk, 28 Kan. 497, 42 Am. Rep. 173; Thomas v. Reynolds, 29 Kan. 304; Parkhurst v. First Nat. Bank, 53 Kan. 136, 35 Pac. 1116; Williams v. Jackson, 107 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 529, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814; Swasey v. Emerson, 168 Mass. 118, 60 Am. St. Rep. 368, 46 N. E. 426; Ogle v. Turpin, 102 Ill. 148; Mann v. Jummel, 183 Ill. 523, 56 N. E. 16; Lennartz v. Quilty, 191 Ill. 174, 85 Am. St. Rep. 260, 60 N. E. 913; Bowling v. Cook, 39 Iowa, 200; Rand v. Barrett, 66 Iowa, 731, 24 N. W. 530; Jenks v. Shaw, 99 Iowa, 604, 61 Am. St. Rep. 256, 68 N. W. 900; Purdy v. Huntington, 42 N. Y. 339, 1 Am. Rep. 532; Van Keuren v. Corkins, 66 N. Y. 79; Clark v. Mackin, 95 N. Y. 345; Porter v. Ourada, 51 Neb. 510, 71 N. W. 52; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Talbot, 113 Ind. 373, 3 Am. St. Rep. 655, 14 N. E. 588; Baugher v. Woollen, 147 Ind. 308, 45 N. E. 94; Ayers v. Hays, 60 Ind. 455; Morris v. Beecher, 1 N. D. 130, 45 N. W. 696; Pickford v. Peebles, 7 S. D. 166, 63 N. W. 779; Trenton Bkg. Co. v. Woodruff, 2 N. J. Eq. 117; Ferguson v. Glassford, 68 Mich. 36, 35 N. W. 820; Jones, Mortg. §§ 481, 791, 820; Cobbey, Chat. Mortg. § 648; Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 27 L. ed. 1012, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.
193

The execution, filing, and recording of the release of the chattel mortgage by the commission company, in whom the record title to the cattle stood, was a notice to all the world that the debt secured by the mortgage had been paid, and that the cattle were cleared of the lien.

Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 313; Pierce v. Faunce, 47 Me. 513; Drumm-Flato Commission Co. v. Barnard, 66 Kan. 568, 72 Pac. 257.

The case is properly here by writ of error.

Comstock v. Eagleton, 196 U. S. 99, 49 L. ed. 402, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Oklahoma City v. McMaster, 196 U. S. 529, 49 L. ed. 587, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Guss v. Nelson, 200 U. S. 298, 50 L. ed. 489, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260.

Agreed facts have the same force and effect as a special finding of facts.

Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 65; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 103 U. S. 554, 26 L. ed. 486; Lehnen v. Dickson, 148 U. S. 71, 37 L. ed. 373, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Wilson v. Merchants' Loan & T. Co. 183 U. S. 121, 46 L. ed. 113, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Guss v. Nelson, supra.

Mr. James S. Botsford argued the cause, and, with Messrs. B. F. Deatherage and Odus G. Young, filed briefs for defendant in error:

This case should have been brought to this court by appeal, and not by writ of error, and the writ of error should be dismissed.

Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610, 612-614, 25 L. ed. 421-423; Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, 619, 26 L. ed. 849; Neslin v. Wells, F. & Co. 104 U. S. 428, 26 L. ed. 802; Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 235, 26 L. ed. 1018; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 1021; Gray v. Howe, 108 U. S. 12, 27 L. ed. 634, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Story v. Black, 119 U. S. 235, 30 L. ed. 341, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 513, 33 L. ed. 433, 436, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Gregory Consol. Min. Co. v. Starr, 141 U. S. 222, 35 L. ed. 715, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; San Pedro & C. D. A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 130, 36 L. ed. 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Mammoth Min. Co. v. Salt Lake Foundry & Mach. Co. 151 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 229, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Bonni- field v. Price, 154 U. S. 672, Appx. and 26 L. ed. 1022, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co. 160 U. S. 303, 40 L. ed. 436, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 468, 41 L. ed. 230, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Young v. Amy, 171 U. S. 179, 43 L. ed. 127, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802;

Marshall v. Burtis, 172 U. S. 630, 43 L. ed. 579, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Cohn v. Daley, 174 U. S. 539, 43 L. ed. 1077, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802.

Even if this case were here on appeal instead of by writ of error, this court is without jurisdiction to consider the case, because there is no finding of facts in the nature of a special verdict by either the supreme court of Oklahoma or the district court of Woodward county, Oklahoma. This is necessary to give this court jurisdiction. The statement of facts in the opinion of the Oklahoma supreme court on the first hearing does not constitute a finding of facts in the nature of a special verdict.

Dickinson v. Planters' Bank, 16 Wall. 250, 252-256, 21 L. ed. 278, 279; Lahnen v. Dickson, 148 U. S. 78, 37 L. ed. 375, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Saltonstall v. Birtwell, 150 U. S. 417, 37 L. ed. 1128, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Stone v. United States, 164 U. S. 380, 41 L. ed. 477, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Kentucky Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 11 C. C. A. 42, 22 U. S. App. 386, 548, 63 Fed. 93; Minchen v. Hart, 18 C. C. A. 570, 36 U. S. App. 534, 72 Fed. 294; National Masonic Acci. Asso. v. Sparks, 28 C. C. A. 399, 49 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 225; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. DuBois, 29 C. C. A. 354, 56 U. S. App. 586, 85 Fed. 586.

On the facts shown by the record in this case and recited in our statement of facts, the Chicago bank was not a subsequent purchaser bona fide, for value, without notice, of its notes and mortgages.

1 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 880; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 211, 9 L. ed. 388, 400; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 2d ed. §§ 784, 785; Holdsworth v. Shannon, 113 Mo. 508, 35 Am. St. Rep. 719, 21 S. W. 85; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 117 Mo. 261, 38 Am. St. Rep. 656, 22 S. W. 623.

It is conceded that the Geneseo bank had no actual knowledge of the filing of the release or of the filing of the mortgage under which the Chicago bank claims. That release and the mortgage of the Chicago bank were filed and recorded months after the filing and recording of the mortgage of the Geneseo bank. It is well settled that a prior mortgagee is not affected with constructive notice of any instrument made and filed by his mortgagor subsequent to the filing of his mortgage.

Tydings v. Pitcher, 82 Mo. 379; Meier v. Meier, 105 Mo. 433, 16 S. W. 223; Sensenderfer v. Kemp, 83 Mo. 582; Ford v. Unity Church Soc. 120 Mo. 516, 23 L.R.A. 561, 41 Am. St. Rep. 711, 25 S. W. 394; 2 Jones, Mortg. § 1624.

The general principle applicable to the registry laws of the different states upon the point of notice is that the registering.

of instruments is notice to subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers only. The filing for record of the unauthorized and void release of the mortgage held by the Geneseo bank, and the filing for record of the mortgage held by the Chicago bank, were, therefore, not notice to the Geneseo bank, which held under a prior recorded mortgage.

Ackerman v. Hunsicker, 85 N. Y. 43, 39 Am. Rep. 621; Rowan v. Sharps' Rifle Mfg. Co. 29 Conn. 282; Schmidt v. Zahndt, 148 Ind. 447, 47 N. E. 335; Tapia v. Demartini, 77 Cal. 383, 11 Am. St. Rep. 288, 19 Pac. 641; Nelson v. Boyce, 7 J. J. Marsh. 401, 23 Am. Dec. 411; Ward v. Cooke, 17 N. J. Eq. 93; Shirras v. Caig, 7 Cranch, 34, 51, 3 L. ed. 260, 265; Central Trust Co. v. Continental Iron Works, 51 N. J. Eq. 605, 40 Am. St. Rep. 539, 28 Atl. 595; Summers v. Roos, 42 Miss. 778, 2 Am. Rep. 653; Witczinski v. Eberman, 51 Miss. 841; George v. Wood, 9 Allen, 80, 85 Am. Dec. 741; McDaniels v. Colvin, 16 Vt. 300, 42 Am. Dec. 512; Seymour v. Darrow, 31 Vt. 122.

Where there is no law authorizing the holder of a negotiable note secured by a mortgage to put on the record an assignment of the mortgage, the subsequent release of that mortgage by the original mortgagee and the subsequent conveyance or mortgage by the mortgagor to a third party are unavailing as against the holder of the first-mortgage note.

Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 314; Burhans v. Hutcheson, 25 Kan. 625, 37 Am. Rep. 274; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 57 Kan. 744, 48 Pac. 19; Bronson v. Ashlock, 2 Kan. App. 255, 41 Pac. 1068; Swift v. Smith, 102 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 193; Chicago Ry. Equipment Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 136 U. S. 283, 34 L. ed. 353, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 999; Jones, Chat. Mortg. § 662(a)-633; Biggerstaff v. Marston, 161 Mass. 101, 36 N. E. 785; Watson v. Wyman, 161 Mass. 96, 36 N. E. 692; Mulcahy v. Fenwick, 161 Mass. 164, 36 N. E. 689; Hefferman v. Boteler, 87 Mo. App. 316; Brooke v. Struthers, 110 Mich. 562, 35 L.R.A. 536, 68 N. W. 272; Lee v. Clark, 89 Mo. 553, 1 S. W. 142; Hagerman v. Sutton, 91 Mo. 519, 4 S. W. 73; Swift v. Bank of Washington, 52 C. C. A. 339, 114 Fed. 643; Cummings v. Hurd, 49 Mo. App. 139; Walter v. Logan, 63 Kan. 193, 65 Pac. 225; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 1045, 1046; Robinson Female Seminary v. Campbell, 60 Kan. 60, 55 Pac. 276; De Laoreal v. Kemper, 9 Mo. App. 77; Lake-man v. Robards, 9 Mo. App. 179; Passumpsic Sav. Bank v. Buck, 71 Vt. 190, 44 Atl. 93; Parker v. Randolph, 5 S. D. 549, 29 L. R.A. 33, 59 N. W. 722; Williams v. Pay-singer, 15 S. C. 171; Black v. Reno, 59 Fed. 917; Brewer v. Atkison, 121 Ala. 410, 77 Am. St. Rep. 64, 25 So. 992; Roberts v. Halstead, 9 Pa. 32, 49 Am. Dec. 541; Anderson v. Kreidler, 56 Neb. 171, 76 N. W. 581; Keohane v. Smith, 97 Ill. 156; Stiger v. Bent, 111 Ill. 329; Preston v. Morris, 42 Iowa, 549; Martindale v. Burch, 57 Iowa, 291, 10 N. W. 670; Vandercook v. Baker, 48 Iowa, 199; Gordon v. Mulhare, 13 Wis. 22; Demuth v. Old Town Bank, 85 Md. 315, 60 Am. St. Rep. 322, 37 Atl. 266; Lapping v. Duffy, 47 Ind. 51; Dixon v. Hunter, 57 Ind. 278; Reeves v. Hayes, 95 Ind. 521.
203 U. S.

Section 4246 of the chattel mortgage law of Kansas (Dassler's Statutes of 1901, p. 896) provides that every holder of a mortgage may keep his mortgage alive by filing an affidavit during the last thirty days of the year following the recording of his mortgage; and since the Chicago bank took its mortgage within the year, and before the time had arrived when the Geneseo bank could file the affidavit contemplated by that provision, it follows that the Chicago Bank, in view of that statute, is not a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee in good faith.

Meech v. Patchin, 14 N. Y. 71; Howard v. First Nat. Bank, 44 Kan. 549, 10 L.R.A. 537, 24 Pac. 983; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Bank of Glen Elder, 46 Kan. 376, 26 Pac. 680.

The original mortgagee in a chattel mortgage, after he indorses and transfers the negotiable note secured by the mortgage, has no beneficial interest in the mortgage, and cannot maintain an action of replevin or trover in his own name, but such action must be brought by the transferee of the negotiable promissory note as the real holder and owner of the note and mortgage, and therefore as being the "assignee" within the meaning of the Kansas chattel mortgage statute.

Wiscomb v. Cubberly, 51 Kan. 580, 33 Pac. 320; J. C. Bohart Commission Co. v. Buckingham, 62 Kan. 658, 64 Pac. 627.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, at the outset, objects to the jurisdiction of this court on the ground that the plaintiff should have brought the case here by appeal instead of by writ of error, because the case was tried without a jury, and therefore the writ of error was improper. There is nothing in this objection, as in actions at law coming from the territory of Oklahoma it has been held that the proper way to review the judgments of the supreme court of that territory was by writ of error. Comstock v. Eagleton, 196 U. S. 99, 49 L. ed. 402, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Oklahoma City v. McMaster, 196 U. S. 529, 49 L. ed. 587, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Guss v. Nelson, 200 U. S. 298, 50 L. ed. 489, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260.

Further objection is made that the court below found no facts upon which a review can be had in this court. The foregoing statement disposes of this objection also, and shows it to be untenable.

On the merits, the question arises which of these two parties shall sustain the loss occasioned by the improper act of the president of the Live Stock Commission Company in signing this pretended release, and acknowledging the payment of the $11,000 note, as above stated? The plaintiff in error contends that the defendant bank should bear the loss because of its failure to record or file the assignment to it of the first mortgage, securing the $11,000 note. The defendant opposes this view and insists that, being the holder and the owner of the $11,000 note, secured by a first mortgage duly executed on the 27th of June, 1900, and duly filed in the register's office, it has the prior right to the cattle, and that the statutes of Kansas do not require that it should file or record the assignment to it of the note and mortgage, and its claim should not therefore be postponed.

[306] *The note executed by Grimes for eleven thousand and some odd dollars was negotiable, and the chattel mortgage was given at that time to secure the payment of the note. The indorsement of the note and its delivery before maturity to the defendant by the payee of the note transferred its ownership to the defendant bank. This transfer also transferred, by operation of law, the ownership of the mortgage, which was collateral to the note. Such a mortgage has no separate existence, and when the note is paid the mortgage expires, as it cannot survive the debt which the note represents. Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 313; Burhans v. Hutcheson, 25 Kan. 625, 37 Am. Rep. 274; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 57 Kan. 744, 48 Pac. 19; Swift v. Bank of Washington, 52 C. C. A. 339, 114 Fed. 643.

The mortgage, therefore, is a prior lien upon the cattle, as security for the payment of the note, unless defendant has lost it by its failure to record an assignment of the mortgage. Whether it has or not is to be determined by the law of Kansas.

There is no express provision in the statutes of Kansas for the filing or recording of assignments of chattel mortgages. Paragraph 36, § 4251, General Statutes of Kansas for 1901, by Dassler, may be found in the margin.† It is said this statute by implication provides for the recording of an assignment of a chattel mortgage.

Assuming that the statute makes provision for such recording, it is then argued that it is the duty of the assignee to do *so, and his failure takes away a right of [307] priority of lien which he might otherwise have. This reasoning is not satisfactory. We cannot make the assumption that the statute cited does make provision for the recording of the assignment, and we fail, therefore, to find its necessity. That necessity depends upon statute, and without some statutory provision therefor the necessity does not exist. Uncertain and doubtful implications arising from portions of a statute not requiring the recording of an instrument are not to be regarded as furnishing a rule upon the subject. There are statutory provisions for recording assignments of real estate mortgages to be found in the Kansas statutes. See paragraph 19, § 4234, and paragraph 26, § 4241, General Statutes of Kansas for 1901, by Dassler. Paragraph 19, above, provides for the acknowledgment of assignments of real estate mortgages by the assignor, and paragraph 26 provides that, on presentation of such assignment for record, it shall be entered upon the margin of the record of the mortgage by the register of deeds, who is to attest the same, as therein provided. Now, in relation to chattel mortgages and the assignment thereof, there is no such provision or anything similar to it. Provision is made for the satisfaction of a chattel mortgage when paid by the mortgagee, assignee, etc., but that does not make it necessary to record or file the assignment of a chattel mortgage in order to protect the assignee.

The supreme court of Kansas has held that there is no statute making it necessary to record an assignment of a chattel mort-

†Paragraph 36, § 4251, General Statutes of Kansas for 1901, by Dassler, provides as follows:

"When any mortgage of personal property shall have been fully paid or satisfied, it shall be the duty of the mortgagee, his assignee or personal representative, to enter satisfaction or cause satisfaction thereof to be entered of record in the same manner as near as may be, and under the same penalty for a neglect or refusal, as provided in case of the satisfaction of mortgages of real estate. The entry of satisfaction shall be made in the book in which the mortgage is entered, as hereinbefore provided; and any instrument acknowledging satisfaction shall not be recorded at length, but shall be referred to under the head of 'Remarks', and filed with the mortgage or copy thereof, and preserved therewith in the office of the register."

gage, in order to protect the rights of such assignee, and that it need not be recorded or filed. Burhans v. Hutcheson, supra; Wiscomb v. Cubberly, 51 Kan. 580, 33 Pac. 320; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Huntington, supra. It is true that these cases refer to real estate mortgages, but the reasoning sustains the statement as to chattel mortgages.

The first of the above cases (Burhans v. Hutcheson) holds that where a mortgage upon real estate is given to secure payment of a negotiable note, and before its maturity the note and mortgage are transferred by indorsement of the note to a bona fide holder, the assignment, if there be a written one, need not be recorded. This is held even where there was an express statute as to the record of such an assignment. The statute was held not to apply to the case of a mortgage given as collateral to a negotiable note.

The second case (Wiscomb v. Cubberly) has reference also to a mortgage on real estate, and involves much the same principle.

In the third case (Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Huntington) it was again held that after the assignment and delivery by the payee of a negotiable promissory note, before maturity, together with the mortgage on real estate, given as collateral security for its payment, the original mortgagee had no power to release or discharge the lien of the mortgage, and a release made by him without authority, even though the assignment was not recorded, would not affect the rights of the assignee.

These cases would seem to establish the rule in Kansas that it is not necessary to record the assignment of a mortgage even upon real estate, when given to secure payment of negotiable notes, although there is a statute which, in general terms, provides for the recording of assignments of real estate mortgages. Still stronger, if possible, is the case of a chattel mortgage given to secure the payment of negotiable notes, when there is no statutory provision for the recording of the assignment of such mortgage. It is probable that in the large majority of cases the only evidence of an assignment of a negotiable note and a chattel mortgage given to secure its payment is the indorsement of the note, and delivery thereof to the purchaser. In such a case there would be no assignment to record, and there is no provision in the statute for filing a copy of the note with its indorsement, together with a statement that it had been delivered to a third party, as the purchaser or assignee thereof.

The policy of the state of Kansas seems to be not alone to give to a negotiable promissory note all the qualities that pertain to commercial paper, but also to clothe mortgages given as collateral security for the payment of such notes with the same facility of transfer as the note itself, to which it is only an incident.

The plaintiff, however, contends for the opposite doctrine, and cites, among others, Lewis v. Kirk, 28 Kan. 497, 42 Am. Rep. 173, as its authority. In that case the question was which should suffer, a bona fide purchaser of the real estate which had been mortgaged, or the bona fide purchaser of the mortgage, who had failed to have his assignment recorded. The court held in favor of the purchaser of the real estate, and distinguished Burhans v. Hutcheson, supra, though not assuming to overrule it. The mortgage in the Lewis Case was upon real estate, and would not, therefore, necessarily affect the case of a chattel mortgage, where there is no statute for recording an assignment of the mortgage.

But in Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Huntington, supra, the case of Burhans v. Hutcheson, supra, was cited, and the doctrine that a bona fide holder of negotiable paper, transferred by him by indorsement thereon before maturity, and secured by a real estate mortgage, need not record the assignment of mortgage, was again approved.

In Thomas v. Reynolds, 29 Kan. 304, cited by plaintiff, it was held that an action to recover the penalty provided for by the statute for refusal to enter satisfaction of a chattel mortgage when it had been paid could not be sustained against the assignee of the mortgage without proof of the assignment of record, as the purpose of the statute was to clear the record, and therefore the defaulting party must have record title or his satisfaction would apparently be an impertinent interference by a stranger. That action did not raise the question here presented, and the court made no reference to the case of Burhans v. Hutcheson, supra. It is quite clear that it did not intend to overrule that case. In any event, as already mentioned, the Burhans Case has been approved in 57 Kan. 744, 48 Pac. 19, *above cited. We cannot treat the rule [310] which we have stated above as having been at all shaken by the two cases from 28 and 29 Kansas (supra.)

The counsel for plaintiff contends that, assuming there was no statute providing for the recording of an assignment of a chattel mortgage in the state of Kansas, yet there was no law of that state which prohibited the Geneseo Bank from recording its assignment. It is not necessary that there should be a law to prohibit the recording of such assignments. There must be a law which provides for their record, either in express terms or by plain and necessary implication from the words stated. Where the statute does not so provide, it is not necessary nor is it the duty of the assignee to record or file his assignment. There must be some legal duty imposed upon the assignee before the necessity arises for the recording of the assignment.

Counsel have cited many cases from states other than Kansas, in which the rights of assignees of mortgagees as against subsequent mortgages or conveyances have been discussed and decided. In many cases the question has arisen in regard to the recording of assignments of mortgages upon real estate, where the states had provided for the recording of such assignments, and where, in the absence of such recording, the assignee has failed in obtaining priority of rights under his mortgage, which he would have had if the assignment had been recorded. But, as the owner of the cattle mentioned herein resided in Kansas at the time the mortgages were given, and the cattle were then in that state, and the mortgages were filed there, the transactions are to be judged of with reference to the law of that state, and we decide this question with reference to such law. Under that law the assignee of the first mortgage of June, 1900, has a superior lien to the assignee of the second mortgage of April, 1901, although such assignee of the first mortgage did not have his assignment recorded.

Judgment is affirmed.

[311]*MERCANTILE TRUST & DEPOSIT COMPANY OF BALTIMORE, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF COLUMBUS, L. H. Chappell, Mayor, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 311-323.)

Courts—jurisdiction of Federal circuit court—case arising under Federal Constitution.

A controversy arising under the Federal Constitution, of which a Federal circuit court has original jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties, is presented by a bill which asserts that the obligation of a contract for the exclusive privilege of supplying water to a city and its inhabitants is impaired by a subsequent municipal ordinance and a legislative enactment under which the municipality is proceeding to issue and market its bonds for the purpose of constructing its own waterworks system.

NOTE.—As to Federal questions as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7; and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

[No. 50.]

Argued October 22, 23, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Georgia to review a decree dismissing, for the alleged want of jurisdiction, a bill to enjoin a municipality from constructing its own system of waterworks. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below on motion for temporary injunction, 130 Fed. 180.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The appellant filed its bill in this case in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Georgia to obtain an injunction restraining the city of Columbus, in the state of Georgia (one of above defendants) from the construction of waterworks for the supplying of water to the defendant city and its inhabitants. Judgment was entered by the circuit court dismissing the bill for the want of jurisdiction, and the question of jurisdiction alone was certified to this court under § 5, chapter 517, of the Acts of Congress of 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.]

The complainant based the jurisdiction of the circuit court on the ground of diverse citizenship, and also upon the existence of a Federal question. An amended bill was filed and a motion made for an injunction pendente lite, enjoining the city from issuing bonds or doing any work towards the construction of the waterworks. The motion was granted, and a demurrer to the amended bill having been overruled, and issue having been joined by the service of an answer and replication, the *case was re-[312]ferred to a master. Evidence was taken before him, and a report thereafter filed, to which exceptions were duly taken by both parties and an argument had thereon before the court. The judge certifies that, before a decision had been made by the court on the questions of law raised by the exceptions, the defendant filed a motion to dismiss the bill, on the ground that, if the parties to the suit were properly placed, there was no such diversity of citizenship as was required to sustain the jurisdiction of the court, and also on the ground that there was no Federal question involved. The court granted the motion on those grounds and made its certificate, as stated.

The suit was brought by the appellant, a citizen of Maryland, against the city of Columbus, a municipal corporation created by the state of Georgia, and its mayor and aldermen, all of them citizens of the state of Georgia, and against the Columbus Waterworks Company, a corporation also created by the state of Georgia.

It appears from the averments contained in the bill that the complainant is trustee for the bondholders in a certain mortgage executed by the waterworks company, in January, 1891, to complainant, as trustee, to secure the payment of certain bonds, and to raise money for the purpose of making improvements and additions to the waterworks which were to supply the city of Columbus with water, and for providing for future extensions and improvements thereof. The mortgage is upon all of the company's property, and also upon all contracts made, or thereafter to be made, between the waterworks company and the city of Columbus for the supplying of water by the company to the city, or any public institution or public office. The mortgage also included all the water rents, etc., and all the income whatsoever of the mortgagor, due or to grow due, arising from its business of supplying water within the city, or within its vicinity or elsewhere, during the continuance of the lien under the mortgage.

[313] It also included therein a contract, which had been entered *into in October, 1881, between one Thomas R. White, of the city of Philadelphia, and the mayor and council of the city of Columbus (defendant herein) for the construction and operation of an effective system of waterworks for the supplying of the city with water for the various uses required. This is the contract in question in this suit. Provision for a corporation was made in the contract, to which it was to be assigned; the corporation was subsequently created, and such contract was assigned by White to the water company, and the assignment was assented to by the city. The contract provided in great detail for the erection of a water system for the city and for private consumers, and it contained all the usual provisions for that kind of a contract.

It was, among other things, provided in the contract that the city should grant a franchise to the other party named therein, for the exclusive privilege of maintaining and operating the waterworks for a period of thirty years, or until they might be purchased by the city, as provided in the contract.

The work under the contract was completed and accepted by the city November 6, 1882, and the company then commenced to, and did, for some years, furnish water, under its provisions, to the city and its inhabitants.

203 U. S.

Thereafter disputes and differences arose between the parties, regarding the sufficient supply of water for the city and its inhabitants, the city contending that the water company had entirely failed to satisfactorily fulfil the contract in that respect. The company contended, on the other hand, that it had done all that possibly could be done, under the circumstances of an extraordinary and unprecedented drought, and was willing to spend more money for the purpose of enlarging its field of supply, if the city would not, by its proposed action, defeat such purpose. The differences continued until finally, on the 14th day of September, 1902, the city passed an ordinance for submitting to the voters of the city the question of issuing $250,000 of bonds of the city, to be used for the purpose of building and operating and owning a system of *water- [314] works by the city. A special election was called for the 4th day of December, 1902. The ordinance opened with the statement that the water company had totally failed to supply the city of Columbus and its inhabitants with a sufficient quantity of pure and wholesome water, and that the public health of the city was of paramount importance to every other consideration, and the city, therefore, proposed an ordinance (which it set forth for the approval of the electors) for the issuing of bonds for the building of a separate system of works to be owned and operated by the city. It was provided in the proposed ordinance that if the electors assented to the issue and sale of the bonds to be used for the purpose of building and operating the waterworks, that thereafter bonds of the city should be issued upon certain conditions, and an annual tax should be levied for the payment of the interest on the bonds and a certain proportion of the principal every year. The proposed ordinance also provided that in the event of the assent of the voters at the election, and the issuing of the bonds when the same should have been validated, as by law required, thereafter the waterworks were to be considered a separate and distinct department of the city government, and a water commission was to be created for the government and control and operation of the waterworks. Other provisions were contained in the proposed ordinance, regulating the doing of the work and the operation of the constructed work.

On the 3d day of December, 1902 (the day before the election under the city ordinance), the legislature, at the request, as it may be presumed, of the city, passed an act to amend its charter, so as to confer power and authority upon the city to construct, maintain, and operate a system of waterworks of its own. The act gave power to the city to appropriate private property, and to lay its pipes through its streets, either within or without the corporate limits of the city, and the city was given power and authority generally to do and perform all things necessary to carry the object and purposes of the act into effect. Section 7 [315] of the act expressly conferred *upon the city the right to issue and sell its bonds, for the purposes of building and operating the waterworks. Provision was also made in the act for the appointment of a board of water commissioners, who should have the supervision and control of the construction, operation, and management of the waterworks. This board was to regulate the distribution and use of water in all places, it was to fix the price for the use thereof, and terms of payment therefor. The moneys coming into the hands of the board for water rents and the sale of any apparatus or other property, or from any other source connected with the waterworks, were to be paid to the treasurer of the city, and were to be used by him only for the purpose of paying any principal and interest becoming due on the bonds issued by the city. The board was to be regarded as a subordinate branch of the city government.

The ordinance above mentioned and this act of the legislature of Georgia having been passed subsequently to the execution of the contract, are asserted by the complainant to be acts which impair the obligation of such contract.

Proceedings were taken under the ordinance, and the election was held pursuant to its provisions on the 4th of December, 1902, and resulted in the assent of the requisite number of electors to the issuing of the bonds and the use of the proceeds in the erection of a water system, to be owned and controlled by the city.

A board of water commissioners was thereupon appointed, under the provisions of the ordinance and the act of the legislature, and on the 6th of May, 1903, the common council received a communication from the board, through its secretary, wherein the board requested the common council to invite bids for the bonds of the city for the purpose of constructing the system of waterworks, which bids were to be opened on the 1st of August, 1903. Thereupon the common council, on the same day, complied with the request, and directed the publication of a notice for receiving bids for the bonds up to August 1, 1903.

[316] *On the 30th of July, 1903, the complainant filed this bill against the parties named. It is contended in the bill that, as trustee for the bondholders, the complainant can maintain this action, on the ground of an impairment of the obligation of the contract already mentioned, and that, as the water company has mortgaged to the complainant the benefits of its contract with the city, together with the other property of the water company, as security for the payment of its bonds, any such action as proposed by the city will destroy the value of the bonds of the water company, and will amount to the taking of complainant trustee's property without due process of law, and will deprive it of the equal protection of the laws. The water company is made a defendant for the purpose of binding it, as averred in the bill, by the judgment and decree that may be rendered in this cause, so that the right and equity of subrogation, or other rights and equities set up, may be enforced and decreed against the water company, and that the water company may be held and decreed, on its part, to specifically perform all the obligations of such contract. An injunction was asked for and granted, as stated, pendente lite. It was also asked that the defendant city might be enjoined from refusing to carry out the contract with the waterworks company, and from placing any obstacle in the way of the due performance thereof, according to its terms.

Messrs. Joseph Packard and Olin J. Wimberly argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Louis F. Garrard and John I. Hall, filed a brief for appellant:

The legislation set forth in this case as impairing the obligation of the contract is clearly distinguishable from the legislation which, in St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, this court held not to be such legislation as impaired the obligation of the contract in that case.

The ordinances of the city of Columbus, and the acts of the general assembly of Georgia, set forth in the bill, under and by virtue of which the action of the city of Columbus in proceeding to issue bonds for the construction of its own system of waterworks was taken, clearly constituted legislation impairing the contract between the city and the water works company, and this contract the appellant, as trustee of the bondholders, was in duty bound to seek to uphold. This case is closely analogous in this respect to Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 17, 43 L. ed. 348, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Even if, as in the case of Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 81, 46 L. ed. 815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, we lay aside the act of the legislature of Georgia, passed on December 3d, 1902, the ordinance of the city of Columbus passed on September 14th, 1902, and the subsequent ordinances giving effect thereto, disclose an intention and attempt, by subsequent legislation of the city, to deprive the complainant of its rights under an existing contract,—to use the language of this court in the Vicksburg Case.

See also New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 680, 29 L. ed. 527, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

Such an ordinance may properly be considered a law within the meaning of the article of the Constitution of the United States.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 31, 31 L. ed. 612, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 148, 45 L. ed. 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

Even in the case of an appeal from the highest state court, this court will determine for itself as to the existence and meaning of the alleged contract, in order to determine the question whether subsequent legislation has impaired the obligation thereof.

Capital City Light & Fuel Co. v. Tallahassee, 186 U. S. 406, 46 L. ed. 1223, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 866.

The Federal court had jurisdiction based upon the allegations of the bill, even though it be held that the Columbus Waterworks Company should have been aligned as plaintiff. It would have had such jurisdiction, even though all the parties had been citizens of Georgia.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 7, 43 L. ed. 344, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, supra.

Where the bill properly sets forth a contract granting exclusive rights to furnish water, and that the action of the city tends to impair the obligation of such contract, the case is one where the Federal courts have jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties.

Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. ed. 353, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

Messrs. Joseph Packard and Olin J. Wimberly also filed a supplemental brief for appellant:

The jurisdiction of the circuit court is established when it is shown that the company had, or claimed to have, a contract with a state or municipality which the latter had attempted to impair; and, so long as the claim is apparently made in good faith and is not frivolous, the case can be heard and decided on the merits.

Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

A municipal ordinance is legislation within the meaning of the impairment-of-contract clause of the Constitution

Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 216, 217, 47 L. ed. 778, 780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. ed. 788, 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 10, 43 L. ed. 341, 345, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Messrs. William A. Wimbish and J. H. Martin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. T. T. Miller and Ellis, Wimbish, & Ellis, filed a brief for appellees:

A contract is an agreement in which a party undertakes to do or not to do a particular thing. The law binds him to perform his undertaking, and this, of course, is the obligation of his contract.

Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529.

The obligation of the contract is the chain of the law giving legal efficacy to the undertaking.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 606.

Since the law creates the obligation, only the law can impair or destroy it. It cannot be affected by an act or default of either contracting party. The constitutional provision is intended to protect the obligation of contracts against impairment by the laws of a state. The subsequent law must have the effect of loosening the chain of the obligation by changing the rights or the essential remedies of the parties as they existed when the contract was entered into.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 214, 327, 6 L. ed. 606, 645; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 312, 11 L. ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. ed. 397; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793.

A municipal ordinance, if authorized by the legislature, may have the force and effect of a law of the state; and, if obnoxious to the Constitution, be held to impair the obligation of a contract. The ordinance must have been passed in pursuance of state legislation passed subsequent to the contract.

McCracken v. Hayward, supra; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 392, 30 L. ed. 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916.

The mere fact, however, that a party repudiating a contract is a municipal corporation, does not give to its refusal to perform the character of a law impairing the obligation of the contract, or constitute the taking of private property without due process of law.

Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Whether the contract granted an exclusive privilege such as to prevent the city from constructing its own system, and, if so, whether the city had power to grant such an exclusive right, are questions to be determined by the laws of the state, in no wise involving the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States.

Fergus Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co. 19 C. C. A. 212, 36 U. S. App. 480, 72 Fed. 873.

The refusal of the city to pay an installment of water rental claimed to be due is alleged to have been unlawful, and is so plainly a mere breach of the contract as not to require argument.

Raton Waterworks Co. v. Raton, 174 U. S. 360, 43 L. ed. 1005, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, supra.

In the case of Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. supra, the city of Dawson entered into a contract by its terms granting an exclusive franchise, in pursuance of the same general authority of law as did the city of Columbus in the present case.

In Georgia, a city, in the exercise of its police power and in order to promote the general welfare, may contract for, or itself provide, a supply of water for domestic use and fire protection.

Frederick v. Augusta, 5 Ga. 561; Rome v. Cabot, 28 Ga. 50; Wells v. Atlanta, 43 Ga. 67; Dawson v. Dawson Waterworks Co. 106 Ga. 709, 32 S. E. 907.

The court will look beyond the allegations of the bill to the facts properly pleaded in order to determine whether a real and substantial Federal question is presented.

Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 595, 42 L. ed. 865, 871, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 344, 46 L. ed. 936, 941, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 576, 48 L. ed. 795, 799, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Harris v. Rosenberger, 76 C. C. A. 225, 145 Fed. 449.

In the case at bar the court will look to the facts properly and also to the contract, attached as an exhibit to the original bill, to see if any valid grant of an exclusive privilege has been made.

Fergus Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co. 19 C. C. A. 212, 36 U. S. App. 480, 72 Fed. 876.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question arising herein is whether the Federal circuit court had the jurisdiction to determine the issue involved. That question alone has been certified to this court by the circuit court, under the provisions of the 5th section of the act of Congress of 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.] The grounds of the dismissal of the bill are set forth in the foregoing statement of facts.

Whether this case comes within the principle laid down by this court in Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420, upon the question of diversity of citizenship, it is unnecessary to determine, because there is, in our *opinion, a Federal [320] question involved, which gave the circuit court jurisdiction to determine the case without reference to citizenship. It is averred in the bill that by reason of the passage of the ordinance of the common council of the city and the act of the legislature of Georgia, passed December 3, 1902, the obligation of the contract set forth in the bill was impaired. It is part of the duty of the Federal courts, under the impairment of the obligation of contract clause in the Constitution, to decide whether there be a valid contract and what its construction is, and whether, as construed, there is any subsequent legislation, by municipality or by the state legislature, which impairs its obligation. That the ordinance of the common council of a municipal corporation may constitute a law within the meaning of this constitutional clause is too well settled to admit of doubt. St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. ed. 788, 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207-216, 47 L. ed. 778-780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498. The contract in this case provided in terms for the exclusive privilege of supplying water to the city and its inhabitants for thirty years from the date of its completion. By the ordinance of the city of 1902 the city insisted that the water company had totally failed to fulfil its contract to supply water to the city and its inhabitants. Such ordinance then went on and proposed to the electors an ordinance, the material portions of which have been set forth in the foregoing statement.

The act of the legislature, passed the day before the day of the election, is also referred to in the statement and some of its material provisions are mentioned.

[321] The ordinance and the act should properly be considered together, and they evidently contemplate an immediate execution of the work in case the electors assented to the issuing of the bonds. If the provisions of the ordinance and act were carried out, the effect, of course, could be none other than disastrous to the water company, as the obligations of the contract (if any) would thereby be so far impaired as to render the contract of no value. The source of the ability of the water company to pay the interest on its bonds, and the principal thereof, as they became due, was, by this ordinance and act, entirely cut off.

Was not this legislation, and legislation of a kind materially to impair the obligation of the contract then existing, and not only to impair, but to wholly destroy its value? We are not called upon now to say whether the exclusive right for thirty years, granted to the water company by the contract to supply the city with water, was legal and valid, because that is a part of the question whether the obligation of the contract has been impaired by the subsequent ordinances of the city and the laws of the state. It cannot be determined that there is an impairment of the obligation of a contract until it is determined what the contract is, and whether it is a valid contract. If it be valid, it still remains to be determined whether the subsequent proceedings of the city council and legislature impaired its obligation. The ordinance and act were not mere statements of an intention on the part of one of the parties to a contract not to be bound by its obligations. Such a denial on the part, even of a municipal corporation, contained in an ordinance to that effect, is not legislation impairing the obligation of a contract. St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575. It was stated in that case that the ordinance in question "created no new right or imposed no new duty substantially antagonistic to the obligations of the contract, but simply expressed the purpose of the city not in the future to pay the interest on the cost of construction of the lamp posts which were ordered to be removed. . . . When the substantial scope of this provision of the ordinance is thus clearly understood, it is seen that the contention here advanced of impairment of the obligations of the contract arising from this provision of the ordinance reduces itself at once to the proposition that wherever it is asserted, on the one hand, that a municipality is bound by a contract to perform a particular act, and the municipality denies that it is liable under the contract to do so, thereby an impairment of the obligations of the contract arises, *in violation of the Constitution of the United States. But this amounts only to the contention that every case involving a controversy concerning a municipal contract is one of Federal cognizance, determinable ultimately in this court. Thus, to reduce the proposition to its ultimate conception is to demonstrate its error."

In the case at bar the conditions are entirely different. There was not merely a denial by the city of its obligation under the contract, but the question is whether there were not new and substantial duties in positive opposition to those contained in the contract created and their performance provided for by the ordinances and act. The act of the legislature aided the city by granting it power to itself erect waterworks and to issue bonds in payment of the cost thereof, and the city was proceeding to avail itself of the power thus granted, when its progress was arrested by the filing of the bill in this case and the issuing of a temporary injunction. It would seem as if the case were really within the principle decided in Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. ed. 353, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224. In the last-cited case the water company contended that the agreement mentioned in that case constituted a contract, for which it acquired for a given period the exclusive right to supply water to the city and its inhabitants, and it insisted that the obligation of this contract would be impaired if the city, acting under the acts of the legislature and under the ordinance mentioned, established and maintained an independent and separate system of waterworks in competition with those of the water company. It was held that such a question was one arising under the Constitution of the United States, and that the Federal circuit court had jurisdiction thereof without regard to the citizenship of the parties. It must be remembered that in the case before us the sole question is whether the Federal circuit court had jurisdiction to determine the *case, and we are [323] not now concerned with the question as to how the matter should be determined, but only whether the circuit court had jurisdiction to determine it. As stated in Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, at page 82, 46 L. ed. 808, at page 815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, at page 592, in speaking of the question of jurisdiction: "We do not wish to be understood as now determining such questions in the present case, for we are only considering whether or not the circuit court had jurisdiction to consider them."

Concluding that the court below had such jurisdiction, because it presents a controversy arising under the Constitution of the United States, the judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the case remanded to that court to take proceedings therein according to law.

Reversed.

SECURITY TRUST & SAFETY VAULT
COMPANY, of Lexington, Kentucky, Trustee of Clara D. Bell, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF LEXINGTON, Kentucky, and E.
T. Gross, Delinquent Tax Collector for Said City, Defts. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 323-335.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—notice and hearing.

The failure of the Kentucky statutes to require notice to be given of a special assessment for back taxes on omitted property, made by the regular assessor under Ky. Stat. § 3179, after the time provided by law for the making of the general assessment, does not deprive the taxpayer of his property without due process of law, where the state court has afforded him full opportunity to be heard on the question of the validity and the amount of the tax, and, on such hearing, has reduced the tax.

[No. 55.]

Argued October 23, 24, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Fayette County Circuit Court reducing a tax and enforcing it as reduced. Affirmed.

See same case below, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 591, 85 S. W. 1081.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error, which was plaintiff [324] below, filed its *petition in the Fayette county circuit court, state of Kentucky, in equity, on February 3, 1899, for the purpose of obtaining an injunction restraining the defendants in error from the collection of certain back taxes accruing during the years 1894 to 1898, both inclusive, imposed in favor of the city of Lexington, and which the plaintiff asserted were illegally assessed. A temporary injunction was prayed for and granted, restraining the collection of the tax, and upon the trial the amount of the taxes was reduced, and, as so reduced, declared to be a lien on the property of the plaintiff in error as trustee, and judgment accordingly was entered, which judgment was, upon appeal to the court of appeals of the state, affirmed, and the plaintiff brings the case here by writ of error.

NOTE.—On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

In the amended petition it is averred that the plaintiff, as trustee, owned certain real estate in the city of Lexington, and that the tax collector of the city, asserting a claim for back taxes from 1894 to 1898, both inclusive, in favor of the city, against the trust estate in the plaintiff's hands, for $13,964.96, had, to satisfy the claim, levied on the real property held by it as trustee and described in the petition, and had advertised the same to be sold, and would sell the same, unless restrained by order of the court. It was averred that the claim for back taxes was for alleged omissions of personal property owned by the plaintiff as trustee, which had not been assessed for city taxation for the years stated, and that the tax was based on alleged assessments imposed in December, 1898, for these years, made by the city assessor of Lexington. The plaintiff denied that the pretended assessments made in 1898 for those years were any assessments at all, and alleged that there had been no assessment for the back taxes of those years or for any of them. It was averred that certain entries which had been made in the assessor's books for the years mentioned, purporting to assess the property for these back taxes, were interpolated among the assessments for those years, but were not legally made; that such entries were not assessments, nor any step in the valid assessment of back taxes in those years, and *were made by the city [325] assessor without any notice to, or conference with, the plaintiff of his intention to make the same, or any assessment, and the plaintiff at no time, either before or since said pretended assessment, had been given or allowed any opportunity or privilege to make any complaint or show cause against the assessment before any competent officer or tribunal whatever. It was also averred that all the property of plaintiff as trustee, during each of the years covered by the claim for back taxes, had been duly assessed, and, if it had been given the opportunity, plaintiff would have established the fact of such assessment, and that it had been fully and legally paid.

The plaintiff averred that collection of taxes based on assessments made as above stated would be in violation of the Constitution of the United States and of the state of Kentucky, forbidding that a citizen should be deprived of his property without due process of law.

The defendants in their answer averred that all of the property (with an exception not material) on which the defendants were claiming taxes as upon omitted property, had in fact been omitted by the plaintiff from its assessment lists during the years mentioned, and that the lists made out by the plaintiff for those years had been imperfect and improper lists, and that there was omitted therefrom a large part of the personalty owned by the plaintiff as trustee. The defendants averred that all the omitted property was properly assessable for the respective years, and that there was due thereon, in 1898, as the back taxes on the said omitted property, the sum named, to wit, $13,964.96; and the defendants denied that the valuation of the property, as fixed in the assessment, was any larger in proportion than the value of the assessment generally placed on similar property in the city of Lexington. After the assessment was made, it was averred that the delinquent tax collector demanded payment of the same, which was refused and thereupon he levied upon the property on the 31st of December, 1898.

[326] The answer then set up the making of the assessment *on the property omitted, and showed that it was made substantially as averred in the amended petition, by inserting in each of the books for the various years an additional assessment on account of omitted property, and that, after each of the entries of assessment in the various books had been made by the assessor, he signed his name after the words, "Assessed by me;" and it is averred that the assessment was also recorded by the assessor in the back-tax assessment book kept by the city of Lexington, and was by him reported to the auditor of the city of Lexington on the day that the assessment was made, December 31, 1898. The defendants also averred that, more than thirty days prior to the time the assessment was made, the city, through its duly authorized officers and agents, had notified the plaintiff that it had omitted from its assessments for the years 1894 to 1898, both inclusive, a large portion of the estate held by it as trustee, and, at the time of giving such notice, the officers of the city had furnished and delivered, as a part of such notice, an itemized statement of the securities and other personal property belonging to the estate, and held by the plaintiff, on the respective dates for taxation for the respective years, and that payment of the taxes upon this omitted property was repeatedly demanded of the plaintiff by the city during a period of more than thirty days prior to the assessment, and the plaintiff refused to pay any additional taxes or to list the omitted property, and that ample time and opportunity were afforded plaintiff to show that the property had not been omitted from the yearly assessments, and the plaintiff failed to do so.

203 U. S.

A reply and rejoinder were filed, and, upon the pleadings, the parties went to trial.

Judgment was given for the defendants, refusing the injunction, and providing for the sale of the real estate to satisfy the amount due for back taxes, as stated in the judgment. The total amount of back taxes due on the omitted property was, by such judgment, reduced from $13,964.96, the amount claimed by the defendants, to the sum of $8,626.63.

Messrs. John T. Shelby and George R. Hunt argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph D. Hunt and John R. Allen, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The right to be heard in tax cases is a constitutional right, and indefeasible.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 362, 363, 3d ed. pp. 626-629; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 709, 28 L. ed. 569, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 355, 31 L. ed. 763, 767, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 669, 33 L. ed. 772, 776, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 426, 38 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 537, 40 L. ed. 251, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83.

The action of the assessing officers, whatever the form of the assessment, when completed, if it be of any force at all, becomes conclusive as to the value of the property embraced in the assessment; and that matter is not open to further inquiry in any court; and if, in these proceedings, the requisite notice and opportunity for hearing be not allowed, then the so-called assessment is void for want of due process of law. No other hearing can be the legal equivalent or substitute for the hearing the party to be affected is entitled to before the assessing officers, whose authority to value and give relief against errors of valuation is full and exclusive.

205

Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; Cooley, Taxn. 2d. ed. p. 730, 3d ed. p. 1353; Odd Fellows' Hall Asso. v. Dayton, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 665, 76 S. W. 181; Ward v. Beale, 91 Ky. 65, 14 S. W. 967; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 623, 29 L.R.A. 73, 31 S. W. 486; Royer Wheel Co. v. Taylor County, 104 Ky. 741, 47 S. W. 876; Coulter v. Louisville Bridge Co. 114 Ky. 42, 70 S. W. 29; Albin Co. v. Louisville, 117 Ky. 895, 79 S. W. 274; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Com. 118 Ky. 60, 80 S. W. 479, 81 S. W. 686; Slaughter v. Louisville, 89 Ky. 112, 8 S. W. 917; Turner v. Pewee Valley, 100 Ky. 288, 38 S. W. 143, 688.

The fact that persons may have violated the law, either neglecting or wilfully refusing to return their property for taxation, is no reason why constitutional safeguards provided for the protection of all classes should be destroyed or ignored. The question is not one of policy, but of power; and if it is competent for a legislature to dispense with an assessment of property as to one class, it would be equally within its power to dispense with it for any or all other classes.

State Revenue Agent v. Tonella (Adams v. Tonella) 70 Miss. 701, 22 L.R.A. 346, 14 So. 17.

Messrs. George C. Webb and George S. Shanklin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. R. Morton and E. P. Farrell, filed a brief for defendants in error:

When the parties have been fully heard in the regular course of judicial proceedings, an erroneous decision of a state court does not deprive the unsuccessful party of property without due process of law within the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

A person who seeks the aid of a court of equity against the payment of a tax must come with not only clean but open hands, and if he owes any tax the court will compel him to pay it.

Clark v. Louisville Water Co. 90 Ky. 524, 14 S. W. 502; Reynolds v. Bowen, 138 Ind. 434, 36 N. E. 756.

Publication of notice, as is provided in the statute, is ample and sufficient to meet the requirements of due process of law, and the sittings of the officer at stated times and places takes taxation out of the inhibition of the 14th Amendment.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115

U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; I Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 61.

The return made by the corporation through its officers is the statement of its own case in all the particulars that enter into the question of the value of its taxable property.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, supra.

Since assessments for taxation do not constitute judicial judgments such as can be set aside only upon notice and after opportunity to be heard, a reassessment of grossly undervalued property so as to make such property bear the same burden it would have borne if the true assessment had been made in the first instance does not violate the constitutional requirement of due process of law.

I Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 65; Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota. 176 U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

The actual notice given to plaintiff in error meets every requirement of due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, supra; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, and Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, supra; Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014.

A hearing of the taxpayer's complaint by a court of competent jurisdiction meets the requirements of due process of law under the 14th Amendment, whether there be any other notice or not, and whether the taxpayer may have had any other hearing or not.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, supra; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, supra.

Under the jurisprudence of Kentucky, there can be no question but that a court of equity can enjoin the collection of taxes.

Baldwin v. Shine, 84 Ky. 502, 2 S. W. 164; Gates v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 295; Allison v. Louisville, H. C. & W. R. Co. 9 Bush, 249; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Warren County Court, 5 Bush, 243; Louisville v. Board of Trade, 90 Ky. 409, 9 L.R.A. 629, 14 S. W. 408.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

There are in the state of Kentucky two distinct methods by which an assessment for so-called back taxes can be made. One method is an assessment by a special back-tax assessor, *elected as provided for by an ordinance of the city of Lexington. This ordinance the court of appeals of the state of Kentucky has held, contrary to the contention of the plaintiff in this case, did not displace the regular assessor, or affect his right to make an assessment for back taxes. The other method provides for an assessment by the regular assessor, under § 3179 of the laws relating to the city of Lexington, which section, among other things therein contained, provides that: "Whenever the assessor shall ascertain that there has, in any former year or years, been any property omitted which should have been taxed, he shall assess the same against the person who should have been assessed with it, if living; if not, against his representative."

In this case the assessment for back taxes was made by the regular assessor, but not until December 31, 1898, under the above-quoted provision in § 3179. It was, however, a special assessment, made after the regular assessment in the assessor's books of 1898, and after such books had been transmitted within the time prescribed by law (§ 3180), December 1, 1898, to the auditor, subject to the inspection of the public. In regard to the regular assessment, the statutes of Kentucky provide (§ 3181) for a board of equalization, which sits on the first Monday of January, and continues in session not longer than four weeks. The auditor must deliver to the board the assessment books filed with him by the assessor, and it is to hear all complaints against the assessments made by the assessor, and may determine the same, but it cannot increase the assessment without notice to the party whose property is to be increased. The section is part of the general statutes as to assessments for the annual taxes, and it refers evidently to the assessments made by the assessor up to the 1st of December preceding, and which appear in the book which the law directs to be sent to the auditor and by him transmitted to the board of equalization. It does not refer to an extraordinary assessment made by the assessor for back taxes subsequently to the [331] time provided for by law for the making of the general assessment. The assessor must return the general assessment which he makes in his book under § 3179 to the auditor on or before December 1 in each year. Section 3180. This book remains in the auditor's office subject to the inspection of the public until transmitted, in the January following, to the board of equalization under § 3181. In the case before us the assessment for the back tax was made December 31, 1898, by entering a separate assessment for each year in the assessor's book for that year, and therefore these various assessments were not contained in the books of the assessor as they were sent to the auditor on December 1 of each year, respectively. The assessor's books for the years prior to 1898 were obtained in some way, and the entries of the assessments were therein made, because, as stated, there were no other books provided. We find no provision of the statute as to assessments for back taxes, which requires notice of such assessment if made at any time other than in the regular course for the general assessment as provided for in the general statute. If the assessment happens to be made in the assessor's book prior to December 1 in any year, it, of course, goes with the book to the auditor, and remains there for inspection by the public until taken before the board of equalization. Such an assessment would carry with it the provision of the law of the state applicable to the city on the subject of assessments, including the general notice under the law providing for such assessment. But that, of course cannot apply where the assessment is not made on or before December 1 in the regular assessment book. That book the taxpayer must omit to examine at his peril, when filed with the auditor, or when before the board of equalization. As sent to the auditor December 1, 1898, the book did not contain the assessment in question. And as to the books of the former years, they had passed out of the legal custody of the assessor, and he could not take any such books, and, without notice, impose a conclusive assessment for back taxes for the particular year the book had been made *use [332] of as an assessment book. Such assessment could not be enforced unless the taxpayer could thereafter at some time, and as a matter of right, be heard upon the question of the validity and the amount of such tax. The general statutory notice as to the regular assessment proceedings cannot be regarded as notice of this special assessment, made years after the completion of the old assessments.

In regard to the question of notice, the court of appeals held that the burden of proof in such a proceeding as this was upon the plaintiff to establish that there was no notice of the assessment given it; but it also held that the defendant had, in fact, proved that there was notice given to the plaintiff in error before the assessment was made. This applies to a notice in fact, but the court of appeals did not hold that there was any notice made necessary by the statute in regard to such a special assessment as above described. An assessment made on December 31, 1898, in the manner set forth, although imposed before the meeting of the board of equalization in January following, was not imposed at a time which made the general statutes as to assessments applicable, and therefore the taxpayer had no statutory notice or opportunity furnished him to appear and be heard before the board.

He may have examined the assessor's books for the various years 1894-1898, when filed in the auditor's office on the 1st of December, by the assessor, and prior to December 31, when this assessment was made, and found that there was no assessment made against him for any back taxes. There was no statutory obligation imposed on him to again examine the books, lest perchance they may have had an interlined assessment made in them, for the making of which the law provided no notice. It follows that the subsequent assessments placed in such books, and not appearing on any book when sent to the auditor by the assessor, would not be made under any statutory provision for notice, and would not afford the taxpayer an opportunity to be heard before the board of equalization in regard to the illegality of such tax.

[333] *If the statute did not provide for a notice in any form, it is not material that, as a matter of grace or favor, notice may have been given of the proposed assessment. It is not what notice, uncalled for by the statute, the taxpayer may have received in a particular case, that is material, but the question is whether any notice is provided for by the statute. Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289. Before this special assessment could be actually enforced or during the process of enforcement the taxpayer must have an opportunity to be heard as to its validity and extent. In Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, it was held that the taxpayer was entitled to an opportunity to be heard before the tax could be enforced (see page 556, L. ed. page 586, Sup. Ct. Rep. page 488), that the filing of the tax list therein spoken of was, in effect, as held by the court, the institution of an action against each tract of land described in it, and the taxpayer thereafter had opportunity to make any defense he might have. This the court held was sufficient. The proceedings leading up to that assessment originated in a complaint, in writing, to the governor, who thereupon appointed a commission to hear the matter, and if proper, impose the tax, but before it could be enforced or during the process of collection the landowner had a right to be heard. The statute now before us does not provide for a notice of the special assessment, nor did the plaintiff have an opportunity to be heard as to the assessment before the board of equalization.

But in this case the state court has afforded to the taxpayer full opportunity to be heard on the question of the validity and amount of the tax, and, after such opportunity, has rendered a judgment which provides for the enforcement of the tax as it has been reduced by the court, the reduction amounting to over $5,000. The plaintiff has, therefore, been heard, and on the hearing has succeeded in reducing the assessment. What more ought to be given? Whether the opportunity to be heard which has been afforded to the plaintiff has been pursuant to the provisions of some statute, as in McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335, and *Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, or by the holding of the court that the plaintiff has such right in the trial of a suit to enjoin the collection of the tax, is not material. The state court in this case has held the taxpayer entitled to a hearing, and has granted and enforced such right, and upon the trial has reduced the tax. In so doing the court below has not assumed the legislative function of making an assessment. It has merely reduced, after a full hearing, the amount of an assessment made by the assessor under color, at least, of legislative authority.

The court of appeals has held that the power of the trial court in giving the hearing has been properly exercised.

It is urged that the court below has not in fact decided that the assessment against plaintiff as reduced was legal, but only that plaintiff will not be heard upon the question of enjoining the collection of the tax until plaintiff tenders the amount of tax equitably due. The plaintiff denies that there is any amount equitably due, and it contends that it has not had an opportunity to show the invalidity of the assessment. We think the contention not well founded. The court has held that the burden rested upon the plaintiff to show the invalidity of the tax. Even if erroneous, the decision is not of a Federal nature. It had the chance, at all events, to show the invalidity of the tax in whole or in part. Upon the evidence given on the trial the tax was reduced, and the court of appeals has said:

"The claim of appellant to escape a retrospective assessment of the property of its cestui que trust in this case is wholly technical. That it owes the tax it seeks to evade is made apparent by an examination of this record. Although it had in its hands the means of instantly and most conclusively showing either that the trust estate did not own the property with which it was assessed, or that the values were too high, it introduced no evidence whatever on this subject. While it was not incumbent upon the appellees to introduce any evidence, being authorized under the principles herein enunciated to *await the evidence of appellant showing the invalidity of the assessment complained of, yet they did introduce evidence which we think clearly establishes that appellant justly owes the amount of the tax which has been adjudged against the estate of its cestui que trust." [27 Ky. L. Rep. 595, 85 S. W. 1083.]

We think it sufficiently appears that the plaintiff had an opportunity to be heard upon the question of the validity of the tax, both for want of notice in fact, and whether the property assessed for back taxes had really been omitted from the original list for the years in question, and was therefore properly taxable under the assessment for back taxes. Even if the assessment had been made by the assessor without notice, yet if, upon the hearing in this cause, the plaintiff had the right and an opportunity to be heard, and the assessment was thereon reduced, it has obtained all the hearing it was entitled to. We think the plaintiff did have such a hearing, and the judgment is correct, so far, at least, as this court is authorized to review it. It is therefore affirmed.

MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD COMMISSION,
R. L. Bradley, S. D. McNair, and J. C. Kincannon, Members of Said Commission, and T. R. Maxwell, Clerk Thereof, Appts.,
v.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335-347.)

State—immunity from suit.

1. A suit to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Mississippi railroad commission compelling a railroad company to stop its trains at a specified station is not a suit against the state.

Federal courts—enjoining proceedings in state courts.

2. The Mississippi railroad commission is not a court within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, forbidding the Federal courts to enjoin proceedings in a state court.

Federal courts—enjoining proceedings in state courts.

3. A proceeding before the Mississippi railroad commission does not become a proceeding in a state court, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, so as to prevent a Federal court from enjoining the enforcement of an order of such commission which is claimed to violate the Federal Constitution, because the commission would have to resort to a state court to aid it in the enforcement of its order.

Appeal—jurisdiction of circuit court of appeals.

4. An appeal lies to the appropriate circuit court of appeals in a case where the jurisdiction of the circuit court attached both on the ground of diverse citizenship and on a separate and independent constitutional ground.

Commerce—state regulation—requiring train to stop at county seat.

5. Interstate commerce is unconstitutionally interfered with by an order of the Mississippi railroad commission, made in the exercise of its discretionary authority, under Miss. Code 1892, §§ 3550, 4302, requiring a railway company to stop its interstate mail trains at a specified county seat, where proper and adequate railway passenger facilities are otherwise afforded that station.

[No. 64.]

Argued October 26, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Mississippi, in favor of defendants in a suit to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Mississippi railroad commission requiring a railway company to stop its interstate mail trains at a specified county seat, and remanded the case, with directions to enter a decree enjoining the enforcement of such order. Affirmed. See same case below, 70 C. C. A. 617, 138 Fed. 327.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The railroad commission of the state of Mississippi, and its members and clerk, as appellants, bring to this court by appeal the judgment of the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, which court reversed the NOTE.—On suits against a state—see notes to Murdock Parlor Grate Co. v. Com. 8 L.R.A. 399; Carr v. State, 11 L.R.A. 370; Beers v. Arkansas, 15 L. ed. U. S. 991; Hans v. Louisiana, 33 L. ed. U. S. 842; and Tindall v. Wesley, 13 C. C. A. 165.

On enjoining proceedings in state courts—see notes to Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 16 C. C. A. 90; Central Trust Co. v. Grant-han, 27 C. C. A. 575; Copeland v. Bruning, 63 C. C. A. 437; and Tefft, W. & Co. v. Sternberg, 5 L.R.A. 224.

On the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals—see notes to Lau Ow Bew v.

United States, 1 C. C. A. 6; Salmon v. Mills, 13 C. C. A. 374; and United States Freehold Land & Emigration Co. v. Gallegos, 32 C. C. A. 475.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the duty of a carrier to stop trains at passenger station—see note to Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Cameron, 14 C. C. A. 362.

judgment of the United States circuit court for the southern district of Mississippi, in favor of the appellants, and remanded the case, with directions to enter a decree for the complainant, the railroad company.

The case, as it appears in the record, shows the following facts:

[337] The citizens of the town of Magnolia, which has about 1,200 inhabitants, and is situated in the state of Mississippi, on the line of the railroad of the appellee, and about 98 miles north of New Orleans, in April, 1903, presented a petition to the Mississippi railroad commission, asking that commission to order the railroad company to stop its passenger trains numbers 1, 3, and 4 at the Magnolia station, the ground of the request being, as stated in the petition, that Magnolia was one of the most progressive towns in the state and the county site of the county, and the petitioners believed *that they were entitled to have these trains make regular stops at that point, and they stated their belief that it was for the best interest of the public, as well as the town, to have the passenger trains named make regular stops at the town.

Trains numbers 1 and 3 were south-bound trains from Chicago, passing Magnolia on their way to New Orleans, while train number 4 was a train on its way north to Chicago from New Orleans.

After a hearing before the railroad commission, on notice to the railroad company, the commission made an order granting the application as to trains 1 and 3, and denying it as to number 4.

Before obeying the order the company brought this suit to enjoin its enforcement. Upon the filing of the bill a temporary injunction was issued and a subsequent motion to dissolve it was denied. The defendant in the suit, the railroad commission, answered the bill, and denied that the railroad company furnished the town of Magnolia with adequate accommodations for the south, and put in issue the allegations of the bill that the order made by the commission was unreasonable or an illegal interference with the interstate commerce of the railroad company. The case came on for hearing before the circuit court, at the end of which a decree was made denying the relief asked for by the complainant, the court holding that the order of the commission was not unreasonable, and that therefore the temporary injunction should be, and it was, dissolved. An appeal to the circuit court of appeals was prayed for by the railroad company and granted.

The bill stated, amongst other things, that the corporation was created under the laws of the state of Illinois, and that the complainant was a resident of that state, and domiciled in the city of Chicago; and that the railroad commission was created by the state of Mississippi, and its individual members were citizens and residents of that state. The complainant further showed that it was operating an interstate line of railroad, extending from the city of New Orleans, in Louisiana, *north through that [338] state and the states of Mississippi, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois to the Great Lakes of the Northwest, connecting at various points with other lines of interstate railroads. It is also averred that the Congress of the United States had established the line of railroad operated by the complainant as a national highway, for the accommodation of interstate commerce and the carriage of the mails of the United States, and had been so recognized and promoted as such by various acts of Congress; that owing to the exigencies of its interstate business and the requirements of modern commerce and passenger transportation, as well as the transportation of freight and the United States mails, the complainant had been, from time to time, required to shorten its schedule, and to maintain and operate certain fast through trains, intended primarily and chiefly for interstate transportation and interstate commerce; that the two trains numbered 1 and 3—one being known as the fast mail and the other as the New Orleans & Chicago Limited—were run expressly for the purpose of carrying the interstate business and for the transportation of the United States mail, and that they were run on special schedules for that purpose, and of necessity had to make close connections with other through trunk lines of railroad doing an interstate business, and, in order to maintain the necessary schedule of time for the operation of these interstate trains, it was impossible and wholly impracticable to stop at all stations; and, further, that these trains, being south-bound trains, only stop regularly at junction points and all such points of importance in the state of Mississippi which are necessary and which justify such stops. The bill showed the accommodations which were afforded the town of Magnolia by the other trains provided by the company, and which it alleged sufficiently accommodated the traveling public at that point; that a compliance with the order of the commission, by stopping the trains named, would imperil the ability of the complainant to comply with its contract with the United States for the carriage of the mails, and *would embarrass its inter- [339] state traffic, and that it would be impossible, under the present condition of the roadbed and equipment of the complainant, to increase the speed of the trains so as to allow for the stoppage of the trains as directed by the commission; that the complainant protested before the commission against the issuing of the order, and it alleged that it showed that it was then furnishing the town of Magnolia all reasonable and necessary railroad facilities, and that the effect of the order would be to give that town greater railroad facilities than were afforded by complainant to any other town in the state of Mississippi, including the city of Jackson, the capital of the state, excepting only the town of McComb City, which, being a relay station on complainant's road, it is necessary for all trains to stop there to change the engine, and for fuel, water, etc.; that the effect of the order also would be to give to the town five daily trains to the city of New Orleans, running within short intervals of each other. It was further alleged that by the statutory law of the state of Mississippi the complainant was subject to a penalty of $50 for each time it failed to stop its trains on the order of the commission, and that the complainant would therefore be compelled to comply with the order or be subject to a multiplicity of suits for penalties arising from each and every violation of the order, and that defendants threaten by suit to enforce the order. It was then averred that the order of the commission was a direct burden upon interstate commerce, and also a direct and unnecessary interference with the speedy carriage of the mails of the United States.

An amendment to the bill was subsequently filed, showing that Congress had granted a right of way and sections of land in the state of Illinois to aid in the construction of a railroad from the southern termination of the Illinois & Michigan Canal to a point at or near the junction of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, with branches, etc., which should remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from toll or other charges upon the transportation of any [340]*property or troops of the United States, and on which mails of the United States should at all times be transported, and the Congress had made like grants to the states of Alabama and Mississippi, respectively, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from the city of Mobile to a point near the mouth of the Ohio river; and it was also averred that the state of Illinois had chartered the complainant in 1850, and ceded to it rights and lands granted to that state by the act of Congress.

The defendant commission answered and denied the averments in the bill, as already stated.

Mr. Marcellus Green argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Garner Wynn Green, William Williams, and J. N. Flowers, filed a brief for appellants:

The circuit court of appeals, under its opinion, was without jurisdiction of the appeal.

Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784.

The circuit court, as a Federal court, was without jurisdiction of this suit.

It is a suit against the state of Mississippi, contrary to the 11th Amendment.

Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 527, 528, 43 L. ed. 540, 541, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 497, 31 L. ed. 226, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919.

If the state statutes were unconstitutional, the Federal court could not restrain the suit.

Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 169, 43 L. ed. 406, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; McWhorter v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. 24 Fla. 417, 2 L.R.A. 504, 12 Am. St. Rep. 220, 5 So. 129.

There is no complaint in the bill that the state statutes are unconstitutional; the complaint is that the order violates the Constitution. The assignment of error in the court of appeals only complains of the order.

A suit against an officer of a state to enjoin him from instituting suits to enforce the police power under a state statute, which, if properly construed, is conceded to be valid, and with the enforcement of which he is charged by law, on the ground that he is proceeding under an erroneous interpretation of the law, and in violation of the Federal Constitution, is a suit, in effect, against the state, and of which the Federal court is denied jurisdiction by the 11th Amendment.

Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 65 L.R.A. 864, 51 C. C. A. 122, 113 Fed. 616, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

The court, as a Federal court, was prohibited from issuing this injunction by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581.

The "proceedings" in the state court were commenced before the commission by petition by citizens of Magnolia, and, after hearing before the commission, and its order made to stop, the next step for the commission to compel obedience (it having no power to issue final process) would be to petition the proper state court, under § 4286, Miss. Code, 1892, by proper proceeding, for aid in the enforcement of obedience to its process, and to compel compliance with its lawful orders, and such courts shall have jurisdiction to grant aid and relief in such cases. The application to the proper court by the commission for mandamus or mandatory injunction constitutes the final process of the proceedings.

2 Elliott, Railroads, § 698.

This § 4286 does not create a new jurisdiction in equity, but is directory to the commission to make effective its orders.

Mississippi R. Commission v. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. 78 Miss. 760, 29 So. 789.

The jurisdiction to make the order continues until it is enforced by performance or by final process.

Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 253; Leathe v. Thomas, 38 C. C. A. 75, 97 L. ed. 138.

Mandamus to compel performance is predicable upon and referable to the jurisdiction to render the judgment; and under § 720 that jurisdiction controls as having already attached.

Riggs v. Johnson County (United States ex rel. Riggs v. Johnson County) 6 Wall. 166, 18 L. ed. 768.

The opinion below cites Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 74 Miss. 80, 21 So. 15, correctly as holding that the commission is an administrative agency of the state, with quasi judicial powers, and that its findings are, by virtue of § 4284, only prima facie evidence. But the exercise of this judicial power results in a judgment which is prima facie valid, and is enforceable by the aid of the courts only by suit; and, after the rendition, and before the state, through this agency, can act to make effective this judgment, it is not competent for the Federal jurisdiction to intervene, and to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment by the only means provided by law for final process.

County seats as places requiring stops occupy peculiarly a class to themselves.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. People, 143 Ill. 434, 19 L.R.A. 125, 33 N. E. 173.

If the railroad company had provided, by less than all of its trains, primarily and adequately for the accommodation of those to whom they are directly tributary (Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 521, 44 L. ed. 868, 871, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722), then, in the exercise of this legal discretion, the commission would not be presumed to have authority to interfere with special through trains devoted exclusively to interstate commerce. The legislative intent would not extend to a violation of the Federal Constitution by thus having the application of the statute to depend upon a legal discretion, to be exercised in discerning the course prescribed by law.

Tripp v. Cook, 26 Wend. 143.

Every reasonable presumption must be indulged in interpretation to avoid imputing to the legislature an intent to violate the Constitution.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 255.

Section 3550 is fully within the rules laid down in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

It was a proper exercise of the police power to require railroads to establish and maintain "such depots as shall be reasonably necessary for the public convenience," and such duty would be imposed by its charter as a part of its construction as a railroad.

3 Elliott, Railroads, § 1056.

Here, the requirement is legislative; and it is not that passenger and freight trains shall all stop at all depots; but only that they shall stop "at any depot, as the business and public convenience shall require." This only declares that "all local conditions" must "have been adequately met."

Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, supra.

The finding of the commission and of the circuit court, undisturbed by the court of appeals, that the facilities were inadequate, is conclusive.

Schwartz v. Duss, 187 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 53, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, 43 C. C. A. 323, 103 Fed. 561; Murphy v. Southern R. Co. 53 C. C. A. 477, 115 Fed. 257.

The company cannot complain of being taxed for the privilege of doing a local business which it is free to renounce.

Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 422, 47 L. ed. 878, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.

The sole ground for the reversal of the decree by the court below being that the statutes are unconstitutional, if such was not the case, no reason exists why a Federal court, as a court of equity, should enjoin these regular proceedings in another tribunal of competent jurisdiction.

Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 193, 48 L. ed. 140, 144, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 320, 44 L. ed. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Mr. Edward Mayes argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. M. Dickinson, filed a brief for appellee:

The Mississippi railroad commission is without many of the most necessary powers of a court. It can neither summon a witness nor swear one; it cannot certify a bill of exceptions, nor enforce its orders by any process. The supreme court of Mississippi has expressly decided that it is no more than an administrative agency, which exercises quasi judicial powers, and that its findings are only prima facie evidence that its decisions are right. To give its orders even that value, the findings must be set forth in writing.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 74 Miss. 80, 21 So. 15.

The original bill by the railroad company placed the original jurisdiction of the circuit court on the two distinct grounds of (1) diversity of citizenship, and (2) an interference with interstate commerce and the transmission of the mails, and the consequent unconstitutionality of the order of the railroad commission by which the trains were required to stop at Magnolia. In such case the court of appeals may take jurisdiction.

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galetton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 46 L. ed. 546, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

This is not a suit against the state.

Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 167, 37 L. ed. 690, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1020, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 67, 41 L. ed. 632, 633, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 195, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 518, 42 L. ed. 819, 839, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. ed. 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 48 L. ed. 180, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. ed. 761, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.

The railroad commission is not, in any of its functions, a court; it is a mere administrative agency; and although it has some quasi judicial power, its essential functions are legislative.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, supra; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 81 Miss. 90, 32 So. 937.

The controlling law is found in the following decisions of this court:

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision in this case by the circuit court of appeals is reported in 70 C. C. A. 617, 138 Fed. 327, in which will be found a statement of the material portions of the evidence taken at the hearing before the trial court. It is unnecessary to repeat it.

The first objection raised by the appellant is, that this suit is, in substance, one against a state. The commission was created by the state of Mississippi, under the authority of its Constitution and laws, for the purpose of supervising, and, to some extent, controlling, the acts of the railroads operating within the state. Such a commission is subject to a suit by a citizen. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. ed. 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398. We do not see that Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 48 L. ed. 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, is at all in point.

*It is also objected that an injunction will [341] not lie from a United States court to stay proceedings in a state court, because of the provisions of § 720, United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581). The commission is, however, not a court, and is a mere administrative agency of the state, as held by the Mississippi court. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mississippi Railroad Commission, 74 Miss. 80, 21 So. 15.

It is urged, however, that proceedings in a state court were commenced by the presentation of the petition of the citizens of Magnolia to the railroad commission, and because the commission, having made an order to stop the trains, would have to resort to the proper state court to aid it in the enforcement of its order, therefore the whole proceeding must be regarded as in a state court from the commencement. Whatever may be the provision in the state statute in regard to the enforcement solely by the state court of the order of the railroad commission, the proceeding while before the commission never thereby became a proceeding in a state court, and the jurisdiction of the Federal court to enjoin the commission from the enforcement of its order, because such order was a violation of the Federal Constitution, was not in the least affected.

The appellants also object that the circuit court of appeals had no jurisdiction to review the judgment of the circuit court in this case, because, as is stated, the jurisdiction was predicated upon diversity of citizenship, and also upon the claim that the state statutes requiring the stoppage of trains, when applied to the trains under discussion, violated the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, and, therefore, the case should have come directly here from the circuit court, and Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784, is cited as authority. The complainant in this case, by a proper pleading, set up not only the diversity of citizenship, but also a constitutional question, and the complainant had the right to appeal from the judgment of the circuit court to the circuit court of appeals, and from its decision in such a case an appeal or writ of error may be taken to this [342] court. *American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 281, 45 L. ed. 859, 861, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galetton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 295, 46 L. ed. 546, 548, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452. The case of Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. supra, does not hold otherwise. It simply holds that where the jurisdiction of the circuit court attaches on the ground of diverse citizenship, and also upon a separate and independent constitutional ground, the party may take a direct appeal to this court; but it does not hold that the defeated party must do so, and that he cannot go to the circuit court of appeals.

The main question is, as stated in the court below, whether the order of the commission is valid with reference to the Federal Constitution. That depends upon the question whether it is only an incidental interference with interstate commerce, based upon a legal exercise of the police powers of the state for the purpose of securing proper and sufficient accommodation from the railroad company for railroad facilities for the residents of the state. The authority of the commission to interfere with a railroad is based on the statutes of Mississippi. Section 3550 (chapter 112, Code of Mississippi, 1892, relating to railroads) reads as follows:

"3550. To stop all passenger trains, if, etc., at county seats.—Every railroad shall cause each and all of its passenger trains to stop for passengers at all county seats at which it has a depot, at the discretion of the railroad commission."

Chapter 134 of the same Code relates to the supervision of common carriers. Section 4302 thereof reads as follows:

"Necessary depots to be maintained.—Every railroad shall establish and maintain such depots as shall be reasonably necessary for the public convenience, and shall stop such of the passenger and freight trains at any depot as the business and public convenience shall require; and the commission may cause all passenger trains to permit passengers to get on and off in a city at any place other than at the depot, where it is for the convenience of the traveling public. And it shall be unlawful for any railroad to abolish or disuse any depot when once estabto regularly *stop the trains thereat, with- [343] out the consent of the commission."

lished, or to fail to keep up the same and

Under these statutes the commission has power (a) to stop, in its discretion, all passenger trains at all county seats at which the company has a depot; (b) to stop such of the passenger and freight trains at any depot as the business and public convenience may require. The order in question was made with regard to a place which is both a county seat and also one where the railroad has a depot. It is not plain under which section the commission acted. Its order simply states that the petition of the citizens of Magnolia is granted as to trains 1 and 3, and denied as to train 4. The petition throws no light upon the subject. We may assume, however, that the commission acted under all the authority it had from the above quoted sections of the statute. It is fair to assume that it had exercised its discretion in causing the trains to stop at a county seat, and that it did so because, in its judgment, it was reasonable and necessary for the public convenience. The question is whether, having regard to the facts, the order is valid.

The matter of the validity of statutes directing railroad companies to stop certain of their trains at stations named has been before this court several times, and the result of its holdings is: That a statute of Illinois, which required the Illinois Central Railroad to stop its fast mail train from Chicago to New Orleans at Cairo, in the state of Illinois, which was a county seat, was unconstitutional if the company had made adequate accommodation by other trains for interstate passengers to and from Cairo. That a statute which required every railroad corporation to stop all regular passenger trains running wholly within the state at its stations at all county seats was a reasonable exercise of the police power of the state, where the statute did not apply to railroad trains entering the state from any other state, or transcontinental trains of any railroad. A statute relating to railroad companies which provided that a company should cause three of its trains each *way, if so many were run daily, Sundays [344] excepted, to stop at a station containing over 3,000 inhabitants, was valid in the absence of legislation by Congress on the subject; and also a state statute which required all regular passenger trains to stop at county seats was invalid when applied to an interstate train, intended only for through passengers from St. Louis to New York, when it appeared that the railroad company furnished sufficient trains to accommodate all the local through business in the state, and where such trains stopped at county seats. These principles have been decided in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. Upon the principles decided in these cases, a state railroad commission has the right, under a state statute, so far as railroads are concerned, to compel a company to stop its trains under the circumstances already referred to, and it may order the stoppage of such trains if the company does not otherwise furnish proper and adequate accommodation to a particular locality, and in such cases the order may embrace a through interstate train actually running, and compel it to stop at a locality named. In such case, in the absence of congressional legislation covering the subject, there is no illegal or improper interference with the interstate commerce right; but if the company has furnished all such proper and reasonable accommodation to the locality as fairly may be demanded, taking into consideration the fact, if it be one, that the locality is a county seat, and the amount and character of the business done, then any interference with the company (either directly, by statute, or by a railroad commission acting under authority of a statute) by causing its interstate trains to stop at a particular locality in the state is an improper and illegal interference with the rights of the railroad company, and a violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

In reviewing statutes of this nature, and also orders made by a state railroad commission, it frequently becomes necessary *to [345] examine the facts upon which they rest, and to determine from such examination whether there has been an unconstitutional exercise of power and an illegal interference by the state or its commission with the interstate commerce of the railroad. Whether there has or has not been such an interference is a question of law arising from the facts. In this case there was no important conflict of evidence on the material points, and so the circuit court of appeals has stated and these facts are clearly and sufficiently set forth in 138 Fed. supra. The fact that the company has contracts to transport the mails of the United States within a time which requires great speed for the trains carrying them, while not conclusive, may still be considered upon the general question of the propriety of stopping such trains at certain stations within the boundaries of a state. The railroad has been recognized by Congress, and is the recipient of large land grants, and the carrying of the mails is a most important function of such a road. We think that the railroad company has fully performed its duty towards the town in the way of furnishing it proper and adequate and reasonable accommodation, without stopping these interstate trains as ordered, and, therefore, the order of the commission was improper and illegal, and not merely an incidental interference with the interstate commerce of the company. The circuit court of appeals has, in effect, so held, although it did say that the commission and the circuit court had made an order that indicated that the trains which already stopped at Magnolia were not sufficient, and that the town should have five daily trains going south, and therefore the court said it thought it well to examine other questions, which it did. A reading of the whole opinion of the circuit court of appeals shows that the court did not concede, in any degree, that the passenger facilities afforded were inadequate, but that the remedy was to compel the company to run more trains, and not stop the ones in question. The opinion simply suggests that even if the facilities were inadequate, the appropriate course was to order more trains *instead of [346] stopping those mentioned. In any event, the question is before us upon uncontradicted evidence as to whether there were or were not proper facilities, and we hold there were.

The order cannot be viewed alone in the light of ordering a stop at one place only, which might require not more than three minutes, as asserted. It is the question whether these trains can be stopped at all at any particular station when proper and adequate facilities are otherwise afforded such station. If the commission can order such a train to be stopped at a particular locality under such circumstances, then it could do so as to other localities, and in that way the usefulness of a through train would be ruined and the train turned from a through to a local one in Mississippi. The legislature of a state could not itself make such an order, and it cannot delegate the power to a commission to do so, in its discretion, when adequate facilities are otherwise furnished.

The transportation of passengers on interstate trains as rapidly as can with safety be done is the inexorable demand of the public who use such trains. Competition between great trunk lines is fierce and at times bitter. Each line must do its best even to obtain its fair share of the transportation between states, both of passengers and freight. A wholly unnecessary, even though a small, obstacle, ought not, in fairness, to be placed in the way of an interstate road, which may thus be unable to meet the competition of its rivals. We by no means intend to impair the strength of the previous decisions of this court on the subject, nor to assume that the interstate transportation, either of passengers or freight, is to be regarded as overshadowing the rights of the residents of the state through which the railroad passes to adequate railroad facilities. Both claims are to be considered, and after the wants of the residents within a state or locality through which the road passes have been adequately supplied, regard being had to all the facts bearing upon the subject, they ought not to be permitted to demand more, at the cost of the ability [347] of *the road to successfully compete with its rivals in the transportation of interstate passengers and freight.

We are of opinion that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals was right, and it is affirmed.

E. L. ALLEN, and Wallace B. Allen, Administrators of the Estate of Erasmus W. Allen, Deceased, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

FRANCES J. RILEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 347-358.)

Patents—state regulation of sale.

The regulation of the sale of patent rights made by Kan. Laws 1889, chap. 182, which compels one selling a patent right in any county in the state to file with the clerk of such county an authenticated copy of the letters patent, together with an affidavit of the genuineness of the letters patent and as to other matters, and provides that any written obligation given for the purchase price of a patent right shall contain the words "given for a patent right," does not violate U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, granting to Congress the right to secure to inventors the exclusive right to their discovery, nor U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4898, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3387, authorizing written assignments of patents or interests therein, which shall be void as against subsequent purchasers unless recorded in the Patent Office.

[No. 99.]

Submitted November 5, 6, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District

NOTE.—On the power of a state to restrict and regulate the sale and enjoyment of patent rights—see note to Com. v. Petty, 29 L.R.A. 786.

As to the validity of notes given for patent rights—see notes to First Nat. Bank v. Stockell, 20 L.R.A. 605; and Mandeville v. Welch, 5 L. ed. U. S. 88.

216

Court of Brown County, in that state, for the recovery of the value of real property transferred in part payment for the sale of a patent right, because of the failure of the vendors to comply with the state legislation governing the sale of patent rights. Affirmed.

See same case below, 71 Kan. 378, 80 Pac. 952.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

Francis J. Riley, the defendant in error, who was plaintiff below, recovered a judgment against plaintiffs in error, defendants below, for $1,250, in the district court of Brown county, in the state of Kansas, which judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, and the defendants below have brought the case here by writ of error.

The suit was commenced by the filing of a petition by defendant in error, plaintiff below, in a district court of Kansas, March 17, 1902, to recover the value of certain lands alleged to have been transferred by the plaintiff to the defendant Erasmus W. Allen, in part payment for the transfer to plaintiff of rights for the state of Kentucky under a patent dated January 30, 1901, for a washing machine. The right to recover is based upon the failure of the defendants to comply with the Kansas statute, which failure defendants do not *deny, but they insist [348] that the statute is void as being in violation of the Constitution of the United States and the act of Congress referred to in the opinion. The Kansas statute is chapter 182 of the Laws of 1889. A copy of the act is set out in the margin.†

Mr. N. H. Loomis submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs R. W. Blair and H. A. Scandrett were on the brief.

Messrs. A. E. Crane and T. T. Woodburn submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question for our determination in this case is concerning *the constitution- [352]

†Chapter 182, Laws of 1889 (paragraphs 4356, 4357, and 4358, General Statutes of Kansas, 1901), reads as follows:

"Sec. 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to sell or barter, or offer to sell or barter, any patent right, or any right which such person shall allege to be a patent right, in any county within this state, without first filing with the clerk of the district court of such county copies of the letters patent, duly authenticated, and at the same time swearing or affirming to an affidavit before such clerk that such letters patent are genuine, and have not been revoked or ality of the Kansas act. The opinion of the supreme court of the state of Kansas is reported in 71 Kan. 378, 80 Pac. 952.

203 U. S.

The judgment herein is founded upon Mason v. McLeod, 57 Kan. 105, 41 L.R.A. 548, 57 Am. St. Rep. 327, 45 Pac. 76; which case has been followed by that of Pinney v. First Nat. Bank, 68 Kan. 223, 75 Pac. 119.

The defendants insist that the act in question violates article 1, § 8, of the Constitution of the United States, and the Federal statute passed in pursuance thereof, being Rev. Stat. § 4898, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3387. The Constitution grants to Congress the right "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;" and § 4898 of the Revised Statutes provides that every patent or interest therein shall be assignable in law by an instrument in writing, which assignment is made void against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee, for a valuable consideration, without notice, unless it is recorded in the Patent Office within three months from the date thereof.

It is asserted by the plaintiffs in error that the subject of the sale or assignment of the whole or any part of an interest in a patent is derived from the laws of Congress passed with reference to the constitutional provision quoted above, and that any regulations, whatever, by any state authority, in regard to such assignment or sale, and making provision in respect to them, are illegal.

The supreme court of Kansas has maintained and upheld the Kansas act on the ground that the statute is simply a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power of the state in regard to the subject of the act. Mason v. McLeod, supra. That court was of opinion that the provisions of the Kansas statute did not trench upon the Federal power nor interfere with the rights secured to patentees by Federal law. The opinion does not assert that a state statute can interfere with the right of a patentee to sell or assign his patent, nor that it can take away any essential feature of his exclusive right, but, *as is stated,]353] the provisions in the act have no such purpose or effect; that "they are in the nature of police regulations designed for the protection of the people against imposition and fraud. There is great opportunity for imposition and fraud in the transfer of intangible property, such as exists in a patent right, and many states have prescribed regulations for the transfer of such property differing essentially from those which control the transfer of other property." Many authorities are cited, and the opinion then continues: "The doctrine of these cases is that the patent laws do not prevent the state from enacting police regulations for the protection and security of its citizens, and that regulations like ours, which are mainly designed to protect the people from imposition by those who have actually no authority to sell patent rights or own patent rights to sell, should be upheld. We think the statute is valid."

In Indiana a statute which is like that in Kansas has been upheld by the supreme court of that state. Brechbill v. Randall, 102 Ind. 528, 52 Am. Rep. 695, 1 N. E. 362. That case has, since that time, been followed in Indiana. New v. Walker, 108 Ind. 365, 58 Am. Rep. 40, 9 N. E. 386. In Ohio a statute somewhat similar to the one in question has been upheld. Tod v. Wick Bros. 36 Ohio St. 370. And the same result has been reached in Pennsylvania. Haskell v. Jones, 86 Pa. 173. In Herdie v. Roessler, 109 N. Y. 127, 16 N. E. 198, the validity of the same kind of a statute has been upheld. See also Wyatt v. Wallace, 67 Ark. 575, 55 S. W. 1105; State v. Cook, 107 Tenn. 499, 62 L.R.A. 174, 64 S. W. 720. The statutes in the different states are not all precisely like the Kansas law, but they make provisions in regard to the sale or assignment of rights un-annulled, and that he has full authority to sell or barter the right so patented; which affidavit shall also set forth his name, age, occupation, and residence; and if an agent, the name, occupation, and residence of his principal. A copy of this affidavit shall be filed in the office of said clerk, and said clerk shall give a copy of said affidavit to the applicant, who shall exhibit the same to any person on demand.

"Sec. 2. Any person who may take any obligation in writing for which any patent right, or right claimed by him or her to be a patent right, shall form a whole or any part of the consideration, shall, before it is signed by the maker or makers, insert in the body of said written obligation, above the signature of said maker or makers, in legible writing or print, the words, 'Given for a patent right.'

"Sec. 3. Any person who shall sell or barter, or offer to sell or barter, within this state, or shall take any obligation or promise in writing for a patent right, or for what he may call a patent right, without complying with the requirements of this act, or shall refuse to exhibit the certificate when demanded, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof before any court of competent jurisdiction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000, or be imprisoned in the jail of the proper county not more than six months, at the discretion of the court or jury trying the same, and shall be liable to the party injured in a civil action for any damages sustained."

der a patent, and sometimes in regard to notes given for their purchase, which cannot be upheld under the contention of plaintiffs in error herein, that all such provisions are in violation of, or inconsistent with, the laws of Congress on the subject. The courts of some other states, having like questions before them, have held their statutes void. Hollida v. Hunt, 70 Ill. 109, 22 Am. Rep. 63; Cranson v. Smith, 37 Mich. 309, 26 Am. Rep. 514; Wilch v. Phelps, 14 Neb. 134, 15 N. W. [354] 361; State v. Lockwood*, 43 Wis. 405, and some others.

The circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit, in Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 344, has held a statute of Arkansas upon this same subject void because of its discrimination between articles of property of the same class or character, based only on the fact that the property discriminated against was protected by a patent granted by the United States. In the opinion in the case, authorities upon the subject are cited and commented upon. Among the cases cited are Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115, and Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344, 26 L. ed. 565.

In Patterson v. Kentucky, supra, the owner of a patent right for an improved burning oil was convicted of the violation of a Kentucky statute by the sale of the oil covered by the patent. The owner claimed the right to sell such oil notwithstanding the statute, which provided a standard below which oil was regarded as dangerous for illuminating purposes, and the sale of which was prohibited. It was admitted the patented oil did not come up to the state standard. This court held the conviction was right, and that the owner of the patent was not protected, by reason of his ownership, from liability under the state statute. That statute was held to be one passed in the legitimate exercise of the powers of the state over its purely domestic affairs, and it was said that it did not violate either the Constitution or laws of the United States, as, when property protected by patent once comes into existence, its use is subject to the control of the several states to the same extent as any other species of property.

Webber v. Virginia, supra, relates also to tangible property covered by a patent, and it was held that the patent did not exclude from the operation of the taxing or licensing law of the state the tangible property manufactured under a patent. It was said in that case that "Congress never intended that the patent laws should displace the police powers of the states, meaning by that term those powers by which the health, good [355] *order, peace, and general welfare of the community are promoted. Whatever rights are secured to the inventors must be enjoyed in subordination to this general authority of the state over all property within its limits."

While these two cases do not cover the one now before us, because they refer to tangible property which has been manufactured and come into existence under a patent, and the case before us relates to provisions which are to accompany an assignment of intangible rights, growing out of a patent, yet the general power of the states to legislate in order to protect their citizens in their lives and property from fraud and deceit is recognized, not as being without limit, of course, but as being properly exercised in the cases named.

We think the state has the power (certainly until Congress legislates upon the subject) with regard to the provision which shall accompany the sale or assignment of rights arising under a patent, to make reasonable regulations concerning the subject, calculated to protect its citizens from fraud. And we think Congress has not so legislated by the provisions regarding an assignment contained in the act referred to.

In some of the cases holding such statutes void it is said that it is unfortunately true that many frauds are committed under color of patent rights, and that the patent laws are not so framed as to secure the public from being cheated by worthless inventions; but, notwithstanding that, they hold statutes of the nature of the one under consideration to be void, as trenching upon the rights of the owner of a patent secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

To uphold this kind of a statute is by no means to authorize any state to impose terms which, possibly, in the language of Mr. Justice Davis, in Ex parte Robinson, 2 Biss. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 11,932, "would result in a prohibition of the sale of this species of property within its borders, and in this way nullify the laws of Congress which regulate its transfer, and destroy the power conferred upon Congress by the Constitution." Such a statute would not be a reasonable exercise of the powers of the state.

*In Michigan, the court, speaking through [356] Mr. Justice Campbell, while holding the act under review in that case upon the subject invalid (Cranson v. Smith, 37 Mich. 309, 26 Am. Rep. 514), said: "While we cannot but recognize the magnitude of an evil which has brought patents into popular discredit, and has provoked legislation in several states similar to that of Michigan, we cannot, on the other hand, fail to see in these laws a plain and clear purpose to check the evil by hindering parties owning patents from dealing with them as they may deal with their other possessions." If there is a special evil, unusually frequent and easily perpetrated when parties are dealing in the sale of rights existing or claimed to exist under a patent, we do not see why a state may not, in the bona fide exercise of its powers, enact some special statutory provision which may tend to arrest such evil, and may omit to enact the same provision concerning the disposal of other property. There is no discrimination which can be properly so called against property in patent rights, exercised in such legislation. It is simply an attempt to protect the citizen against frauds and impositions which can be more readily perpetrated in such cases than in cases of the sale or assignment of ordinary property.

The act must be a reasonable and fair exercise of the power of the state for the purpose of checking a well-known evil, and to prevent, so far as possible, fraud and imposition in regard to the sales of rights under patents. Possibly Congress might enact a statute which would take away from the states any power to legislate upon the subject, but it has not as yet done so. It has simply provided that every patent, or interest therein, shall be assignable in writing, leaving to the various states the power to provide for the safeguarding of the interests of those dealing with the assumed owner of a patent, or his assignee. To deal with that subject has been the purpose of the acts passed by the various states, among them that of the state of Kansas, and we think that it was within the powers of the state to enact such statute. The expense of [357] *filing copies of the patent and the making of affidavits in the various counties of the state in which the owner of the rights desired to deal with them is not so great, in our judgment, as to be regarded as oppressive or unreasonable, and we fail to find any other part of the act which may be so regarded. Some fair latitude must be allowed the states in the exercise of their powers on this subject. It will not do to tie them up so carefully that they cannot move, unless the idea is that the states have positively no power whatever on the subject. This we do not believe; at any rate, in the absence of congressional legislation. The mere provision in the Federal statute for an assignment and its record as against subsequent purchasers, etc., is not such legislation as takes away the rights of the states to legislate on the subject themselves in a manner neither inconsistent with, nor opposed to, the Federal statute. We think the judgment is right, and it is affirmed.

203 U. S.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concurs Mr. Justice Day, dissenting:

My brother Day and myself dissent. The reasons, however, which impel him are broader than those influencing me. In general terms, the Kansas statute which the court now upholds compels one selling a patent right in any county of the state of Kansas to file with the clerk of such county an authenticated copy of the patent, together with an affidavit as to the genuineness of the patent, and as to other matters. The statute, moreover, exacts that where a note is given for the purchase price of a patent right, there shall be inserted in the note a statement that it is given for a patent right, presumably to deprive the note of the attributes of commercial paper. We both think that the requirements as to recording the patent and affidavit are void, because repugnant to the power delegated to Congress by the Constitution on the subject of patents, and because in conflict with the legislation of Congress on the *same subject. [358] And, for like reasons, my brother Day is also of the opinion that the provision is void which exacts an insertion in a note given for the sale of a patent right of the fact that it was given for such sale. This latter provision, in my opinion, the state had the power to make as a reasonable police regulation, not repugnant to the authority as to patents delegated to Congress by the Constitution, or the legislation which Congress has enacted in furtherance thereof.

JOHN WOODS & SONS, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
FRANK CARL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 358, 359.)

Patents—state regulation of sale.

The requirement that a negotiable instrument taken on a sale of rights under a patent shall show on its face for what it was given, or be void, which is made by Kirby's (Ark.) Dig. § 513, does not violate U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, granting to Congress the right to secure to inventors the exclusive right to their discovery, nor U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4898, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3387, authorizing written assignments of patents or interests therein, which shall be

NOTE.—As to the validity of notes given for patent rights—see notes to First Nat. Bank v. Stockell, 20 L.R.A. 605; and Mandeville v. Welch, 5 L. ed. U. S. 88.

On the power of a state to restrict and regulate the sale and enjoyment of patent rights—see note to Com. v. Petty, 29 L.R.A. 786.

void as against subsequent purchasers unless recorded in the Patent Office.

[No. 102.]

Submitted November 7, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Pulaski County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action on a promissory note given for the sale of a patent right, which was not executed as required by the statutes of that state governing the sale of patent rights. Affirmed.

See same case below, 75 Ark. 328, 87 S. W. 621.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles F. Wilson submitted the cause in behalf of Homer C. Mechem for plaintiffs in error. Mr. Edwin Mechem was on the brief.

Mr. John Fletcher submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. W. C. Ratcliffe was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Peckham delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the proper court of the state of Arkansas by the plaintiffs in error to recover the amount of a promissory note which was given by the defendant in error on the sale to him of a patented machine and of the right to the patent in the state of Arkansas. Before the [359] maturity of the note it was indorsed by the payee and transferred to plaintiffs in error. The note was not executed as provided for by the statute of that state relating to the sale of rights under a patent. Act of April 23, 1891, Kirby's Dig. § 513. The section reads as follows:

"Sec. 513. Any vendor of any patented machine, implement, substance, or instrument of any kind or character whatsoever, when the said vendor of the same effects the sale of the same to any citizen of this state on a credit, and takes any character of negotiable instrument in payment of the same, the said negotiable instrument shall be executed on a printed form, and show upon its face that it was executed in consideration of a patented machine, implement, substance, or instrument, as the case may be, and no person shall be considered an innocent holder of the same, though he may have given value for the same before maturity, and the maker thereof may make defense to the collection of the same in the hands of any holder of said negotiable instrument, and all such notes not showing on their face for what they were given shall be absolutely void."

220

The defendant set up the violation of the statute as a defense. The verdict was for the defendant, and the judgment entered thereon having been affirmed by the supreme court, the plaintiffs have brought the case here by writ of error.

The sole question involved is the validity of the statute. The opinion of the supreme court of Arkansas is reported in 75 Ark. 328, 87 S. W. 621. See also Wyatt v. Wallace, 67 Ark. 575, 55 S. W. 1105; State v. Cook, 107 Tenn. 499, 62 L.R.A. 174, 64 S. W. 720. This case is governed by the immediately preceding one, although the statute of Arkansas renders the note void if given for a patent right if the note does not show on its face for what it was given. The difference is not so material as to call for a different decision. The judgment is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Day dissents.

*CITY OF MONTEREY, Plff. in Err., [360]

v.

DAVID JACKS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 360-363.)

Private land claims—state control over pueblo lands.

1. The California legislature could enact the act of April 2, 1866, ratifying conveyances made by the corporate authorities of the city of Monterey of pueblo lands confirmed to that city by the United States and afterwards patented to it, its successors and assigns.

Error to state court—Federal question.

2. The question whether the California legislature could enact the act of April 2, 1866, ratifying conveyances made by the corporate authorities of the city of Monterey of pueblo lands confirmed to that city by the United States, and afterwards patented to it, its successors and assigns, is not so far unsubstantial as to justify dismissal of a writ of error to a state court.

[No. 27.]

Argued and submitted October 16, 1906.
Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of the County of Monterey, in NOTE.—As to the necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court—see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. post, 231.

203 U. S.

that state, in favor of defendant in an action to quiet title to pueblo lands. Affirmed.

See same case below, 139 Cal. 542, 73 Pac. 436.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hamilton Gay Howard submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

This court has jurisdiction.

Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Long Island Loan & T. Co. 172 U. S. 507, 43 L. ed. 532, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Romie v. Casanova, 91 U. S. 379, 23 L. ed. 374; McStay v. Friedman, 92 U. S. 723, 23 L. ed. 767; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Delamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

Where did the sovereign state of California get its title to, or jurisdiction over, the pueblo lands of the city of Monterey?

Meader v. Norton, 11 Wall. 455, 20 L. ed. 186; Teschemacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 26, 79 Am. Dec. 151; Leese v. Clark, 18 Cal. 571; Baker v. Brickell, 87 Cal. 333, 25 Pac. 489, 1067; United States v. Sutherland, 19 How. 365, 15 L. ed. 667; Fenn v. Holme, 21 How. 488, 16 L. ed. 200; Scull v. United States, 98 U. S. 410, 25 L. ed. 164; Fremont v. United States, 17 How. 542, 557, 15 L. ed. 241, 245; Trenier v. Stewart, 101 U. S. 797, 25 L. ed. 1021; McCabe v. Worthington, 16 How. 86, 14 L. ed. 856; United States v. Clamorgan, 101 U. S. 831, 25 L. ed. 838; Hoadley v. San Francisco (Clark v. San Francisco) 124 U. S. 644, 31 L. ed. 556, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659; Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 378, 379, 18 L. ed. 867, 868; Townsend v. Greeley, 5 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 548; Palmer v. Low, 98 U. S. 16, 25 L. ed. 64; Woodworth v. Fulton, 1 Cal. 307.

A patent for a Mexican land grant is a deed from the United States.

Teschemacher v. Thompson, Leese v. Clark, and Baker v. Brickell, supra; Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. 491, 18 L. ed. 92.

Mr. W. I. Brobeck argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Garber and Frederic D. McKenney, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The assignment of a Federal question comes too late unless the question has been presented for decision in the state courts, or unless a right, title, immunity, or privilege claimed under the Constitution or laws of the United States has been specially set up or claimed in the state courts.
203 U. S.

Caro v. Davidson, 197 U. S. 197, 49 L. ed. 723, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Levy v. Superior Court, 167 U. S. 175, 42 L. ed. 126, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet, 199 U. S. 182, 50 L. ed. 143, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 32, 36, 44 L. ed. 62, 63, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The Federal question must be unmistakably and specifically drawn in question.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458; Hoyt v. Shelden (Hoyt v. Thompson) 1 Black, 518, 17 L. ed. 65; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 183, 184, 186, 39 L. ed. 941-943, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

And even in those instances in which a Federal question is drawn in question, and it appears that the decision below was adverse to the plaintiff in error upon two independent grounds, one of which is not a Federal question, the judgment of the state court will be affirmed.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Adams County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 112 U. S. 123, 28 L. ed. 678, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Hopkins v. McLure, 133 U. S. 380, 33 L. ed. 660, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 73, 35 L. ed. 941, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

And where a defense is distinctly made, resting on local statutes, this court will not, in order to reach a Federal question, resort to critical conjecture as to the action of the state court in the disposition of such defense.

Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 307, 34 L. ed. 683, 686, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet, supra; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

It is apparent that the validity of the treaty and of the act could scarcely have been contested by either party to the action, as they formed the basis of the rights of each. As it is well known, by that treaty the territory of which California now forms a part was ceded to the United States, and the act of Congress was intended to carry out the obligation imposed by the treaty upon the Federal government to protect the rights of private land claimants under the Mexican or Spanish laws. That no Federal question was here involved is absolutely foreclosed by the repeated decisions of this court, some of them in reference to this same act and treaty.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571-579, 44 L. ed. 276-280, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Kennard v. Nebraska, 186 U. S. 304, 46 L. ed. 1175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; California ex rel. Hastings v. Jackson, 112 U. S. 237, 28 L. ed. 714, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

A general reference to the Federal Constitution is not sufficient (Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet, supra), but the provisions specially relied upon must be specifically pointed out.

It is apparent from the court's opinion that it decided the case quite without thought that any Federal question was, or could be, involved in its determination.

See Scudder v. Comptroller, supra.

No right or title claimed by the city to have been acquired by it under United States patent was ever specially set up or claimed in the courts of the state of California. This objection is fatal to the jurisdiction of this court.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 38 L. ed. 927, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, supra; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 164 U. S. 454, 41 L. ed. 511, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 36 L. ed. 922, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84.

The conflicting rights of persons, each admittedly claiming under a patent of the United States, do not present a Federal question.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Kennard v. Nebraska, supra.

Counsel for plaintiff in error are mistaken as to the effect of the patent, as to which there can no longer be any room for controversy in this court.

United States v. Conway, 175 U. S. 70, 44 L. ed. 76, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 22 L. ed. 606; Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. 478, 491, 18 L. ed. 88, 92; Landes v. Brant, 10 How. 373, 13 L. ed. 460.

The Federal questions set up are manifestly frivolous and without merit.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 344, 46 L. ed. 936, 941, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; St. Louis, G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 484, 39 L. ed. 502, 504, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 171, 43 L. ed. 937, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 536, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action to quiet title, brought by plaintiff in error (and, being plaintiff in the court below, we will so designate it) in the superior court of the county of Monterey to 1,635.03 acres of land, situate in Monterey county, state of California. Plaintiff alleged title in fee simple, and contends that such title has come to it as successor of the pueblo of Monterey of Upper California. There is no dispute that the land was part of the pueblo of Monterey, and that, after proper proceedings had in pursuance of acts of Congress, the title of the city of Monterey was confirmed by a decree of the board of land commissioners, and a patent issued to the city November 19, 1891.

*The defendant gets his title through one [361] D. R. Ashley, who was the attorney for the city, to present and prosecute its claim to the land before the board of land commissioners. To pay the indebtedness incurred for his services the land was sold under the authority of certain acts of the legislature of the state, and purchased by him. The validity of the title so derived, as against the title of the city as successor of the pueblo of Monterey, free from the control of the legislature, makes the question in the case. Judgment passed for the defendant in the trial court and was affirmed by the supreme court. 139 Cal. 542, 73 Pac. 436. This writ of error was then allowed.

The city of Monterey was incorporated by an act of the legislature of the state of California, March 30, 1850, and became thereby successor of the former pueblo to its pueblo lands. In 1857 the charter of the city was amended, and by § 7 thereof the trustees were empowered to pay off the expenses of prosecuting the title of the city before the United States land commissioners and before the United States courts, and for that purpose sell and transfer any property, right, or franchise upon such terms and for such price as might by them be deemed reasonable. It was found by the lower courts (and we quote from the opinion of the supreme court) that—

“On January 24, 1859, said Ashley presented to the trustees of the city of Monterey a claim amounting to $991.50 for services as its attorney in presenting such pueblo claim to the commissioners. The claim was approved and allowed, and there being no funds in the treasury to pay it, the board of trustees passed a resolution directing that a sale of all the pueblo lands of the city, or so much of them as might be necessary to pay the claim of said Ashley, be made at public auction on the 9th day of February, 1859. One notice of the time for holding said sale was given, and the same was held at the time and in accordance with the notice, at which sale the entire pueblo tract was bid in by the said D. R. Ashley and the defendant, David Jacks, for the sum of [362] $1,002.50, being *the amount of the indebtedness and the necessary expenses of sale; no one offering to purchase less than the whole, or bid a higher amount. Thereafter said trustees made, executed, and delivered a conveyance of said lands, dated February 9, 1859, but acknowledged February 12, 1859, in favor of said D. R. Ashley and the defendant, David Jacks, and in the conveyance the proceedings taken by the trustees in the matter of such sale were recited. This conveyance was recorded in the county recorder's office of the county of Monterey on June 11, 1859. On April 2, 1866, the act to incorporate the city of Monterey was amended to read as follows: ‘Sec. 2. All sales and conveyances made by the corporate authorities of said city since the 8th day of February, 1859, and which conveyances purport to have been recorded in the county recorder's office of Monterey county, purporting to convey public lands, or lands confirmed to said city of Monterey, in pursuance of the act of Congress of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat. at L. 631, chap. 41), and entitled “An Act to Ascertain and Settle the Private Land Claims in the State of California,” are hereby ratified and confirmed.’ . . . On September 4, 1869, Ashley conveyed all his interest in the land in controversy to the defendant.”

The contentions of the parties are in part made to turn upon the kind of right the city of Monterey derived as the successor of the pueblo of Monterey, whether proprietary or in trust, and, because in trust, subject to the disposition of the legislature of the state. This distinction was expressed by the supreme court and the case determined by it, and the court supported its action by a citation of prior decisions. It was said: “There is a marked difference, however, between lands which are held by a municipality in trust for public, municipal purposes, such as pueblo lands, and lands acquired by a municipality through purchase or special grant, and held in proprietary right.” Of the latter class it was said: “That it is beyond the power of the state to control its disposition without the consent of the municipality.” In the other case, “the lands, being simply ancillary to the execution of the public trust,—lands in which *the pueblo never had an indefeasible [363] proprietary interest, and which were subject to the supreme political dominion of the former Mexican government,—became equally subject to the sovereignty of the state of California through its legislature upon the change of government.”
203 U. S.

Plaintiff attacks this conclusion, and contends that the title to the lands vested, not in the state of California as succeeding sovereign, but in the United States, and the United States, having the title, passed it by the patent of November 19, 1891, to the plaintiff. And this contention, plaintiff asserts, presents the Federal question to be decided. At one time this might have been regarded as a serious question, but it is no longer so. Whatever of legal power the state of California may exercise over its municipalities has received decisive definition in many decisions. The cases are quoted by the supreme court in the case at bar. Whatever power the United States may exercise, or, by refraining from exercising, yield to the state of California to exercise, has long been decisively settled. We need not review the cases. An exposition of them can be found in United States v. Santa Fe, 165 U. S. 675, 41 L. ed. 874, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472.

If the United States was, as contended, a paramount sovereign, and, as such, possessed the power to direct the trust to which pueblo lands were subject, it did not do so, but conveyed land to the “city of Monterey, its successors and assigns.” In other words, the conveyance was made to a municipality of the state of California,—a creature of the laws of the state and subject to the state. Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220; San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541. See also Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 50 L. ed. 167, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep.

27. And we may observe that the United States, by an act passed June 15, 1906, has designated the city of Monterey as trustee of the original grant, and confirmed the land to the city as patented. 34 Stat. at L. 267.

We do not think, however, that the Federal question presented is so far unsubstantial as to justify a dismissal of the writ of error, and the motion to dismiss is denied.

Judgment affirmed.

[364]*INTERNATIONAL TRUST COMPANY
Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN W. WEEKS, Agent of the Shareholders of the Broadway National Bank.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 364-368.)

Courts—jurisdiction of circuit court—action to wind up affairs of national bank.

1. An action for rent, brought against the agent for the shareholders of an insolvent national bank to whom the Comptroller of the Currency has released the estate of the bank, is one to wind up the affairs of the bank, and, as such, is within the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court.

Landlord and tenant—rent after re-entry—effort to relet.

2. Rent after re-entry cannot be recovered by the lessors unless a reasonable effort has been made to relet the premises, where the lease provides that after re-entry for breach of any covenant the lessors "may, at their discretion, relet the premises, at the risk of the lessee, who shall remain, for the residue of said term, responsible for the rent herein reserved, and shall be credited with such amounts only as shall be, by the lessors, actually realized."

[No. 31.]

Argued October 17, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

I. N ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed, on a second writ of error, a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts in favor of defendant in an action for rent. Affirmed.

See same case below, 71 C. C. A. 417, 139 Fed. 5.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert M. Morse argued the cause, and, with Mr. William M. Richardson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A receiver of a national bank may be sued in the circuit court irrespective of citizenship.

Auten v. United States Nat. Bank, 174 U. S. 125, 43 L. ed. 920, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

The stockholders' agent may likewise be sued in the circuit court.

NOTE.—On actions by and against receivers and agents of national banks—see note to McCartney v. Earle, 53 C. C. A. 398.

As to the liability for rent of premises occupied by receiver or assignee for creditors—see note to Link Belt Mach. Co. v. Hughes, 59 L.R.A. 673.

Landlord's duty to relet on defaulting tenant's account.

There is scarcely any dissent from the general proposition that the landlord is under no obligation to relet abandoned premises for the benefit of the tenant, but may, if he choose, decline to meddle with the property, and hold the tenant liable for the rent for the whole term. The following cases recognize this principle: Rospini v. Porta, 89 Cal. 464, 23 Am. St. Rep. 488, 26 Pac. 967; Aberdeen Coal & Min. Co. v. Evansville, 14 Ind. App. 621, 43 N. E. 316; Patterson v. Emerich, 21 Ind. App. 614, 52 N. E. 1012; Merrill v. Willis, 51 Neb. 162, 70 N. W. 914; Re Hevenor, 144 N. Y. 271, 39 N. E. 393; Underhill v. Collins, 132 N. Y. 269, 30 N. E. 576; Clendinning v. Lindner, 9 Misc. 682, 30 N. Y. Supp. 543; Reich v. McCrea, 37 N. Y. S. R. 620, 13 N. Y. Supp. 650; Milling v. Becker, 96 Pa. 182; Lipper v. Bouvé, C. & Co. 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 452; Randall v. Thompson Bros. 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (White & W.) § 1102; Alsup v. 224

Banks, 68 Miss. 664, 13 L.R.A. 598, 24 Am. St. Rep. 294, 9 So. 895.

In answer to the objection that a contrary doctrine was laid down in Allen v. Saunders, 6 Neb. 436, where, in an action for rent, brought against a tenant who had abandoned the property, a charge was approved to the effect that while it was the duty of the landlord to relet to as good an advantage and in as profitable a way as would be done by an ordinarily careful and prudent man, he was not obliged to let to tenants whose business was of such a character as would be of permanent injury to the property in a greater degree than ordinary business, the court, in Merrill v. Willis, supra, said that the turning point of that case was not the duty of the lessor to relet, but the qualification of an instruction otherwise satisfactory to both parties, to the effect that the landlord was not required to relet to a tenant whose business would permanently injure the property, and that what was said respecting the entry of the lessor to relet for the protection of the lessee must be regarded as obiter.

But where, as in INTERNATIONAL TRUST Co. v. WEEKS, the lease expressly empowers the landlord to re-enter and relet on the defaulting tenant's account without losing his rights under the lease, what little authority exists is to the effect that, if the landlord elects to take advantage of the Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 459, 41 L. ed. 782, 787, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Guarantee Co. v. Hanway, 44 C. C. A. 312, 104 Fed. 369.

It may be that the terms of this lease were onerous upon the lessee. But the original lessors had the right to make them, and the plaintiff, in purchasing the property of the original lessors, was necessarily influenced by the terms of this lease and had the right to the benefit of them. They had the right to limit the use of their property in such way as should, in their judgment, secure their interests, and the lessees are bound by the stipulations in the lease.

Minot v. Joy, 118 Mass. 308; Wilkinson v. Libbey, 1 Allen, 375; Amory v. Melvin, 112 Mass. 83; Hunnewell v. Bangs, 161 Mass. 132, 36 N. E. 751.

That a lessee may, under a clause in a lease substantially like that in the present lease, be held liable for the amount of the rent, less such amounts as may be actually collected, is well established.

Way v. Reed, 6 Allen, 364; Edmands v. Rust & R. Drug Co. 191 Mass. 123, 77 N. E. 713; Ex parte Lake, 2 Low. Dec. 544, Fed. Cas. No. 7,991; Grommes v. St. Paul Trust Co. 147 Ill. 634, 37 Am. St. Rep. 248, 35 N. E. 820, 47 Ill. App. 568; Hall v. Gould, 13 N. Y. 127.

The plain and natural construction of the lease, especially in view of the clause that clause, he must make a reasonable effort to relet the premises, and must not arbitrarily refuse prospective tenants.

In exercising his rights under such a lease the landlord has the right to select a good and proper tenant. Nathan v. Gendron Iron Wheel Co. 18 Misc. 374, 41 N. Y. Supp. 661.

And he is not required to accept a prospective tenant merely because the defaulting lessees are satisfied as to his financial responsibility. Edmands v. Rust & R. Drug Co. 191 Mass. 123, 77 N. E. 713.

But he is bound to use due diligence in renting. Fitch v. Armour, 27 Jones & S. 413, 14 N. Y. Supp. 319.

And an unreasonable refusal to accept a suitable tenant may be deemed an abandonment of the election to relet at the risk of the lessee. Edmands v. Rust & R. Drug Co. supra.

The belief of the landlord that an actress might keep late hours and thus disturb his other tenants is not sufficient reason for rejecting her application to rent the premises, and entitles the defaulting tenant, in an action for the rent, to be credited with the amount of rent that would have been payable under such reletting. Fitch v. Armour, supra.

But the question as to whether the landlord used due diligence to relet the premises is immaterial where the lease provides that the landlord may, at his option, relet the the use of the premises was limited to the business offices of the bank, is that the lessee was to be held for the entire rent less such amounts as might be collected, and that any reletting was to be at the lessor's discretion.

Weeks v. International Trust Co. 60 C. C. A. 236, 125 Fed. 370; Ex parte Lake and Grommes v. St. Paul Trust Co. supra; Woodbury v. Sparrell Print, 187 Mass. 426, 73 N. E. 547.

It is well settled that where a tenant abandons the possession of the premises during the continuance of the tenancy, the landlord is not bound to re-enter and attempt to relet them for his benefit.

18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 303; Clendinning v. Lindner, 9 Misc. 682, 30 N. Y. Supp. 543.

Mr. G. Philip Wardner argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edward E. Blodgett, filed a brief for defendant in error:

No liability rests or can rest upon the lessee under such a clause as the one presented in the case at bar, in the absence of a reasonable attempt to relet the premises after the termination of the lease.

Way v. Reed, 6 Allen, 364; Bowditch v. Raymond, 146 Mass. 109, 15 N. E. 285; Re Ells, 98 Fed. 967; Woodbury v. Sparrell Print, 187 Mass. 426, 73 N. E. 547; Edmands v. Rust & R. Drug Co. 191 Mass. 123, 77 N. E. 713.

premises on the tenant's account on such terms as he may deem expedient or proper, and that such reletting shall not operate as a termination of the lease or the waiver of any right to hold the tenant for the rent reserved, since the landlord could hold the tenant for the entire rent if there had been no reletting. Lehman v. Henry Sears Co. 30 Chicago Legal News, 309, 16 Nat. Corp. Rep. 487.

Of course, the landlord need not avail himself of his privilege. He may still abstain from renting, and hold the tenant liable for the rent. Weeks v. International Trust Co. 60 C. C. A. 236, 125 Fed. 370.

Or he may, in his discretion, elect not to relet, but to resume possession on his own account. Bowditch v. Raymond, 146 Mass. 109, 15 N. E. 285.

Where a party breaks his executory contract to take a lease of certain premises before the time for performance arrives, the owner, if he does not vest the lessee with the right of possession so as to enable him to collect the stipulated rent, must keep the possession and use reasonable endeavors to make the property as productive or profitable to himself as possible, and if he does not do so he can only recover such legitimate damages as he has sustained over and above what he ought to have realized from the property. Kirland v. Wolf, 7 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 436.

This being a matter of the construction of a lease of real estate, the decision of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts will be followed by this court.

Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 12 Wheat. 153, 167, 5 L. ed. 583, 588; Hender-son v. Griffin, 5 Pet. 151, 155, 8 L. ed. 79, 80; Beaugregard v. New Orleans, 18 How. 497, 15 L. ed. 469; Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. 427, 16 L. ed. 742; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Barber v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 83, 99, 41 L. ed. 925, 933, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Warburton v. White, 176 U. S. 484, 496, 44 L. ed. 555, 559, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 404; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 595, 45 L. ed. 679, 687, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

This was not a suit for winding up the affairs of the Broadway bank.

Snohomish County v. Puget Sound Nat. Bank, 81 Fed. 518; Armstrong v. Trautman, 36 Fed. 275; Guarantee Co. v. Hanway, 44 C. C. A. 312, 104 Fed. 369; Brown v. Smith, 88 Fed. 565; Stephens v. Bernays, 44 Fed. 642; Speckart v. German Nat. Bank, 85 Fed. 12; George v. Wallace, 68 C. C. A. 40, 135 Fed. 286.

No one is an officer of the United States who is not appointed by the President, the courts of law, or the head of a department.

Thompson v. Pool, 70 Fed. 725.

The stockholders' agent of a national bank is not appointed by the President, or by the courts of law, or by the head of a department. He is not, therefore, an officer of the United States, and the cases of McConville v. Gilmour, 1 L.R.A. 498, 36 Fed. 277, and Guarantee Co. v. Hanway, supra, must be held to have been erroneously decided.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on contract brought in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, for rent alleged to be due under the terms of a lease made by Henry Parkman and others to the Broadway National Bank.

The original lessors sold the land and building leased to the International Trust [365] Company, plaintiff in error. Defendant *in error is agent of the shareholders of the Broadway National Bank.

The premises leased were the first floor of the building and the basement under the same, "to be used as the business offices of said corporation and for no other purpose." The lease contained a provision for re-entry upon breach of any covenant. "And there-upon the lessors may, at their discretion, relet the premises, at the risk of the lessee, who shall remain for the residue of said term responsible for the rent herein reserved, and shall be credited with such amounts only as shall be by the lessors actually realized."

On December 16, 1899, the bank became insolvent, and the Comptroller of the Currency appointed a receiver. On February 15, 1900, the Comptroller released the estate of the bank to defendant in error as the stockholders' agent. Between December 16, 1899, and January 5, 1900, the trust company entered upon the premises and repossessed itself of the same as of its former estate. The receiver occupied the premises for a while, but it was stipulated that such occupation was not to affect the rights of the parties. Defendant in error occupied the premises until May 19, 1900. He contended in defense of the action that upon the termination of the lease it was the duty of the trust company to use all reasonable effort to relet the premises, so as to minimize the damages, and that the company had not done so. And further, that suitable and responsible parties were willing at various times to hire the premises at a rent as great or greater than the rent reserved in the lease.

At the first trial of the case the circuit court took the opposite of defendant in error's contention, and held that, by force of the lease, the trust company did not assume any risk, and was only required to use its discretion "with some degree of reasonableness and with some degree of justice, and have some regard to the rights of the position of the other parties concerned." The court further held that the evidence did not show that the company had abused its discretion, and *directed a verdict for it. less [366] certain payments made by the occupant of the basement, formerly the bank's tenant. This was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. 60 C. C. A. 236, 125 Fed. 371. The latter court held that a lessor had the right to re-enter and might exercise his discretion to relet the premises at the risk of the lessee. The lessor, it was said, need not go through the form of reletting, but an honest and reasonable attempt to relet should be made, and whether so made was a question for the jury.

Upon the second trial of the case in the circuit court the trust company expressed its contentions in requests for instructions to the jury as follows: (1) That it was entitled to rent the premises and relet them at the risk of the bank; (2) that there was no obligation upon it to notify the bank of its election so to do, or to relet the premises or attempt to relet them. The court declined to give the instructions, but instructed the jury in accordance with the principle expressed by the circuit court of appeals. The jury returned a verdict for defendant in error, upon which judgment was duly entered. It was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals.

(1) It is objected by defendant in error that the circuit court had no jurisdiction of this action. We think otherwise. The action is clearly one to wind up the affairs of the bank. Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 459, 41 L. ed. 782, 787, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Guarantee Co. v. Hanway, 44 C. C. A. 312, 104 Fed. 369.

(2) The fact that the trust company did not make a reasonable effort to relet the premises was settled by the verdict of the jury against it, and the case is reduced to the simple question whether the company can recover by virtue of the provisions of the lease without any attempt whatsoever to relet the premises.

It is said in argument that the provision in controversy has been found in the usual form of lease in Massachusetts for a generation, and yet its meaning, as now brought in dispute, has not come up for or received explicit decision. To this absence of contention and decision both parties refer with *equal confidence to establish that their respective constructions have been so indisputable as never to have been questioned. However, there are some indications of a judgment between the two constructions in the case of Edmands v. Rust & R. Drug Co. 191 Mass. 123, 77 N. E. 713, which may be turned to in passing on a question so essentially local.

The lease passed on contained a provision for an entry by the lessors to terminate the lease for the breach of covenants, followed by this language: "But the lessee covenants to be responsible for any loss or diminution of rent sustained by the lessors in consequence till the end of the lease." The defendant in the case requested instructions, expressing it to be the duty of the lessor to accept any tenant that was satisfactory financially to defendant. His instructions were refused, and the court instructed the jury, among other things, as follows: "In general, the effort must be that which a reasonable landholder would make under the circumstances. Not every proposed tenant need be accepted, but an unreasonable refusal to accept a suitable tenant will be deemed an abandonment of the election to relet at the risk of the lessee." Commenting on the instructions the supreme judicial court said that "the jury were left to decide between the parties, in a way of which the defendant has no reason to complain."

It is manifest from this decision that the lessor, after entry, has not the absolute discretion to relet or not to relet the premises, but that it is his duty to "prevent unnecessary loss or diminution of rent in consequence of the termination of the lease."

In Bowditch v. Raymond, 146 Mass. 109, 15 N. E. 285, the liability of the lessor, under the provision of a lease such as that in controversy, was denied against an insolvent lessee on the ground that it was dependent upon a contingency, not merely as to the amount of liability, but as to whether it would ever attach or arise out of the covenant. "The lessors," the court said, "in their discretion might not relet the premises, but resume possession of them." This case rests on the principle *expressed [368] by Judge Lowell, speaking for the circuit court of appeals, that if the lessor avail himself of the covenant and re-enter he may exercise his discretion to relet the premises at risk of the lessee or occupy them. If he elect to relet he must make "an honest and reasonable attempt to relet." And this is a reasonable and just exaction. It is the spirit as well as the letter of the covenant, fulfilling its security without unnecessary loss to the lessee.

Whether the bank could have made a lease to extend beyond its charter life we need not decide.

Judgment affirmed.

ANN E. J. CRUIT, Appt.,
v.

KATE DEAN OWEN and Jessie Owen Cugle.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 368-372.)

Wills—interests of several—survivorship.

1. The surviving daughter of the testator does not take to the exclusion of her sister's children under a will executed after the marriage of such sister, devising the testator's real property in trust to his daughters "for and during their respective lives . . . and from and after their death in trust for the child or children of each of my said daughters then alive in fee simple," and providing that, if any of the daughters should die without having been married, her share should pass to the survivors.

Trust—termination—death of trustee.

2. A testamentary trust survives the death of the trustee where the will provides that, if the executrix, who was also named as trustee, should die or for any cause should become unable to act in the trust, a new trustee should be appointed by the court, so that the trusts thereby created should be at all times preserved and carried into effect.

[No. 51.]

Argued October 19, 22, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

A PPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District in a suit to construe a will. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 514.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward H. Thomas argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The words "respective," "share and share alike," and others indicate a technical grasp on judicial decisions defining and applying those terms under like circumstances to those surrounding the testator, as indicated in his will. The testator, therefore, had an intention which is to be ascertained by construing his will in harmony with the meaning of the technical words whereby he has manifested it.

Lambert v. Paine, 3 Cranch, 134, 2 L. ed. 390; Doe ex dem. Kean v. Roe, 2 Harr. (Del.) 103, 29 Am. Dec. 342.

Testator gave certain estate to his sisters P. and M. "for the term of their natural lives," and provided that, "after the decease of both of my said sisters," a part should go to relatives and the residue to an orphan asylum. Held, survivor took the use of the whole estate, and not of a half only.

Glover v. Stillson, 56 Conn. 316, 15 Atl. 752.

A testatrix in her will gave to a trustee named, "income to be paid equally to my brother and my sister during their natural lives, and at their death the principal I give to my nephews and nieces then surviving."

The brother died after the testatrix, and left the sister surviving. Held, that the whole income of the property was payable thereafter to the sister until her death, until which time the gift over in remainder to the nephews and nieces was not to take effect.

Loring v. Coolidge, 99 Mass. 191.

Wherever it appears to be the intention of a testator that the whole of his estate shall go over together, upon the failure of issue of more than two tenants in common, cross remainders shall be implied between them in the meantime in order to effectuate that intent.

Doe ex dem. Gorges v. Webb, 1 Taunt. 234.

Though the words "equally to be divided" and "share and share alike" are in general construed in a will to create a tenancy in common, yet, where the contract shows a joint tenancy to be intended, the words shall be construed accordingly.

Armstrong v. Eldridge, 3 Bro. Ch. 215.

Testator gave to the children of Mr. John Glass, deceased, and the children of Mrs. Lyon, deceased, the interest of £1,500 for life, to be equally divided between them, and, at their decease, the same to be divided between the grandchildren of each, Mr. Glass and Mrs. Lyon. John Glass died in the lifetime of the testator, leaving no children but leaving, at the decease of the testator, five grandchildren. Mrs. Lyon died in the lifetime of testator, leaving three children. Held, that children of Mrs. Lyon shall take the whole interest, nothing passing to the grandchildren until the death of all.

Malcolm v. Martin, 3 Bro. Ch. 50.

W. L. devised as follows: "I hereby desire my executor to invest all my estate that may be left so that the interest shall be paid to my daughters, Sarah J. Lazier and Louisa R. Lazier, during their lifetime, or as long as they remain single, and at their death or marriage I hereby desire that amount shall be equally divided among all my children." Held, that said estate was not distributable so long as either Sarah J. Lazier or Louisa R. Lazier was in life and remained single, and that, said Louisa R. having died unmarried, said Sarah J. was entitled to the interest on assets as long as she lived and remained single.

Lazier v. Lazier, 35 W. Va. 567, 14 S. E. 148.

Where a testator in his will devises certain land to his two daughters for their natural lives and after their death to their lawful children forever, if they shall have any; and further provides that, if both said daughters die childless, then the land shall go to the testator's grandson, his heirs and assigns forever,—held, that the daughters take as tenants in common for life, with cross remainder for life necessarily implied between them.

Smith v. Usher, 108 Ga. 231, 33 S. E. 876.

The rule is that the extent of the trustee's title depends more on the requirement of the trust than on the terms of its grant.

Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 18 L. ed. 869; Young v. Bradley, 101 U. S. 782, 787, 25 L. ed. 1044, 1045.

Where the testatrix devised an estate to a trustee to hold for her single daughters and pay the income during their lives, free from the debts of any husband they may have or take, etc., the trust for their separate use fell, there being no coverture when the will took effect.

Yarnall's Appeal, 70 Pa. 335.

An active trust for coverture, there being no immediate marriage contemplated, cannot take effect, because there is no object to accomplish for the benefit of the cestui que trust.

Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. 501; Williams's Appeal, 83 Pa. 390; Tullett v. Armstrong, 1 Beav. 32, 4 Myl. & C. 397; Cooney v. Woodburn, 33 Md. 326, Schouler, Dom. Rel. §§ 107-127.

A tenant in common in possession under the mistaken idea that he is entitled to the whole interest is not liable to account for the use thereof, where there is no exclusion or claim made upon him to protect the other's rights.

Sailer v. Sailer, 41 N. J. Eq. 398, 5 Atl. 319.

Mr. Chapin Brown argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. P. Earnest, filed a brief for appellees:

The testator devised and bequeathed his whole estate.

Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. 68, 8 L. ed. 322; Given v. Hilton, 95 U. S. 591, 24 L. ed. 458.

Even if the language were not so strong and so plain in giving the daughters only a life estate, yet, there being no words of limitation to the devise to them, they would take an estate for life only.

Jarman, Wills, *1131; Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat. 204, 6 L. ed. 303; King v. Ackerman, 2 Black, 408, 17 L. ed. 292.

The fee-simple title of all the real estate devised by the will vested in them in remainder, at the death of the testator, subject to be opened to let in any after-born children of any of the daughters of the testator.

McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 28 L. ed. 1015, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Croxall v. Shererd (Den ex dem. Croxall v. Sherrerd) 5 Wall. 268, 18 L. ed. 572; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 18 L. ed. 869; Daniel v. Whartenby, 17 Wall. 639, 21 L. ed. 661; Cropley v. Cooper, 19 Wall. 167, 22 L. ed. 109.

Although words as they stand are not absolutely senseless or contradictory, transposition will be made if it be required to effectuate the intention clearly expressed or indicated by the context.

Wilson v. Eden, 1 Exch. 772, 14 Q. B. 256, 4 H. L. Cas. 257; 1 Jarman, Wills, *468; see also as to the Transposition of Words and Clauses, 1 Jarman, Wills, *465.

If there had not been any other language in the will to explain this word "their," yet it would necessarily have to be construed as reading or meaning "their respective deaths."

Wills v. Wills, L. R. 20 Eq. 342; 1 Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's 6th Am. ed. *470.

Where, as in the CRUIT CASE, the children or other devisees of a testator take for life as tenants in common, with remainder over to their children, the children of the life tenants take immediately upon the death of each life tenant, per stirpes, that is, the share of the parent respectively. There is no exception to this rule.

2 Jarman, Wills, 1052, 1053.

The language of the will, namely, "equally, share and share alike," creates a tenancy in common.

Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's 6th Am. ed. 1121 et seq.; Schouler, Wills, 3d ed. § 566; Barribeau v. Brant, 17 How. 43, 15 L. ed. 34.

Each daughter of Robert Cruit took, at the time of his death, a life estate, as tenant in common, with the others in one fourth each of the real estate, with the possibility of the life estate being increased by express cross remainders, if any one or more daughters died without leaving a child or children.

McAleer v. Schneider, 2 App. D. C. 461; Wright v. Denn, and King v. Ackerman, supra; Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's 6th Am. ed. 1131 et seq.

Cross remainders cannot be implied where there are express cross limitations among the devisees in tail in certain events.

Jarman, Wills, *1553; Clache's Case, 3 Dyer, 330 b.

The well-established principles of law in reference to trust estates show that this is still a trust estate.

Hill, Trustees, 232, 234, 273; 2 Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's ed. 1137, 1139, notes; Perry, Trustees, § 307; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 Mees. & W. 421; Keene ex dem. Byron v. Deardon, 8 East, 248; White v. Parker, 1 Bing. N. C. 573.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit involves the construction of the will of Robert *Cruit, deceased, and, as dependent thereon, the liability of appellant to account to the appellees for the rents of certain real estate located in the city of Washington and in the state of Virginia. Decree in the supreme court passed for appellees, which was affirmed by the court of appeals. 25 App. D. C. 514.

The will was executed September 1, 1858, and was duly admitted to probate.† The testator left surviving him a wife *and four daughters,—Catherine E., then the wife of †This is the last will and testament of me Robert Cruit of the city of Washington in the District of Columbia.

First I give to my two nephews Edwin Cruit the son of George, and Henry the son of John L. Cruit, the legacy of one hundred dollars, to each of them, to be paid as soon after my death as may be. And all the rest residue and remainder of my estate, real, personal and mixed, whatsoever and wheresoever situated, I give, devise and bequeath unto my dear daughter Susan Cruit her heirs executors and administrators upon the following trusts to wit: In trust for my dear wife Catherine for and during her life, and to permit her to receive and take the whole income thereof after paying taxes repairs and insurance, and to apply and dispose of Samuel Owen, Susan, Ann (appellant), and Louisa. The widow of the deceased died May 13, 1876; Louisa died January 2, 1876, Susan died December 31, 1900, and Catherine E. Owen died May 14, 1901. Susan and Louisa never married, nor has Ann up to the present time. Catherine E. Owen left surviving her three daughters, Evania F. Mackall and the appellees, Kate D. Owen and Jessie Owen Cugle. The property produces an income of $11,000 or $12,000.

The question in the case is whether appellant succeeded to the whole estate upon the death of Catherine E. Owen, or whether the children of the latter, appellees, were the successors of their mother.

The will gives small legacies to two nephews, and disposes of "all the rest and residue and remainder of the testator's estate to Susan Cruitt in trust (1) for his wife for and during her life, and to permit her to take and receive the whole income thereof; (2) in trust, as to testator's real estate, to his daughters equally, share and share alike, for and during their respective lives, . . . and from and after their death in trust for the child or children of each of my said daughters, then alive, in fee simple, such child or children, respectively, to take the share to which his, her or their parent was entitled. And if any of my said daughters shall die without having been married, her share shall pass to her or their surviving sisters or sister for life equally, and upon her or their death the same shall vest in her or their child or children in the same manner and for the same estate and pass on her or their death, as her or their original share or shares."

We do not think it is difficult to discern the intention of the testator. There is very little ambiguity in the will. If ambiguity exist it is in the pronoun "their" in the provision "and from and after their death in trust for the child or children of each of my said daughters then living in fee simple, such *child or children respectively [371] ly to take the share to which his, her or their parent was entitled." It is contended by appellant that it is manifest from these words and others in the will that it was drawn by a skilful hand, to create a joint tenancy in the daughters of the testator, and cases are cited in which wills containing such words have been construed, it is contended, as giving such effect. We might review these cases and those cited in opposition by appellees if the will in controversy were less clear in its meaning. Provision for his daughters and equality between them were clear and definite in the mind of the testator. One daughter was married and that the others might be was contemplated, and that children might result therefrom. This idea is especially prominent and is carefully expressed, and provision is made for such children. The contention of appellant militates against this idea. It would leave grandchildren unprovided for. If such had been the intention of the testator, we think he would have explicitly expressed it. It was not so natural an intention as the other. It is not the first impression of the will, and can only be made out by rigidly giving plurality to the pronoun "their" in the provision "and from and after their death in trust for the child or children of each of my said daughters, then living, in fee simple." But the word is qualified and made several by what precedes it. The devise is to his daughters "for and during their respective lives." It is qualified also by what follows it. One of the daughters of the testator was married, the others were not, and might not be, and anticipating this such income as she my said wife may think proper and from and after her decease, in trust, as to my real estate for my dear daughters Catherine E. the wife of Samuel Owens, Ann Cruitt, Louisa Cruitt, and herself the said Susan Cruitt, equally share and share alike, for and during their respective lives, for their own sole and separate benefit free from the control of the husband of my said daughter Catherine and any husband or husbands she or my said other daughters or any of them may hereafter happen to marry, and not to be liable in any way for the debts of any such husbands, the receipts of my said daughters alone being a valid discharge. And from and after their death in trust for the child or children of each of my said daughters then living in fee simple, such child or children respectively to take the share to which his, her or their parent was entitled. And if any of my said daughters shall die without having been married, her share shall pass to her or their surviving sisters or sister for life equally; and upon her or their death the same shall vest in her or their child or children in the same manner, and for the same estate and pass on her or their death, as her or their original shares or share. And as to my personal property, also given in trust as above expressed. I direct that the same shall, after the death of my said wife, be divided equally among all my said children, Catherine, Susan, Ann and Louisa share and share alike, and I accordingly give the same to them as aforesaid for their own sole and separate use.

And lastly I appoint my said daughter Susan Cruitt sole executrix of this my last will and testament. And if my said daughter shall die or from any cause should become unable to act in the trust, I direct, that a trustee shall be appointed by the circuit court so that the trusts hereby created shall be at all times preserved and carried into effect.

possibility the testator provided that, if any of his daughters should die without having been married, her share should pass to the survivors. In other words, it was only upon the death of a daughter "without having been married" (and without issue possibly), that her share was to pass to her sisters or sister. We also agree with the courts below that the trust continues.

The concluding paragraph of the will is:

[372] "And lastly I appoint my said daughter Susan Cruitt sole *executrix of this my last will and testament. And if my said daughter shall die or from any cause should become unable to act in the trust, I direct that a trustee shall be appointed by the circuit court so that the trusts hereby created shall be at all times preserved and carried into effect."

Decree affirmed.

CHARLES K. OFFIELD, Plff. in Err.,

v.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN, & HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 372-378.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

1. The contention that the proceedings taken under Conn. Pub. Laws, §§ 3694, 3695, by a railway company which is the lessee of another railway, and the owner of three fourths of its stock, to condemn the outstanding shares owned by a person who refuses to agree to the terms of purchase, violate the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and impair contract obligations, is not so frivolous as to require the dismissal of a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court.

Constitutional law—due process of law—condemnation for public use.

2. The improvement of the New Haven & Derby Railroad is a public use for which the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad Company, which is the lessee of the former road, and the owner of three fourths of its stock, may proceed under Conn. Pub. Laws, §§ 3694, 3695, without violating the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, to condemn the outstanding shares owned by a person who refuses to agree to the terms of purchase.

Constitutional law—impairing contract obligation.

3. Contract obligations are not impaired by the proceedings taken under Conn. Pub. Laws, §§ 3694, 3695, by the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad Company, which is the lessee of the New Haven & Derby Railroad and the owner of three fourths of its stock, to condemn the outstanding shares owned by a person who refuses to agree to the terms of purchase.

[No. 59.]

Argued and submitted October 25, 1906.

Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of New Haven County, NOTE.—On the condemnation of shares of minority stockholders in American corporations—see note to Spencer v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 605.

As to what is a public use for which private property may be taken by eminent domain—see note to Pittsburg, W. & K. R. Co. v. Benwood Iron Works, 2 L.R.A. 680; Barre R. Co. v. Montpelier & W. River R. Co. 4 L.R.A. 785; and Sweet v. Rechel, 40 L. ed. U. S. 188.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

203 U. S.

Necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court.

It may, with some show of reason, be said that, no matter how lacking in merit the Federal contention may be, the Supreme Court of the United States cannot logically, for that reason alone, decline to entertain jurisdiction of a writ of error to a state court. But the court is committed to the doctrine that a real, and not a fictitious, Federal question is essential to the exercise of this jurisdiction. Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Millingar v. Hartupee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; St. Louis, C. G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Chicago, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. ed. 622, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 in that state, for the condemnation of certain shares of railway stock owned by a person who refuses to agree to the terms of purchase offered by a railway corporation which has acquired three fourths of such stock. Affirmed.

231

See same case below, 78 Conn. 1, 60 Atl. 740.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward H. Rogers and W. H. H. Miller submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Charles K. Bush was on the brief:

The right of eminent domain can only be legally exercised when the property taken is taken for a public use.

Farist Steel Co. v. Bridgeport, 60 Conn. 278, 13 L.R.A. 590, 22 Atl. 561.

The question of what is a public use is always one of law.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 774; Re Niagara Falls & W. R. Co. 108 N. Y. 375, 15 N. E. 429; Re Split Rock Cable Road Co. 128 N. Y. 408, 28 N. E. 506.

It is a serious error to treat the question of What is a public use? as though the question was, For what purpose may the power of eminent domain be properly exercised?

1 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 163.

The courts everywhere agree that this power of eminent domain is the power of a sovereign state to appropriate private property to particular uses for the purpose of promoting the general welfare.

Ibid.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Iowa v. Rood, 187 U. S. 87, 47 L. ed. 86, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

And, because the contention based on Federal law, though raised in the pleadings, was regarded by him as clearly unfounded, Sanderson, Ch. J., in Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604, denied an application for a citation upon a writ of error sued out for the purpose of a review of the judgment of the state court in the Supreme Court of the United States.

A Federal question may have been so explicitly foreclosed by prior decisions as to afford no basis for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court. Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 416, 49 L. ed. 1108, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

A claim that the appointment of a receiver in a foreclosure suit deprives defendant of its property without due process of law does not raise a real, as distinguished from a fictitious, Federal question which will sustain a writ of error to a state court from the Supreme Court of the United States. St. Louis, C. G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, supra.

There is no color for a contention that a man is deprived of property without due process of law by enforcing against him a decree for alimony rendered in another state in a proceeding in which he appeared and was heard. Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

A party who seeks and is given opportunity in the state court to litigate the rights claimed by it cannot have the judgment reviewed in the Supreme Court of the United States on the ground that due process of law was denied because the litigation did not result successfully. Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

No Federal question is presented by a contention with respect to due process of law which is based simply upon a change by the state court of the established construction of a state statute. Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

A claim that a right under the Federal Constitution would be denied by the rendition of a decree of foreclosure by a state court, unless leave to file a supplementary answer should be granted, is so clearly without foundation, where the defense sought to be interposed is without merit, as to confer no jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to the state court. Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

A decision by a state supreme court that the granting of a nonsuit, instead of submitting the case to the jury, where the facts are admitted, does not deprive the plaintiff of due process of law, does not raise a Federal question which will entitle him to a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States. Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 32 Or. 582, 62 L.R.A. 513, 52 Pac. 573, 54 Pac. 367, 882.

The misconception of the application of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., is so obvious in the contention in a state court that due process of law was denied by an indictment, where the objection was in effect to the technical sufficiency of the indictment in the ordinary administration of criminal law, and there is nothing special, partial, or arbitrary, or in violation of fundamental principles, in the law of the state in accordance with which the indictment was found, and as applied in passing upon its sufficiency, as to justify the Supreme Court of the United States in declining jurisdiction,—especially where the contention was first made on petition for rehearing. Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

The decision of a state court upholding the validity of a state statute providing for the infliction of the death penalty by the application of electricity is so plainly right, so far as any question of due process of law or of any other right secured by the Federal Constitution is concerned, that an application to the Supreme Court of the United States for a writ of error will be denied. Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930.

The contention that a state railroad com-

The use of a thing is, strictly and properly, the employment of the thing in some manner; and this employment must be something more than a merely incidental public benefit.

Re Eurcka Basin Warehouse & Mfg. Co. 96 N. Y. 42; Re Niagara Falls & W. R. Co. and Re Split Rock Cable Road Co. supra.

The attempted exercise of the power of eminent domain in this case can only be justified, if at all, on the ground that the right is broad enough to include those cases where the general public has only an indirect and qualified or constructive use of the property condemned, or, perhaps, properly, no use of any kind of the property condemned, but simply derives from its use, by and for a private person or corporation, some indirect advantages, as by the promotion of the general prosperity of the community.

Now, in order to bring this within that class of cases, the defendant in error must show that it is possessed of each and all of these three qualifications:

First. The general public must have a definite and fixed use of the property to be condemned,—a use independent of the will of the private person or private corporation in whom the title of the property when condemned will be vested; a public use which cannot be defeated by such private owner, but which public use continues to be guarded and controlled by the general public through laws passed by the legislature.

Second. This public use must be clearly a missioner was deprived of his property without due process of law, or was denied the equal protection of the laws, by his temporary suspension from office by the governor of the state by proceedings taken in accordance with the state laws and Constitution is too unfounded in substance to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States, where there was not, by reason of the statute and the proceedings under it, a plain and substantial departure from the fundamental principles upon which the government is based. Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

And the claim that a forfeiture of the charter of a waterworks company for maintaining illegal rates by a decree of a state court after full hearing by all parties in a proceeding by quo warranto impaired the obligation of a contract, or deprived the company of its property without due process of law, or denied it the equal protection of the laws, because by its charter mandamus was prescribed as the remedy for illegal rates,—is so clearly without color of foundation as to give the Supreme Court of the United States no jurisdiction to review such decree. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691.

There is no color of foundation for the claim that a Federal question arises from the forfeiture of a charter of a corporation for alleged violation of its terms, by a decree of a state court, made after a full hearing by all the parties in a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto, instituted in the name of the state by the attorney general, to whom the matter had been referred by the legislature to bring such suit or take such other action as he might think proper. Ibid.

There is no color of merit in the contention that a Missouri court, by dismissing the petition of a railway company—against which a judgment for wages and one in garnishment on account of the same indebtedness had been recovered respectively in Missouri and Illinois—to require the judgment creditors to interplead, denied full faith and credit to the Illinois judgment. Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

The unsubstantial character of the Federal contention may, perhaps, explain the course adopted in New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142, where the court thought that the ruling in Millinger v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829, supra, necessitated the conclusion that, before the Supreme Court of the United States can take jurisdiction on the ground that the state court has upheld a state statute drawn in question as impairing the obligation of the contract, it should appear that there was a legal contract subject to impairment, and some ground to believe that it has been impaired. The court, therefore, declined jurisdiction despite the formal raising of the question, because it was of the opinion that no contract existed.

A somewhat analogous case is St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, where a writ of error to review a judgment of a state court in a case in which the obligation of a contract with a municipality was claimed to have been impaired by a subsequent municipal ordinance was dismissed for want of jurisdiction on the ground that such ordinance was a mere denial of liability on the contract; and, hence, that there was no state legislation from the enforcement of which an impairment of the obligation of the contract did, or could, result.

And perhaps this is the best explanation for the holding in Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201, that the question whether the contract, if any, under which the owner of land holds under a grant in fee simple was violated by an abuse of the right of eminent domain under the sanction of a state statute, was not one which would confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court.

This principle must also account for the ruling in Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 113 U. S. 218, 28 L. ed. 980, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, that the contention in the state court needful one for the public,—one which cannot be given up without obvious general loss and inconvenience:

Third. It must be impossible, or very difficult, at least, to secure the same public use and purposes in any other way than by authorizing the condemnation of private property. If any of these essentials is wanting the courts will declare the act of the legislature authorizing such condemnation of private property to be unconstitutional, because it would amount to taking private property for private, and not for public, uses.

Varner v. Martin, 21 W. Va. 534.

There can be no necessity for or propriety in the taking unless the rights of the public with reference to the property taken are to be enlarged, and that directly and actually, and not indirectly and constructively.

Evergreen Cemetery Asso. v. Beecher, 53 Conn. 551, 5 Atl. 353; Avery v. Vermont Electric Co. 75 Vt. 235, 59 L.R.A. 817, 98 Am. St. Rep. 818, 54 Atl. 179; Re Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. 22 R. I. 457, 52 L.R.A. 879, 48 Atl. 591; Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48, 103 Am. St. Rep. 438, 94 N. W. 379.

There is no right in the majority holders of a corporation to extinguish the rights and stock of a dissenting minority by taking their shares at a valuation.

Clearwater v. Meredith (Ferguson v. Meredith) 1 Wall. 25, 17 L. ed. 604; Stevens v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 29 Vt. 545.

So that, if a majority of the stockholders of the New Haven & Derby Railroad Company had undertaken to transfer the defendant's stock against his wishes, they could have been enjoined by him.

Clearwater v. Meredith (Ferguson v. Meredith) 1 Wall. 25, 41, 17 L. ed. 604, 608.

In the case at bar the real or actual taking was dependent upon a finding by a judge of the superior court of the state of Connecticut that the purchase would be for the public interest; which finding is an exercise of the judicial power which is vested in the superior court of the state of Connecticut, or a judge thereof, by the Constitution of that state.

New Milford Water Co. v. Watson, 75 Conn. 237, 52 Atl. 947, 53 Atl. 57; Norwalk that a postal clerk was, by reason of certain acts of Congress authorizing the appointment of postal clerks to be transported on mail trains without extra charge, a passenger within the meaning of a proviso in a state statute exempting passengers from the restrictions there made upon the right of recovery in negligence actions against railroad companies, did not present a Federal question.

And, apparently because of the obvious want of merit in the contention that a railroad corporation was deprived of its rights under U. S. Const. 14th Amendment, by enforcing a claim against it by mandatory injunction, instead of by another and summary form of action, the court, in Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344, dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, a writ of error to review a judgment of a state court compelling a railroad company to operate its road.

And this principle may explain decisions, which, like those in Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, and New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. supra, have dismissed writs of error to state courts, sued out to review judgments adverse to the contention that property was taken without due process of law, because the Supreme Court could see that there had been no taking of property. A better explanation, however, would seem to be that suggested in the note to Burt v. Smith, ante, 121, to account for these and other decisions: viz., that, as the judgment below was not to be disturbed, it was of little importance whether that result was reached by dismissal or affirmance.

And see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

A bill averring that a railroad charter, and an exemption from taxation for a term of twenty years, contained therein, constitute a contract with the state, which is violated by subsequent legislation repealing the exemption, raises a Federal question for which there is sufficient color to sustain the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to a state court which has decided against the exemption. Gulf, & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. ed. 86, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The question whether the California legislature could enact the act of April 2, 1866, ratifying conveyances made by the corporate authorities of the city of Monterey of pueblo lands confirmed to that city by the United States, and afterwards patented to it, its successors and assigns, is not so far unsubstantial as to justify dismissal of a writ of error to a state court. Monterey v. Jacks, 203 U. S. 360, ante, 220, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

The court, in Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 187 U. S. 479, 47 L. ed. 266, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170, refused to dismiss a writ of error to a state court in an action of ejectment, because it was of the opinion that the Federal questions involved in a decision of a state court adverse to a title claimed under a Spanish grant alleged to have been perfected under the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, and a patent from the United States, in alleged confirmation of such claim, could not be considered frivolous and undeserving of notice.

Street R. Co.'s Appeal, 69 Conn. 576, 39 L.R.A. 794, 37 Atl. 1080, 38 Atl. 708; Betts v. Connecticut Indemnity Asso. 71 Conn. 751, 44 Atl. 65.

A taking for private use is unlawful; and if there can be any lawful taking under the statute, it is inseparably blended in the application with the unlawful one; and where the proceeding shows upon its face two distinct uses or purposes, one lawful and the other not, and which are so inseparably blended as not to be separable, it cannot be sustained.

7 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 527; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Galt, 133 Ill. 657, 23 N. E. 425, 24 N. E. 674.

If the statute, while permitting the private use of the property condemned, may also permit of a public use of it, the statute and the application are still invalid.

1 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 20.

As was stated by this court in Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. ed. 462, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251, it is a fundamental principle of American jurisprudence that private property cannot be taken by the government, national or state, except for purposes which are of a public character, although such taking be accompanied by compensation to the owner, — a principle which grows out of the essential nature of all free government.

If the purpose be public the taking may be outright, provided reasonable, certain, adequate provision is made at the time of the appropriation to ascertain and secure the compensation to be made to the owner.

Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641-649, 34 L. ed. 295-299, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380-399, 40 L. ed. 188-196, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 49 L. ed. 312, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133. Any state enactment in violation of these principles is inconsistent with the due process of law prescribed by the 14th Amendment.

Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239-252, 49 L. ed. 462-467, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

A judgment of a state court, even if it be authorized by statute, whereby private property is taken for the state or under its direction for public use, without compensation made or secured to the owner, is, upon principle and authority, wanting in the due process of law required by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; and the affirmance of such judgment by the highest court of the state is a denial by that state of a right secured to the owner by that instrument.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 203 U. S.

U. S. 226-241, 41 L. ed. 979-986, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

And the proposition that the state itself is the exclusive and final judge of what is a public use, so as to prevent any Federal question or Federal interference, is subject to this limitation: that if the use for which the property taken is a private one, the taking is not valid, just as much as though there were a taking for a public purpose without compensation.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403-417, 41 L. ed. 489-495, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130.

It is erroneous to suppose that the legislature is beyond the control of the courts in exercising the power of eminent domain, either as to the nature of the use or the necessity of the use of any particular property. For if the use be not public, or no necessity for the taking exists, the legislature cannot authorize the taking of private property against the will of the owner, notwithstanding compensation may be required.

Tracy v. Elizabethtown, L. & B. S. R. Co. 80 Ky. 259; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. supra.

Mr. George D. Watrous argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edward G. Buckland, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The taking of the property of plaintiff in error will be for public use, and therefore not without due process of law.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 50 L. ed. 581, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301.

Property taken by a railroad company for the improvement of its facilities for public service, and declared by the highest state court to be for a public use, under a statute with an appropriate provision for compensation, is not taken without due process of law.

Cherokee Nation v. Kansas Southern R. Co. 135 U. S. 657, 34 L. ed. 302, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965.

The statutes in question and the action taken thereunder do not impair the obligation of any contract within the meaning of art. 1, § 10 of the Constitution of the United States.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error brings up for review a judgment of the supreme court of errors of the state of Connecticut, rendered in a proceeding under the statutes of that state for the condemnation of two shares of stock owned by plaintiff in error in the New Haven & Derby Railroad Company.

There was a demurrer to the application, which was overruled by the advice of the supreme court of errors, the judgment on demurrer having been reserved, under the practice of the state, for the advice and consideration of that court. 77 Conn. 417, 59 Atl. 510. Upon the hearing judgment was rendered for defendant in error, which was affirmed by the supreme court of errors. 78 Conn. 1, 60 Atl. 740.

Defendant in error is the lessee of the New Haven & Derby Railroad Company, and has acquired all of the shares of stock of the latter road except the two shares owned by plaintiff in error.

That the lease and acquisition of stock are valid under the laws of the state is decided by the supreme court of errors, and it is sought by proceedings under review to 376 obtain the two *shares of stock owned by plaintiff in error, under §§ 3694 and 3695 of the Public Laws of Connecticut, which are as follows:

"Sec. 3694. In case any railroad company, acting under the authority of the laws of this state, shall have acquired more than three fourths of the capital stock of any steamboat, ferry, bridge, wharf, or railroad corporation, and cannot agree with the holders of outstanding stock for the purchase of the same, such railroad company may, upon a finding by a judge of the superior court that such purchase will be for the public interest, cause such outstanding stock to be appraised in accordance with the provisions of § 3687. When the amount of such appraisal shall have been paid or deposited as provided in said section, the stockholder or stockholders whose stock shall have been so appraised shall cease to have any interest therein, and on demand shall surrender all certificates for such stock, with duly executed powers of attorney for transfer thereon, to the corporation applying for such appraisal.

"Sec. 3695. If any person holding a minority of the shares of stock in any corporation referred to in § 3694 cannot agree with the railroad company owning three fourths of such stock for the purchase of his shares, he may cause the same to be appraised in accordance with the provisions of § 3687. When such appraisal has been made and recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of any county where such railroad company operates a railroad, and the certificates for such stock, with duly executed powers of attorney for transfer thereon, have been deposited with such clerk for such railroad company, such appraisal shall have the effect of a judgment against such company and in favor of the holder of such stock, and at the end of sixty days, unless such judgment is paid, execution may be issued."

The purpose of the acquisition of the stock is to enable defendant in error to improve the New Haven & Derby Railroad.

*It is contended by plaintiff in error (1) [377] that the purpose for which the stock is sought to be obtained is not a public use. (2) That defendant in error has the power and authority to make the improvements mentioned in its application, which would be as advantageous as taking the stock. (3) The proceedings and statutes are in violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and impair the contract rights of plaintiff in error as stockholder of the New Haven & Derby Railroad Company, and his rights in, under, and by virtue of, the lease to defendant in error.

These contentions raise a Federal question and we cannot say that it is frivolous. The motion to dismiss is therefore denied.

(1) The power of the state to declare uses of property to be public has lately been decided in Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, and in the case of Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 50 L. ed. 581, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301. These cases exhibit more striking examples of the power of a state than the case at bar. In the first case the statute of the state permitted an individual to enlarge the ditch of another to obtain water for his own land; in the second case the statute authorized the condemnation of a right of way to transport ore from a mine to a railroad station. In the first case it was said that the public policy of the state, declaring the character of use of property, depends upon the facts surrounding the subject. In the second case it was said, commenting on the first, "it proved that there might be exceptional times and places in which the very foundations of public welfare could not be laid without requiring concessions from individuals to each other upon due compensation, which, under other circumstances, would be left wholly to voluntary consent." The case at bar does not need the support of such broad principles. The ultimate purpose of defendant in error in the case at bar is the improvement of the New Haven & Derby Railroad, which "connects [we quote from the opinion of the supreme court of errors, 77 Conn. 419, 59 Atl. 511] at *New [378] Haven, on the east, with four, and at its western terminals with two, important railroad lines owned by the plaintiff [defendant in error] and forms a link in an all-rail route between Boston and the West, which is the only one controlled by the plaintiff, and the only one of any kind controlled by it over which goods can be transported with assured despatch in all weathers and at all seasons." In this purpose the public has an interest, and to accomplish it the court applied the statute. The court observed: "To develop this route so as best to serve the public interest requires the laying of additional tracks on the New Haven & Derby Railroad and other extensive and very costly improvements. The lessor company has neither means nor credit whereby this can be effected on advantageous terms. The plaintiff could and will effect it, and at much less cost, if it can acquire the two outstanding shares of the stock of the lessee. They are owned by the defendant, who refuses to agree on terms of purchase."

(2) The contract which it is contended was impaired is the lease of the New Haven & Derby Railroad by defendant in error. The lease is for a period of ninety-nine years from July 1, 1892, at a rental of 4 per cent per annum upon the capital stock, together with the payment of taxes, assessments, and interest upon the funded debt. Associated with this contention there is another, more general, to the effect that the statute impairs the contract rights of plaintiff in error as a stockholder of the New Haven & Derby Railroad Company. We do not find it necessary to give precise and separate discussion to these contentions. They seem to us to be but parts or incidents of the contention that the stock is sought for a private use. If they are not incidents of that, they are answered and opposed by the case of Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718. Whatever value the lease gives the shares of stock will be represented in their appraisalment.

Judgment affirmed.

[379]*FAIR HAVEN & WESTVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF NEW HAVEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 379-390.)

Error to state court—scope of review—questions not involved in the record.

1. A Federal question respecting the validity of a paving assessment against a street railway company is not open on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court, where the NOTE.—As to reserved power to alter, amend, or repeal corporate charters—see note to Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 26 L. ed. U. S. 961.

203 U. S.

latter court based its ruling that the question had no standing in the case upon its view as to the scope of the application of the railway company for relief from the assessment, and of the pleadings, and it is not contended that such view is erroneous.

Constitutional law—impairing contract obligations—reserved power to amend or repeal street railway charter.

2. The imposition upon street railway companies by Conn. act of July 1, 1895, of the cost of paving and repaving that part of the streets occupied by their tracks, is a valid exercise of the power reserved by the state to alter or amend the charter of a street railway company, which required such company to keep the street between its tracks and 2 feet on each side in good and sufficient repair.

[No. 84.]

Argued November 5 and 6, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which, on a third appeal, affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court of New Haven County, in that state, establishing an assessment against a street railway company for the cost of paving between its tracks and 1 foot on each side. Affirmed.

See same case below, 1st appeal, 75 Conn. 442, 53 Atl. 960; 2d appeal, 77 Conn. 219, 58 Atl. 703; 3d appeal, 77 Conn. 667, 60 Atl. 651.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George D. Watrous and Talcott H. Russell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Amendments must not defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant, or any rights which have vested under it.

Inland Fisheries v. Holyoke Water Power Co. 104 Mass. 446, 6 Am. Rep. 247.

A clause in the charter of the corporation, allowing repeal or alteration, must not be interpreted as giving the legislature power to take the property of the railroad without compensation, and without due process of law. It does not remove such property from the protection of the law.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 146, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 340.

Messrs. Leonard M. Daggett and E. P. Arvine argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The special act of 1895, even though it be regarded as imposing a new burden, is constitutional.

Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. ed. 898, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 567, 38 L. ed. 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Pennsylvania College Cases (Jefferson College v. Washington & J. College) 13 Wall. 190, 20 L. ed. 550; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 21 L. ed. 204; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 1093-1114.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the validity of an assessment of $36,879, against plaintiff in error, for the cost of paving between its tracks and for 1 foot on each side thereof. Plaintiff in error operates a double track electric railway through West Chapel street in New Haven.

In pursuance of certain laws of the state the court of common council, through a contractor, caused the street to be *paved with sheet asphalt. The work was begun in June, 1897, and completed in October or November of the same year. The city paid for the work, and, as provided by the statutes, assessed against plaintiff in error its proportion of the cost; to wit, $36,879. On appeal to the superior court for New Haven county, that court reduced the assessment to $5,823, and entered judgment against plaintiff in error for that sum.

The learned judge of the superior court expressed the contentions of the parties and his conclusions as follows:

"It is contended by the defendant that the assessment against the plaintiff is legal and valid under the act of 1895. Charter of New Haven, page 80.

"It is contended by the plaintiff that the act of 1895 is repealed by the act of 1899, Special Laws of 1899, p. 181; and if it is not repealed, the act of 1895 is unconstitutional and void.

"Inasmuch as I hold and rule that the act of 1895 is repealed by the act of 1899, it is unnecessary to pass upon the constitutionality of the former. The intention and effect of the latter act is to repeal the former. The last act covers the whole subject-matter of assessments for benefits and damages arising from paved streets, and provides expressly for the assessments of benefits and damages for pavements already constructed in West Chapel street.

"This conclusion entitles the plaintiff to relief from the assessment as laid by the amendment to the report of the bureau of compensation; and it is therefore ordered that the assessment be reduced to the sum of $5,823, as recommended by the bureau of compensation."

And the judgment of the superior court recited:

"The asphalt pavement in said street is not a direct benefit to the plaintiff or its property, but, on the other hand, is a direct damage to the plaintiff and its property, inasmuch as it largely increases the expense of repairing the roadway between the rails, and of general repairs to the track, ties, and structure of the railroad. The only benefit to the railroad is such as *re-[383]sults from the general improvement to the locality by reason of such pavement tending to increase the population and traffic in that section of the city. Such benefit does not exceed the amount of $5,823."

Upon the appeal of the city the judgment was reversed by the supreme court of errors. 75 Conn. 442, 53 Atl. 960. On the return of the case to the superior court that court rendered judgment dismissing the application of plaintiff in error, and confirming and establishing the assessment of $36,879. The judgment was reversed by the supreme court of errors and the case remanded to the superior court, with directions to deduct from the assessment the cost of repair. In accordance with this direction the superior court deducted from the assessment the sum of $3,590.85, and confirmed the assessment less such deduction. This judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of errors.

The statutes under which the street was paved and the assessment against plaintiff in error was made may be summarized as follows: Section 9 of the charter of plaintiff in error authorized the common council of the city to establish such regulations in regard to the railway as might be required for "paving . . . in and along the street," and the company was required to conform to the grades then existing or thereafter established. And it was provided that the company should "keep that portion of the streets and avenues over which their road or way shall be laid down, with a space of 2 feet on each side of the track or way, in good and sufficient repair, without expense to the city or town of New Haven, or the owners of land adjoining said track or way."

It was provided (§ 13) that the act might be altered, amended, or repealed at the pleasure of the general assembly.

The charter was amended July 9, 1864, and the company was authorized to lay down its tracks and run its cars through Chapel street, subject to the prohibitions of the 9th section of its original charter.

In 1893 a general law was passed applica-[384]ble to all railways, *by § 6 of which it was provided that every street railway was required to keep so much of the street or highway as is included within its tracks, and a space of 2 feet on the outer side of the outer rails, in repair, to the satisfaction of the authorities of the city, town, or borough which was bound by law to maintain such street or highway. More expensive material, however, was not to be required than that used on the other parts of the street, except, however, for a space of 1 foot on each side of each rail, unless a more expensive kind of material was required in the order permitting the original location of such railway. If the railway company did not make such repairs after notice, it was provided that the city might do so, and recover the expense thereof from the company. And it was provided that the act should be deemed an amendment to the charters of all existing railway companies.

On July 1, 1895, an act was passed authorizing and empowering the court of common council of the city to issue bonds for the construction of permanent pavements, and providing that all pavements laid by authority of the act should be laid upon the grade of the street, and the city was empowered to collect the cost thereof from the owners of abutting land. The act contained the following provisions as to railways:

"On all streets occupied by the track, or tracks, of any railway company or companies, said company or companies shall be assessed and shall severally pay to the city the cost of paving and repaving the full length, and 9 feet wide for each and every line of track of such railway or railways, now existing, or that may hereafter be laid in any street of said city."

By supplement to this act, passed in March, 1897, it was provided that, in estimating the cost of each square yard to be assessed, the entire cost of laying the pavement and the agreement to keep the pavement in repair for a period not exceeding fifteen years should be considered.

An act passed, April 28, 1899, provided [385]for an assessment *upon the "grand list" 1 mill on the dollar for the paving of streets, to be expended only for the original construction of pavements. There was a provision for the laying of benefits and damages, and a specification of limits of the assessment, varying with the kind of material used for paving. Assessment of benefits and damages for the pavement on certain streets and on West Chapel street were required to be laid in accordance with the provision of the act. Anyone aggrieved by the assessment was given the right of appeal to the superior court. The act was declared to be an amendment to the charter of the city, and acts inconsistent therewith were repealed. The liability of street railway companies under the general laws was preserved.

The statutes and the assessments made under them are attacked by plaintiff in error as repugnant to the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States and the 14th Amendment.

1. The contention that the assessment was unconstitutional, even though the act of 1895 is constitutional, was commented on by the supreme court of errors on the second appeal as follows:

"Other claims new to the case are made, to the general effect that, as the street had been paved twenty-three years before, and the plaintiff had been assessed a portion of the cost thereof, and especially as the city had not shown the need of the new pavement as a means of repair, an unconstitutional use of the act would result if the present charge against the plaintiff was enforced. These claims have no foundation, either in the application or pleadings, and therefore have no standing in the case. We do not hesitate to say, however, without discussion, that in view of the pleadings, which did not put the defendant to the proof of the necessity of the new work as a means of repair and proper maintenance of the street, the facts indicated could not be held sufficient to accomplish the results claimed for them." [77 Conn. 224, 58 Atl. 705.]

Plaintiff in error contests this conclusion of the court, and *insists that the claims [386] were made on the first appeal of the case, and were overlooked by the court. It is questionable whether we may dispute the ruling of the supreme court of errors as to what the record in the case before it showed. But, granting we have such power, the record does not justify the assertion of plaintiff in error. A bill of exceptions was tendered by plaintiff in error to the superior court of certain claims and requests for rulings made by plaintiff in error, so that the questions arising thereon could be considered by the supreme court of errors in connection with those by the appeal of the city, and one of the claims was "that the repavement, if required at all, could only be required when it was found to be a satisfactory, or the most satisfactory, method of repair, which did not appear in this case."

The bill of exceptions stated also that the court did not rule upon the requests, because it was of opinion that the act of 1895, so far as it affects the pavement in question, was repealed by the act of 1899, "and therefore decided against said requests." The court allowed the bill of exceptions, and expressed the reason as follows: "Being of the opinion that some, at least, of the questions arising upon the above bill of exceptions will arise again if a new trial of this cause should be had, the above bill of exceptions is hereby allowed, and ordered to be made a part of the record."

But this does not militate with the ruling of the supreme court of errors, nor indicate that the court did not consider the claims and requests of plaintiff in error. The ruling was based upon the application or pleadings, and it is not contended that the court's view of the application or pleadings was erroneous. Indeed, on the return of the case to the superior court an application was made by plaintiff in error for leave to amend its application by adding six paragraphs, setting out the grounds indicated above and other grounds why the assessment was an unconstitutional exercise of the authority in terms conferred by the act of 1895. The motion was denied on the ground (1) that the court had [387] no power to *allow the amendment, and (2) that the amendment ought not, as a matter of discretion, to be allowed. The ruling was affirmed by the supreme court of errors. Justifying its ruling, the court denied that it thereby enforced a stringent rule of pleading, but said it enforced only the familiar one which confined the evidence to the matters pleaded, and that it was the duty of plaintiff in error to have made its application full enough to cover all the claims desired to be made.

(2) It will be observed that the superior court ruled that the act of 1895 was repealed by the act of 1899, and that the latter act covered the whole subject-matter of assessment for benefits and damages accruing from paved streets, and provided expressly for the assessments of benefits and damages for pavements which had been constructed on West Chapel street. The supreme court of errors reversed the ruling and sustained the contention of the city that the assessment should be made under the act of 1895. The court said: "This difference of view explains the situation disclosed by the case. The city bases its claim to the larger sum assessed by it upon the rule of recovery laid down in the act of 1895; the railway company claims to limit its liability at least to the smaller sum assessed by the court, upon the strength of the rule of assessment prescribed in the act of 1899, as interpreted by the court and accepted by the company." And after the construction and discussion of the provision of the two acts the court said: "The situation is, we think, susceptible of a simple explanation. The act of 1899 is to be taken in its natural meaning. Its provisions relating to assessments were intended to deal only with assessments of benefits and damages in favor of or against owners of land whose land adjoins the street in which the pavement is laid, by reason of some benefit or damage received affecting its value. The railway companies were not meant to be and are not to be regarded as within their scope. No change in the burden already upon them for the completed work was intended to be effected." [75 Conn. 446, 450, 53 Atl. 962, 963.]

So, deciding between the statutes, the court adjudged that *the act of 1895 was [388] constitutional, on the ground that it was a proper exercise of the police power of the state, and on the ground that the act was an exertion of the power reserved by the state of altering, amending, or repealing the charter of the railway company. If either ground is tenable the judgment must be affirmed. We will place our decision on the second ground, as being of more local character, and because the exercise of the power expressed only comes under our review in its excesses.

We accept the decision of the supreme court of errors, that the statutes were intended as an exercise of the power of amendment reserved by the state, although plaintiff in error contends that such was not their intention. The court treated the question involved as primarily one on statutory construction, and "best approached," to use the language of the court, "by an examination of the statutory situation," and upon that examination pronounced its conclusion that "the act of 1895 was in effect an amendment of the plaintiff's charter," citing Bulkley v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 27 Conn. 479; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Waterbury, 60 Conn. 1, 22 Atl. 439. Was such an amendment in excess of the power of the state? The limitation upon the power of amendment of charters of corporations has been defined by this court several times. It is said in one case that such power may be exercised to make any alteration or amendment in a charter granted that will not defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant or any rights which have vested under it, which the legislature may deem necessary to secure either the object of the grant or any other public right not expressly granted away by the charter. Holyoke Water-Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 522, 21 L. ed. 140. In another case it was said that the "alterations must be reasonable; they must be made in good faith, and be consistent with the scope and object of the act of incorporation. Sheer oppression and wrong cannot be inflicted under the guise of amendment or alteration." Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 359. Later cases have re-[389]peated these definitions. *Sinking fund Cases, 99 U. S. 720, 25 L. ed. 502; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Close v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 476, 27 L. ed. 412, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267. In the Sinking Fund Cases, it was said that whatever regulations of a corporation could have been inserted in its charter can be added by amendment. All the cases are reviewed and their principles affirmed in Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241, and water rates fixed by the board of supervisors of the county of Stanislaus under a law of the state sustained though the income of the company was reduced from 1½ per cent per month to 6 per cent per annum.

In the light of these cases let us examine what the statutes of Connecticut require of plaintiff in error. By its original charter (1862) plaintiff in error was required to keep the street between its tracks, with a space of 2 feet on each side of the tracks, in good and sufficient repair. In the amendment of the charter in 1864 this obligation was retained, and also in the public acts of 1893. In the act of 1895 the duty of paving and repaving was imposed on all railway companies. We shall assume, for the purpose of our discussion, that the duty to repair did not include the duty to pave and repave, although much can be said and cases can be cited against the assumption. Does the change and increase of burden upon the plaintiff in error come within the limitations upon the reserved power of the state? Has it no proper relation to the objects of the grant to the company or any of the public rights of the state? Can it be said to be exercised in mere oppression and wrong? All of these questions must be answered in the negative. The company was given the right to occupy the streets. It exercised this right first with a single track, and afterwards with a double track. Before granting this right the state certainly could have, and reasonably could have, put upon the company the duty of paving as well as of repairing. Such requirement would have been consistent with the object of the grant. It is yet consistent with the object of the grant. It is not imposed in sheer oppression and wrong, and [390]the good faith of the *state cannot be questioned. It is imposed in the exercise of one of the public rights of the state,—the establishment, maintenance, and care of its highways. The extent of this right is illustrated by West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. ed. 845, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518, and cases cited.

Judgment affirmed.

CHATTANOOGA FOUNDRY & PIPE
WORKS and South Pittsburg Pipe Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF ATLANTA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 390-399.)

Monopolies—antitrust act—action for threefold damages.

1. The action for threefold damages for injury to "business or property" authorized by the antitrust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3202), § 7, in cases of violations of that act, may be maintained by a Georgia municipal corporation against the foreign corporate members of a combination forbidden by that act, where the municipality was led, by reason of the illegal combination, to purchase from an Alabama corporation at an excessive price the iron pipe needed for its waterworks system.

Limitation of actions—threefold damages under antitrust act.

2. The limitation of five years prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1047, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 727, for any "suit or prosecution for any penalty or forfeiture, pecuniary or otherwise, accruing under the laws of the United States," does not apply to the action for threefold damages for injury to "business or property," authorized by the antitrust act of July 2, 1890, § 7, in cases of violations of that act.

Limitation of actions—threefold damages under antitrust act.

3. The ten years limitation prescribed by Tenn. Code, § 2776, for "all other cases not expressly provided for," rather than the one year limitation prescribed by § 2772 for "statute penalties," or the three years limitation prescribed by § 2773 for injuries to personal or real property, governs an action for threefold damages for injury to "business or property" brought under the antitrust act of July 2, 1890, § 7, in which the right of recovery is based on the excessive price for iron water pipe which a municipality was led to pay by reason of an illegal arrangement between the members of a trust or combination formed in violation of that act.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern antitrust acts—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

On contracts in restraint of trade—see notes to Leslie v. Lorillard, 1 L.R.A. 456; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 2 L. R.A. 33; Bowman v. Phillips, 3 L.R.A. 632; Richardson v. Buhl, 6 L.R.A. 457; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 8 L.R.A. 500; National Benefit Co. v. Union Hospital Co. 11 L.R.A. 437; Western Wood- en Ware Asso. v. Starkey, 11 L.R.A. 503; Lovejoy v. Michels, 13 L.R.A. 770; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 9 L.R.A. 38; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 22 L. ed. U. S. 315; Fowle v. Park, 33 L. ed. U. S. 67; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 41 L. ed. U. S. 1008; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 666; and Cravens v. Carter-Crume Co. 34 C. C. A. 486.

[No. 94.]

Argued November 9 and 12, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee, in favor of plaintiff, in an action to recover threefold damages for injury to business or property, sustained by reason of a violation of the antitrust act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank Spurlock argued the cause, and, with Mr. Foster V. Brown, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The declaration failed to state a cause of action under § 7 of the antitrust act.

Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 429, 57 L.R.A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553; Boutwell v. Marr, 71 Vt. 1, 43 L.R.A. 803, 76 Am. St. Rep. 746, 42 Atl. 607; Doremus v. Hennessy, 176 Ill. 608, 43 L.R.A. 797, 68 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 924, 54 N. E. 524; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 476, L. R. 21 Q. B. Div. 544, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 247, 44 L. ed. 136, 149, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Gibbs v. McNeeley, 60 L.R.A. 152, 55 C. C. A. 70, 118 Fed. 127; Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689, 60 C. C. A. 290, 125 Fed. 454.

Defendant in error contracted with the Anniston Company for the purchase of pipe at an agreed price, fixed in the contract. This agreement was legal and binding upon the defendant in error under the laws of Georgia, where it was made and to be performed, notwithstanding the fact that the selling company was a party to a contract in restraint of trade, which was illegal under the laws of the United States.

National Distilling Co. v. Cream City Importing Co. 86 Wis. 352, 39 Am. St. Rep. 902, 56 N. W. 864; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

An action for three-fold damages under the act of Congress will only lie where there has been an actual, direct injury inflicted by something done in violation of the act (Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 70, 48 L. ed. 870, 880, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598), and this injury must have been done to the person suing, in his business of interstate commerce, or in his property while the subject of interstate commerce.

The action of defendant in error is barred as for a statute penalty under the section of the Tennessee Code limiting the time for commencing such actions to one year.

Young v. Donaldson, 2 Heisk. 55; Merchants' Bank v. Bliss, 35 N. Y. 412; Stokes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 326; Beadle v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 48 Kan. 379, 29 Pac. 696, 51 Kan. 252, 32 Pac. 910; Ashland Sav. Bank v. Bailey, 66 N. H. 334, 21 Atl. 221; Baker Wire Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 106 Iowa, 239, 76 N. W. 665; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Tanner, 19 Colo. 559, 36 Pac. 541; State Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 18 Mont. 440, 33 L.R.A. 552, 56 Am. St. Rep. 591, 45 Pac. 662; Ratican v. Terminal R. Asso. 114 Fed. 666; Davis v. Mills, 113 Fed. 678, 58 C. C. A. 123, 121 Fed. 703; Patterson v. Wade, 53 C. C. A. 1, 115 Fed. 770; Goodridge v. Union P. R. Co. 35 Fed. 35; Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 550, 565, 29 L. ed. 729, 734, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 522, 29 L. ed. 466, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beekwith, 129 U. S. 35, 32 L. ed. 588, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Gulf, C. & T. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Crider, 91 Tenn. 490, 19 S. W. 618.

If not barred as a statute penalty in one year, the action is within § 2747 of the Tennessee Code of 1858, providing that all wrongs and injuries to the property and person in which money only is demanded as damages may be redressed by an action on the facts of the case, and § 2773, providing that actions for injuries to personal or real property and actions for the detention or conversion of personal property (shall be commenced) within three years from the accruing of the cause of action.

The following cases will illustrate the character of injuries which, before the adoption of the Code of 1858, would support an action on the case:

The value of a chattel fraudulently paid for in counterfeit bank notes: Lane v. Hogan, 5 Yerg. 290. Loss in the value of an article bought on fraudulent representations; a debt lost, where the credit was given on false and deceitful representations that the party was solvent and worthy of credit; Allison v. Tyson, 5 Humph. 449; Rosson v. Hancock, 3 Sneed, 434; Gwinther v. Gerding, 3 Head, 198. Generally the wrongs for which redress was sought in actions on the case involved no injury to any particular articles or things, but the depreciation in value of some right or estate by fraud, malice, deceit, or other misconduct for which damages was the legal compensation.

And since the Code, the courts of Tennessee have recognized as actionable the same class of injuries by trespass or wrong.

Bank v. Doughty, 2 Tenn. 584; Louisville, & N. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea, 432; Ramsey v. Temple, 3 Lea, 252; Rhea v. Hooper, 5 Lea, 390; J. M. James Co. v. Continental Nat. Bank, 105 Tenn. 1, 51 L.R.A. 255, 80 Am. St. Rep. 857, 58 S. W. 261.

Whenever a statute creates a right, but is silent as to the remedy, the party entitled to the right may resort to any common-law action which will afford him adequate and appropriate means of redress.

Householder v. Kansas, 83 Mo. 488; Tapley v. Forbes, 2 Allen, 24; Addison, Torts, 49; Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. 97; Stearns v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. 46 Me. 114; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 527, 22 L. ed. 376, 378; Hightower v. Fitzpatrick, 42 Ala. 600.

In the cases that follow, an action on the case was held to be the proper remedy:

Aldrich v. Howard, 7 R. I. 199, where the act prohibited was the building of a house contrary to specifications in fire limits declared by statute. The damage sued for by plaintiff was the increased danger from fire to an adjoining building, increase of insurance rates, and decrease in rental value.

Sanford v. Haskell, 50 Me. 86, where a statute allowed the recovery of double the price for building defendant's part of a partition fence.

Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. 99, 23 Am. Dec. 662, where the recovery authorized was double the damage caused by a defect in a highway.

Morrison v. Bedell, 22 N. H. 238, and Russell v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 93 Va. 325, 25 S. E. 99, in both of which cases the distinction was stated between suits on statutes, for penalties of forfeiture, where the remedy was by an action in debt, and suits for damages consequent on a prohibited act, where case is the proper remedy.

A similar distinction is made in Mount v. Hunter, 58 Ill. 246, construing a statute making the owner liable in damages for allowing sheep to run at large while affected with contagious disease. Case was held to be the proper remedy, and the action was within the statute of limitations applicable to actions on the case.

Boyn v. Smith, 17 Wend. 88, for treble damages for using false weights.

The decision of the court of appeals is opposed to principles which have been long settled by this court.

Beatty v. Burnes, 8 Cranch, 98, 108, 3 L. ed. 500, 503; McCluny v. Silliman, 3 Pet. 270, 7 L. ed. 676.

Actions for liabilities arising out of duties imposed or acts prohibited by statutes have been held to be within the limitation imposed on all similar actions.

Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 13, 33 L. ed. 231, 236, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 39 L. ed. 280, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217.

The liabilities created by the statutes authorizing the organization of national banks, or for the infringement of patent rights, or rights founded on other acts of Congress, have never been treated as specialties, even though sometimes clearly in the nature of debt.

McDonald v. Thompson, 184 U. S. 72, 46 L. ed. 437, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Cockrill v. Butler, 78 Fed. 680.

Messrs. George Westmoreland and Churchill P. Goree argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Linton A. Dean and J. L. Foust, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If it be true that plaintiff's cause of action was for the recovery of a statutory penalty, inasmuch as it was created by an act of Congress, therefore the statute of limitations of the state of Tennessee with reference to statutory penalties would not apply, but U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1047, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 727, would apply.

Raymond v. United States, 14 Blatchf. 51, Fed. Cas. No. 11,596; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610-614, 39 L. ed. 280, 281, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 148, 44 L. ed. 109, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

But the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals both held that plaintiff's suit was not a penal action.

Atlanta v. Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe-works Co. 64 L.R.A. 721, 61 C. C. A. 387, 127 Fed. 28.

The statute of limitations of three years has no application to this action.

Kirkman v. Philips, 7 Heisk. 222; State use of Henning v. Keller, 11 Lea, 401; Glenn v. Moore, 11 Lea, 256; Blocker v. Boswell, 109 Ga. 230, 34 S. E. 289; Bassett v. Bassett, 20 Ill. App. 543.

We cite the following cases on liability created by statute, and the statute of limitation applicable thereto:

Lane v. Morris, 10 Ga. 162; Atwood v.

Rhode Island Agri. Bank, 1 R. I. 376; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 2 Edw. Ch. 304; Shackelford v. Staton, 117 N. C. 73, 23 S. E. 101; Seymour v. Pittsburg, C. & St. L. R. Co. 44 Ohio St. 12, 4 N. E. 236.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action by the city of Atlanta (Georgia) against two Tennessee corporations, members of the trust or combination held unlawful in Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96. The object of the suit is to recover threefold damages for alleged injury to the city in its business or property, under § 7 of the act of July 2, 1890, chap. 647 (26 Stat. at L. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3202). The alleged injury is that the city, being engaged in conducting a system of waterworks, and wishing to buy iron water pipe, was led, by reason of the illegal arrangements between the members of the trust, to purchase the pipe from the Anniston Pipe & Foundry Company, an Alabama corporation, at a price much above what was reasonable or the pipe was worth. The purchase was made after a simulated [396]*competition, at a price fixed by the trust, and embracing a bonus to be divided among the members. The plaintiffs in error demurred to the declaration, and pleaded not guilty, and that the action accrued more than one year and more than three years before the suit was brought, relying upon §§ 2772 and 2773 of the Code of Tennessee, the eastern district of Tennessee being the district in which the suit was brought. The demurrer to the declaration was overruled and the plaintiff had a verdict and judgment in the circuit court. The verdict was for the difference between the price paid and the market or fair price that the city would have had to pay under natural conditions had the combination been out of the way, together with an attorney's fee. The judgment trebled the damages. It was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, the plaintiffs in error having saved their rights at every stage. The discussions of the law took place before the jury trial was reached. They will be found in 64 L.R.A. 721, 61 C. C. A. 387, 127 Fed. 23, and 101 Fed. 900. For our purposes it seems unnecessary to state the case at greater length.

The facts gave rise to a cause of action under the act of Congress. The city was a person within the meaning of § 7 by the express provision of § 8. It was injured in its property, at least, if not in its business of furnishing water, by being led to pay more than the worth of the pipe. A person whose property is diminished by a payment of money wrongfully induced is injured in his property. The transaction which did the wrong was a transaction between parties in different states, if that be material. The fact that the defendants and others had combined with the seller led to the excessive charge, which the seller made in the interest of the trust by arrangement with its members, and which the buyer was induced to pay by the semblance of competition, also arranged by the members of the trust. One object of the combination was to prevent other producers than the Anniston Pipe & Foundry Company, the seller, from competing in sales to the plaintiff. There can be no doubt that Congress had power to give an *action for damages to an individual [397] who suffers by breach of the law. W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307. The damage complained of must almost or quite always be damage in property, that is, in the money of the plaintiff, which is owned within some particular state. In other words, if Congress had power to make the acts which led to the damage illegal, it could authorize a recovery for the damage, although the latter was suffered wholly within the boundaries of one state. Finally, the fact that the sale was not so connected in its terms with the unlawful combination as to be unlawful (Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431) in no way contradicts the proposition that the motives and inducements to make it were so affected by the combination as to constitute a wrong. In most cases where the result complained of as springing from a tort is a contract, the contract is lawful, and the tort goes only to the motives which led to its being made, as when it is induced by duress or fraud.

The limitation of five years in Rev. Stat. §1047, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 727, to any "suit or prosecution for any penalty or forfeiture, pecuniary or otherwise, accruing under the laws of the United States," does not apply. The construction of the phrase "suit for a penalty," and the reasons for that construction, have been stated so fully by this court that it is not necessary to repeat them. Indeed, the proposition hardly is disputed here. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 668, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1128, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 148, 155, 156, 44 L. ed. 109, 112, 113, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Thus we come to the main question of the case, namely, which limitation under the laws of Tennessee is applicable, the matter being left to the local law by the silence of the statutes of the United States. Rev. Stat. § 721, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 39 L.

ed. 280, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217. The material provisions of the Tennessee Code are as follows: By article 2769 (Shannon, 4466) all civil actions are to be commenced within the periods prescribed, with immaterial exceptions. By article 2772 (Shannon, 4469) actions, among others, for "statute penalties, within one year after cause of action accrued." By 2773 * (Shannon, 4470) "actions for injuries to personal or real property; actions for the detention or conversion of personal property, within three years from the accruing of the cause of action." By 2776 (Shannon, 4473) certain actions enumerated, "and all other cases not expressly provided for, within ten years after the cause of action accrued." The circuit court of appeals held that the case did not fall within 2772 or 2773, but only within 2776, and therefore was not barred. Although the decision is appealed from, as this question involves the construction of local law, we cannot but attribute weight to the opinion of the judge who rendered the judgment, in view of his experience upon the supreme court of Tennessee. And although doubts were raised by the argument, we have come to agree with his interpretation in the main.

As to the article touching actions for statute penalties, notwithstanding some grounds for distinguishing it from Rev. Stat. § 1047, which were pointed out, so far as this liability under the laws of the United States is concerned we must adhere to the construction of it which we already have adopted. The chief argument relied upon is that this suit is for injury to personal property, and so within article 2773. It was pressed upon us that formerly the limitations addressed themselves to forms of action; that actions upon the case, such as this would have been, were barred in three years, following Stat. 21 Jac. I. chap. 21, § 3, and that when a change was necessitated by the doing away with the old forms of action, it is not to be supposed that the change was intended to affect the substance, or more than the mode of stating the time allowed. Of course, it was argued also that this was an injury to property, within the plain meaning of the words. But we are satisfied, on the whole, and in view of its juxtaposition with detention and conversion, that the phrase has a narrower intent. It may be that it has a somewhat broader scope than was intimated below, and that some wrongs are within it besides physical damage to tangible property. But there is a sufficiently clear distinction between injuries to property * and "injured in his business or property," the latter being the language of the act of Congress. A man is injured in his property when his property is diminished. He would not be said to have suffered an injury to his property unless the harm fell upon some object more definite and less ideal than his total wealth. A trademark, or a trade name, or a title, is property, and is regarded as an object capable of injury in various ways. But when a man is made poorer by an extravagant bill we do not regard his wealth as a unity, or the tort, if there is one, as directed against that unity as an object. We do not go behind the person of the sufferer. We say that he has been defrauded or subjected to duress, or whatever it may be, and stop there. It was urged that the opening article to which we have referred expressed an intention to bar all civil actions, but that hardly helps the construction of any particular article following, since the dragnet at the end, 2776, catches all cases not "expressly provided for." On the whole case we agree with the court below.

[399] 203 U. S.

Judgment affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent.

FRANK W. GUY, W. T. Stanworth, et al.
v.

JOHN A. DONALD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399-408.)

Pilots—liability for each other's negligence.

Members of a voluntary, unincorporated pilot association, which, under the state laws, could neither select nor discharge its members, nor control or direct them in the performance of their duties as licensed pilots, whether technically partners or not, are not liable to the owners of piloted vessels for the negligence of each other because, instead of taking their fees as they earn them, such fees go into a common fund, and, after deducting expenses, are distributed to the several members according to the number of days they respectively were on the active list.

[No. 90.]

Argued November 8, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, presenting questions as to the liability of members of a pilot association for the negligence of each other. Answered in the negative.

NOTE.—As to powers and liabilities of pilots—see note to Thompson v. The Great Republic, 23 L. ed. U. S. 55.

Associations as partnerships—see notes to Brown v. Stoerkel, 3 L.R.A. 430, and McCabe v. Goodfellow, 17 L.R.A. 204.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. D. Tucker Brooke and R. C. Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for Guy et al.:

The question of partnership or no partnership is not to be settled by arbitrary tests; to attempt to do so is mischievous, resulting in error.

Beecher v. Bush, 45 Mich. 188, 40 Am. Rep. 465, 7 N. W. 785; Mechem, Elements of Partn. § 63, note, § 68.

What, then, in the absence of conclusive tests, is the essential element of copartnership? That the parties are mutually principals of and agents for each other.

Beecher v. Bush, supra.

In the case of pilot associations the individual pilots are not, and under our statutes cannot be, each the agent of the other members.

Our entire system of statutes on this subject show that the individual pilots are quasi-public officers; they derive their authority, not from the association, but from the state; their service is personal, and in its performance they represent only themselves, individually, with a responsibility only to the state; their right to compensation is given to them individually by statute, as officers of the state; their fees are fixed by statute as the fees of other state officers are; and there can be no copartnership in state officers.

Mechem, Elements of Partn. § 18.

These pilots are quasi-public officers, or, at least, invested with a personal trust; this being so, they cannot occupy the relation of principals for themselves and agents for their associates (without which a partnership cannot exist), for, under the principles of the common law, it is against public policy for a copartnership to exist in public offices.

Jons v. Perchard, 2 Esp. 507; Canfield v. Hard, 6 Conn. 180; Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175, 33 Am. Rep. 548; Seely v. Beck, 42 Mo. 143; Bowen v. Richardson, 133 Mass. 293; Gould v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 549, 19 N. W. 483; Warner v. Griswold, 8 Wend. 665; Wolcott v. Gibson, 51 Ill. 69.

The exact question here involved has been decided in our favor.

The City of Dundee, 103 Fed. 696, Affirmed in 47 C. C. A. 581, 108 Fed. 679; see also Mason v. Ervine, 27 Fed. 459.

Mr. Robert M. Hughes argued the cause and filed a brief for Donald:

There is such a community of profits and losses shown as to constitute the Virginia Pilot Association a partnership.

Fleming v. Lay, 48 C. C. A. 748, 109 Fed. 952; Brown v. Higginbotham, 5 Leigh, 583, 27 Am. Dec. 618; Keasley v. Codd, 2 Car. & P. 408; Davison v. Holden, 55 Conn. 103, 3 Am. St. Rep. 40, 10 Atl. 515; Megovern v. Robertson, 116 N. Y. 61, 5 L.R.A. 589, 22 N. E. 398; Kaiser v. Lawrence Sav. Bank, 56 Iowa, 104, 41 Am. Rep. 85, 8 N. W. 772; Jones v. Murphy, 93 Va. 214, 24 S. E. 825; Robbins v. Butler, 24 Ill. 387; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Pearson, 128 Mass. 445; Frost v. Walker, 60 Me 468; Kramer v. Arthurs, 7 Pa. 165; Ricker v. American Loan & T. Co. 140 Mass. 346, 5 N. E. 284; Fleming v. Lay, 48 C. C. A. 748, 109 Fed. 955; Mechem, Elements of Partn. § 43, p. 31; Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510.

Even if the pilot association is an illegal partnership, this can only be set up as among themselves, and is no answer to a suit against them by a third party.

Brett v. Beckwith, 3 Jur. N. S. 31; Mechem, Elements of Partn. § 20, p. 16; Hale v. Hale, 4 Beav. 369; United States v. Baxter, 46 Fed. 350.

The members of such a partnership are liable for each other's torts if in furtherance of the objects of the association, and if the fruits of their labors are received by the association.

Hyrne v. Erwin, 23 S. C. 226, 55 Am. Rep. 15; Fleming v. Lay, 48 C. C. A. 748, 109 Fed. 952; Mellors v. Shaw, 1 Best & S. 437; Ashworth v. Stanwix, 3 El. & El. 701; United States v. Baxter, supra; Cobb v. Abbot, 14 Pick. 289; Strang v. Bradner, 114 U. S. 555, 29 L. ed. 248, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038.

The pilots, if not a partnership, are jointly liable.

This is well settled by a number of decisions, as in case of joint owners of stage coaches.

Champion v. Bostwick, 18 Wend. 175, 31 Am. Dec. 376; Moreton v. Harden, 4 Barn. & C. 223; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Ross, 142 Ill. 9, 34 Am. St. Rep. 49, 31 N. E. 412; Cobb v. Abbot, supra; Steel v. Lester, L. R. 3 C. P. Div. 121; Connolly v. Davidson, 15 Minn. 519, 2 Am. Rep. 154, Gil. 428.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes before us on a certificate from the circuit court of appeals. It is a libel brought by the owners of a steamer against the members of the Virginia Pilot Association, and seeks to hold them all liable for the alleged negligence of Guy, one of their number. For the proceedings in the district court see 127 Fed. 228, 135 Fed. 429. The negligence occurred when Guy was acting as pilot of the steamer and led to a collision, for which the owners of steamer paid damages to the other vessel in order to end a suit. The questions certified are (1) [404] whether the members of *the association are partners on the facts set forth; (2) whether, if partners, they are liable to owners of piloted vessels for the negligence of each other; (3) whether, if not technically partners, they nevertheless are so liable.

The facts appear in the third article of the libel, which was excepted to, and in answers to interrogatories. They are as follows: The defendants are a voluntary, unincorporated association. By their agreement they take turns in boarding vessels required by law to take a pilot, and the fees, which otherwise would be paid to the pilot that boarded the vessel, are paid, except in cases of national vessels and disputed bills, to the association upon bills made out by it, and go into a common fund, from which the association pays the expenses of the business, including office rent. At the time of the accident the net profits were divided according to the number of days the several pilots were upon the active list. The constitution and by-laws of the association are exhibited and will be referred to. It is proper to add here a few words as to the Virginia law. By the Code of 1887 a board of commissioners is instituted to examine persons applying for branches as pilots; and the commissioners are given "full authority to make such rules as they may think necessary for the proper government and regulation of pilots licensed by them." § 1955. There are details as to the qualification and classification of pilots and their duties, including a requirement as to boats, of the pilot "or the company to which he belongs." § 1960. Acting as pilot without authority is punished. § 1963. Certain vessels are required to take the first pilot that offers his services or to pay full pilotage. § 1965. See § 1976. The amount of pilotage is fixed. § 1969. A personal liability is imposed for the amount, and it is to be noticed that it is a liability to the individual pilot employed. § 1978. The pilot's right to collect his account is fortified by a penalty. § 1979. The board of commissioners is authorized to decide any controversy between licensed pilots or between a pilot and the master, owner, or consignee of a vessel, and to enter judgment, *which, if for money, may be collected by a sheriff, etc. § 1980. But a judgment of suspension against a pilot is limited in general to between one and twelve months. § 1981. And the board cannot decide upon the liability of "a pilot" to any party injured by his negligence. § 1982. Pilots demanding or receiving more or less than their lawful fees are subjected to a forfeiture. § 1985. And certain further duties are prescribed.

The rules of the board of commissioners provide for the appointment by them of a supervisory board from the pilot association, to report to the president of the board of commissioners all cases of insubordination, breach of rules, etc., or any misdemeanor, afloat or on shore, on the part of any member of the association. A pilot desiring to go off duty for five days or longer is required to apply to the board of commissioners. Suspensions, by whomsoever ordered, are to be reported within twenty-four hours to the president of the board, and are to be acted upon by the board. All pilots are required to lookout for their turns, and each pilot is held responsible for whatever turn he may hold upon the list, officers being prohibited from having anything to do with the swapping of turns. It will be seen that the rules of the board, made under the authority of this statute, recognize the association, as does the Code, more vaguely, in § 1960, quoted above. The rules also recognize the substitution of turns for the free competition of which there are traces in the Code. The rules tacitly assume that every pilot is a member of the association. All punishment and suspension is in the hands of the board, except, as may be added here, that the by-laws of the association impose a fine of $10 for a first violation of the rules of the association, of $20 for a second offense, and provide that a third shall be reported to the board of pilot commissioners. Thus substantially the whole government of the association is in the hands of the board.
203 U. S.

The questions certified very properly go beyond the question *of the existence of a [406] partnership. As long as the matter to be considered is debated in artificial terms there is a danger of being led by a technical definition to apply a certain name, and then to deduce consequences which have no relation to the grounds on which the name was applied. The substance of the case is this: A man who is responsible before the law is alleged to have committed a tort. It is proposed to make other men pay for it who not only have not commanded it or any act of which it was the natural consequence, but who would have prevented it if they could, and who have done what they could to prevent it, so far as the qualifications and employment of the pilot were not taken out of their hands by law. Why they should have to pay is the problem recurring through agency in all its forms, and whatever may be thought of some of the reasons that have been offered when the obligation has been imposed, it is certain that something more and better must be found than that the defendants divide the pay for the work that they have done, or that it is a convenience to the party aggrieved to discover a full purse to which to resort.

Whether the ground be policy or tradition, such a liability is imposed, as we all know, in many cases. When a man is carrying on business in his private interest and intrusts a part of the work to another, the world has agreed to make him answer for that other as if he had done the work himself. But there is always a limitation. It is true that he is not excused by care in selection or orders sufficient to secure right conduct, if obeyed. But when he could not select; could not control, and could not discharge, the guilty man, he does not answer for his torts. As a familiar instance, the servants of an independent contractor are not the servants of the contractee. The liability of a vessel when in the hands of a compulsory pilot is not put upon the ground that the pilot is the agent or servant of the owners, and therefore does not bear upon the question. The China (The China v. Walsh) 7 Wall. 53, 19 L. ed. 67. Now, we are not curious to inquire what form of test [407] shall be accepted as *the most profound for the existence of a partnership when considering liability for debts; but it is plain that when we are considering a liability for torts under the circumstances supposed no stricter or different criterion ought to be applied than in those cases where agency is the admitted ground. The rule, however stated, presses to the verge of general principles of liability. It must not be pressed beyond the point for which we can find a rational support.

So far as appears, the Virginia Pilot Association had no one of the three powers which we have mentioned. Seemingly it could neither select nor discharge its members, as certainly it could not control or direct them in the performance of their duties as pilots. To take the last first, it is quite plain that the Virginia Code contemplates a bond of mutual personal liability between the master of a vessel and the pilot on board. If we imagine such a pilot performing his duties within sight of the assembled association, he still would be sole master of his course. If all of his fellows passed a vote on the spot that he should change, and shouted it through a speaking trumpet, he would owe no duty to obey, but would be as free as before to do what he thought best. Then, as to the selection of members, there is no indication of any in the Code, the rules of the board, or the constitution and by-laws of the association. Nothing is said about membership, and the implication is plain that a condition of the association being permitted by the board to exist is that every pilot belongs to it. Probably, while it exists, a pilot scarcely would find it possible to compete from the outside. It is still plainer that the only provision for expulsion is that which would follow upon a pilot's being deprived of his license. The association has no power over that.

All that there is upon which to base a joint liability is that the pilots, instead of taking their fees as they earn them, accomplish substantially the same result by mingling them in the first place, and then, after paying expenses, distributing them to those on the active list according to the number of *days they respectively have been there. [408] Apart from the possible slight difference between the proportion of days on the active list and days of active service, the case is the same as if each pilot kept his fees, merely contributing to keep up a common office from which his bills might be sent out and where a few details of common interest could be attended to. In the latter case this suit hardly would have been brought. The distinction between it and the one at bar is not great enough to justify a different result. See The City of Dundee, 47 C. C. A. 581, 108 Fed. 679, 684, 103 Fed. 696. The second and third questions certified are answered "No."

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

THEODORE DALCOUR et al., Heirs of John Forbes, Deceased, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 408-429.)

Appeal—from district court—in private land claim cases.

1. The appeal required by the act of June 22, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 85, 87, chap. 188), § 11, to be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States if the decree of the district court in certain private land claim cases is against the United States, is "otherwise provided by law" within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), § 6, making the circuit court of appeals the proper tribunal for the review of final decisions of the district court in other than certain excepted cases, which include those where it is otherwise provided by law.

Private land claims—rejection of Spanish grant.

2. Judges of the superior court of West Florida were "public officers acting under authority of Congress" within the meaning of the proviso in the act of June 22, 1860, § 3, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the Florida land claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for con-

NOTE.—On direct appeals from Federal circuit or district courts to the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

firmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."

Private land claims—rejection of Spanish grant.

3. A judge of the superior court of West Florida, acting under the act of May 23, 1828 (4 Stat. at L. 284, 285, chap. 70), § 6, had jurisdiction to reject a Florida land claim because of an unwarranted alteration in the date of the registro which would save the grant from invalidity under the treaty of February 22, 1819 (8 Stat. at L. 258), with Spain, although a proviso to that section excluded him from taking cognizance of any claims annulled by the treaty.

Private land claims—rejection of Spanish grant.

4. Florida land claims which previously had been rejected as fraudulent or maintained by improper means, when the fraud addressed itself to avoiding the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, as well as when the fraud related to some other fact material to the validity of the claims at the time when they were created, were covered by the proviso in the act of June 22, 1860, § 3, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."

Private land claims—rejection of Spanish grant.

5. The rejection of a Florida land claim by a judge of the superior court of West Florida, acting under the act of May 23, 1828, § 6, because of an unwarranted alteration of the date in the registro which would save the grant from invalidity under the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, brings the case within the proviso of the act of June 22, 1860, § 3, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."

[No. 69.]

Argued October 30 and 31, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida to review a decree establishing title under a Spanish land grant. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Mr. Robert A. 203 U. S.

Howard argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. William A. Blount argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William W. Dewhurst and A. C. Blount, Jr., filed a brief for appellees:

While the act of June 22, 1860, under which this suit is brought, authorizes an appeal direct from the district court, yet it is clear that since the judiciary act of March 31, 1891, the appellate jurisdiction of this court is to be found only under the provisions of that act.

The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 685, 43 L. ed. 323, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; United States v. Rider, 163 U. S. 132, 41 L. ed. 101, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983.

In order that this court may have jurisdiction because the construction or validity of a treaty is in question, a right, privilege, or immunity dependent on the treaty must be so set up or claimed as to require the circuit court to pass on the question of validity or construction in disposing of the right asserted.

Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 431, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

Even if the grant in fact had been made by Spain within the time limited in the treaty, its efficacy would not have depended upon the treaty within the rule mentioned, for it would have been protected without the treaty, and could not be said to be dependent upon it.

Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 436, 42 L. ed. 533, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

The treaty is not even in the chain of title upon which the petitioners rely, for the grant does not depend for its efficacy upon the treaty, but upon the act of 1860. Without either the treaty or the act, the petitioners would have had a vested, perfected right by virtue of the grant itself, although it might have been unenforceable without legislation by Congress. Even if, however, it had been a part of the chain of title, that would not have been sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, unless it directly, and not incidentally, involved the construction of the treaty.

De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

Of course, the mere assertion by the United States of a contention on its part which no one controverts, and which did not enter into the decree below, can be no foundation for any jurisdiction of this court, for there must be a bona fide contention, the determination of which was necessary in the decision of the case. To change a little the application of the decisions of this court, there must be color for the assertion, and the right must be substantially drawn in question.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 26 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Iowa v. Rood, 187 U. S. 92, 47 L. ed. 89, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 48 L. ed. 814, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

By § 6 of the act of May 23, 1828 (4 Stat. at L. 284, chap. 70), under which the superior court of West Florida acquired jurisdiction of the case, the rules of decision were prescribed, and all claims were required to be received and adjudicated according to the forms, rules, regulations, conditions, restrictions, and limitations prescribed to the district judge and claimants by the act of May 26, 1824 (4 Stat. at L. 52, chap. 173). By § 2 of this act the court was required to determine the question of the validity of the title according to "the stipulations of any treaty and proceedings under the same."

United States v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 467, 8 L. ed. 1012; Smith v. United States, 10 Pet. 327, 9 L. ed. 442; United States v. Wiggins, 14 Pet. 350, 10 L. ed. 489.

Of course, in proceedings under any particular statute, the limitations prescribed by that statute must control.

Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 224, 43 L. ed. 144, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 711, 8 L. ed. 554.

The court can neither change nor modify the act of Congress; and if it attempts so to do, its orders are void.

United States v. Curry, 6 How. 112, 113, 12 L. ed. 365, 366.

The superior court had jurisdiction to decide in the first place whether, according to the principles which the political departments of the government had established, this was a grant which the United States had stipulated to recognize. The moment the court found that the grant fell within the class which Congress and the President had expressly refused to recognize, that moment its jurisdiction, under the act of 1823, to inquire into and decide upon the validity of the claim, ceased. The United States would not have been bound by its judgment had it been adverse to them, and hence cannot claim the benefit of a favorable judgment.

Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 408; United States v. Baca, 184 U. S. 653, 46 L. ed. 733, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 541.

By virtue of the validating power of the act of 1860 a right of enforcement has been created which was not in existence in 1830, and therefore could not have been adjudicated in that suit; such new right would not be barred by an adjudication as to the right previously vested. This is the doctrine of the general law of estoppel.

250

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 49, 42 L. ed. 377, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; De Chambrun v. Schermerhorn, 59 Fed. 503; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 777; Norton v. Huxley, 13 Gray, 290; Merriam v. Whittemore, 5 Gray, 317; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Utter v. Franklin, 172 U. S. 424, 43 L. ed. 501, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

This is also the doctrine of decisions of this court upon the statute directly in point.

United States v. Lynde, 11 Wall. 632, 20 L. ed. 230; Dauterive v. United States, 101 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 869; United States v. Morant, 123 U. S. 342, 31 L. ed. 173, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189.

If, upon the face of a record, anything is left to conjecture as to what was necessarily involved and decided, there is no estoppel when pleaded, and nothing conclusive in it when offered as evidence.

Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 610, 24 L. ed. 216; Fahey v. Esterley Mach. Co. 3 N. D. 223, 44 Am. St. Rep. 554, 55 N. W. 581.

And one who pleads an estoppel by judgment which might have proceeded upon two or more facts must prove that it was decided on the particular fact as to which he seeks to assert the estoppel.

Zoeller v. Riley, 100 N. Y. 107, 53 Am. Rep. 157, 2 N. E. 388; Lewis v. Ocean Nav. & Pier Co. 125 N. Y. 348, 26 N. E. 303; Dygert v. Dygert, 4 Ind. App. 280, 29 N. E. 491.

Mr. Henry R. Hatfield also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition to establish title by a grant of about 1,850,000 acres of land in Florida, brought in the district court under the act of June 22, 1860, chap. 188, § 11 (12 Stat. at L. 85, 87), extended by act of June 10, 1872, chap. 421 (17 Stat. at L. 378), for three years from the last date. The petitioners had a decree in the district court, and the United States appealed to this court under the above mentioned § 11.

As the jurisdiction of this court is denied, we will dispose of that question before going further into the facts. The ground of the denial is that by § 6 of the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517 [26 Stat. at L. 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550], the circuit court of appeals shall exercise appellate jurisdiction to review final decisions in the district courts, etc., in all cases other than those provided for in the preceding section, "unless otherwise provided by law." There is no doubt that this enactment was intended to supersede previous general provisions, and to establish in what cases and to what courts appeals might be taken from the district courts. The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 686, 44 L. ed. 320, 323, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290. But the statute recognizes, in addition to the exceptions which it enumerates, others *where it is "otherwise provided by law." These words must be taken to refer to existing provisions, and not to be merely a futile permission to future legislatures to make a change. They do not save every existing provision, of course, or the act would fail of its purpose. But they save some. There is no case to which they can apply more clearly than one in which, by reason of its interest, the United States has manifested its will to submit to no judgment not sanctioned by its highest court. The language of § 11 is not the usual permission to appeal, such as existed in the act of March 3, 1851, chap. 41, §§ 9, 10 (9 Stat. at L. 632, 633), referred to in Gwin v. United States, 184 U. S. 669, 46 L. ed. 741, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526. See also act of August 31, 1852, chap. 108, § 12 (10 Stat. at L. 99). It bears the unusual form of a positive requirement. "If the decree be against the United States, an appeal shall be entered to the Supreme Court of the United States." This is a provision based on a specific policy with regard to a certain class of claims. It is not a matter of general principle, but a special trust. See also act of May 23, 1828, chap. 70, § 9 (4 Stat. at L. 284, 286); May 26, 1824, chap. 173, § 9 (4 Stat. at L. 55). It stands on the same ground of peculiar importance that is the foundation of the express grant of certain direct appeals in § 5 of the act of 1891. Therefore, without considering whether the case at bar falls within the other exceptions, we are of opinion that the jurisdiction of this court given by § 11 of the act of 1860 remains unchanged.

203 U. S.

The petition was filed on March 3, 1875, by the heirs of John Forbes. It alleged a grant to John Forbes by the Captain General of Cuba, on January 10, 1818; that is, a grant made in time to escape the 8th article of the treaty with Spain, of February 22, 1819 [8 Stat. at L. 258], declaring all such grants made after January 24, 1818, void. On the other hand, it invoked the earlier part of the same article, by which all grants made by the King of Spain or by his lawful authorities, in the territories ceded to the United States, before January 24, were to be confirmed to the same extent as if the territories had not been sold. On December 14, 1878, an amendment was allowed, *by which the grant was alleged to have been made to John Forbes & Company, a partnership consisting of Forbes, James Innerarity, and John Innerarity, and the Innerarity heirs were joined as parties. The rights of the United States, especially under the statute of limitations, were saved, and one question argued is whether this amendment could be allowed, when the time for bringing suit under the act of 1860 had expired. We shall not find it necessary to discuss this question, and shall assume, for the purposes of decision, that the amendment properly was allowed. United States v. Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 343, 31 L. ed. 171, 173, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189. We shall assume that the proceeding is to establish the claim and appropriate the land to it, rather than to determine in detail the present holders of the claim. See Butler v. Goreley, 146 U. S. 308-310, 36 L. ed. 984, 985, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, 147 Mass. 8, 12, 16 N. E. 734; Pam-to-pee v. United States, 187 U. S. 371, 379, 380, 47 L. ed. 221, 225, 226, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

It is unnecessary to trace all the vicissitudes of the case or to explain the delays. It is enough for our purposes to say that the parties reached an issue on May 29, 1903. A master was appointed and testimony was taken. At the hearing before him the United States put in the registro, or instrument of grant, which was in fact the original instrument, although the document of title under Spanish law is a copy delivered to the grantee, while the registro is retained by the government. It appeared upon inspection that this instrument had been altered in the date to January 10, from February 20, 1818, the true date making the grant void under the treaty. Thereupon the petitioners asked leave to amend by adding an allegation that the grant was made on February 20, 1818, but had been altered so that it purported to have been made on January 10. The result of this amendment was that, whereas the ground of recovery previously had been the treaty, now it was that the act of 1860 had given a right to recover in a case which the treaty put an end to in so many words. It abandoned the old ground, and that no longer could be relied upon if the amendment was allowed. The amendment, *al- [423] though filed, was not formally allowed before the hearing, and after the hearing the United States filed a suggestion that it had been treated as allowed, and that an order should be made nunc pro tunc that the amendment had been allowed. Thereupon the order suggested was made, and an additional answer was filed, setting up the treaty and the limitation in the statutes. We do not perceive that the United States, by its course, lost its right to maintain that the amendment set up a new cause of action, which was barred by the limitation fixed by the statutes on the matter, and it urges that defense. Union P. R. Co. v. Wyler, 158 U. S. 285, 298, 39 L. ed. 983, 991, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.

It has been decided that a decree upon a bill to have a patent declared void as forfeited under an act of Congress was a bar to a subsequent bill for the same purpose upon the different ground that the land was excepted from the grant as an Indian reservation. United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 355, 48 L. ed. 476, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266. In that case it was intimated that in general a judgment is a bar to a second attempt to reach the same result by a different medium concludendi. But while such a decision might be persuasive on the question whether the cause of action is the same or different for the purposes of amendment, it has been decided that an amendment could not be allowed in a Missouri district, changing the ground of recovery from the common law to the common law as modified by a Kansas statute, which did away with the defense that the negligence complained of was that of a fellow servant, in actions against railroads. Union P. R. Co. v. Wyler, 158 U. S. 285, 39 L. ed. 983, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877. In the present case the change is a change in the allegations of fact, and was most material, because it necessarily was followed by a direct facing about with regard to the law. We shall not dispose of the case on this ground, but we think it proper to say that the difficulties in the way of upholding this amendment under the last-mentioned decision have not been removed from our minds.

The fundamental questions in the case are whether the petitioners are within the act [424] of 1860, and, if they are, whether *they are not met by an exception to which we shortly shall refer. The former we shall not decide. The statute by § 1 gave a petition to any persons "who claim any lands lying within the states of Florida, Louisiana, or Missouri, by virtue of grant . . . emanating from any foreign government, bearing date prior to the cession to the United States of the territory out of which said states were formed, or during the period when any such government claimed sovereignty or had the actual possession of the district or territory in which the lands so claimed are situated." And somewhat similar language is used in § 11, allowing a proceeding in the district court. There, however, the words apply only in case of a complete grant or concession and separation from the mass of the public domain prior to the cession to the United States, "or where such title was created and perfected during the period while the foreign governments from which it emanated claimed sovereignty over, or had the actual possession of, such territory."

The petitioners rely upon the words of the act and upon United States v. Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 31 L. ed. 171, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189. That case involved lands in Florida, lying, like the present, east of the river Perdido, of which the grant was made before January 24, 1818, but the survey was not completed until afterwards. The court, while intimating that such a grant well might have been held to be saved by the treaty, pointed out that the treaty was not signed until February 22, 1819, or possession taken until July, 1822, and held that the case was within the act.

On the other hand, there must be, and it has been intimated that there are, some limits to the generality of the words of the statute. Certain large grants were expressly excepted from recognition by the King of Spain on his ratification of the treaty. The act was not intended to bring them to life. There is a strong argument that it no more was intended to validate all other grants expressly annulled, but rather that what was aimed at was the so-called disputed territory lying west of the river Perdido, of which a short and clear account *is to be found in United States v. Lynde, 11 [425] Wall. 632, 20 L. ed. 230. In the light of that history and in view of the alternative ground of decision kept open in United States v. Morant, if there are no other possible distinctions between that case and this, we also shall leave it open whether the intimation in that case is right, or whether the same justice was more accurate when he said, even with regard to grants of land in the disputed territory, that the intention of the act was to validate them, "subject, of course, to the express exceptions of the treaty of 1819 and the supplementary declaration of the King of Spain finally annexed thereto." United States v. Lynde, 11 Wall. 632, 646, 647, 20 L. ed. 230, 234, 235. See McMicken v. United States, 97 U. S. 204, 208, 209, 24 L. ed. 947, 948, 949; United States v. Clamorgan, 101 U. S. 822, 825, 826, 25 L. ed. 836 ("which passed by the Louisiana purchase," in 25 L. ed. 836).

However it may be as to the question upon which we have touched, we are of opinion that this case "comes within the purview of the 3d section of this act" (of 1860) in the words of § 11, in which event the petition is not allowed to be maintained. The 3d section provides for a division of the claims into three classes, numbers one and two containing claims which ought to be confirmed, number three containing those which ought to be rejected, "Provided, that in no case shall such commissioners embrace in said classes number one and number two any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners, or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means." We are of opinion that this proviso excludes the petitioners, for the reasons which we proceed to state.

Before the act of 1860 was passed, an act of May 23, 1828, chap. 70, § 6 (4 Stat. at L. 284, 285), authorized the presentation of certain land claims in Florida to a judge of the superior court of West Florida, subject to the restrictions of the act of May 26, 1824, chap. 173 (4 Stat. at L. 52). This claim was presented by the Inneraritys for themselves and the Forbes heirs, and after [426] a *trial the prayer for confirmation of the title was "refused and rejected" for the reasons set forth in an opinion which is in the record before us. The general ground was the unwarranted alteration of the registro, which we have mentioned above. The judge was careful not to implicate the public officer, remarking that it would be unjust, when he was not a party and had no opportunity of defense. He also stated that it was not intended to implicate the parties in interest. But he pointed out that the inducement for an alteration of the registro a year or two after it was made, when the time became essential in consequence of the treaty, was obvious, and as plainly intimated that he considered the alteration fraudulent, as he could without saying so in words. He simply avoided finding by whom the alteration was made. He quoted the Curia Filipica for the invalidity of a public instrument which does not authenticate alterations by a salvado, and he concluded that the claimants had no legal grant prior to January 24, 1818. He relied upon the absence of a salvado, no doubt, but only as one of the grounds for deciding that the alterations were made without authority of law, and as leading to the further consequence that the instrument was void.

The United States set up this adjudication as a bar under the above-mentioned § 3. The petitioners make several replies. In the first place they contend that if a decision by a judge had been embraced within the proviso of § 3, he would not have been referred to in a slight, subordinate, and alternative way, under the general head of "other public officers acting under authority of Congress," after the specific mention of "any board of commissioners." The reason seems plain enough, however. The whole scheme of the earlier acts was that the claims should be presented to a board of commissioners. Act of May 8, 1822, chap. 129 (3 Stat. at L. 709); March 3, 1823, chap. 29 (3 Stat. at L. 754); February 8, 1827, chap. 9 (4 Stat. at L. 202). The right to present a claim to a judge came in only by way of a late supplement in a limited number of cases. Act of May 23, 1828, chap. 70, § 6 (4 Stat. at L. 284, 285). The judges referred *to were judges of a territorial court [427] established by the acts of March 30, 1822, chap. 13, § 6 (3 Stat. at L. 654), and March 3, 1823, chap. 28, § 7 (3 Stat. at L. 750). They were not district judges, and there was a certain ambiguity in their standing which was under discussion when the act of 1828 was passed, and has been discussed since. American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 243; McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949. It was most natural to use cautious words, but there was no other public officer which the act of 1860 is likely to have had in mind. No further argument seems necessary to justify the conclusion that these judges were embraced within the actual, as well as the literal, meaning of the words used.
203 U. S.

In the next place, it is said the claim was not found to be fraudulent or maintained by fraudulent or improper means. With regard to this we think that we have said enough already. The claim was found to be based upon an alteration, the motive for which was pointed out, and to be maintained by a reliance upon the unlawful alteration. The main contention is that the judge had no jurisdiction to reject the claim on that ground, because, the moment that he decided the true date of the grant to be after January 24, he fell within a proviso of the act of May 23, 1828, chap. 70, § 6 (4 Stat. at L. 285), which excluded him from taking cognizance of any claims annulled by the treaty. United States v. Baca, 184 U. S. 653, 46 L. ed. 733, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 541. It appears to us that this argument rests on too narrow a view of the statutes and of what was done. The claim as presented was within the judge's jurisdiction. He had authority to inquire whether it was so in fact. The document produced by the petitioner showed a claim which he could decide upon the merits, for the copy did not disclose the alteration. When the registro was put in it appeared that the date had been altered. He still had authority to decide whether the alteration was valid. He decided that it was unlawfully and fraudulently made. It would be an extraordinary refinement to say that he had authority to decide that it was made unlawfully, but not to decide why it was unlawful. The illegality did not *fol- [428] low from the mere fact of alteration. Had there been a salvado it might have been valid. He could not come to his conclusion without some definite ground.

Moreover, while it is true that the limitation in § 6 of the act of 1828 in form provides that the act shall not be taken to authorize the judge to take cognizance of any claim annulled by the treaty, etc., in substance it is addressed to maintaining the invalidity of the excluded claims. The jurisdiction of the judge was no different from what it would have been if the proviso had declared that nothing in the act should be taken to validate or to authorize the recognition of any claim which the treaty declared void. We are of opinion that the judge had authority to find the claim to be fraudulent and maintained by improper means.

The decree "rejected" the claim upon the grounds which we have stated, and an opinion was expressed that the grant was not merely annulled by the treaty, but void under Spanish law. But the objection remains to be answered that even if "reject" was a proper term for the decree in such a case, and even if the jurisdiction to reject included authority to find that the claim had been saved from the treaty by fraud, still there was no jurisdiction to pass upon its validity apart from the treaty, and that, therefore, the claim now may be set up since the act of 1860 has brought it to life. The proviso in § 3 of the act of 1860, it may be said, refers to claims rejected on their merits, when all the merits as admitted by that act were open. We are of opinion that there is no reason for thus artificially narrowing words that on their face include all cases. They include as well any claim which previously had been rejected as fraudulent or maintained by improper means, when the fraud addressed itself to avoiding the treaty, as when it related to some other fact material to the validity of the claim at the time when it was created. The fraud went to the merits of the case. For, by the meaning of the act of 1828, as just explained, the date of the grant was as material to the validity of the claim as [429] the authority of the Captain General *of Cuba to convey on behalf of the King. Therefore it is our opinion that the claim is barred by the decree, even if it could escape from the other objections upon which we have found it unnecessary to pass.

Decree reversed.

NEW YORK FOUNDLING HOSPITAL,
Appt.,
v.
JOHN C. GATTI.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 429-441.)

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—in habeas corpus case.

A determination by the supreme court of the territory of Arizona in a habeas corpus case as to which custodian a child of tender years shall be committed to is not appealable to the Supreme Court of the United States under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1909, as a case "involving the question of personal freedom" within the meaning of that section.

[No. 21.]

Argued April 26, 1906. Decided December 3, 1906.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment on a writ of habeas corpus, awarding the care and custody of an infant to the respondent. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below (Ariz.) 79 Pac. 231. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. D. Cady Herrick argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles E. Miller and William C. Trull, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Walter Bennett argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The suit below was begun by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, by the New York Foundling Hospital, a corporation of the state of New York, against John C. Gatti, to command *said Gatti to produce [434] the body of one William Norton, an infant, and to show by what right he held such infant under his custody and control.

The petitioner set out in substance that, by its charter, granted by the legislature of New York, it was authorized to receive and NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Federal questions as sustaining appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court of the United States over territorial supreme courts.

I. Under act of March 3, 1885.

- a. In general.
- b. Questions respecting Federal law.
- c. Questions respecting Federal authority.
- d. Criminal cases.
- e. Habeas corpus cases.

II. Under statutes relating to particular courts.

I. Under act of March 3, 1885.

- a. In general.

Congress, by the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), § 2, invested the Fed-keep under its charge, custody, and control children of the age of two years or under, found in the city of New York, abandoned or deserted, and left in the crib or other receptacle of petitioner for foundlings, and to keep such children during infancy; that the child William Norton had come to it as a foundling within the terms of its charter; that the petitioner, on the 4th of October, 1901, to October 2, 1904, had the care, charge, custody, and management of said child; that on or about the 1st of October, 1904, petitioner placed the child in the home of a certain person in the town of Clifton, county of Graham, territory of Arizona, to be held and cared for by the said person in said home temporarily, and at all times subject to the supervision of the petitioner and its officers and agents; that at such time the petitioner had officers and agents of trained experience at the town of Clifton, with instructions to supervise said child and the care and management of it while temporarily in the charge and care of the said person as aforesaid; that at all times the petitioner had the right at will to withdraw the child from the care and charge of the said person, and retain the custody thereof, and continue to keep the said child in pursuance of law under its care, charge, custody, and management during the term of its infancy, as aforesaid.

Upon information and belief it charges that thereafter, and on or about the 2d day of October, 1904, one John C. Gatti, residing at the said town of Clifton, his servants eral Supreme Court with appellate jurisdiction. "without regard to the sum or value in dispute," over the supreme court of the District of Columbia and the territorial supreme courts in "any case wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under, the United States." Subsequently, by § 15 of the circuit courts of appeals act of March 3, 1891, the circuit courts of appeals were given appellate jurisdiction over the territorial supreme courts in cases in which the decisions of such circuit courts of appeals were made final by § 6 of that act, when reviewing judgments or decrees of the circuit or district courts. Such cases are those in which jurisdiction below depends solely upon citizenship or alienage and those arising under the patent laws, the revenue laws, or the criminal laws; also admiralty cases. The effect of these provisions on the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the territorial supreme courts was considered in Shute v. Keyser, 149 U. S. 649, 37 L. ed. 884, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960, where the court said: "There is nothing to indicate an intention that the judgments and decrees of the supreme court of the territories should not be susceptible of review in the class of cases in which there was no appeal or writ of error to the circuit courts of appeals. The result is, that as the acts regulating appeals or writs of error from or to the supreme courts of the territories to or from this court were not repealed, except to the extent specified, an appeal or writ of error lies to this court from the judgments or decrees of those courts except in cases where the judgments of the circuit courts of appeals are made final." And this conclusion was approved in Aztec Min. Co. v. Ripley, 151 U. S. 79, 38 L. ed. 80, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236.

The fact that the act of March 3, 1885, applies as well to the supreme court of the District of Columbia as to the territorial supreme courts, makes it advisable to consult div. VII. of the note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, post, 269, on the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts. In this connection may also well be considered, as pointed out in the note to which reference has just been made, decisions construing somewhat similar language in the statutes regulating writs of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to state courts. See divs. IV. b, IV. c, in note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

Any inferences which could be drawn from the holding in The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117, that the district court of Alaska was a territorial supreme court so far as appellate jurisdiction to review its judgments was concerned, can no longer arise since the enactment of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 414, chap. 786), which, in § 504, specially provides for the review of the judgments of that court in the Federal Supreme Court.

The words "without regard to the sum or value in dispute," as used in the act of March 3, 1885, refer only to the amount, and a matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value in money is essential to the exercise by the Supreme Court of the United States of the appellate jurisdiction conferred by this section. Albright v. New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 L. ed. 346, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, ante, 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. See also infra, I. d, Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 32 L. ed. 616, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253.

A suit in which the matter in dispute is the right of consignors to have a consignment shipped by a common carrier to its destination involves a valuable right, measurable in money, and therefore satisfies this requirement. New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. supra.

But the liability to a fine on a judgment of ouster in quo warranto proceedings, or the possible effect of such judgment in subsequent litigation over the emoluments of the and employees, unlawfully and with force and violence entered into the house of the said person, where, at the time of said unlawful entrance, the said child, William Norton, was, having been placed there as aforesaid, and forcibly, unlawfully and without right, took possession of said William Norton, and removed him hence to *the custody of the said John Gatti. That the said child has ever since said day been in the custody and under the control of the said Gatti, and that the said child is now restrained of its liberty by the said Gatti, without the consent or license of the petitioner, and against its desire, intention, and protest, and in violation of its rights under the laws of the state of New York, of the United States, and of the territory.

[435]

office, does not make the matter in dispute in the quo warranto proceedings after the term of office has expired measureable by some sum or value in money, and, thus bring the judgment within the scope of this statute. Albright v. New Mexico, supra.

b. Questions respecting Federal law.

The validity of a statute, as these words are used in the act of Congress of March 3, 1885, refers to the power of Congress to pass the particular statute at all, and not to mere judicial construction, as contradistinguished from a denial of the legislative power. Linford v. Ellison, 155 U. S. 503, 39 L. ed. 239, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

No question as to the validity of a Federal law arises, within the meaning of this statute, when its application to the cause only is involved. Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

The validity of a statute of the United States, within the meaning of this act, is drawn in question when the existence or constitutionality or legality of such statute is denied, and the denial forms the subject of direct inquiry. Linford v. Ellison, supra.

The decision of a territorial supreme court sustaining a territorial statute providing for verdicts by less than the whole number of jurors, on the ground that the organic act gave the territorial legislature unlimited legislative power, against the contention that the organic act as so construed violated the Federal Constitution, is reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States, as the question involved was not the construction, but the validity, of the territorial act, and this depended upon the validity of the act of Congress giving it the scope which the court attributed to it. Springville v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 41 L. ed. 1172, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.

See also infra, I. c.—New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. R. G. Co. 203 U. S. 38, ante, 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 39 L. ed. 447, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

256

The respondent made return and claimed to be entitled to the custody of the child named in the petition as the legally appointed guardian, duly qualified as such under letters of guardianship issued by the probate court of Graham county, Arizona. And further set forth in the return that the child in question is a white, Caucasian child; that the petitioner, on or about the 1st day of October, 1904, brought the said child to the territory of Arizona, and abandoned him to the keeping of a Mexican Indian, whose name is unknown to the respondent, but one financially unable to properly clothe, shelter, maintain, and educate said child, and, by reason of his race, mode of living, habits, and education, unfit to have the custody, care, and education of the child; that said

c. Questions respecting Federal authority.

The validity of an authority exercised under the United States is drawn in question within the meaning of this statute when the existence or constitutionality or legality of such authority is denied, and the denial forms the subject of direct inquiry. Linford v. Ellison, supra.

A controversy as to the constitutional right of a territorial legislature to pass a specified law under the broad legislative power conferred by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1851, involves the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, within the meaning of this statute. New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. supra.

A controversy as to the power of a territory, under its organic act, to tax that part of a railroad which is in an Indian reservation created by an act of Congress, presents a question as to the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, within the meaning of this statute. Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Arizona, supra. See also supra, I. b.—Springville v. Thomas.

Mandamus proceedings to check an alleged usurpation, by bodies claiming to constitute the legislative assembly of a territory, of the legislative power conferred by Congress upon such legislative assembly, draw in question the lawful existence of these bodies and, consequently, the validity of an authority which they have assumed, as the legislative assembly, to exercise under the United States. Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 33 L. ed. 945, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

A controversy as to the power of the governor of a territory, under its organic act, to appoint an auditor of public accounts in the place of one who has been elected as such officer, likewise presents a question respecting the validity of an authority exercised under the United States. Clayton v. Utah, 132 U. S. 632, 33 L. ed. 455, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

The validity of such an authority is not so drawn in question because it was contended that the territorial court miscon-person, to whom petitioner is alleged to have abandoned said child, voluntarily surrendered it to certain persons, who thereupon placed it in the care, custody, and control of respondent, who is a fit person for that purpose, and it will be to the best interest of the child that he be permitted to remain with the respondent, whose purpose and intention it is to rear, maintain, educate, and provide for said child as though he were his own.

203 U. S.

The petitioner traversed the return, and denied that the said minor was in the care, custody, and control of the respondent by virtue of letters of guardianship, and alleged that the said minor has been in the care, custody, and control of respondent Gatti by force and violence, and without authority of law or of any person legally authorized to place the child in the custody of the respondent.

The case came to trial on the issues of fact raised in the petition, return, and traverse thereof by the petitioner, and *the[436] testimony having been heard in open court, a final order was made, adjudging the said William Norton to be a minor of the age of two and one-half years, and that his best interests required that the said John C. Gatti have the care, custody, and control of said infant, who was thereupon remanded to the care, custody, and control of said respondent.

In the view which we take of the jurisdiction of this court to entertain the appeal in this case, it is unnecessary to construed the statute upon which the prosecution was based, and acted beyond the authority which it conferred. Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059. Jurisdiction could have been denied here, because the case was a criminal one. See infra, I. d.

A decision of a territorial supreme court so construing the organic law and the scope of the authority of the legislature as to deny to a small village with extensive corporate limits the right, under its charter, to tax farming lands for municipal purposes if they lie outside the platted portion and so far removed that the owner will derive no benefit from the municipal government, does not involve the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, so as to be reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States. Linford v. Ellison, 155 U. S. 503, 39 L. ed. 239, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

An authority exercised under the United States, within the meaning of this statute, is an authority exercised or claimed in favor of one of the parties to the cause, the validity of which was put in issue on the trial of the cause, and, hence, does not include an authority exercised by the United States in removing a fence inclosing public lands, pursuant to the judgment sought to be reviewed. Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

d. Criminal cases.

It was contended in Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 32 L. ed. 616, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253, that because the act of March 3, 1885, conferred appellate jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States over the supreme courts of the territories in cases involving the validity of a patent or copyright, or a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, "without regard to the sum or value in dispute," a writ of error would lie in a criminal case involving such a question; but the court held the contrary, saying that the statute clearly required that there be some pecuniary matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value. See also supra, I. a.,—Albright v. New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 L. ed. 346, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, ante, 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. And see infra, II.,—Watts v. Washington, 91 U. S. 580, 23 L. ed. 328; Snow v. United States, supra; New v. Oklahoma, 195 U. S. 252, 49 L. ed. 182, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

e. Habeas corpus cases.

Provision for a review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error or appeal of decisions of the territorial supreme courts upon writs of habeas corpus involving a question of personal freedom was made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1909. Snow v. United States, supra.

This provision was not repealed by the act of March 3, 1885, regulating appeals from the territorial supreme courts. Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 41 L. ed. 572, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

It was under this provision that the appeal in NEW YORK FOUNDLING HOSPITAL v. GATTI was attempted.

Except for this provision the rule would be the same as in cases coming up from the District of Columbia courts; see div. V. in note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, post, 269.

II. Under statutes relating to particular courts.

The act of March 3, 1885, has been so superseded by the admission of the various territories as states, as now to apply only to Arizona and New Mexico.

Special provisions relating to particular territorial supreme courts have existed, and, in a few instances, now exist.

A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the supreme court of the territory of Utah was authorized by the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 253, chap. 469), § 3, in criminal cases in which the accused was sentenced to capital punishment or convicted of bigamy or polygsider the elaborate findings of fact made in the supreme court of Arizona as the basis of its order, further than they bear upon the question of jurisdiction to entertain this appeal.

It was found that the children were taken into the territory by the representatives of the foundling hospital, to remain there and be placed in suitable homes in Arizona; but, by imposition practised upon the agents of the society, the children were distributed among persons wholly unfit to be intrusted with them, being, with one or two exceptions, half-breed Mexican Indians of bad character. That thereupon a committee was appointed from the citizens resident of the vicinity, who visited the homes of the persons having possession of the children, stating to them that they had been appointed by the American residents to take possession of the children, who were then voluntarily surrendered by such persons. The children were taken charge of by certain good women, and afterwards the child William Norton was given to the respondent, who has since had his care, custody, and control. This was done without the consent of the society or its agents. Afterwards letters of guardianship were issued to the respondent by the probate court of Graham county, Arizona. The petitioner took an appeal from the order granting the letters of guardianship to the district court of the county. Pending this appeal the petition for the writ of habeas corpus was filed.

The court, acting upon the principle that the best interests of the infant are controlling, awarded the care and custody thereof to the respondent (79 Pac. 231) and the petitioner took an appeal to this court.

*The jurisdiction of the supreme court[437] of the territory to issue the writ of habeas corpus is not called in question in this case.

We are met at the threshold with an objection to the appellate jurisdiction of this court. The appeal in such cases is allowed under cover of § 1909, Rev. Stat. Gonzales v. Cunningham, 164 U. S. 612, 41 L. ed. 572, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182. That section provides:

"Sec. 1909. Writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the supreme court of either of the territories of New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Dakota, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming shall be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath of either party, or of other competent witnesses, exceeds one

amy. Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059.

This provision did not authorize such a writ of error to review a conviction under the act of March 22, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 30, chap. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3633), § 3, of cohabiting with more than one woman. Snow v. United States, supra.

Special provision was made by the Revised Statutes for a review in the Supreme Court of the United States of the decisions of the supreme court of Washington territory "in all cases where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or acts of Congress are brought in question." Snow v. United States, supra.

The intimation in Watts v. Washington 91 U. S. 580, 23 L. ed. 328, that a criminal case involving such a question could be so reviewed, was held to be obiter in Farnsworth v. Montana, 129 U. S. 104, 32 L. ed. 616, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253. See this case as discussed supra, I. d.

Under a similar provision defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over the supreme court of the territory of Oregon, the Federal question must have been raised and decided in the court below, and must so appear in the record. Lownsdale v. Parrish, 21 How. 290, 16 L. ed. 80.

The appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the circuit courts was, by the act of May 2, 1890, § 9, made the measure of the appellate jurisdiction of the former court over the supreme court of Oklahoma territory, provided the jurisdictional amount was involved. New v. Oklahoma, 195 U. S. 252, 49 L. ed. 182, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

Lack of statutory authority precluded any such review in capital cases. Ibid.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States to review judgments of the courts of the territory of Hawaii is, under the act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339), § 86, to be measured by the power conferred upon the former court to review judgments of state courts. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

See note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts.

The dismissal, on motion, of a writ of error to the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii, which is governed by the principles controlling writs of error to state courts, will be ordered instead of granting a motion to affirm, where the subject-matter of the controversy is not inherently Federal, and the only Federal question raised has been so explicitly decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in accordance with the ruling of the lower court as to foreclose further argument on the subject. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, supra.

thousand dollars, except that a writ of error or appeal shall be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States from the decision of the supreme courts created by this title, or of any judge thereof, or of the district courts created by this title, or of any judge thereof, upon writs of habeas corpus involving the question of personal freedom."

The question is, therefore, is this a writ of habeas corpus "involving the question of personal freedom?" That this section of the statute does not permit appeals from all cases in which the writ is issued is manifest in the use of language in the act specifically limiting the right of review in this court to cases of writs which involve the question of personal freedom.

A brief consideration of the history and nature of the writ will, we think, make manifest the purpose of Congress in using this restrictive language giving the right of appeal. The writ is usually granted in order to institute an investigation into the illegal imprisonment or wrongful detention of one alleging himself to be unlawfully restrained of his liberty.

[438] The jurisdiction is conferred to enable the cause of restraint *to be inquired into, and the person imprisoned or wrongfully deprived of freedom restored to liberty.

The subject was discussed by Mr. Justice Miller in the case of Re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 34 L. ed. 500, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850, in which it was held that a district court of the United States has no authority to issue a writ of habeas corpus to restore an infant to the custody of its father when unlawfully detained by its grandparents.

Appended to that case, and printed by request of the members of the court, is an instructive opinion by Judge Betts, delivered in the case of Re Barry, United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, in which he reached the conclusion that a circuit court of the United States had no jurisdiction in habeas corpus to entertain a controversy as to the custody of a child when the father sought to compel the mother to deliver it to him,—a question not decided in Re Burrus. In the course of the discussion the learned judge points out the origin of the writ as a means of relief from arrest or forcible imprisonment, and its growth in later use as a means of determining the custody of children:

"There is no reason to doubt that originally the common-law writ was granted solely in cases of arrest and forcible imprisonment under color or claim of warrant of law.

"As late as 2 James II. the court expressly denied its allowance in a case of detention or restraint by a private person (Rex v. Drake, Comb. 35; 16 Vin. Abr. 213), and the habeas corpus act of Charles II., which is claimed as the Magna Charta of British liberty, has relation only to imprisonment on criminal charges (3 Bacon, Abr. 438, note).

"It is not important to inquire at what period the writ first was employed to place infant children under the disposal of courts of law and equity. This was clearly so in England, anterior to our Revolution (Rex v. Smith, 2 Strange, 982; Rex v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 1434; Blissets's Case, Lofft. 748), and the practice has been fully confirmed in the continued assertion of the authority by those courts unto the present day (King v. De Manneville, 5 East, 221; *De Manneville v. De Manneville, 10 Ves. Jr. 52; Ball v. [439] Ball, 2 Sim. 35; Ex parte Skinner, 9 J. B. Moore, 278; King v. Greenhill, 4 Ad. & El. 624); and this indifferently, whether the interposition of the court is demanded by the father or mother (4 Ad. & El. 624, ubi supra; 9 J. B. Moore, 278, ubi supra).

"The authority to take cognizance of the detention of infants by private persons, not held under claim or color or warrant of law, rests solely in England on the common law. It is one of the eminent prerogatives of the Crown, which implies in the monarch the guardianship of infants paramount to that of their natural parents. The royal prerogative, at first exercised personally ad libitum by the King (Kendall v. United States, 12 Pct. 630, 9 L. ed. 1223), and afterwards, for his relief, by special officers, as the Lord High Constable, the Lord High Admiral, and the Lord Chancellor, in process of time devolved upon the high courts of equity and law, and in them this exalted one, of allowing and enforcing the writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, became vested as an elementary branch of their jurisdiction. In the performance, however, of this high function in respect to the detention of infants by parents, etc., the court or judge still acts with submission to the original principle, out of which it sprang, that infants ought to be left where found, or be taken from that custody and transferred to some other, at the discretion of the prerogative guardian, and according to its opinion of their best interest and safety."

It was in the exercise of this jurisdiction as parens patriæ that the present case was heard and determined. It is the settled doctrine that in such cases the court exercises a discretion in the interest of the child to determine what care and custody are best for it in view of its age and requirements. Such cases are not decided on the legal right of the petitioner to be relieved from unlawful imprisonment or detention, as in the case of an adult, but upon the court's view of the best interests of those whose welfare requires that they be in custody of one person or another. In such cases the question [440] *of personal freedom is not involved except in the sense of a determination as to which custodian shall have charge of one not entitled to be freed from restraint. As was said by Sharkey, Ch. J., in [Foster v. Alston] 6 How. (Miss.) 472:

"An infant is not entitled to his freedom; an adult is. When a habeas corpus is granted to an adult, the object is to inquire whether he is legally restrained of his liberty; because if he is not, he must be set free, for the plain reason that by law he is entitled to his freedom. But if the court is also to set the infant free, they give him a right to which he is not entitled, and deprive the parent or guardian of a right to which he is entitled; to wit, the custody of the infant."

We think that such considerations as these induced Congress to limit the right of appeal to this court in habeas corpus cases. The discretionary power exercised in rendering the judgment, the ability of local tribunals to see and hear the witnesses and the rival claimants for custody of children, induced, in our opinion, the denial of appeal in such cases as the one at bar, as distinguished from those of a different character, where personal liberty is really involved, and release from illegal restraint—a high constitutional and legal right, not resting in the exercise of discretion—is sought, in which an appeal is given to this court.

In the present case there was no attempt to illegally wrest the custody of the child from its lawful guardian while temporarily in the territory of Arizona. The society voluntarily took the child there with the intention that it should remain. Through imposition the child was placed in custody of those unfit to receive or maintain control over it, and, as above stated, came into the custody and possession of the respondent.

The child was within the jurisdiction of the court under such circumstances that rival claimants of the right of custody might invoke the jurisdiction of a competent court of the territory to determine, not the right of personal freedom, but to which custodian a child of tender years should be committed. Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen, 321.

[441] *We do not think that the case comes within the provisions of § 1909, permitting an appeal to this court only in cases involving the question of personal freedom.

The appeal will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Mr. Justice Brewer took no part in the decision of this case.

HENRY A. CRANE, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CORNELIUS F. BUCKLEY, Rudolph Spreckles, and Timothy Hopkins, Dfts. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 441-448.)

Appeal—supersedeas—prosecuting to effect.

A party who, on appeal from a decree for the recovery of possession of real property unless the balance of the purchase price should be paid before January 1, 1899, secures an extension of the time for such payment until November 1, 1899, has so prosecuted his appeal to effect, within the meaning of a supersedeas bond to secure the adverse party from loss in the use and possession of the premises, as to preclude any recovery on such bond for the use and occupation of the property between those dates.

[No. 58.]

Argued and submitted October 25, 1906,
Decided December 3, 1906.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment affirming, on a second writ of error, a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California in favor of defendant in an action on a supersedeas bond. Affirmed.

See same case below, 70 C. C. A. 452, 138 Fed. 22. On first appeal, 59 C. C. A. 109, 123 Fed. 29.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles S. Cushing argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Grant, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The affirmance of the judgment by the upper court conclusively establishes the liability of the appellant on the bond.

Davis v. Patrick, 6 C. C. A. 632, 12 U. S. App. 629, 57 Fed. 909; Babbitt v. Finn, (Babbitt v. Shields) 101 U. S. 7, 25 L. ed. 820.

The term "prosecute to effect" means "prosecute with success."

10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 445; Perreau v. Bevan, 5 Barn. & C. 284; Gould v. Warner, 3 Wend. 54; Karthauss v. Owings, 6 Harr. & J. 138.

The construction placed upon this phrase, "prosecute with effect," by the bulk of authorities, is that the suit shall be prosecuted successfully to a final judgment.

Note to Howell v. Alma Mill Co. 38 Am. St. Rep. 706; Wood v. Thomas, 5 Blackf. 553; Trent v. Rhomberg, 66 Tex. 253, 18 S. W. 510; Seacord v. Morgan, 3 Keyes, 636; Gay v. Parpart, 101 U. S. 391, 25 L. ed. 841.

Where the judgment is affirmed wholly as to the right of recovery and partially as to the amount, or as to certain of the defendants, the sureties are still liable on their bond.

See note to Howell v. Alma Mill Co. 38 Am. St. Rep. 709.

An appeal is not prosecuted to effect unless the judgment is reversed in toto.

Butt v. Stinger, 4 Cranch, C. C. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 2,246; Hopkins v. Orr, 124 U. S. 510, 31 L. ed. 523, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.

Mr. Delphin Michael Delmas submitted the cause for defendants in error:

The right to remain in possession of the purchased premises is co-extensive with the right to pay the balance of the purchase price, and until that period of time has expired none of the rights of the vendee in and to the premises can, to any extent, or by any method except by agreement, be interfered with or prejudiced.

Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 91, 13 L.R.A. 187, 24 Pac. 608, 26 Pac. 789; Dingley v. Bank of Ventura, 57 Cal. 471; Avery v. Clark, 87 Cal. 619, 22 Am. St. Rep. 272, 25 Pac. 919; Sparks v. Hess, 15 Cal. 194; Purser v. Cady, 120 Cal. 218, 52 Pac. 489.

The only part of the decree entered in the lower court in the action in which the supersedeas bond was given with which the appellants in this case were or are concerned is that part relating to the possession of the property. This is apparent because, if the original decree had provided that Dr. Buckley should have until November 1, 1899, in which to complete the payment for the property, and that until the expiration of that time his rights to an interest in the premises involved in said suit should not be terminated, and that no writ of possession to oust him from the occupation thereof could be executed or issued, then there would be no consideration for a bond, for the reason he would have retained possession of the land, not because of any supersedeas bond, but because of his right so to do, created by his contract with Crane and the judgment of the court rendered thereon.

Powers v. Crane, 67 Cal. 65, 7 Pac. 135; Powers v. Chabot, 93 Cal. 266, 28 Pac. 1070; McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 98 Cal. 442, 33 Pac. 329.

Therefore, if the original decree was modified by this court so as to effect the same result, it must likewise follow that the appeal of Dr. Buckley to this court from the decree, so far as the right to remain in the possession of said property until November 1, 1899, was concerned, was prosecuted to effect, and no breach of the supersedeas bond occurred.

The surety's obligation is strictissimi juris, and he has a right to stand upon the precise terms of his contract.

Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490, 32 Pac. 563; People v. Buster, 11 Cal. 220; McDonald v. Fett, 49 Cal. 355; Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 543.

The following cases sustain the contention of defendants in error:

Heinlen v. Beans, 71 Cal. 295, 12 Pac. 167, 73 Cal. 240, 14 Pac. 855; Chase v. Ries, 10 Cal. 518; Daggett v. Mensch, 141 Ill. 396, 31 N. E. 153; Poppenhusen v. Seeley, 41 Barb. 450, Affirmed in 3 Keyes, 150; Perkins v. Spalding, 3 T. B. Mon. 12; Kibble v. Butler, 27 Miss. 587.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action upon a supersedeas bond, brought by the plaintiff in error, Henry A. Crane, against defendants in error, Cornelius F. Buckley, as principal, and Rudolph Spreckles and Timothy Hopkins, as sureties.

The bond was given in an action brought by Crane against Buckley in the superior court of Tulare county, California, removed to the United States circuit court of the southern district of California.

Crane brought suit to foreclose a contract for the sale of certain lands to Buckley and for the recovery of possession thereof. Upon answer and cross bill Buckley made the defense that the sale was procured by false and fraudulent statements and misrepresentations. The court found for complainant, Crane; that the charges of fraud were not sustained; that the rights, interests, and claims of Buckley in and to the property should be foreclosed, subject to the equitable privilege that if Buckley should pay to Crane prior to January 1, 1899, the unpaid portion of the purchase price and the interest thereon, with taxes and costs, Crane should convey to Buckley all the said real estate, pursuant to the agreement of purchase, and it was provided in said decree:

"And unless said respondent shall place on file herein some sufficient and satisfactory evidence that he has paid, or has tendered, and is able, ready, and willing to pay, to said complainant, Henry A. Crane, the amounts of money hereinbefore provided to be paid for the purchase of said property, on or *before the 1st day of [444] January, A. D. 1899, it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the clerk of this court do, on request of said complainant, Henry A. Crane, or of his counsel, issue a suitable and sufficient order or writ to the marshal of this court, and under the seal thereof, to remove said respondent, Cornelius F. Buckley, from the possession, use, and occupation of said real property, water ditches, water rights, and rights of way, and to place complainant, Henry A. Crane, or his legal representatives, in the exclusive possession, use, and occupation thereof."

This decree was entered on November 16, 1898; on December 16, 1898, Buckley appealed from the decree to the circuit court of appeals, and a supersedeas bond in the sum of $8,000, being the one in suit, was given. This bond is as follows:

"Whereas, the said respondent and cross-complainant is desirous of staying the execution of the said judgment so appealed from in so far as it relates to the possession of the land and premises involved therein, and is desirous of staying the execution of said judgment or decree, so appealed from, in so far as it relates to the costs awarded to complainant therein:

"Now, the condition of the above obligation is such that if the said C. F. Buckley shall prosecute his appeal to effect, and shall answer all damages and costs that have been and shall be awarded against him, if he fails to make his appeal good, and if he shall answer all damages that shall accrue to the said respondent by reason of the value of the use and occupation of the land and premises from the time of said appeal until the delivery of possession thereof to said Henry A. Crane, and for all waste committed thereon, then the above obligation to be void, else to remain in full force and effect."

October 2, 1899, the circuit court of appeals affirmed the decree. On October 19, 1899, Buckley having filed a petition for rehearing as to a part of the judgment given October 2, 1899, or for such modification thereof as would allow him until November 1, 1899, within which to make the payments required, the circuit court of appeals found:

[445] "The record does show that the appellant made large payments under the contract, and that he has made other large expenditures in the improvements of the property which was the subject of the contract. It is also true that the sums remaining due from the appellant under the contract were large. These payments, the decree of the court below, which was entered on the 16th day of November, 1898, required to be made prior to January 1, 1899, in order that the rights and interests of the appellant in the property be saved, which were by the decree otherwise forever foreclosed and ended.

262

Under the circumstances appearing in the record this court is of the opinion that it is equitable and just to allow the appellant until the 1st day of November, 1899, within which to make the payments required by the decree from which the appeal is taken, and, accordingly, it is ordered that the judgment of this court entered herein on the 2d day of October, 1899, be, and hereby is, so modified as to read: 'Cause remanded to the court below, with directions to substitute for the 1st day of January, 1899, the 1st day of November, 1899, within which the payments therein provided for are permitted to be made, and, as so modified, the decree is affirmed.'" 38 C. C. A. 688, 97 Fed. 980.

Upon mandate from the circuit court of appeals, this modification was entered in the circuit court.

Possession of the property was not in fact delivered till November 4, 1899. After the proceedings above recited, action was commenced on the bond to recover $8,000, the penalty thereof, for the alleged value of the use and occupation of the premises by Buckley, between January 1 and November 1, 1899, and waste.

On the first trial of the case in the circuit court a verdict of $5,000 was rendered against the present defendant in error, afterwards reduced to $3,000.

This judgment was reversed upon writ of error to the circuit court of appeals. 59 C. C. A. 109, 123 Fed. 29.

Upon a subsequent trial of the case, upon instructions following the ruling of the circuit court of appeals, a verdict and judgment were rendered in favor of the defendant in error. Another writ of error being taken to the circuit court of appeals, this judgment was affirmed, and the plaintiff in error brought the case here. [446]

The question in this case as presented here is briefly this: Can the plaintiff in error recover upon the supersedeas bond for the value of the use and occupation of the premises in question from January 1, 1899, to November 1, 1899? This was the period for which the circuit court of appeals, upon the application for rehearing, modified the decree so far as to extend the right of Buckley, one of the defendants in error, and the principal in the bond, to remain in possession of the premises, postponing the foreclosure of his rights therein until the end of the period named in the extension. The bond was given under cover of § 1000 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 712), which provides:

"Every justice or judge signing a citation on any writ of error shall, except in cases brought up by the United States or by direction of any department of the government, take good and sufficient security that the plaintiff in error or the appellant, shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, and, if he fail to make his plea good, shall answer all damages and costs where the writ is a supersedeas and stays execution, or all costs only where it is not a supersedeas as aforesaid."

203 U. S.

The object and purpose of this section and the bond given in pursuance thereof is to indemnify the party prevailing in the original suit against loss in the respects stated in the bond, by reason of an ineffectual attempt to reverse the holding of the trial court. The successful party in this case, the plaintiff, could not have the decree executed, so far as the possession of the property was concerned, after the supersedeas bond was given, and the purpose of that instrument was to secure him from loss during the time and to the extent that his hand was stayed from action. In order to keep the obligation of the bond it was necessary that the plaintiff in error should substantially reverse the judgment [447] or decree in the respects in *which the bond was indemnity. As was said by Mr. Chief Justice Waite, in Gay v. Parpart, 101 U. S. 391, 392, 25 L. ed. 841:

"If, on the final disposition of a writ of error or appeal, the judgment or decree brought under review is not substantially reversed, it is affirmed, and the writ of error or appeal has not been prosecuted with effect."

It is elementary that the obligation of sureties upon bonds is strictissimi juris and not to be extended by implication or enlarged construction of the terms of the contract entered into. What, then, was the attitude of the case when this appeal bond was given? The action had been brought to foreclose a contract of purchase. The defense had proved unavailing. The decree had provided that unless Buckley made the payments required by January 1, 1899, his right and interest in the property should be forever foreclosed, and a writ should issue to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

From this decree Buckley appealed, and, in order to prevent its execution, gave the bond in suit, which recites that he is desirous of staying the execution of the judgment appealed from in so far as it relates to the possession of the lands and premises involved, and as to costs, which are not now in controversy. Then comes the condition of the obligation, that the appellant shall prosecute his appeal to effect, and the undertaking that if he fails to make his appeal good he shall answer in damages which shall accrue by reason of the value of the use and occupation of the premises until the delivery of the possession thereof, and for waste committed thereon. The effect of this bond was to permit Buckley to remain in possession, and to require him to prosecute his appeal to effect; in default of which he and his sureties may be subjected to liability upon the bond.

What is meant by prosecuting his appeal to effect? It is an expression substantially equivalent to prosecuting his appeal with success; to make substantial and prevailing his attempt to reverse the decree or judgment awarded against him.

It is to be remembered that there is not involved in this suit *any right to recover [448] for use and occupation other than that between the dates of January 1, 1899, and November 1, 1899. This is the very time during which, by the modified decree entered by virtue of the order of the circuit court of appeals, the foreclosure of the contract was postponed and the defendant in error, Buckley, permitted to remain in possession of the premises.

As we have said, the appeal bond was to secure the plaintiff from loss in the use and possession of the premises, unless Buckley prosecuted his appeal to effect. It is manifest that the effect of the decree in the circuit court of appeals was to extend the time of rightful possession for the period covered in this suit. This right of possession, withheld from the plaintiff in error by the extension awarded in the court of appeals, was the essence of the thing for which the plaintiff in error was indemnified by the terms of the obligation. We cannot think it makes any legal difference in the liability of the sureties upon the bond that Buckley did not pay the balance of the purchase money within the time of the extension. The effect of the decree was to extend the right of possession and to prevent a foreclosure of his rights after January 1, 1899, until the date named,—November 1, 1899.

This extended right of possession and postponement of foreclosure to November 1, 1899, Buckley gained by the appeal, which, in our view, he thus prosecuted to effect; or, what is another way of saying the same thing, to a successful issue upon the very thing—the wrongful possession of the property—against which the plaintiff in error was indemnified by the terms of the obligation sued upon. In this view of the case the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

449] *Ex parte ABRAHAM C. WISNER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 449-461.)

Removal of causes—diverse citizenship—non-residence of both parties—consent.

1. A suit which, by reason of the non-residence of both parties, could not have been brought in the Federal circuit court in the first instance, cannot be removed to that court from a state court, under the acts of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373), and August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), on the ground of diverse citizenship, at least where the plaintiff resists such removal, even if the consent of both parties could confer jurisdiction.

Mandamus—to remand case to state court.

2. Mandamus, rather than prohibition, is the proper remedy where the circuit court of the United States refuses to remand to the state court from which it was removed a case over which the Federal court has no jurisdiction.

[Nos. 9, 10, Original.]

Submitted May 14, 1906. Decided December 10, 1906.

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to compel the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Missouri to remand a cause to the Circuit Court of the City of St. Louis, from which it was removed. Awarded. Also a PETITION for a writ of prohibition to stay proceedings in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Missouri in a cause alleged to have been removed improperly to that court from the Circuit Court of the City of St. Louis. Dismissed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Abram C. Wisner, a citizen of the state of Michigan, commenced an action at law, on February 17, A. D. 1906, in the circuit court in and for the city of St. Louis and state of Missouri, against John D. Beardsley, a citizen of the state of Louisiana, by filing a petition, together with an affidavit on which that court issued a writ of attachment, in the usual form, directed to the sheriff of St. Louis. The sheriff returned no property found, but that he had garnished the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, a corporation of Missouri, and also had served Beardsley with summons in the city of St. Louis.

Saturday, March 17, A. D. 1906, the garnishee answered, and on the same day Beardsley filed his petition to remove the action from the state court into the circuit court of the United States for the eastern division of the eastern district of Missouri, on the ground of diversity of citizenship, together *with the bond required in such[450] case. An order of removal was thereupon entered by the state court and the transcript of record was filed in the circuit court of the United States.

Monday, March 19, Wisner moved to remand in these words:

"Now at this day comes plaintiff, by his attorneys, Jones, Jones, & Hocker, and appearing specially for the purposes of this motion only, saving and reserving any and all objections which he has to the manifold imperfections in the mode, manner, and method of the removal papers, and expressly denying that this court has jurisdiction of this cause, or of the plaintiff therein, respectfully moves the court to remand this cause to the circuit court of the city of St. Louis, from whence it was removed, for the reason that this suit does not involve a controversy or dispute properly within the jurisdiction of this court, and that it appears upon the face of the record herein that the plaintiff is a citizen and resident of the state of Michigan and the defendant a citizen and resident of the state of Louisiana, and the cause is not one within the original jurisdiction of this court; hence this court cannot acquire jurisdiction by removal."

The motion was heard and denied April 2, 1906, the circuit court referring to Foult v. Gray, 120 Fed. 156, and Rome Petroleum & Iron Co. v. Hughes Specialty Well Drilling Co. 130 Fed. 585, as representing the different views of the courts below on the question involved.

On April 23, Wisner applied to this court for leave to file a petition for mandamus as well as a petition for prohibition; leave was granted, and rules entered, returnable May 14, 1906, and the cases submitted on the returns to the rules.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington, James C. Jones, and H. S. Mecartney submitted the cause for petitioner. Messrs. C. G. B. Drummond, NOTE.—On removal of causes in cases of diverse citizenship—see notes to Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 L.R.A. 65; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Huskins v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 3 L.R.A. 545; Bierbower v. Miller, 9 L.R.A. 228; Brodhead v. Shoemaker, 11 L.R.A. 567; Delaware R. Constr.

Co. v. Meyer, 25 L. ed. U. S. 593; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

On the distinction between prohibition and mandamus—see note to Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 56.

Oliver & Mecartney, Jones, Jones, & Hocker were on the brief:

The record shows that neither of the parties to the suit involved in this application resided in the eastern judicial district of Missouri, so that it could not have been maintained in that court if it had been brought there originally by original process.

Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. (Ex parte Shaw) 145 U. S. 444, 448, 449, 36 L. ed. 768, 770, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 43, 44, 33 L. ed. 834, 835, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 636, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McBride, 141 U. S. 128, 129, 35 L. ed. 660, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 982.

In order to make a suit removable under this section of the act it must be one which the plaintiff could have brought originally in the United States circuit court to which it would be removed, by original process.

Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 245, 246, 49 L. ed. 464, 465, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson. 157 U. S. 208, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Cochran v. Montgomery County, 199 U. S. 272, 50 L. ed. 188, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48-64, 48 L. ed. 870-878, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 640, 47 L. ed. 632, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 459, 460, 37 L. ed. 808, 809, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 883, 977; Sweeney v. Carter Oil Co. 199 U. S. 252, 50 L. ed. 178, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 943, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 701, 702, 34 L. ed. 1080, 1081, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Neel v. Pennsylvania Co. 157 U. S. 153, 154, 39 L. ed. 654, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 198, 38 L. ed. 687, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 99, 42 L. ed. 675, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 28 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

The only districts in which a defendant can be sued under the act of 1888 are that of the residence of the plaintiff and that of the residence of the defendant (Smith v. Lyon, supra; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 44, 33 L. ed. 834, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, supra; Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. [Ex parte Shaw] 145 U. S. 448, 449, 36 L. ed. 770, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935), and such district is, therefore, the only
203 U. S.

"proper district," within the meaning of the 1st section of the act.

This case does not fall within the principle of the cases which apply when the question of waiver is raised by suit being brought originally in the Federal court.

Central Trust Co. v. McGeorge, 151 U. S. 134, 38 L. ed. 100, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. (Ex parte Shaw) 145 U. S. 453, 36 L. ed. 772, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

Prohibition is a proper remedy.

2 Coke, Inst., title Articuli Cleri, 602; Carter v. Southall, 3 Mees. & W. 126; Re Alix, 166 U. S. 137, 41 L. ed. 948, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 173, 29 L. ed. 601, 602, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Ex parte Easton, 95 U. S. 77, 24 L. ed. 376; Re Morrison (Morrison v. District Court) 147 U. S. 36, 37 L. ed. 68, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Re Fassett, 142 U. S. 486, 35 L. ed. 1089, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Re Cooper, 143 U. S. 495, 36 L. ed. 239, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; United States v. Hoffman, 4 Wall. 161, 18 L. ed. 355; Re Huguley Mfg. Co. 184 U. S. 301, 46 L. ed. 551, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Ex parte Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 175, 176, 27 L. ed. 895, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Bronson v. Lacrosse & M. R. Co. 1 Wall. 408, 17 L. ed. 618; Fitzherbert, Nat. Brev. (46a) *108; Jones v. Owen, 18 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 8; Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 625, 626, 30 L. ed. 274, 280, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 65, 66, 48 L. ed. 878, 879, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Neel v. Pennsylvania Co. supra; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 461, 38 L. ed. 514, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 143, 37 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192, 198, 38 L. ed. 685, 687, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835.

Even if your petitioner had a remedy by appeal or error, yet it must be an adequate remedy to bar it from a right to the writ of prohibition under the facts shown by the petition for removal and record in the suit involved in this proceeding.

Re Huguley Mfg. Co. supra; Re Atlantic City R. Co. 164 U. S. 633, 41 L. ed. 579, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The writ of mandamus is also a proper remedy for the assumption and exercise of excess of jurisdiction complained of in this proceeding, and more especially for causing the doing of that which it is the court's duty to do under the circumstances by express command of the law, and affording affirmative relief.

Virginia v. Rives (Ex parte Virginia) 100 U. S. 323, 25 L. ed. 671; Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 364, 377, 19 L. ed. 214, 219; Virginia

v. Paul, 148 U. S. 123, 37 L. ed. 392, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Gaines v. Rugg (Gaines v. Caldwell) 148 U. S. 243, 37 L. ed. 437, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

Messrs. John M. Moore, Edward C. Eliot, and George H. Williams submitted the cause for respondent:

Jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States is conferred by the first clause of § 1 of the judiciary acts of 1887, 1888, and the subsequent clause of said section merely limits the venue of suits, i. e., confers a special privilege on a defendant.

McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 41, 33 L. ed. 833, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Davidson v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. ed. 672, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

The clause of § 1, providing that suit shall only be brought in the district of either the residence of the plaintiff or the defendant, is a special and personal privilege, inuring to the benefit of the defendant,—a privilege which may be waived.

Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 853; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McBride, 141 U. S. 131, 35 L. ed. 661, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 982; Central Trust Co. v. McGeorge, 151 U. S. 131, 38 L. ed. 99, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

The right of removal is given wholly to the defendant, without any reference in a remote degree to the plaintiff or his wishes; so no waiver on the part of the plaintiff is necessary or proper.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Sundry Ins. Cos. 108 Fed. 452.

The cases supporting the right of removal are:

Vinal v. Continental Constr. & Improv. Co. 34 Fed. 229; Rome Petroleum & Iron Co. v. Hughes Specialty Well Drilling Co. 130 Fed. 585; Morris v. Clark Constr. Co. 140 Fed. 756; American Finance Co. v. Bostwick, 151 Mass. 19, 23 N. E. 656.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

By article 3 of the Constitution the judicial power of the United States was "vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish."

And the judicial power was extended "to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects."

The Supreme Court alone possesses jurisdiction derived immediately from the Constitution, and of which the legislative power cannot deprive it (United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 3 L. ed. 259); but the jurisdiction of the circuit courts depends upon some act of Congress (Turner v. Bank of North America, 4 Dall. 8, 10, 1 L. ed. 718, 719; McIntire v. Wood, 7 Cranch, 504, 506, 3 L. ed. 420, 421; Sheldon v. Sill, 8 How. 441, 448, 12 L. ed. 1147, 1150; Stevenson v. Fain, 195 U. S. 165, 167, 49 L. ed. 142, 143, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6). In the latter case we said: "The use of the word 'controversies' as in contradistinction to the word 'cases,' and the omission of the word 'all' in respect of controversies, left it to Congress to define the controversies over which the courts it was empowered to ordain and establish might exercise jurisdiction, and the manner in which it was to be done."

The 1st section of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 522, chap. 373), as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. *at L. 433, chap. 866), amended §§ 1, [456] 2, and 3 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), as follows:

"That the circuit courts of the United States shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of two thousand dollars, and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, or in which controversy the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different states, in which the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value aforesaid; . . . But no person shall be arrested in one district for trial in another in any civil action before a circuit or district court; and no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant; but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different states, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant; . . .

"Sec. 2. That any suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given original jurisdiction by the preceding section, which may now be pending; or which may hereafter be brought, in any state court, may be removed by the defendant or defendants therein to the circuit court of the United States for the proper district. Any other suit of a civil nature, at law or in equity, of which the circuit courts of the United States are given jurisdiction by the preceding section and which are now pending, or which may hereafter be brought, in any state court, may be removed into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district by the [457] defendant *or defendants therein, being non-residents of that state. And when, in any suit mentioned in this section, there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove said suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district. And where a suit is now pending, or may be hereafter brought, in any state court, in which there is a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, any defendant, being such citizen of another state, may remove such suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district, at any time before the trial thereof, when it shall be made to appear to said circuit court that, from prejudice or local influence, he will not be able to obtain justice in such state court, . . .

"Whenever any cause shall be removed from any state court into any circuit court of the United States, and the circuit court shall decide that the cause was improperly removed, and order the same to be remanded to the state court from whence it came, such remand shall be immediately carried into execution, and no appeal or writ of error from the decision of the circuit court so remanding such cause shall be allowed."

Section 3, as amended, provided for petition and bond for "the removal of such suit into the circuit court to be held in the district where such suit is pending."

As it is the nonresident defendant alone who is authorized to remove, the circuit court for the proper district is evidently the circuit court of the district of the residence of the plaintiff.

And it is settled that no suit is removable under § 2 unless it be one that plaintiff could have brought originally in the circuit court. Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. David- son, 157 U. S. 208, 39 L. ed. 675, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Cochran v. Montgomery County, 199 U. S. 272, 50 L. ed. 188, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

*In Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. (Ex parte [458] Shaw) 145 U. S. 444, 446, 36 L. ed. 768, 770, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935, 936, Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court, in disposing of the question whether, under § 1, "a corporation incorporated in one state of the Union, and having a usual place of business in another state in which it has not been incorporated, may be sued in a circuit court of the United States held in the latter state, by a citizen of a different state," said:

"This question, upon which there has been a diversity of opinion in the circuit courts, can be best determined by a review of the acts of Congress, and of the decisions of this court, regarding the original jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States over suits between citizens of different states.

"In carrying out the provision of the Constitution which declares that the judicial power of the United States shall extend to controversies 'between citizens of different states,' Congress, by the judiciary act of September 24, 1789, chap. 20, § 11, conferred jurisdiction on the circuit court of suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, 'between a citizen of the state where the suit is brought and a citizen of another state,' and provided that 'no civil suit shall be brought' 'against an inhabitant of the United States,' 'in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, or in which he shall be found at the time of serving the writ.' 1 Stat. at L. 78, 79."

And, after observations in relation to the use of the word "inhabitant" in that act, and referring to the act of May 4, 1858 (11 Stat. at L. 272, chap. 27), § 1, and the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), § 1, Mr. Justice Gray thus continued:

"The act of 1887, both in its original form, and as corrected in 1888, re-enacts the rule that no civil suit shall be brought against any person in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, but omits the clause allowing a defendant to be sued in the district where he is found, and adds this clause: 'But where the jurisdiction [of either] is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different states, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of *either the plaintiff or the [459] defendant.' 24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373; 25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508. As has been adjudged by this court, the last clause is by way of proviso to the next preceding clause, which forbids any suit to be brought in any other district than that whereof the defendant is an inhabitant; and the effect is that 'where the jurisdiction is founded upon any of the causes mentioned in this section, except the citizenship of the parties, it must be brought in the district of which the defendant is an inhabitant; but where the jurisdiction is founded solely upon the fact that the parties are citizens of different states, the suit may be brought in the district in which either the plaintiff or the defendant resides.' McCormick Harvesting Co. v. Walthers, 134 U. S. 41, 43, 33 L. ed. 833, 834, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. And the general object of this act, as appears upon its face, and as has been often declared by this court, is to contract, not to enlarge, the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States. Smith v. Lyon, 133 U. S. 315, 320, 33 L. ed. 635, 637, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 454, 34 L. ed. 738, 740, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 459, 467, 35 L. ed. 1079, 1082, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

"As to natural persons, therefore, it cannot be doubted that the effect of this act, read in the light of earlier acts upon the same subject, and of the judicial construction thereof, is that the phrase 'district of the residence of' a person is equivalent to 'district whereof he is an inhabitant,' and cannot be construed as giving jurisdiction, by reason of citizenship, to a circuit court held in a state of which neither party is a citizen, but, on the contrary, restricts the jurisdiction to the district in which one of the parties resides, within the state of which he is a citizen; and that this act, therefore, having taken away the alternative, permitted in the earlier acts, of suing a person in the district 'in which he shall be found,' requires any suit, the jurisdiction of which is founded only on its being between citizens of different states, to be brought in the state of which one is a citizen, and in the district therein of which he is an inhabitant and resident."

In short, the acts of 1887, 1888 restored the rule of 1789, as we stated in Cochran v. Montgomery County, supra.

[460] *In the present case neither of the parties was a citizen of the state of Missouri, in which state the suit was brought, and, therefore, it could not have been brought in the circuit court in the first instance.

Wisner did not, of choice, select the state court as the forum, since he could not have sued in the circuit court under the act, because neither he nor Beardsley was a citizen of Missouri. And the question of jurisdiction relates to the time of commencing the suit.

268

But it is contended that Beardsley was entitled to remove the case to the circuit court, and as, by his petition for removal, he waived the objection so far as he was personally concerned that he was not sued in his district, hence that the circuit court obtained jurisdiction over the suit. This does not follow, inasmuch as, in view of the intention of Congress by the act of 1887 to contract the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, and of the limitations imposed thereby, jurisdiction of the suit could not have obtained, even with the consent of both parties. As we have heretofore remarked: "Jurisdiction as to the subject-matter may be limited in various ways as to civil and criminal cases; cases at common law or in equity or in admiralty; probate cases, or cases under special statutes; to particular classes of persons; to proceedings in particular modes; and so on." Louisville Trust Co. v. Cominger, 184 U. S. 18, 25, 46 L. ed. 413, 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293. In Central Trust Co. v. McGeorge, 151 U. S. 129, 38 L. ed. 98, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286, it was assumed, however, that the requirement that no suit should be brought in any other district than that of the plaintiff or of the defendant might be waived, where neither resided therein, because, in that case, the nonresident plaintiff had sued in the circuit court and the nonresident defendant had answered on the merits, which showed the consent of both parties, and not unnaturally led to the result announced, while in this case there was no such consent. As was stated by Mr. Justice Brewer, in Kinney v. Columbia Sav. & L. Asso. 191 U. S. 78, 82, 48 L. ed. 103, 105, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, 32: "A petition and bond for removal are in the nature of process. They *constitute the [461] process by which the case is transferred from the state to the Federal court." When, then, Beardsley filed his petition for removal, he sought affirmative relief in another district than his own. But plaintiff, in resisting the application, and moving to remand, denied the jurisdiction of the circuit court. In St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McBride, 141 U. S. 127, 35 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 982, where the plaintiffs were citizens and residents of the western district of Arkansas, and commenced their action in the circuit court of the United States for the district, and the defendant was a corporation and citizen of the state of Missouri, it was held that, as the defendant appeared and pleaded to the merits, he thereby waived his right to challenge thereafter the jurisdiction of the court over him, on the ground that the suit had been brought in the wrong district. And there are many other cases to the same effect.

Our conclusion is that the case should have been remanded; and, as the circuit court had no jurisdiction to proceed, that mandamus is the proper remedy.

203 U. S.

Mandamus awarded; petition for prohibition dismissed.

Mr. Justice Brewer concurred in the result.

UNITED STATES ex rel. REBECCA J. TAYLOR, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM H. TAFT, Secretary of War.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 461-465.)

Error to District of Columbia court of appeals—question respecting Federal authority.

The validity of an authority exercised under the United States was not drawn in question so as to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, under D. C. Code (31 Stat. at L. 1189, 1227, chap. 854), § 233, by a petition for mandamus to compel the restoration to her position in the classified civil service of a clerk whose contention is not that the President and his representatives were without authority to dismiss her, but that her dismissal was illegal because the requisite formalities prescribed by the civil service regulations were not observed.

[No. 300.]

Submitted November 19, 1906. Decided December 10, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, denying a writ of mandamus to compel the restoration of a clerk to her former position in the classified civil service. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 24 App. D. C. 95.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

*Relator was, on May 12, 1902, a clerk in [462]

NOTE.—The appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts.

- I. In general.
- II. Mode of review.
 - a. Writ of error or appeal.
 - b. Cases certified; certiorari.
- III. Finality of determination.
- IV. Jurisdictional amount†
- V. Habeas corpus cases.
- VI. Criminal cases.
- VII. Cases involving Federal questions.
 - a. In general.
 - b. Patent and copyright cases.
 - c. Questions respecting Federal law or treaty.
 - d. Questions respecting Federal authority.

I. In general.

Congress by the act of February 27, 1801 (2 Stat. at L. 106, chap. 15, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), § 8, authorized a review by writ of error or appeal in the Supreme Court of the United States of "any final judgment, order, or decree" of the circuit court of the District of Columbia, "wherein the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the value of $100," to be prosecuted "in the same manner, under the same regulations, and the same proceedings shall be had therein, as is or shall be provided in the case of writs of error on judgments or appeals upon orders or decrees rendered in the circuit court of the United States." This last clause did not determine the nature of the "case" reviewable, but only indicated the mode in which a case might be brought up for review. Ormsby v. Webb, 203 U. S.

134 U. S. 47, 33 L. ed. 805, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

And when a supreme court for the District was established by the act of March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. at L. 764, chap. 91), a review of its judgments, orders, and decrees in the Federal Supreme Court was authorized by § 11 in the same cases and in like manner as was then provided in reference to the judgments, orders, and decrees of the circuit courts for the District. Brown v. Wiley, 4 Wall. 165, 18 L. ed. 384.

Under this statute the Federal Supreme Court could revise the judgments of the supreme court of the District, sitting as a district court of the United States, only after they had been reviewed by the supreme court of the District, sitting as a circuit court. Garnett v. United States, 11 Wall. 256, 20 L. ed. 79.

Later, by the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), § 2, Congress extended this appellate jurisdiction to cases, "without regard to the sum or value in dispute" (see, however, infra, IV.) in which the validity of a patent or copyright was involved, or in which was drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States. And when the circuit court of appeals for the District of Columbia was created by the act of February 9, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court was, by § 8, defined in practically the same terms. The present statute, which is, in effect, a re-enactment of the last-named section (Sinclair v. District of Columbia, 192 U. S. 16, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212; Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia [Metropolitan R. Co.

the classified civil service of the United States, and employed in the War Department. On that day an article purporting to be signed by her, and making very serious reflections on the President of the United States, appeared in a newspaper published at Washington. Some days thereafter the Secretary of War directed that relator be called upon to state whether she was the author of the publication, and, if so, it was ordered that her attention should be invited to § 8 of civil service rule II., and that she be allowed three days in which to submit any answer or statement she might wish to make.

To this relator answered, admitting that she was the author of the article, but insisting that she had not been notified of any charge calling for answer under the rule.

Thereupon the Secretary entered an order dismissing her from the service, and filed a memorandum assigning as reason therefor the publication of the article.

Relator then filed her petition for mandamus in the supreme court of the District, to compel the Secretary to restore her. The petition recited §§ 3 and 8 of civil service rule II., and assigned as grounds of relief that the procedure was not in conformity with the executive regulations set out, in that no reasons for removal had been furnished relator, and also in that the real reason of her removal was because of her political opinions and the expression of them.

v. Macfarland] 195 U. S. 322, 49 L. ed. 219, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28), reads as follows: "Any final judgment or decree of the court of appeals may be re-examined and affirmed, reversed, or modified by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of error or appeal in all cases in which the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the sum of $5,000, in the same manner and under the same regulations as existed in cases of writs of error on judgments or appeals from decrees rendered in the supreme court of the District of Columbia on February 9, 1893, and also in cases, without regard to the sum or value of the matter in dispute, wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States." 31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854, § 233.

Provision for a review by certiorari (see infra, II. b.) in cases not falling within this section is made by the succeeding section, which is a re-enactment of the act of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 692, chap. 390, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 574).

The affirmative description of this appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States must be understood as a regulation prescribed by Congress, which prohibits the exercise of other powers than those described. United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 2 L. ed. 397.

The words "any final judgment, order, or decree" in the statute defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the circuit court for the District of Columbia were held, in Custiss v. Georgetown & A. Turnp. Co. 6 Cranch, 233, 3 L. ed. 209, to embrace an appeal from an order quashing an inquisition in the nature of a writ ad quod damnum.

And such statute authorized a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to review a judgment of the circuit court of the District of Columbia awarding a peremptory mandamus to restore an office, where the requisite jurisdictional amount was involved. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelwright, 7 Wheat. 535, 5 L. ed. 516.

A decision of the court below upon an agreed case could also be reviewed by writ of error. United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291, 10 L. ed. 968.

And an appeal lay from a final decree of the circuit court of the District of Columbia affirming a decree of the orphans' court of Alexandria county, which dismissed a petition to revoke the probate of a will. Carter v. Cutting, 8 Cranch, 251, 3 L. ed. 553.

A proceeding in the supreme court of the District of Columbia involving the validity, as a last will and testament, of an instrument offered for probate, and its admission to probate, was a "case," final judgment in which could be reviewed in the United States Supreme Court by writ of error if the value of the matter in dispute was sufficient. Ormsby v. Webb, supra.

A judgment of the supreme court of the District of Columbia confirming an assessment for damages sustained by reason of the use of a street by a railroad company in front of a church could also be reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Sixth Presby. Church, 19 Wall. 62, 22 L. ed. 97.

And the Federal Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction was not defeated by any limitations on the right to appeal contained in the Maryland or Virginia laws.

Thus, the Federal Supreme Court had jurisdiction of an appeal from a decree of a circuit court in the District of Columbia, affirming a judgment of the orphans' court, although, by the Maryland laws, the decision of a court of chancery or law on an appeal from the orphans' court was made final and conclusive. Nicholls v. Hodges, 1 Pet. 562, 7 L. ed. 263; Carter v. Cutting, supra.

And a writ of error lay from the Federal Supreme Court to the supreme court of the District of Columbia, although the proceedings were governed by a statute of Maryland which did not provide for appeal or writ of error. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Sixth Presby. Church, supra.

So, the saving clause in the statute, authorizing appeals from the circuit court of the District of Columbia to the Supreme Court of the United States, that nothing

The Secretary answered the petition, setting out the facts in detail, denying that relator was removed on account of her political opinions, and averring that the action was taken because of the publication of the article, containing derogatory and disrespectful statements of and concerning the President of the United States in relation to his conduct as Commander in Chief, and which he decided "was prejudicial to order and the efficiency of said War Department, and such offense as rendered the further connection of the petitioner with said service incompatible with the best interests of the same." And while insisting that all

[463] acts done or caused to be done by *him were in conformity with the civil service rules, therein contained shall impair any corporate rights, only saved existing rights, and therefore did not give the bank of Alexandria in that court the exemption from appeals from judgments in its favor which that corporation enjoyed under its charter in the Virginia courts. Young v. Bank of Alexandria, 4 Cranch, 384, 2 L. ed. 655.

II. Mode of review.

a. Writ of error or appeal.

A proceeding in the supreme court of the District of Columbia involving the original probate of a last will and testament was not strictly a proceeding in equity, and might be brought up to the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error. Ormsby v. Webb, 134 U. S. 47, 33 L. ed. 805, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Campbell v. Porter, 162 U. S. 478, 40 L. ed. 1044, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871.

Writ of error, and not appeal, is the only mode of reviewing a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia sustaining an assessment and award in condemnation proceedings instituted under the act of Congress of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 668, chap. 810), in view of the provision of D. C. Code, § 233 (31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854), that the power to review judgments or decrees of that court is to be exerted only in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as prevailed before its organization in cases of writs of error to, or appeals from, the supreme court of that District. Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia (Metropolitan R. Co. v. Macfarland) 195 U. S. 322, 49 L. ed. 219, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

Exceptions to an accounting by an executrix in the supreme court of the District of Columbia sitting as an orphans' court make a case for equitable cognizance, and the decree of the court of appeals approving the final account is properly reviewed in the Supreme Court by appeal rather than by writ of error. Kenaday v. Sinnott, 179 U. S. 606, 45 L. ed. 339, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

203 U. S.

the Secretary submitted that the petitioner showed by her petition "no vested right, title, or interest in or to the employment formerly exercised by her in the office of the Adjutant General of the United States Army, and that the relation of such petitioner, as an employee, to the executive civil service, in respect of appointment, promotion, and removal, is a matter wholly within the competence and cognizance of the political department, and the action of the head of an executive department in respect thereof is not subject to be reviewed, reversed, set aside, or controlled by a court of law, nor can his action in that behalf be commanded, directed, or compelled by the

b. Cases certified; certiorari.

The practice of certifying to the Federal Supreme Court a division of opinion of the judges of a circuit court upon a question arising in the cause had no application to the circuit court for the District of Columbia. Ross v. Triplett, 3 Wheat. 600, 4 L. ed. 469.

By the act of March 3, 1897, the Supreme Court of the United States was authorized to issue writs of certiorari in cases made final in the court of appeals in the District of Columbia, to bring them up for review and determination, and this provision was carried forward into § 234 of the Code of the District of Columbia (31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854). Sinclair v. District of Columbia, 192 U. S. 16, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

III. Finality of determination.

The general principle governing the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, that only final adjudications are reviewable by appeal or writ of error, is, of course, applicable. Ross v. Triplett, supra; Van Ness v. Van Ness, 6 How. 62, 12 L. ed. 344; Brown v. Wiley, 4 Wall. 165, 18 L. ed. 384; Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bradley (Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Washington) 7 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 274; Benjamin v. Dubois, 118 U. S. 46, 30 L. ed. 52, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Grant v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 121 U. S. 118, 30 L. ed. 909, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; District of Columbia v. McBlair, 124 U. S. 320, 31 L. ed. 449, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547; Hume v. Bowie, 148 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 438, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Hollander v. Fechheimer, 162 U. S. 326, 40 L. ed. 985, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 795; Kenaday v. Sinnott, supra; Macfarland v. Brown, 187 U. S. 239, 47 L. ed. 159, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Macfarland v. Byrnes, 187 U. S. 246, 47 L. ed. 162, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Clark v. Roller, 199 U. S. 541, 50 L. ed. 300, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Warner v. Grayson, 200 U. S. 257, 50 L. ed. 470, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 writ of mandamus, as the petitioner in her said petition has prayed."

Relator filed a demurrer to the answer, which was overruled, whereupon she elected to stand by the demurrer, and judgment was entered denying the writ. The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals (24 App. D. C. 95), and this writ of error then sued out.

Solicitor General Hoyt in support of motion to dismiss:

The motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction should be granted.

South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871;

U. S. 241, 46 L. ed. 1145, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

IV. Jurisdictional amount.

See also infra, V.,—Perrine v. Slack, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. ed. 510, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; VI.,—United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 2 L. ed. 397; Sinclair v. District of Columbia, supra.

The jurisdictional amount necessary to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over the circuit court of the District of Columbia was originally fixed at $100. Wise v. Columbia Turnp. Co. 7 Cranch, 276, 3 L. ed. 341; Carter v. Cutting, 8 Cranch, 251, 3 L. ed. 553.

This amount was afterwards increased to $1,000. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelright, 7 Wheat. 535, 5 L. ed. 516; Nicholls v. Hodges, 1 Pet. 562, 7 L. ed. 263; Lee v. Lee, 8 Pet. 48, 8 L. ed. 862; Pierce v. Cox, 9 Wall. 786, 19 L. ed. 786.

And when the supreme court for the District was established the jurisdictional amount was left unchanged. Keogh v. Orient F. Ins. Co. 154 U. S. 639, Appx. and 24 L. ed. 650.

But the jurisdictional amount was raised to $2,500 by the act of February 25, 1879 Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398, 25 L. ed. 231; Bank of the Republic v. Millard (National Bank v. Miller) 154 U. S. 656, Appx. and 25 L. ed. 529; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Trook, 100 U. S. 112, 25 L. ed. 571; Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 610, 33 L. ed. 667, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.

And still later by the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572), the jurisdictional amount was increased to $5,000 except in cases involving the validity of a patent or copyright or the validity of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, in which a review was authorized "without regard to the sum or value in dispute." Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 29 L. ed. 601, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Craft, 124 U. S. 370, 31 L. ed. 449, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Baltimore & P. R. Co.

272

United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

Mr. Noble E. Dawson, opposed:

A case may be considered to arise under the Constitution or a law of the United States whenever its correct decision depends upon the construction of either.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 375, 5 L. ed. 284.

Or whenever the rights set up by a party may be defeated by one construction, or sustained by the opposite construction.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248, 29 L. ed. 388, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The jurisdiction for review of the judgments of courts extends to adverse decisions

v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; District of Columbia v. Gannon, 130 U. S. 227, 32 L. ed. 922, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; District of Columbia v. Brewer, 131 U. S. 434, 33 L. ed. 213, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Hollander v. Fechheimer, 162 U. S. 326, 40 L. ed. 985, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 795.

The same jurisdictional amount, subject to this exception in favor of cases involving the validity of a patent or copyright, or treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, was established by § 8 of the act of February 9, 1893, creating a court of appeals for the District of Columbia. South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; Durham v. Seymour, 161 U. S. 237, 40 L. ed. 683, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Willis v. Eastern Trust & Bkg. Co. 167 U. S. 76, 42 L. ed. 83, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Overby v. Gordon, 177 U. S. 214, 44 L. ed. 741, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Chamberlin v. Browning, 177 U. S. 605, 44 L. ed. 906, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Magruder v. Armes, 180 U. S. 496, 45 L. ed. 638, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Shappirio v. Goldberg, 192 U. S. 232, 48 L. ed. 419, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

The present statute, D. C. Code, § 233, 31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854, makes the same requirement. United States ex rel. Holzendorf v. Hay, 194 U. S. 373, 48 L. ed. 1025, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

Even where the case involves the validity of a patent or copyright or of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, a matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value in money must be involved. Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Washington & G. R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 146 U. S. 227, 36 L. ed. 951, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Chapman v. United States, 164 U. S. 436, 41 L. ed. 594, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Prather v. United States, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. ed. 510, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 997.

The statute increasing the jurisdictional amount to $1,000 provided for the judicial allowance of a writ of error or appeal, where the amount in controversy was between upon rights and titles claimed under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

203 U. S.

Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 30 L. ed. 992, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

When the decision is against the right claimed under the Constitution or laws of the United States, a writ of error will lie to bring the judgment of the court before this court for re-examination and revision.

Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169.

If a question is fairly presented by the record, and its decision is necessary to the determination of the case, a judgment which rejects the claim, but avoids all reference to it, is as much against the right as if it had been specifically referred to, and the right directly refused.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes before us on a motion to dismiss the writ of error for want of jurisdiction. The right to such a writ is given in § 233 of the Code of the District of Columbia (31 Stat. at L. 1189, 1227, chap. 854), which reads:

"Any final judgment or decree of the court of appeals may be re-examined and affirmed, reversed, or modified by the Supreme Court of the United States, upon writ $100 and $1,000, if some principle of extensive interest and operation rendered a final decision by the Supreme Court desirable. Campbell v. Read, 2 Wall. 193, 17 L. ed. 779.

But, when the jurisdictional amount was raised to $2,500, this provision was omitted. United States ex rel. Trask v. Wanamaker, 147 U. S. 149, 37 L. ed. 118, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Dennison v. Alexander, 103 U. S. 522, 26 L. ed. 313.

Cases not involving the jurisdictional amount may now be reviewed by certiorari. See supra, II. b.

The question when the jurisdictional amount is involved is one to be decided by the general principles applicable to all appellate courts whose jurisdiction depends on the amount in controversy, and is not here discussed.

V. Habeas corpus cases.

In Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 565, 29 L. ed. 277, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1050, the court thought that the restoration, by the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 437, chap. 353, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 595), of the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court in habeas corpus cases over decisions of the circuit courts, necessarily included jurisdiction over similar judgments of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in view of the controlling statutory provision which, the court said, made the appellate jurisdiction over judgments and decrees of the circuit courts the measure of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction, except as to amounts in controversies, over judgments and decrees of the supreme court of the District in similar cases.

But the court later said that this provision did not determine the nature of the case reviewable, but only indicated the mode of review. Ormsby v. Webb, 134 U. S. 47, 33 L. ed. 805, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478. And the view announced in Wales v. Whitney was questioned in Re Heath, 144 U. S. 92, 36 L. ed. 353, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615. And in Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22, the court squarely held 203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

that the Supreme Court of the United States had no appellate jurisdiction over the supreme court of the District of Columbia in habeas corpus cases; and this decision was followed in Re Schneider, 148 U. S. 157, 37 L. ed. 404, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572.

And in Perrine v. Slack, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. ed. 510, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79, it was held that a writ of error does not lie to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in a habeas corpus case involving a question as to the custody and care of children in a controversy between their mother and a testamentary guardian, as the matter in dispute was incapable of being reduced to a pecuniary standard of value.

VI. Criminal cases.

The decisions have uniformly denied any appellate jurisdiction over the District of Columbia courts in criminal cases. United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 2 L. ed. 397 (error to circuit court for the District); Re Heath, supra (error to supreme court of District); Cross v. United States, 145 U. S. 571, 36 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842 (error to supreme court of District); Chapman v. United States, 164 U. S. 436, 41 L. ed. 504, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76 (error to court of appeals of District); Prather v. United States, 164 U. S. 452, 41 L. ed. 510, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 997 (error to court of appeals of District); Sinclair v. District of Columbia, 192 U. S. 16, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212 (error to court of appeals of District).

A sufficient reason for this view is that a criminal case—although the punishment in case of conviction may embrace a fine—is not a case in which there is a pecuniary matter in dispute, which, as we have seen (see supra, IV.) must exist even where the validity of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, is drawn in question. United States v. More, Chapman v. United States, Prather v. United States, and Sinclair v. District of Columbia,—supra.

A judgment convicting a chancery receiver of error or appeal, in all cases in which the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the sum of five thousand dollars, in the same manner and under the same regulations as existed in *cases of writs of error on judgments, or appeals from decrees rendered in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, on February ninth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, and also in cases, without regard to the sum or value of the matter in dispute, wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States."

If this writ of error can be maintained, it is on the ground that the validity of an authority exercised under the United States was drawn in question.

The relator did not, however, question the authority of the President or his representatives to dismiss her, if the required for-of embezzling money which had come into his possession in his official capacity is not reviewable on writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia on the theory that the forfeiture by defendant, under D. C. Code, § 841, 31 Stat. at L. 1326, chap. 854, defining the offense, of all right or claim to any commissions, was determined by the judgment, and that therefore the jurisdictional amount prescribed by § 233 of such Code was involved, since the forfeiture of commissions does not follow the judgment, but follows the wrongful conversion or appropriation of the moneys. Fields v. United States, 205 U. S. 292, post, —, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543.

Judgments of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in criminal cases were not embraced in the provisions of the act of Congress of March 3, 1891, for a direct review in the Supreme Court of the United States of the judgments of the district courts or the existing circuit courts in cases of conviction of a capital or otherwise infamous crime, although the statute governing the appellate jurisdiction over the supreme court of the District of Columbia defines such jurisdiction as existing in the same cases and in like manner as provided by law in reference to the final judgments, orders, and decrees of the circuit courts. Re Heath, supra.

A review in the Supreme Court of the United States of a judgment of the general term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia affirming the judgment of a criminal term of that court, adjudging a person guilty of murder, and sentencing him to death, was not authorized by the provision of the act of February 6, 1889, for writs of error to courts of the United States in capital cases, which manifestly contemplates a review of the final judgment of the trial court. Cross v. United States, supra.

The judgments of the circuit court of appeals of the District in criminal cases may, however, be reviewed by certiorari, in the discretion of the Federal Supreme Court. Sinclair v. District of Columbia, supra; Winston v. United States, 172 U. S. 303, 43 L. ed. 456, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

VII. Cases involving Federal questions.

a. In general.

Congress, by the act of March 3, 1885 (23

Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355), § 2, authorized a review in the Federal Supreme Court of judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the District of Columbia "without regard to the sum or value in dispute" in any case "wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States." And when the circuit court of appeals for the District of Columbia was created by the act of February 9, 1893, the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States was defined by the 8th section of that act practically in the same terms.

This section and the present statute, § 233 of the Code of the District of Columbia, are in substance the same, and must bear the same construction. Sinclair v. District of Columbia, 192 U. S. 16, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212; Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia (Metropolitan R. Co. v. Macfarland) 195 U. S. 322, 49 L. ed. 219, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

Since the provision of the act of March 3, 1885, § 2, applied as well to territorial supreme courts as to the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the note to New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, ante, 254, on Federal questions as sustaining the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over territorial supreme courts should be consulted for further authorities on the questions discussed below.

In this connection may also well be considered decisions construing somewhat similar language in the statutes regulating writs of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to state courts. See, on this point, divs. IV. b and IV. c, in note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513, on What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts. But a difference between the controlling statutes should be noted. Since provision is not made for a review of a decision by the District of Columbia court of appeals upon a claim of right or title under a Federal law or an authority exercised under the United States, such review being authorized only where the validity of such law or authority is drawn in question, a judgment of the District of Columbia court may not be remalities had been complied with. What she claimed was that there were certain rules and regulations of the civil service which were not observed in the matter of her dismissal, and that, therefore, such dismissal was illegal.

But this contention did not draw in question the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, but the construction and application of regulations of the exercise of such authority.

viewable, which, had it been rendered by a state court, would have been the subject of such review, as being a denial of a right, title, privilege, or immunity claimed under such law or authority. It should also be remembered that, unlike the judgments of the state courts, those of the courts under consideration need not be against the validity of the law or authority drawn in question, in order to be subject to review. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503.

b. Patent and copyright cases.

An appeal from a decree of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia dismissing a bill filed in accordance with U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4915, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3392, to obtain a patent for an invention, cannot be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States on the ground that the validity of a patent is involved. Durham v. Seymour, 161 U. S. 237, 40 L. ed. 683, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

c. Questions respecting Federal law or treaty.

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction where the case presents for determination the question of the validity of Congressional legislation. Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521.

But, the validity, and not the construction, of a treaty or statute of the United States, must be directly drawn in question. South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

The words, "the validity of . . . a statute," as used in this act of March 3, 1885, refer only to the power of Congress to enact the statute as it is by its terms or is made to read by construction, and not to mere judicial construction, as contradistinguished from a denial of the legislative power. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503.

Hence, the validity of certain statutes of the United States under which a railroad

As Mr. Justice Gray said, in South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871, referring to an identical provision of the laws of the District prior to the Code: "In order to come within this clause, the validity, and not the construction only, of a treaty or statute of the United States, or of an authority exercised under the United States must be directly drawn in question."

company claimed the right to the use of a city's streets was not drawn in question so as to authorize the Supreme Court of the United States to review a judgment of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in an action to recover damages from the railroad company for maintaining a nuisance, where the court did not deny the right of the company to use the streets, but limited its right to the use held by it to be authorized by such statute. Ibid.

Whenever the power to enact a statute as it is by its terms or is made to read by construction is fairly open to denial, and denied, the validity of the statute is drawn in question; but not otherwise. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, supra.

See also infra, VII. d.—Re Craft, 124 U. S. 370, 31 L. ed. 449, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

d. Questions respecting Federal authority.

It is the validity, and not the construction merely, of an authority exercised under the United States, which must be drawn in question in order to come within the statute. South Carolina v. Seymour, supra.

The "validity of an authority exercised under the United States" is not drawn in question every time an act done by such authority is disputed. United States v. Lynch, supra.

The validity of the authority of the second comptroller and fourth auditor of the United States is not drawn in question, when it is merely claimed that, in the exercise of a valid authority, they erred in disallowance of mileage to a naval officer. Ibid.

Neither the question whether the Commissioner of Patents rightly decided upon the presumptive lawfulness of the right of a state to the trademark sought to be registered by it, or whether the Commissioner's duty in the premises was of such a character that mandamus would lie to compel its performance, involves any question as to the validity of the authority exercised by him under the United States. South Carolina v. Seymour, supra.

Nor does a decision which does not deny the right of a railroad company to the use of the city streets by virtue of certain acts of Congress, but limits such right to the use held by it to be authorized by such

And, prior to that case, we had disposed of the same question in United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114. That was a petition for a writ of mandamus against the Fourth Auditor and the Second Comptroller of the Treasury, to compel them to audit the account of petitioner, who was an officer in the Navy. It was insisted that by the disallowance of petitioner's claim for mileage these officers exercised a discretion which they did not possess; that this was an invalid exercise of an authority under the United States; and that hence the validity [465] of the authority was drawn in question. We held otherwise, and said:

"The validity of a statute is not drawn in question every time rights claimed under such statute are controverted, nor is the validity of an authority, every time an act done by such authority is disputed. . . .

"What the relator sought was an order coercing these officers to proceed in a particular way, and this order the supreme court of the District declined to grant. If we were to reverse that judgment upon the ground urged, it would not be for want of power in the Auditor to audit the account, and in the Comptroller to revise and pass upon it, but because those officers had disallowed what they ought to have allowed and erroneously construed what needed no construction. This would not in any degree involve the validity of their authority."

United States ex rel. Steinmetz v. Allen, statute, draw in question the validity of any such authority. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503.

Nor is the validity of the authority conferred upon the District commissioners drawn in question by the refusal to give instructions in an action against the District of Columbia to recover damages for personal injuries, which involved the acts of Congress creating the District government only so far as they bore upon the question of the liability of the District for negligence in failing to keep the streets in repair, and by way of construction, and did not deny the validity of the acts themselves, or of the authority exercised under them. District of Columbia v. Gannon, 130 U. S. 227, 32 L. ed. 922, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508.

An injunction restraining a person from prosecuting an ordinary suit in replevin in a court established under the authority of the United States does not necessarily involve a question of the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States. Re Craft, 124 U. S. 370, 31 L. ed. 449, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

But the validity of such an authority is 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. ed. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416, is not to the contrary, for there the validity of a rule constituting the authority of certain officers in the Patent Office was drawn in question.

Writ of error dismissed.

GILA VALLEY, GLOBE, & NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.
A. J. LYON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 465-475.)

Trial—question for jury—negligence.

1. Evidence tending to show that a spur railroad track was not a safe and proper structure for the operation of cars is sufficient to carry to the jury, on the question of the negligence of the railway company, an action to recover for the killing of a brakeman while riding on a car which plunged over the end of the spur track, although the evidence for the railway company tended to show that the accident was due to the negligence of a fellow servant in ordering the car to be detached from the train and engine.

Appeal—prejudicial error—instructions.

2. Charging the jury that, unless an accident to a railway brakeman was caused solely by the negligence of the conductor, the defendant railway company was liable, even if erroneous in that "sole cause" is not synonymous with "proximate cause," does not prejudice the defendant, where further instructions, given at its request, were to so drawn in question when its existence or constitutionality is denied, and the denial forms the subject of direct inquiry. United States v. Lynch, supra.

The validity of an authority exercised under the United States was drawn in question in determining whether the special assessment authorized by Congress for a public improvement contained a sufficient description of the property assessed, and whether sufficient notice was afforded. Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521.

A suit in which the validity of a regulation established by the Commissioner of Patents, under the authority of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 483, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 272, for the conduct of proceedings in the Patent Office, is assailed, is one in which there is drawn in question the validity of "an authority exercised under the United States" within the meaning of the act of February 9, 1893, § 8 (27 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), giving an appeal in such cases from the final judgment or decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia to the Federal Supreme Court. United States ex rel. Steinmetz v. Allen, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. ed. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

the effect that, if the conductor's negligence was the proximate cause of the accident, there could be no recovery, and the court's attention was not specifically drawn to the objection to the word "sole."

Trial—reception of evidence—expert testimony.

3. The discretion of the trial court is not abused by permitting witnesses who have had practical railroad experience and are familiar with overhead structures and buffers to testify as to whether a buffer at the end of a spur track was a reasonably safe and proper one, and as to whether reasonable and proper care had been exercised in so building an overhead structure as to prevent the use of the hand brakes on a freight car until about 100 feet from the end of the spur track.

[No. 96.]

Submitted November 13, 1906. Decided December 10, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed, on a second appeal, a judgment of the District Court of Gila County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for the alleged negligent killing of a railway employee. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.) 80 Pac. 337; on first appeal, 71 Pac. 957.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The defendant in error, who was plaintiff below, recovered a judgment against the railroad company, plaintiff in error, in a trial court in Arizona territory, for the negligent killing of her son, which judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory, and the company brings the case here.

The deceased was a brakeman and had been employed by the defendant company as such for a few weeks before the accident occurred in which he lost his life. He acted as one of the brakemen upon the freight train, which was pushed up on a spur track that ran from the main line in the town of Globe, in the territory, to a mining station, about 500 yards away. The accident, which resulted in the death of the deceased, occurred on this spur track on the 14th of July, 1900. The grade of the spur, after leaving the main line, was, for a short distance, level. It then became quite steep upgrade, getting steeper and steeper, until it again became level, under what is termed the tramway house. This was a structure erected over the tracks, and the bottom of it was only 2 feet above the top of the freight cars, and from that tramway structure to the end of the road the grade was about level, and the distance a little over a hundred feet. The track ended on a trestle, with a buffer at the end, which was not calculated to resist a car pushed by an engine, but only to stop one pushed by hand or by the wind. The trestle ended at the side of a cañon, and there was at that point an abrupt fall to the bottom of the cañon of 75 feet. There was a curve on the spur track, which would prevent the engineer from seeing the end of his train, and he would have to obtain signals from others in order to run his engine. The upgrade was so steep that only a few cars could be taken up from the main track at any one time.

203 U. S.

On the occasion of the accident the train started from the *main line, and was pushed [467] up grade by the engine in the rear. The deceased was on top of the front car of the train, being farthest away from the engine at the time the train was being pushed up. The conductor was on the car next to that of the deceased, and by his orders the engineer shoved the train as rapidly as he could, and ran it at the rate of 5 or 6 miles an hour, and then after a shove the two cars on which were the deceased and the conductor were detached from the train and passed along at that rate of speed under the tramway house and on to the level portion of the road, which ended in about a hundred feet at the side of the cañon. The deceased was unable to control the speed of the cars with his brakes, and the car on which he was riding passed along and knocked away the buffer and plunged down to the bottom of the cañon. Eyewitnesses of the accident immediately descended the side of the cañon and found at the bottom the car and the dead body of the deceased.

There was evidence tending to show that the spur track was not a safe and proper structure to operate over its length with cars, for the reason that the tramway house was so close to the top of the cars when passing under it that the brakes could not be handled, and there was not sufficient length of road after the train passed under the house during which to get the cars under control and stop them before they arrived at the end of the track and the side of the cañon. The only way in which it ought ever to have been done was to have the engine at all times attached to the train, and even then, if anything got out of order with the engine, the train was not under control of the brakeman, on account of the tramway house. The buffer at the end of the track was also asserted to be insufficient, and witnesses were called who testified that the track was not a reasonably safe one upon which to conduct the business of the road.

The company, on its part, gave evidence tending to show that the track was properly constructed; that the buffer was sufficient for the purpose intended, and that the whole [468] structure *was a reasonably safe place, and that the accident was caused simply by the flagrant negligence of the conductor, in ordering the two cars to be detached from the train, and thus taken away from the control of the engine. It also gave evidence that the buffer was not to be used at the end of the track to stop cars in motion, nor were the hand brakes intended to be so used at that spot, as it was intended that the engine should control the cars and should not be there detached from them. They therefore insist that, when the operation was properly performed, the matters of the low shed, short track, and insufficient buffer were immaterial. It was all predicated upon the fact that the cars should be under the control of the engine, and should not be detached therefrom, as these cars were, under the orders of the conductor.

Mr. Frank W. Burnett submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The jury should have been instructed to render a verdict for the plaintiff in error.

Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322.

It is the master's duty to provide a safe place to work, but that principle is not applicable when the place becomes dangerous in the progress of the work, from the manner in which the work is done.

Callaway v. Allen, 12 C. C. A. 114, 24 U. S. App. 388, 64 Fed. 297; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Brown, 20 C. C. A. 147, 34 U. S. App. 759, 73 Fed. 970; Hussey v. Cogger, 112 N. Y. 614, 3 L.R.A. 559, 8 Am. St. Rep. 787, 20 N. E. 556; Hogan v. Smith, 125 N. Y. 774, 26 N. E. 742.

Negligence of conductor need not have been the sole cause of the accident, to relieve plaintiff in error from liability.

Vizelich v. Southern P. Co. 126 Cal. 587, 59 Pac. 129; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Barry, 43 L.R.A. 349, 28 C. C. A. 644, 56 U. S. App. 37, 84 Fed. 944; Wharton, Neg. 2d ed. § 85; Zopfi v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 9 C. C. A. 308, 22 U. S. App. 136, 60 Fed. 987; Evansville & R. R. Co. v. Henderson, 134 Ind. 636, 33 N. E. 1021; Allen v. New Gas Co. L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 251, 45 L. J. Exch. N. S. 668, 34 L. T. N. S. 541; Conger v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 86 Mich. 76, 48 N. W. 695; Kevern v. Providence Gold & S. Min. Co. 70 Cal. 392, 11 Pac. 740; Whitman v. Wisconsin & M. R. Co. 58 Wis. 408, 17 N. W. 124; Course v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 17 N. Y. S. R. 715, 2 N. Y. Supp. 312; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v.

Mealer, 1 C. C. A. 633, 6 U. S. App. 86, 50 Fed. 725; Gowen v. Harley, 6 C. C. A. 190, 12 U. S. App. 574, 56 Fed. 973; Morris v. Duluth, S. S. & A. R. Co. 47 C. C. A. 661, 108 Fed. 749; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Brown, 91 Va. 668, 22 S. E. 496; Bull v. Mobile & M. R. Co. 67 Ala. 206; Rose v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex.) 17 S. W. 789; New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Perri-guey, 138 Ind. 414, 34 N. E. 233, 37 N. E. 976; Union P. R. Co. v. Callaghan, 6 C. C. A. 205, 12 U. S. App. 541, 56 Fed. 988; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McClain, 80 Tex. 85, 15 S. W. 789; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lannigan, 56 Kan. 109, 42 Pac. 343; Broughel v. Southern New England Teleph. Co. 73 Conn. 617, 84 Am. St. Rep. 176, 48 Atl. 751; Edmonson v. Kentucky C. R. Co. 105 Ky. 479, 42 S. W. 200, 448; Young-bluth v. Stephens, 104 Wis. 343, 80 N. W. 443; Holland v. Tennessee Coal, Iron, & R. Co. 91 Ala. 445, 12 L.R.A. 232, 8 So. 524; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 483.

Witnesses not competent to undertake the building of such or similar structures are not competent to advise a jury as to the work of men thoroughly versed in their profession.

Ballard v. New York L. E. & W. R. Co. 126 Pa. 141, 19 Atl. 35.

Mr. Waters Davis submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The court properly refused to instruct the jury to return a verdict for defendant.

Paulmier v. Erie R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 151; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 266, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Morrissey v. Hughes, 65 Vt. 553, 27 Atl. 205; Elmer v. Locke, 135 Mass. 575; Gonzales v. Galveston, 84 Tex. 6, 31 Am. St. Rep. 17, 19 S. W. 284; Clyde v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 59 Fed. 398; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Cooley, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1372, 49 S. W. 339; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 59 C. C. A. 87, 123 Fed. 753; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 96, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; New Jersey & N. Y. R. Co. v. Young, 1 C. C. A. 428, 1 U. S. App. 96, 49 Fed. 725; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Wilson, 11 Ind. App. 488, 38 N. E. 343; Southern P. Co. v. Yeargin, 48 C. C. A. 497, 109 Fed. 436.

As a matter of law, a railway company is negligent in having even a low bridge over its track.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Cooley, supra.

The negligence of appellant in the case at bar was much greater, and its defense of fellow servant's negligence is much weaker, than in the case of Paulmier v. Erie R. Co. supra.

So long as defendant's negligence has some share (however little) in the accident, the plaintiff is entitled to recover.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, supra; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Croskell, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 160, 25 S. W. 486.

It is most generally recognized that in a case of concurrent negligence there is no single proximate cause.

Quill v. Empire State Teleph. Co. 13 Misc. 435, 34 N. Y. Supp. 470; Laible v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 13 App. Div. 574, 43 N. Y. Supp. 1003; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Prescott, 23 L.R.A. 654, 8 C. C. A. 109, 19 U. S. App. 291, 59 Fed. 237; Clyde v. Richmond & D. R. Co. supra; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Nuckols, 91 Va. 193, 21 S. E. 344; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Kelly (Tex. Civ. App.) 35 S. W. 879; Waller v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 59 Mo. App. 410; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Croskell, supra; Phillips v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 127 N. Y. 657, 27 N. E. 978; Young v. Shickle, H. & H. Iron Co. 103 Mo. 324, 15 S. W. 772; Deweese v. Meramec Iron Min. Co. 128 Mo. 423, 31 S. W. 113; New Jersey & N. Y. R. Co. v. Young, supra; Towns v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 37 La. Ann. 630, 55 Am. Rep. 511; Southern P. Co. v. Yeargin, supra.

Where the injury is caused partly by the negligence of a fellow servant and partly by the failure of the company to provide proper and suitable apparatus, the negligence of the coservant will not exonerate the company from the consequences of its own default.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, supra; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 905; Ellis v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 546.

Where the trial court adopts the theory of law advocated by one of the parties, the latter cannot successfully challenge that theory on appeal. MacDonald v. Tittmann, 96 Mo. App. 536, 70 S. W. 502; "Parties are generally bound on appeal by positions taken by them in the trial court." Harper v. Morse, 114 Mo. 317, 21 S. W. 517. "Erroneous instructions cannot be complained of by defendant, when given at its request."

Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. 118 Mo. 599, 24 S. W. 479; Sanders v. Brock (Tex. Civ. App.) 31 S. W. 311.

A party who asks an instruction, the same in substance as that given by the court, cannot complain of error in the latter instruction.

Stevens v. Crane, 116 Mo. 408, 22 S. W. 783; Martin v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 195; Dunnington v. Frick Co. 60 Ark. 250, 30 S. W. 212; Simpson v. Edens, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 235, 38 S. W. 474; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Newman (Tex. Civ. App.) 40 S. W. 854; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Sein, 89 Tex. 63, 33 S. W. 215, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 386, 33 S. W. 558; St. Louis Bridge & Iron Co. v. St. Louis
203 U. S.

Brewing Asso. 129 Mo. 343, 31 S. W. 765; Byrd v. Ellis (Tex. Civ. App.) 35 S. W. 1070; 3 Century Dig. p. 1327, § 3602.

The question of the admissibility of expert testimony is for the determination of the trial court, and the action of the trial court will not, except in an extreme case, be disturbed.

Chateaugay Ore & Iron Co. v. Blake, 144 U. S. 476, 36 L. ed. 510, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 645, 25 L. ed. 487; Murphy v. New York C. R. Co. 66 Barb. 125; Ft. Wayne v. Coombs, 107 Ind. 75, 57 Am. Rep. 82, 7 N. E. 743; Lynch v. Grayson, 5 N. M. 487, 25 Pac. 992; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bradley, 4 C. C. A. 528, 13 U. S. App. 68, 54 Fed. 632; Conkling v. Manhattan R. Co. 36 N. Y. S. R. 124, 12 N. Y. Supp. 846; Ives v. Leonard, 50 Mich. 296, 15 N. W. 463; Maughan v. Burns, 64 Vt. 316, 23 Atl. 583.

Were there any foundation for the criticisms of plaintiff in error, its objections would go to the weight rather than to the admissibility of the evidence of plaintiff's experts.

Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Wilson (Tex. Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 686.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question presented by the plaintiff in error is founded upon an exception to the refusal of the court to instruct the jury to render a verdict for the plaintiff in error, on the ground that there was no evidence that the railroad company was guilty of negligence by failing to provide a reasonably safe place for the servants of the company to work in; that the cause of the accident was the gross negligence of the conductor in ordering the cars to be detached from the train and engine, and that such negligence was that of a fellow servant of the deceased, and did not form the basis for a recovery against the defendant. We are of opinion that, taking the whole evidence, enough was proved on the part of the plaintiff below to make it proper to send the case to the jury on the question of the negligence of the company.

The next question arises in regard to the charge of the court upon the proximate cause of the accident, whether it was the *negligence of the defendant company in not [471] furnishing a proper and reasonably safe place for its employees to work, or that it was the negligence of the conductor (a fellow servant of the deceased) in ordering the cars detached from the engine. The court charged that—

"The conductor of the train was a fellow servant of the man who was killed, and if the accident was brought about solely by the negligence of the conductor of the train, then the defendant company is not liable; or if the accident was brought about by the negligence of the conductor and the negligence of the man who was killed, the defendant company is not liable. If, however, the accident was caused by a failure of the defendant company to provide a reasonably safe place to perform the work in which the man who was killed was engaged, then the defendant company is liable in damages for the death, if it was negligent in not providing such safe place.

"The fundamental question, therefore, for you to determine in this case is, What was the cause of this accident; what brought it about?

"If you find that this accident was caused solely by the action of the conductor in the method which he employed in putting cars on the spur at the time in question, then you should find a verdict for the defendant company, and you should not award any damages to the plaintiff in this case; or if you should find that the dead man has, through his own negligence, brought about this accident or contributed to it, then you should find for the defendant, and you should not award any damages in this case.

"On the other hand, if you find that the defendant company was negligent in not providing a reasonably safe place for the performance of the work, you should find for the plaintiff and award her damages, provided that the negligence of the defendant in not providing such a safe place was the cause of the accident, or contributed to the accident.

[472] "To find for the plaintiff, it is not enough that you should find that the premises were unsafe, or that the defendant *company was negligent in that respect, in not providing a safe place; you must also find that the place was unsafe, and that the accident was brought about or contributed to by reason of that unsafe place. That is, if you should find that the act of the conductor was the sole, or if you should find that it was the proximate, or the procuring, cause of the accident, then you should not award damages; but if you find that the accident was caused by the acts of the conductor and also by the negligence of the defendant company in not providing a safe place to do the work, then you should find damages for the plaintiff. In other words, in order to award damages to the plaintiff, you must find, first, that the defendant company was negligent in not providing a safe place to do the work, and that such negligence was the cause of the accident or contributed thereto. If you find the accident was brought about solely by the acts of the conductor, you should not award damages. If the acts of the conductor alone did not cause the accident, but the accident was contributed to by the negligence of the defendant company by not providing a safe place to work, then you should award damages."

Again:

"Was the place where the deceased was working a reasonably safe place for the performance of the work to be done there,—a reasonably safe place, considering the character of the work to be done and the character of the premises?

"If you find it was not reasonably safe, and the defendant company was negligent in that respect, did that fact have anything to do with the accident, or was it caused by the negligence of the conductor of the train alone?

"If it was caused solely or procured or brought about by the negligence of the conductor, then the defendant is not liable. If the negligence of the defendant company contributed to the accident, then the defendant is liable, provided the dead man himself was not guilty of any negligence which contributed to the accident."

The company now finds fault with this charge, on the ground *that it was error to [473] charge that unless the accident was caused solely by the action of the conductor, the defendant was liable; that "sole" cause is not synonymous with "proximate" cause, as the action of the conductor may not have been the sole, although at the same time it may have been the "proximate," cause, and if it was the proximate cause, the company would not be liable. The rule would seem to be that if the negligence of the company had a share in causing the injury to the deceased, the company was liable, notwithstanding the negligence of a fellow servant contributed to the happening of the accident. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 266, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Ellis v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 546, 552. But, in addition to the main charge above set forth, the court charged the jury at the request of the counsel for defendant as follows: that if the manner of throwing the cars, as testified to, were unsafe, and the conductor caused the cars to be so thrown by that unsafe method, and if such act of the conductor was the proximate cause of the accident, and that such unsafe method was adopted by the conductor without the authority or direction of the defendant, the plaintiff cannot recover; that if the jury believed that the accident to the deceased was proximately caused by the negligence of the conductor, it was immaterial whether the deceased had had previous experience as a brakeman, or not; that, although the jury might believe from the evidence that other, better, and safer appliances might have been used by the defendant company, yet the defendant was not thereby rendered liable in this action, if the proximate cause of the accident was the negligence of the conductor in the manner in which he conducted the work on the occasion in question; that, as the conductor was the fellow servant of the deceased, the defendant could not be held liable if the accident was proximately caused by negligence on the part of the conductor; that if the jury believed, from the evidence, that the appliances furnished by the defendant company were defective, yet if they further believed, from the evidence, that the conductor was negligent in the manner in which [474] he conducted *the work on the occasion, and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the accident, without which such accident would not have happened, then the jury should find for the defendant.

We think the defendant received no prejudice from the charge as given, taken in connection with the defendant's requests to charge, which were complied with. If the defendant had desired to obtain a more specific charge in relation to the distinction between "sole" and "proximate" cause of the accident, as applied to the negligence of the conductor, the court should have had its attention specifically drawn to the objection to the word "sole," and the particular freedom from liability asserted if the negligence of the conductor were the proximate cause of the accident, as distinguished from the sole cause. A general exception to the charge as given would not raise the question. Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 645, 659, 25 L. ed. 487, 491. The requests to charge as given show the jury had its attention drawn to the proximate cause, and that if the conductor's negligence were the proximate cause, the plaintiff could not recover.

A third question arises upon the admission of evidence. Certain of the witnesses for plaintiff were called to prove that, in their opinion, the company had not furnished a reasonably safe place for its employees to work in. This was objected to on the ground that the witnesses testifying to it were not properly experts and should not be permitted to testify. One witness, who testified that the buffer was not a reasonably safe and proper one, said that he had been railroading for fifteen years, following the business of trackman during that time; that it was his business to go over the track and see if it was in proper shape, and that he had had something to do with the construction of a railroad; that he was familiar with the construction of tracks, trestles, and buffers; that that was what he had had to do; that overhead structures came under another department; that he considered it unsafe for the reason that the buffer would afford an obstruction to the wheels and *that the car would slide [475] off the trucks and go over into the ravine.

Another witness said that he had been working on railroads for twenty years, and that from his experience he had had occasion to become acquainted with structures over tracks, over bridges and highways, and buffers at the end of chutes and tracks, and as to the control of the cars, their operation and the operation of the brakes on the cars, the stopping cars, the resisting power of buffers, etc. He said that, in his opinion, the tramway house was too close to the top of a car, and that it was an impediment to the operation of the hand brake of the car, and that the buffer at the end was not an effective obstruction. Evidence was given by other witnesses, by depositions, in regard to the structure over the railroad track and the character of the buffer.

In the cases of all the witnesses, we think the question of the admissibility of their evidence was one within the reasonable discretion of the trial court, and that the discretion was not abused. All the witnesses had had practical experience on railroads, and were familiar with structures and the character of buffers mentioned in the evidence. There was certainly enough to call upon the court to decide upon the admissibility of their opinions under these circumstances, and we ought not to interfere with the decision of the trial court in this case. Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, supra; Chateaugay Ore & Iron Co. v. Blake, 144 U. S. 476, 484, 36 L. ed. 510, 512, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731.

There is no error in the record and the judgment is affirmed.

*UNITED STATES EX REL. GEORGE A. [476]
LOWRY and Planters' Compress Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

FREDERICK I. ALLEN, Commissioner of Patents.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 476-483.)

Patents—appeal from interlocutory decision.

An appeal from a decision of the primary examiner upon a motion to dissolve an interference, holding that the party had the right to make the interfering claims, may be prohibited by the rules of the Patent Office without infringing the right of appeal in interferences given by U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 482, 483, 4904, 4909, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 272, 3389, 3390, since the appeal therein provided for must be deemed limited to final decisions upon the question of priority of invention, which, under these statutes, is the sole question for determination in interference cases.

[No. 56.]

Argued October 24, 25, 1906. Decided December 10, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that District, granting a mandamus to require the Commissioner of Patents to direct the board of examiners in chief to take jurisdiction of an appeal from a ruling of the primary examiner, upon a motion to dissolve an interference. Affirmed.

See same case below, 26 App. D. C. 8.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Oliver Mitchell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edmund Wetmore and Meyers, Cushman, & Rea, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause, and, with Mr. John M. Coit, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for mandamus, filed in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, requiring the Commissioner of Patents to direct the board of examiners in chief to reinstate and take jurisdiction of the appeal of petitioners from the decision of the primary examiner, refusing to dissolve an interference between a patent granted to Lowry and an application for a patent by one William L. Spoon. The supreme court granted the mandamus. Its judgment was reversed by the court of appeals.

The question in the case is whether the rule of the Patent Office which denies an appeal from a ruling of a primary examiner, upon motion to dissolve an interference, is contrary to the Revised Statutes, and therefore void. Rule 124 provides that "from a decision of a primary examiner affirming the patentability of the claim or the applicant's right to make the same, no appeal can be taken."

Plaintiffs in error attack the rule as inconsistent with the sections of the Revised Statutes which provide for interferences. These sections are inserted in the margin.†

*The facts are as follows: Lowry was [479] granted a patent for a bale of fibrous material January 29, 1897. An interference was declared between his patent and application of one William Spoon, to which interference Lowry was made a party. He *moved to [480] dissolve the interference upon the ground, among others, that Spoon's press was inoperative. The primary examiner granted the motion and Spoon appealed to the board of examiners in chief, who confirmed the decision. Upon petition of Spoon the Commissioner of Patents remanded the case to the primary examiner for further consideration, and the latter officer, upon the filing of additional affidavits, decided that Spoon's application disclosed an operative device. From this decision an appeal was taken to the board of examiners in chief, which was dismissed by that board for want of jurisdiction. Thereupon Lowry petitioned the Commissioner to direct the board to issue an appeal. The petition was denied, the Acting Commissioner remarking:

"The rule prohibiting an appeal from a decision upon a motion holding that a party has the right to make the claim of the issue is in accordance with the practice which has prevailed in this office for many years, and has the support of all decisions of the courts

†Rev. Stat. Sec. 4904, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3389. Whenever an application is made for a patent which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, would interfere with any pending application, or with any unexpired patent, he shall give notice thereof to the applicants, or applicant and patentee, as the case may be, and shall direct the primary examiner to proceed to determine the question of priority of invention. And the Commissioner may issue a patent to the party who is adjudged the prior inventor, unless the adverse party appeals from the decision of the primary examiner, or of the board of examiners in chief, as the case may be, within such time, not less than twenty days, as the Commissioner shall prescribe.

Rev. Stat. Sec. 4939, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3390. Every applicant for a patent or for the reissue of a patent, any of the claims of which have been twice rejected, and every party to an interference, may appeal from the decision of the primary examiner, or of the examiner in charge of interferences in such case, to the board of examiners in chief, having once paid the fee for such appeal.

Rev. Stat. Sec. 4910, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3391. If such party is dissatisfied with the decision of the examiners in chief he may, on payment of the fee prescribed, appeal to the Commissioner in person.

Rev. Stat. Sec. 4911, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3391. If such party, except a party to an interference, is dissatisfied with the which have been rendered on the subject. There seems to be no reason for regarding it as inconsistent with the statute. It seems very clear that the decision in this case is not a final adverse decision, since it is not a ruling that Lowry is not entitled to his patent. That is a matter which may be determined in the further proceedings, and therefore it is clear that the decision relates to a mere interlocutory matter.

"The petition is denied."

Lowry filed another petition, appealing to the Commissioner "in person," to direct the board of examiners in chief to entertain his appeal. The petition was considered and denied. In passing on the petition the Commissioner said:

"Under the express provisions of rule 124 there is no appeal to the examiners in chief from such decision rendered on an interlocutory motion. It is believed that there is nothing in that rule inconsistent with law, and that therefore it has the force of law. The right of appeal in interferences given in general terms in the statute is a very differ-

[481]ent thing from the *right of appeal on all motions in the interference. To permit appeals on motions would multiply litigation and extend the proceedings in interferences beyond all reasonable limits. It would work great hardship to parties. The appellate tribunals of this office are no more required to give cases piecemeal consideration than are the appellate courts. The whole case should be ready for appeal when the appeal provided for by the statute is taken.

"It is to be particularly noted that there has been no decision as to the rival claims of the parties to this interference. It has not been decided which party is entitled to the patent. If it should at any time be decided that Spoon is entitled to the patent, Lowry will have the right of appeal, but until such final decision is rendered the statute gives him no right of appeal.

decision of the Commissioner, he may appeal to the supreme court of the district of Columbia, sitting in banc.

Sec. 9. (Act of February 9, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3391].) That the determination of appeals from the decision of the Commissioner of Patents, now vested in the general term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in pursuance of the provisions of section seven hundred and eighty of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the District of Columbia, shall hereafter be, and the same is hereby, vested in the court of appeals created by this act; and in addition, any party aggrieved by a decision of the Commissioner of Patents in any interference case may appeal therefrom to said court of appeals.

Rev. Stat. Sec. 482, U. S. Comp. Stat. 203 U. S.

"It would seem upon general principles of law that Lowry could then present for determination by his appeal any question which, in his opinion, vitally affects the question which party is entitled to the patent. The only ground upon which he can reasonably claim the right of appeal on this motion is that the question vitally affects his claimed right to a patent, and if it does that, he can raise it at final hearing and contest it before the various appellate tribunals, including the court of appeals.

"The refusal to permit the present appeal on motion is therefore not a denial of an opportunity to have the matter reviewed by the several appellate tribunals mentioned in the statute."

And further: "No good reason is seen for changing the provisions in Rule 124 here in controversy, which was adopted and approved by a long line of Commissioners of Patents, among whom have been some of the ablest patent lawyers in the country, and which rule has been acquiesced in by patent attorneys practising before the office for the last quarter of a century."

*There is quite a sharp controversy be-[482]tween the parties as to the effect of the ruling of the Commissioner. Plaintiffs in error are apparently convinced that the ruling of the primary examiner involves a fundamental right which, if not decided on Lowry's appeal, will be forever foreclosed to him for review. A different view is expressed by defendant in error. However this may be, we think the question in the case is in quite narrow compass. The statutes involved are not difficult of interpretation. The determining sections are 482, 483, 4904, and 4909 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 272, 3389, 3390). Plaintiffs in error put especial stress upon §§ 482 and 4909. Section 482 provides for the appointment of examiners in chief, "whose duty it shall be, on the written petition of the appellant, to revise and determine upon the 1901, p. 272. The examiners in chief shall be persons of competent legal knowledge and scientific ability, whose duty it shall be, on the written petition of the appellant, to revise and determine upon the validity of the adverse decisions of examiners upon applications for patents, and for reissues of patents, and in interference cases; and, when required by the Commissioner, they shall hear and report upon claims for extensions, and perform such other like duties as he may assign them.

Rev. Stat. Sec. 483, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 272. The Commissioner of Patents, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may, from time to time, establish regulations, not inconsistent with law, for the conduct of proceedings in the Patent Office.

validity of the adverse decisions of examiners . . . in interference cases." Section 4909 provides that "every party to an interference may appeal from the decision of the primary examiner or of the examiner in charge of interferences in such case, to the board of examiners in chief." The contention is that this section gives the right of appeal unreservedly and any limitation of it by a rule is void. Such might not be the result, even if there was no qualification of those sections in other sections. As said by the Commissioner: "The right of appeal in interferences given in general terms in the statute is a very different thing from the right of appeal on all motions in the interference." It certainly could not have been the intention to destroy all distinctions in procedure. But we are not left to inference. The statute is explicit. It limits the declaration of interferences to the question of priority of invention. Section 4904 provides that in case of conflict of an application for a patent with a pending application or with an unexpired patent (as in the case at bar), the Commissioner shall give notice thereof, "and shall direct the primary examiner to proceed to determine the question of priority of invention." (Italics ours.) And it is provided that the Commissioner shall issue a patent to the party adjudged the prior inventor, unless the adverse party appeals from the decision of the primary examiner [483] or examiners in chief, as the case may be. The history of the sections and the rules are gone into at length by the court of appeals in its opinion. We need not repeat the discussion. It answers the detailed reasoning of plaintiffs in error. We concur with the views expressed, that the statutes provide only for appeals upon the question of priority of invention. Appeals on other questions are left to the regulation of the Patent Office under the grant of power contained in § 483.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Peckham and Mr. Justice Day dissent.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM F. ANDERSON, Trustee of Cosmopolitan Power Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 483-495.)

Bankruptcy—preferences—franchise tax.

1. The claim of the state of New Jersey against the estate of a bankrupt corporation organized under the laws of that state, but doing no business and having no property there, for the "annual license fee or franchise tax" on its outstanding capital stock, imposed under N. J. Gen. Stat. 1895, §§ 251, 252, 257, 258, 260, is for a tax legally due and owing to the state, which, under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), § 64a, must be paid in advance of dividends to creditors.

Bankruptcy—preferences—franchise tax.

2. The finding of the state board of assessors as to the amount of outstanding capital stock of a corporation, made for the purpose of fixing the amount of the annual license fee or franchise tax imposed by N. J. Gen. Stat. 1895, §§ 251, 252, 257, 258, 260, is not conclusive on the bankruptcy court, in view of the provisions of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 64a, that, in case any question arises as to the amount or legality of any tax entitled to priority of payment under that section, the same shall be heard and determined by the court.

Bankruptcy—preferences—franchise tax.

3. The franchise tax assessed under N. J. Gen. Stat. 1895, §§ 251, 252, 257, 258, 260 on the basis of the capital stock of a corporation issued and outstanding on the 1st of January preceding the making of the return, is "legally due and owing" within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 64a, providing that taxes must be paid in advance of the payment of dividends to creditors, although such tax may not have been collectible until after the corporation was adjudged a bankrupt.

[No. 49.]

Argued and submitted October 19, 1906. Decided December 10, 1906.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, which had, in turn, affirmed the finding of a referee in bankruptcy, denying to the state of New Jersey a preference for alleged franchise taxes due from the estate of a bankrupt corporation. Reversed and remanded to the District Court for further proceedings.

See same case below, 70 C. C. A. 388, 137 Fed. 858.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This is an appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, affirming the order of the district court, which affirmed the finding of the referee in bankruptcy, denying to the state of New Jersey a preference for alleged franchise taxes from the estate of a bankrupt, the Cosmopolitan Power Company.

On December 21, 1903, the claim for the state was filed, under the provisions of § 64a of the bankrupt law. [30 Stat. at L.

203 U. S.

563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447.] The claim is set forth as follows:

Tax—1902	$5,750 00
Interest to October 15, 1903	891 25
Costs on injunction proceedings, because of nonpayment of taxes..	26 15
Tax—1903	2,500 00
Interest to October 15, 1903	87 50
	<hr/>
	$9,254 90

The Cosmopolitan Power Company is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of New Jersey on April 30, 1900, for the purpose of dealing in engines, machines, etc. By its charter it had power to do business in any state or territory of the United States. While it had its principal office in the state of New Jersey, located under the terms of its certificate of incorporation, it had no property in that state, and conducted its business in the state of Illinois.

The capital stock of the corporation on January 1, 1902, was forty millions of dollars, of which there was ten millions *outstanding. On May 13, 1902, its capital stock, pursuant to the laws of New Jersey, was reduced to $2,500,000. The company was adjudicated a bankrupt on April 23, 1903, upon an involuntary petition filed in the district court for the northern district of Illinois.

On November 7, 1902, the state board of assessors of New Jersey, the company having failed to make return, levied an assessment for the license or franchise tax in question for the year 1902 in the sum of $5,750.00. On June 1, 1903, there was assessed against the company for the year beginning January 1, 1903, a similar tax on outstanding capital stock in the sum of $2,500.00, in accordance with the return of the company filed on May 1, 1903.

On February 12, 1904, the state of New Jersey filed its motion before the referee for the payment of said taxes as a preferential debt. The referee disallowed the 1903 tax altogether, and allowed the 1902 tax as a general claim against the estate for the sum of $4,945.08. This reduction was made from the assessment for the year 1902, because the state board had made the assessment upon the basis of $40,000,000 of outstanding capital stock, whereas, in fact, only $10,000,000 was then issued and outstanding, upon which basis the referee made the allowance. The district court affirmed the order of the referee. Upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals that court modified the judgment of the district court so as to allow the taxes claimed for the year 1903, as a general debt, and in other respects affirmed the district court. 70 C. C. A. 388, 137 Fed. 858. The case was then brought here.

Mr. Edward D. Duffield argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Levy Mayer and Robert H. McCarter, filed a brief for appellant:

The action of the assessors is not subject to collateral attack, and this rule is not changed by the provisions of § 64a of the bankrupt act.

King v. American Electric Vehicle Co. (N. J. Eq.) 62 Atl. 381; Arimex Consol. Copper Co. v. State Assessors, 69 N. J. L. 121, 54 Atl. 244.

The fact that the obligation does not mature until July 1st is entirely immaterial.

Re Flynn, 134 Fed. 145; Re Prince, 131 Fed. 546; Re United States Car Co. 60 N. J. Eq. 514, 43 Atl. 673.

Even if we assume that the corporate franchise is of no value whatever to the bankrupt estate, and even though the trustee never gets the title or possession of it, nevertheless, the franchise taxes are clearly entitled to priority.

Re Tilden, 91 Fed. 500; Chattanooga v. Hill, 71 C. C. A. 584, 139 Fed. 600; Re Baker, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

Messrs. Robert H. McCarter and Levy Mayer also filed a separate brief for appellant:

The claim of the appellant is a tax within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, and is entitled to priority as such.

Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129, 136, 29 L. ed. 830, 832, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; State, Evening Journal Assn., Prosecutor, v. State Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. Rep. 107; State Assessors v. Central R. Co. 48 N. J. L. 146, 4 Atl. 578; Standard Underground Cable Co. v. Atty. Gen. 46 N. J. Eq. 270, 19 Am. St. Rep. 394, 19 Atl. 733; State, Tide-Water Pipe Line Co., Prosecutor, v. Berry, 52 N. J. L. 308, 19 Atl. 665; State, Trenton Sav. Fund Soc., Prosecutor, v. Richards, 52 N. J. L. 156, 18 Atl. 582; Honduras Commercial Co. v. State Assessors, 54 N. J. L. 278, 23 Atl. 668; Lumberville Delaware Bridge Co. v. State Assessors (State, Lumberville Delaware Bridge Co., Prosecutors, v. State Assessors) 55 N. J. L. 529, 25 L.R.A. 134, 26 Atl. 711; State, Marsden Co., Prosecutor, v. State Assessors, 61 N. J. L. 461, 39 Atl. 638; Hancock v. Singer Mfg. Co. 62 N. J. L. 289, 42 L.R.A. 852, 41 Atl. 846; Re Mutual Mercantile Agency, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435; Myers v. Campbell, 64 N. J. L. 186, 44 Atl. 863; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Atlantic Transp. Co. 62 N. J. Eq. 751, 48 Atl. 997; Newark v. State Bd. of Taxation, 67 N. J. L. 246, 51 Atl. 67; Arimex Consol. Copper Co. v. State Assessors, 69 N. J. L. 121, 54 Atl. 244; Hardin v. Morgan, 70 N. J. L. 484, 57 Atl. 155; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961, 141 U. S. 40, 45, 35 L. ed. 628, 630, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 20 L. ed. 568; Atlantic & P. Telg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. ed. 1116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 6; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 578, 932; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 199, 37 L. ed. 132, 135, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. L. 398; First Nat. Bank v. Aultman, M. & Co. 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; 2 Cook, Corp. 5th ed. 561-563.

Messrs. Frederick D. Silber and Horace Kent Tenney submitted the cause for appellees:

The license fee or "franchise tax" in question is not a tax, according to the decisions of the courts of New Jersey, and other courts.

Re United States Car Co. 60 N. J. Eq. 514, 43 Atl. 673; Re Ott, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637; Re Danville Rolling Mill Co. 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327; First Nat. Bank v. Aultman, M. & Co. 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; North Jersey Street R. Co. v. Jersey City (N. J. L.) 63 Atl. 83; 1 Cooley, Taxn. pp. 6, 7; State, Singer Mfg. Co., Prosecutor, v. Heppenheimer, 58 N. J. L. 634, 32 L.R.A. 643, 34 Atl. 1061; Hancock v. Singer Mfg. Co. 62 N. J. L. 289, 42 L.R.A. 852, 41 Atl. 846; Lumberville Delaware Bridge Co. v. State Assessors (State, Lumberville Delaware Bridge Co., Prosecutors, v. State Assessors) 55 N. J. L. 537, 25 L.R.A. 134, 26 Atl. 711; American Smelting & Ref. Co. v. People, 34 Colo. 240, 82 Pac. 531.

The claim for 1903 should be disallowed, because said claim was not in existence, and did not constitute a debt, at the time the bankruptcy petition was filed, and was not then "a tax legally due and owing."

First Nat. Bank v. Aultman, M. & Co. supra; Emmerman v. Ohio Steel & I. Specialty Co. 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40, note.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The provisions of the bankrupt law governing the payment of taxes are found in § 64a, act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), which reads:

"Sec. 64a. The court shall order the trustee to pay all taxes legally due and owing [488] by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality, in advance 286 of the payment of dividends to creditors, and, upon filing the receipts of the proper public officers for such payment, he shall be credited with the amount thereof, and in case any question arises as to the amount or legality of any such tax, the same shall be heard and determined by the court."

The statute of the state of New Jersey (Gen. Stat. 1895, §§ 251, 252, 257, 258, 260) by its title undertakes to provide for the imposition of state taxes upon certain corporations, and for the collection thereof. It requires the corporation to make return to the state board of assessors on or before the first Tuesday in May of each year, and to pay an annual license fee or franchise tax of a certain per cent on its capital stock issued and outstanding on January 1 of each year, up to and including $3,000,000; a different per cent on sums in excess of $3,000,000, and not exceeding $5,000,000, and on outstanding capital stock exceeding $5,000,000, $50 per million or any part thereof. In case the corporation shall fail to make return the state board shall ascertain and fix the amount of the annual license fee or franchise tax, and shall report to the comptroller on or before the first Monday in June the basis and amount of the tax as returned by each company to, or ascertained by, the board, which shall then become due and payable, and it shall be the duty of the state treasurer to receive the same. If the tax remains unpaid on July 1st after the same becomes due it shall thenceforth bear interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month. That the tax shall be a debt due from the company to the state, for which it may maintain an action at law for recovery thereof, after the same shall have been in arrears for the period of one month, and the tax shall be a preferred debt in cases of insolvency, and in cases of arrears for three months the state may apply for an injunction to restrain the company from exercising its corporate franchise; and that if any corporation shall be delinquent for two years its charter shall be void, unless further time be given for the payment of taxes.

*It is contended for the appellee that these [489] provisions do not entitle the state to the payment of its claim as a preferred tax within the meaning of the bankrupt act. It is insisted, in the first place, that a proper construction of the act of 1898 does not require the payment of taxes to a state wherein the bankrupt has no property, and the state no means of collecting the tax from property within its jurisdiction. And it is urged that the taxes to be paid are those legally due and owing to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality, which does not contemplate payment to any and all states, but only to THE state, which, it is insisted, should be interpreted with the limitation stated.

It is to be noted that there is a very significant difference in this respect, in the act of 1898, from the provisions of the bankrupt act of 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 530, chap. 176), the law in force last before, and doubtless in the view of Congress when the present law was drafted. That act of 1867 gave priority of payment to all debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof, all debts due to the state in which the proceedings in bankruptcy were pending, and all taxes and assessments made under the laws of such state, and provided that nothing contained in the act should interfere with the assessment and collection of taxes by the authority of the United States or any state.

The requirement of the present law is a wide departure from the act of 1867, and specifically obliges the trustee to pay all taxes legally due and owing, without distinction between the United States and the state, county, district, or municipality.

An argument is made as to the alleged injustice of this requirement, in that it may take away from the local creditors in the state where the property of the corporation is situated practically all the assets of the corporation in favor of the state where the corporation is organized, but has no business or property. And it is urged that to permit a state, under such circumstances, to [490] have a preference in the payment of *taxes would give to it an advantage which it could not otherwise obtain for want of charge or lien upon the property. But considerations of this character, however properly addressed to the legislative branch of the government, can have no place in influencing judicial determination. It is the province of the court to enforce, not to make, the laws, and, if the law works inequality, the redress, if any, must be had from Congress.

The question is, Is the claim a tax legally due and owing to the state of New Jersey? We have been cited to many cases in the state of New Jersey, some of which, it is alleged, maintain the theory of the appellant that this is a tax, and some the contrary view.

Without undertaking to analyze these numerous cases or to harmonize the views expressed by different judges, we think the weight of judicial decision in that state favors the view that this is a tax imposed upon the right of the corporation to continue to be a corporation, with power to exercise its corporate franchises, based upon the amount of its capital stock issued and outstanding.

In Hancock v. Singer Mfg. Co. 62 N. J. L. 289, 42 L.R.A. 852, 41 Atl. 846, it was said: 203 U. S.

"The act of 1884 (Pamph. L. p. 232) is entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Imposition of State Taxes upon Certain Corporations and for the Collection Thereof.'

"In this act this imposition is called a yearly license fee or tax.

"In a supplement passed to the act of 1884 (Pamph. L. 1891, p. 150) it is styled 'a tax.'

"In a further supplement, passed in 1892 (Pamph. L. p. 136), it is called 'an annual license fee or franchise tax.'

"It is wholly immaterial what name may be given to it. The fact that it is called a 'license fee' or 'franchise tax' cannot validate it. It is levied under an act passed 'to authorize the imposition of state taxes,' and it is none the less an interdicted imposition [having reference to the charter *then being [491] considered], and none the less a tax because it is given a new name.

"Although under our adjudications, it is not a tax on property in a sense which brings it within article 4, § 7, paragraph 12, of our state Constitution, it is a tax on the capital stock of the corporation. Otherwise the act would be manifestly void for want of a title expressing its object, and the state would be deprived of all its revenue under the act of 1892. The franchise of the company is the right to hold property and exercise its corporate privileges. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that where a corporation is exempted from taxation, it is not subject to a tax on its franchise. Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 20 L. ed. 568."

While we take this view of the decisions of the supreme court of New Jersey, and reach the conclusion that the claim in question is for a tax within the meaning of the law as construed by that court, the bankruptcy act is a Federal statute, the ultimate interpretation of which is in the Federal courts. It is doubtless true, as was said in the opinion of the learned judge speaking for the circuit court of appeals, in this case, that if the highest court of the state should decide that a given statute imposed no tax within the meaning of the law as interpreted by it, a Federal court, in passing upon the bankruptcy act, would not compel the state to accept a preference from the bankrupt's estate upon a different view of the law. Conceding the doctrine that the meaning of a statute is a state question, except where rights, the subject of adjudication by the Federal courts, have accrued before its construction by the state court, or the question of contract within the protection of the Federal Constitution is involved, still a state court, while entitled to great consideration, cannot conclusively decide that to be a tax within the meaning of a Federal law providing for the payment of taxes, which is not so in fact. The section (64a) itself declares that, in case of disputes as to the amount or legality of any such tax, they [492]*shall be heard and determined by the court. The state court may construe a statute and define its meaning, but whether its construction creates a tax within the meaning of a Federal statute, giving a preference to taxes, is a Federal question, of ultimate decision in this court.

We are of opinion that this claim was for a tax. The language of the act, as we have said, is very broad, and includes all taxes. It is not necessary to enter upon a discussion of the different forms which taxes may take. Generally speaking, a tax is a pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property for the purpose of supporting the government. We think this exaction is of that character. It is required to be paid by the corporation after organization in invitum. The amount is fixed by the statute, to be paid on the outstanding capital stock of the corporation each year, and capable of being enforced by action against the will of the taxpayer. As was said by Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court in [Meriwether v. Garrett] 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197:

"Taxes are not debts. It was so held by this court in the case of Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. ed. 101. Debts are obligations for the payment of money founded upon contract, express or implied. Taxes are imposts levied for the support of the government, or for some special purpose authorized by it. The consent of the taxpayer is not necessary to their enforcement. They operate in invitum. Nor is their nature affected by the fact that in some states—and we believe in Tennessee—an action of debt may be instituted for their recovery. The form of procedure cannot change their character."

It is urged by the appellee, and upon this ground the case was decided in the circuit court of appeals, that this is in no just sense a tax levied by the state, but is the result of a contract by which the corporation was brought into existence, the consideration being the payment of annual sums for the privileges given it by the state, for which no lien is given upon the property, but only a right of action for their recovery. [493]*But this imposition is in no just sense a contract. The amount to be paid, fixed by the statute, is subject to control and change at the will of the state. It is imposed upon all corporations, whether organized before or after the passage of the act. The corporation is not consulted in fixing the amount of the tax, and under the laws of New Jersey the charter of such corporations as this may be amended or repealed. Hancock v. Singer

Mfg. Co. 62 N. J. L. 289-328, 42 L.R.A. 852, 41 Atl. 846.

The form of the collection of taxes is left to the discretion of the taxing power; sometimes a lien is provided, sometimes a summary method of collection is awarded; in other cases, an action for debt is given; and, as in the present case, with the right of prohibition of the exercise of corporate franchises by injunction for failure to pay.

We think, then, that, as denominated in the statute, this was a tax imposed by the state upon the corporation for the privilege of existence and the continued right to exercise its franchise.

The state which created this corporation had the right to fix the terms of its existence, and to provide, if it saw fit so to do, that, for the continued existence of its franchise, the corporation should pay certain sums to the state, fixed by the amount of its yearly outstanding capital stock. New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1-37, 50 L. ed. 65-75, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, et seq.

Coming to the specific objections to the claim for the year 1902, the claim was presented upon the basis of $40,000,000 of outstanding capital stock, when in fact there was only $10,000,000 of such stock, the assessment by the state board being upon the former sum, and made upon the failure of the corporation to report. But we do not think the finding of the state board is conclusive. The tax is to be assessed upon capital stock actually outstanding. It may well be doubted whether the board had power to tax any other stock. But be that as it may, § 64a specifically provides that in case any question arises as to the amount or legality of taxes, the same shall be heard and determined by the court, with a view to ascertaining *the amount really due. We [494] do not think it was the intention of Congress to conclude the bankruptcy courts by the findings of boards of this character, and that the claim should have been upon the basis of the capital stock actually outstanding.

The amount claimed for the year 1903, it is insisted, had not accrued at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, which was on April 23, 1903, the return being made on May 2, 1903, and the assessment was not made until July 1, 1903; but the annual return, required to be made to the board on or before the first Tuesday in May, is upon the basis of the capital stock issued and outstanding the first of January preceding the making of the return. The bankrupt act requires the payment of all taxes legally due and owing. We think the tax thus assessed upon that basis was legally due and owing, although not collectible until after the adjudication.

We reach the conclusion that, under the bankruptcy act, these taxes, in the amounts hereinbefore indicated, were entitled to preferential payment in favor of the state of New Jersey, and that the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in reaching a contrary conclusion.

Its judgment will be reversed and the cause will be remanded to the District Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan (with whom concurred Mr. Chief Justice Fuller and Mr. Justice Peckham) dissenting:

The Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Peckham, and myself dissent from the opinion of the court. In our judgment the "taxes" owing by a bankrupt to a state—which § 64a of the bankruptcy act [30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447] provides shall be paid in advance of the payment of dividends to creditors—do not embrace an "annual license fee or franchise tax" (the words of the New Jersey statute), which, strictly, is not a property tax, but only an exaction by the state for the privilege given to a corporation *to do certain business under its charter. We think the bankruptcy act should be so construed. It cannot be otherwise construed without doing gross injustice to those creditors of the bankrupt corporation who have business transactions with it at its place of business. Here the bankrupt corporation did no business in New Jersey. So far as appears, it did not have, nor expect to have, any connection with that state except to become incorporated under its laws. It had its seat of operations and all its tangible property in the state of Illinois. It had no property in New Jersey. Its scheme was to get a charter from New Jersey and then go to another state for purposes of its business. We do not think that Congress intended that, in the distribution of the assets of a bankrupt, preference should be given to the claims of a state which have their origin in, and are wholly based upon, a bargain with the state whereby certain privileges are granted in exchange for certain payments,—privileges which the state may grant or withhold at pleasure. In our opinion the word "taxes" in the bankruptcy act was intended to embrace only burdens or charges imposed in invitum, and which were in their nature and in reality "taxes," as distinguished from governmental exactions for privileges granted. The claim of New Jersey, whatever its true amount, should not be given priority, but should be placed upon the same footing with claims of other creditors. This view is consistent with the act of Congress.

203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

*ALABAMA & VICKSBURG RAILWAY COMPANY and Robert H. Thompson and Thomas A. McWillie, Its Sureties, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 496-501.)

Carriers—state regulation of railway rates.

The state of Mississippi may, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, establish a flat rate of 3½ cents per 100 pounds on grain and grain products carried from Vicksburg to Meridian over the road of the Alabama & Vicksburg Railway Company, where that company, under the guise of a "rebilling rate," gives any Vicksburg merchant receiving a car load of grain or grain products over the Vicksburg, Shreveport, & Pacific Railroad a rate of 3½ cents per 100 pounds on any grain he may ship to Meridian.

[No. 97.]

Argued November 13, 14, 1906. Decided December 17, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Chancellor of the Fifth Chancery District of that state, dismissing a bill to restrain the enforcement of an order of the state railroad commission establishing a rate on grain and grain products. Affirmed.

See same case below, 86 Miss. 667, 38 So. 356.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On November 16, 1903, the railroad commission of Mississippi, by written order, directed the Alabama & Vicksburg Railway Company, hereinafter called the Vicksburg company, to put into effect, over its line of road from Vicksburg to Meridian, a flat rate of 3½ cents per 100 pounds on grain and grain products. December 3, 1903, an application was made by the railway company to the chancellor of the fifth chancery district of the state to restrain the enforcement of this order. July 11, 1904, a temporary injunction issued on the filing of the bill was dissolved and the bill dismissed. On appeal to the supreme court of the state this decree of the chancellor was affirmed (86 Miss. 667, 38 So. 356), and thereupon this writ of error was sued out.

NOTE.—On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 179.

On the reasonableness of state limitation of railroad rates—see note to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 44 L. ed. U. S. 417.

As to unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

Mr. Harry H. Hall argued the cause, and, with Messrs. McWillie & Thompson, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The institution, adoption, and establishment, on the part of the railway company, of a "division" or "proportion" of a joint through rate, is not the same as, or anything like, the adoption, establishment, or institution of a local, intrastate rate, and is no discrimination.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 915; Parsons v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 167 U. S. 447, 457, 458, 42 L. ed. 231, 235, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 887; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

A voluntary act of a carrier in establishing low rates is no warrant for a legislature or governmental bureau to force said low rates upon a carrier.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684-697, 43 L. ed. 858-864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 268, 46 L. ed. 1157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents is less than the actual cost of hauling. For a state, under pretense of regulating tariffs, to require a railroad company to carry freight at a loss, would be a taking of private property for public use without compensation and without due process of law.

Jack v. Williams, 113 Fed. 827; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Becker, 35 Fed. 883; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 188; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 47; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 683; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

To enforce this flat rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents would be denying to plaintiffs in error the equal protection of the law.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 217; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, supra.

It is perfectly lawful, and in the highest interest of commerce and the public, and in no way discriminatory, for carriers to form exclusive connections and make joint through rates and tariffs, both one or more carriers to the exclusion of others.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 142, 52 U. S. App. 732, 86 Fed. 407; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465; Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 627, 6 C. C. A. 495, 15 U. S. App. 173, 57 Fed. 673; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. ed. 1135, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745.

But, conceding, for the purposes of argument, only, that undue discrimination is created by confining the interstate rebilling arrangement in question exclusively to the Vicksburg, Shreveport, & Pacific Railway and the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, it is not within the province of the Mississippi railroad commission to attempt a correction of such discrimination as to interstate traffic.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557-577, 30 L. ed. 244-251, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Gulf C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Smyth v. Ames and Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, supra.

The mere fact that a greater charge is made between two points for transporting an article or passenger in the same car does not in itself constitute undue discrimination, but all the circumstances surrounding the traffic must be taken into consideration.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

A railroad may prefer itself and its connections without being guilty of undue discrimination.

Kemble v. Boston & A. R. Co. 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 110; Re Unlawful Rates, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 121; Re Relative Rates, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 214; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Gulf,

C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co.; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co.; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co.; Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co.; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co.; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. and Express Cases supra; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 536, 50 L. ed. 585, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

Messrs. Hannis Taylor and C. H. Alexander argued the cause, and, with Mr. Monroe McClurg, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The decree of the lower-court was confined to a single subject-matter wholly within the control of the state of Mississippi, and not subject to any of the clauses of the Federal Constitution which the plaintiffs in error have invoked.

Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 672, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 87, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 587, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 67, 49 L. ed. 667, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Even if the commerce in question was interstate, the order of the railroad commission prohibiting a discrimination within the state was not illegal.

Brannon, 14th Amendment, 188; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 52 La. Ann. 1850, 28 So. 284; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 438, 48 L.R.A. 568, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822; People ex rel. Cairo Teleph. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 166 Ill. 15, 36 L.R.A. 637, 46 N. E. 731; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 560, 21 L. ed. 710; Denver & N. O. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 4 McCrary, 325, 15 Fed. 650; Providence Coal Co. v. Providence & W. R. Co. 15 R. I. 303, 4 Atl. 394; Shipper v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 47 Pa. 338; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

This whole matter has twice been carefully considered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the practice, just such as is here adopted, denounced as a "fiction," and the rate called a rebilling rate, as a local rate in reality.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 721.

The fact that the freight is received in large quantities from a certain connecting carrier or shipper does not warrant giving a special rate.

Re Mobile & O. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 373.

The giving a rebilling privilege for ninety days to those only who had patronized the Vicksburg, Shreveport, & Pacific Railroad is a gross discrimination. Such discrimination is condemned in the severest language by the decisions.

Hays v. Pennsylvania Co. 12 Fed. 309.

The Alabama & Vicksburg Railway cannot give a better rate to the Vicksburg, Shreveport, & Pacific grain than to that brought in by rival carriers. It is liable in damages to the shipper or carrier discriminated against.

Samuels v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 420, 31 Fed. 57.

Discrimination is defined by Judge Brewer in Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 518, 42 L. ed. 259, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822, where he says that the purpose of all such acts is to enforce equality between shippers, and prohibit any rebate or other device by which two shippers shipping over the same line, the same distance, under the same circumstances of carriage, are compelled to pay different prices therefor.

A railroad company cannot discriminate in favor of a shipper who is able to furnish a large amount of freight over another in same business; at least, where both ship in car-load lots.

Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Wilson, 132 Ind. 517, 18 L.R.A. 105, 32 N. E. 311.

Where a carrier charges one connecting carrier more than another, the fact that the higher rate is not unreasonable does not relieve the discrimination.

Samuels v. Louisville & N. R. Co. supra.

The main purpose of all acts of legislatures creating commissions is to force equality of rights for all shippers.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; 7 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 485.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts in this case are few. The company made what it called a "rebilling rate" of 3½ cents per 100 pounds on grain and grain products shipped from Vicksburg to Meridian, that rate, however, being applicable only in case of shipments over the Vicksburg, Shreveport, & Pacific Railroad, hereinafter called the Shreveport road. Instead of being enforced as solely a rebilling rate, the Vicksburg merchant who received a car load of grain or grain products over the Shreveport road was permitted to either forward it over the plaintiff's road to Meridian, or, at any time within ninety days, in lieu thereof, send a similar car load, no matter whence received, from Vicksburg to Meridian at the same rate. It was in consequence of this effort on the part of the plaintiff to favor shippers who brought grain to Vicksburg over the Shreveport road that the [500]*railroad commission made the order declaring that all grain products shipped from Vicksburg to Meridian should be at the same rate, $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents per 100 pounds. The order of the commission merely meant this: If a Vicksburg merchant who received a car load of grain over the Shreveport road was permitted by the railway company to ship over the Vicksburg road to Meridian any other car load at $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents per 100 pounds, every other merchant in Vicksburg should be permitted to ship at the same rate, although he had had no dealings with the Shreveport company. It is unnecessary to inquire whether the order could be sustained if it appeared that the plaintiff received only $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents as its share of a total rate on through shipments to Meridian from the Northwest by the Shreveport road; for here, under the guise of a rebilling rate, the Vicksburg merchant who dealt with this Western road was given a rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on any grain that he might see fit to ship to Meridian. While it may be true that a local railway's share of an interstate rate may not be a legitimate basis upon which a state railroad commission can establish and enforce a purely local rate, yet, whenever, under the guise or pretense of a rebilling rate, some merchants are given a low local rate, the commission is justified in making that rate the rate for all. It is not bound to inquire whether it furnishes adequate return to the railway company, for the state may insist upon equality, to be enforced under the same conditions against all who perform a public or quasi public service. When voluntarily the Vicksburg company established a local rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent from Vicksburg to Meridian for those who had, within 90 days, made a shipment over the Shreveport road, it estopped itself from complaining of an order making that rate applicable to all shipments, no matter whence they arose, and in favor of all merchants, whether those transporting over the Shreveport road or not.

We are not unaware of our decision in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666, in which, on review of the interstate commerce act, we held that *a mere inequality[501, of rate was not always proof of undue discrimination, but we were passing upon an act of Congress, and seeking to ascertain its intent and scope. There was no intimation that it was not within the power of Congress to prescribe an absolute equality of rate. In the present case we are not construing an act of the state of Mississippi or passing upon the powers which by it are given to the state railroad commission. Those matters are settled by the decision of the supreme court of the state, and the question we have to consider is the power of the state to enforce an equality of local rates as between all parties shipping for the same distance over the same road. That a state has such power cannot be doubted, and it cannot be thwarted by any action of a railroad company which does not involve an actual interstate shipment, although done with a view of promoting the business interests of the company. Even if a state may not compel a railroad company to do business at a loss, and conceding that a railroad company may insist, as against the power of the state, upon the right to establish such rates as will afford reasonable compensation for the services rendered, yet, when it voluntarily establishes local rates for some shippers, it cannot resist the power of the state to enforce the same rates for all. The state may insist upon equality as between all its citizens, and that equality cannot be defeated in respect to any local shipments by arrangements made with or to favor outside companies.

We see no error in the ruling of the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi, and its judgment is affirmed.

*FREDERICK L. GRANT SHOE COM-[502]
PANY, Appt.,
v.

W. M. LAIRD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 502-505.)

Appeal—in bankruptcy cases—distinction between appeal and writ of error.

Writ of error, and not appeal, is the only method of reviewing an adjudication of bankruptcy entered on a directed ver-

NOTE.—On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

dict on a jury trial demanded as of right by the alleged bankrupt under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 551, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3429), § 19, for the determination of the issues as to insolvency and the commission of acts of bankruptcy.

[No. 63.]

Argued October 26, 1906. Decided December 17, 1906.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of New York to review an adjudication of bankruptcy entered on a directed verdict at a jury trial demanded as of right by the alleged bankrupt for the determination of the issues as to insolvency and the commission of the acts of bankruptcy. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

In July, 1903, the W. M. Laird Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, commenced proceedings in the district court of the United States for the western district of New York to cause the Frederick L. Grant Shoe Company, a corporation doing business in Rochester, New York, to be adjudicated involuntary bankrupts. The petition was solely made by the Laird Company, it averring, among other things, that the shoe company had less than twelve creditors, and that the petitioner was a creditor and had provable unsecured claims against the shoe company amounting in the aggregate to more than $500. The nature of the claim was detailed at length, and showed that it was one for unliquidated damages aggregating $3,732.80, asserted to have been suffered by reason of breaches of an alleged express warranty in the sale of merchandise. The alleged bankrupt answered, denying its insolvency and the commission of any of the acts of bankruptcy averred in the petition, and demanded a trial by jury of the said issues. It also denied being indebted in any amount to the petitioner.

Soon afterwards a motion was made to dismiss the petition on the ground that, [503] because of the nature of the claim held *by the Laird Company, that company was not a creditor and the holder of a provable claim for any amount against the shoe company within the meaning of subdivision b of § 19 of the bankruptcy act, and consequently was not entitled to file a petition in bankruptcy against the alleged debtor. The motion to dismiss was denied by the district judge. 125 Fed. 576. In the order entered it was directed that the claim of the petitioner be liquidated by the jury at the jury trial demanded by the alleged bankrupt for the determination of the issues as to insolvency and the commission of acts of bankruptcy. On the petition of the alleged bankrupt to review this order it was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit. 66 C. C. A. 78, 130 Fed. 881.

A trial of the issues thus raised was had before a jury in May, 1905, and, as recited in the record, "at the close of all the evidence, the court having directed the jury to find a verdict that the said alleged bankrupt did, within four months of the filing of the petition herein, commit an act of bankruptcy, in that it transferred a portion of its property to the German-American Bank of Rochester, one of its creditors, with the intent to prefer said German-American Bank over its other creditors, and that, at the time of said transfer, said alleged bankrupt was insolvent, and that the petitioner has a provable claim against said alleged bankrupt for damages for the breach of warranty in the sale of shoes, and that the amount of such claim of the petitioner is the sum of $3,454.00, the jury found a verdict accordingly." An order was thereupon entered adjudicating the shoe company a bankrupt, and declaring that the claim of the Laird Company was liquidated at the sum of $3,454.00. The present appeal was then taken.

For the purpose of the appeal, and reciting that it was pursuant to the requirements of general order in bankruptcy No. 36, the trial judge made and filed findings of fact and conclusions of law. A single question of jurisdiction was also certified as having been raised at the opening of the hearing in September, 1905, by motion to dismiss, substantially *upon the grounds [504] urged in the previous motion to dismiss, which had been passed upon by the court of appeals.

Mr. Porter M. French argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Satterlee, Bissell, Taylor, & French, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Hiram R. Wood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. McGuire & Wood, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Without considering whether the shoe company, appellant in this court, is not concluded by the decision of the circuit court of appeals upon the petition asking a review of the order of the district court in bankruptcy, denying the original motion to dismiss, we do not pass upon the question presented by this appeal, as we find we are without authority to do so. Elliott v.

Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 47 L. ed. 200, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133. In the cited case, answering a question certified from the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, it was held that a judgment that a person is not a bankrupt, entered by a court of bankruptcy on a verdict of not guilty in a trial by jury, demanded as of right under § 19 of the bankruptcy act, was reviewable only by writ of error. Section 25a of the bankruptcy act, which authorizes appeals, as in equity cases, to be taken to the circuit court of appeals, among other cases, from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt, was expressly considered, and it was held that the provision only applied to judgments adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt, "when trial by jury is not demanded, and the court of bankruptcy proceeds on its own findings of fact." The reasoning upon which the decision was based was, in substance, that, as in the character of proceeding under consideration the right to a trial by jury was absolute, such a trial was a trial according to the course of the common law, and judgments therein rendered are revisable only on writ of error. P. 332, L. ed. p. 202, Sup. Ct. Rep. [505] p. 135. As, in *the case at bar, a jury was demanded, the trial was before such jury, and their verdict determined the questions at issue, it follows that the record should have been brought to this court by writ of error, and not by appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CHARLES E. HUGHES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 505-507.)

Error to state court—what is highest court of state.

An inferior state court is the final court of the state where the Federal question involved can be decided, and therefore is the court to which a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States must be directed, where the highest state court, although discussing the Federal question in its opinion, and declaring it to be without merit, dismissed a writ of error to the inferior court solely and expressly for want of jurisdiction.

[No. 119.]

NOTE.—As to when writ of error may run to inferior state court—see notes to Kentucky v. Powers, 50 L. ed. U. S. 633; and Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513. 294

Argued December 6, 1906. Decided December 17, 1906.

AN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review an order dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a writ of error to review a judgment of the Corporation Court of the City of Danville, in that state. Dismissed because writ was directed to the wrong court.

See same case below, 104 Va. 240, 51 S. E. 225.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Rush Taggart argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John F. Dillon, George H. Fearons, and Francis Raymond Stark, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

By statutes of the state of Virginia a liability to forfeit the sum of $100 was imposed upon a telegraph company for an omission to promptly transmit and deliver telegrams received by it. Va. Code 1887, §§ 1291, 1292. *On November 2, 1903, [506] Hughes, the defendant in error, handed to the Western Union Telegraph Company, at its office in Danville, Virginia, a message to be transmitted by wire to Pocahontas, Virginia, and there delivered to the addressee. In regular course such message would have gone by way of Bluefield, West Virginia. It reached that point, but was not sent further. For failure to make delivery Hughes sued the telegraph company in the corporation court of the city of Danville to recover the statutory penalty, and obtained a judgment. Error was prosecuted to the supreme court of appeals of Virginia, upon the contention that the transmission of the message in question was interstate commerce, and not subject to the statutory regulations of Virginia, heretofore referred to. The appellate court, however, held (104 Va. 240, 51 S. E. 225) that the case was ruled by a prior decision (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Reynolds, 100 Va. 459, 93 Am. St. Rep. 971, 41 S. E. 856), and that such decision had not been overruled by the decision of this court in Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, and being of opinion, as recited on its journal, "that the writ of error was improvidently awarded," and that it had "no jurisdiction to entertain the same," dismissed the writ of error.

Treating the order of dismissal as a final judgment, we are now asked on this writ of error to reverse the ruling of the supreme court of appeals of Virginia. This, however, we cannot do. It is immaterial that the supreme court of appeals was vested by the state Constitution with appellate jurisdiction in all cases involving the constitutionality of a law as being repugnant to the Constitution of Virginia or of the United States, or that, in the opinion delivered by the court, it discussed the Federal question and declared it to be without merit. The fact is undoubted that the writ of error was dismissed solely and expressly because of a want of jurisdiction, and the effect of the formal entry, adjudging that the court was without jurisdiction to pass upon the questions presented by the writ of error, cannot be different from what it would have been had the court not given [507] expression to its views *in a written opinion. The necessary result of the ruling that the court had not jurisdiction of the writ of error was to determine that the trial court was the final court where the questions presented by the writ could be decided; and, hence, the writ of error should have been directed to that court. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 539, 46 L. ed. 673, 678, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446.

Writ of error dismissed.

N. L. REARICK, Plff. in Err.,
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 507-513.)

Interstate commerce—state regulations—peddlers and drummers.

Interstate commerce is unlawfully burdened by a municipal ordinance exacting a license fee from a person employed by a foreign corporation to solicit, within the municipality, orders for groceries, which the company fills by shipping goods to him for the delivery to, and collection of the purchase price from, the customer, who has the right to refuse the goods if not equal to sample, such goods always being shipped in distinct packages, corresponding to the several orders, except in the case of brooms, which, after being tagged and marked, like the other articles, according to the number ordered, are then tied together in bundles of about a dozen, wrapped up conveniently for shipment.

[No. 47.]

Submitted October 19, 1906. Decided December 17, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Northumberland County, in that state, for violating a municipal ordinance exacting a license fee from the person soliciting orders for a foreign corporation and delivering the goods to the customer. Reversed.

NOTE.—On peddlers and drummers as related to interstate commerce—see notes to Stockard v. Morgan, 46 L. ed. U. S. 785; Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

203 U. S.

See same case below, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 384.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Campbell M. Voorhees submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Philemon S. Karshner was on the brief:

The negotiation of sales of goods that are in another state, for the purpose of introducing them into the state in which the negotiation is made, is interstate commerce, and is protected from local interference, burdens, or tax.

Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502, 30 L. ed. 699, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 50, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 32 L. ed. 637, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

The delivery of goods to a buyer at his residence in one state, that have been sent in pursuance of contract by a seller in another state, is interstate commerce, and subject to no state or local burdens.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 479, 31 L. ed. 700, 704, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 275, 276, 21 L. ed. 146, 161, 162; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

The manner in which interstate commerce is transported cannot be controlled by the states.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 203, 29 L. ed. 158, 161, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 738, 47 Fed. 208; Re Nichols, 48 Fed. 164; Re Tyerman, 48 Fed. 167; Huntington v. Mahan, 142 Ind. 695, 51 Am. St. Rep. 200, 42 N. E. 463; McClellan v. Pettigrew, 44 La. Ann. 356, 10 So. 853; State v. Willing- ham, 9 Wyo. 290, 52 L.R.A. 198, 87 Am. St. Rep. 948, 62 Pac. 797; Stone v. State, 117 Ga. 292, 43 S. E. 740; Menke v. State, 70 Neb. 669, 97 N. W. 1020; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Brennan v. Titusville, supra.

Congress has exclusive control over the transportation, purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities in interstate commerce.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 279, 21 L. ed. 146, 162; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania and Robbins Taxing District, supra; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, supra; Adams Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 147, 49 L. ed. 424, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The states cannot invoke their police power for the purpose of regulating commerce among the states that is national in its character.

Brennan v. Titusville, supra.

Mr. S. P. Wolverton submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Harry S. Knight was on the brief:

Was Rearick, the plaintiff in error, at the time of delivering the goods, engaged in inter-state or intra-state commerce?

a. Where did the sale take place?

Com. v. Hess, 148 Pa. 98, 17 L.R.A. 176, 33 Am. St. Rep. 810, 23 Atl. 977; Com. v. Holstine, 132 Pa. 357, 19 Atl. 273; Garbracht v. Com. 96 Pa. 449, 42 Am. Rep. 550; Com. v. Fleming, 130 Pa. 138, 5 L.R.A. 470, 17 Am. St. Rep. 763, 18 Atl. 622.

b. Was delivery made to the consumer in the original package?

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; May v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 1165, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976.

If Rearick, the plaintiff in error, at the time of delivering the goods, was engaged in interstate commerce, is the Sunbury ordinance in question an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce?

a. Considered as a license tax.

American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 518, 48 L. ed. 545, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Hinson v. Lott, 8 Wall. 148, 19 L. ed. 387; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347.

b. Considered as a police regulation.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 109, 34 L. ed. 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 681; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 229, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Com. v. Zelt, 138 Pa. 615, 11 L.R.A. 602, 21 Atl. 7.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here upon a writ of error to the superior court of Pennsylvania, an appeal to the supreme court of the state having been disallowed by the last-named court. The superior court affirmed a conviction of the plaintiff in error for violating an ordinance of the borough of Sunbury, which made it unlawful to solicit orders for, sell, or deliver, at retail, either on the streets or by traveling from house to house, foreign or domestic goods, not of the parties' own manufacture or production, without a license, for which a large fee was required. In the court of quarter sessions, where the plaintiff in error was convicted, the case was heard upon an agreed statement of facts. Upon these facts the plaintiff in error asked for a ruling that his acts were done in carrying on interstate commerce, and that the ordinance was void as to him, under clause 3, § 8, article 1, of the *Constitution, the[510] commerce clause; and saved his rights. The 14th Amendment also was relied upon, but it is unnecessary to state details concerning that.

The following is a shortened statement of the facts agreed. An Ohio corporation employed an agent to solicit in Sunbury retail orders to the company for groceries. When the company had received a large number of such orders it filled them at its place of business in Columbus, Ohio, by putting up the objects of the several orders in distinct packages, and forwarding them to the defendant by rail, addressed to him "For A. B.," the customer, with the number of the order also on the package, for further identification. The company ultimately kept the orders, but it kept no book accounts with the customers, looking only to the defendant. The defendant alone had authority to receive the goods from the railroad, and when he received them he delivered them, as was his duty, to the customers, for cash paid to him. He then sent the money to the corporation. The customer had the right to refuse the goods if not equal to the sample shown to him when he gave the order. In that or other cases of nondelivery the defendant returned the goods to Columbus. No shipments were made to the defendant except to fill such orders, and no deliveries were made by him except to the parties named on the packages. In the case of brooms, they were tagged and marked like the other articles, according to the number ordered, but they then were tied together into bundles of about a dozen, wrapped up conveniently for shipment. The defendant had no license, but relied upon the invalidity of the ordinance, as we have said.

If the acts of the plaintiff in error were done in the course of commerce between several states, the law is established that his request for a ruling was right, and that he should have been discharged. Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 497, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229. It will be seen from the insertion of [511] a ground *relied upon by the prosecution to avoid that conclusion was that the goods, or at least this part of them, were not in the original packages when delivered, and that therefore the case did not fall within the decisions last cited, but rather within Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; May v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 1165, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976; and Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233. In other words, it was contended that the brooms, before they were sold, had become mingled with, or part of, the common mass of goods in the state, and so subject to the local law. But the doctrine as to original packages primarily concerns the right to sell within the prohibiting or taxing state goods coming into it from outside. When the goods have been sold before arrival the limitations that still may be found to the power of the state will be due, generally, at least, to other reasons, and we shall consider whether the limitations may not exist, irrespective of that doctrine, in some cases where there is no executed sale. Hence the prosecution, whatever its assumption on the point last mentioned, sought to show that there was no sale until the goods were delivered and the cash paid for them. The superior court contented itself with the suggestion that the contract would have been satisfied by the delivery of articles corresponding to sample, although bought at the next door. The argument submitted to us goes farther, and affirms that the order was not accepted and did not bind the corporation until the delivery took place.

The answer to the latter of the two positions just stated is simple. The fair meaning of the agreed fact that the orders were given to agents employed to solicit them is that the company offered the goods, and that the orders were acceptances of offers from the other side. If there were the slightest reason to doubt that the contracts were made with the company through its authorized agent at the moment when the orders were given, which we do not perceive that there is, certainly the contrary could not be assumed in order to sustain a conviction. It is for the prosecution to make out its case. We may mention here, in parenthesis, that of course it *does not [512] matter to the question before us that the contract was made in Pennsylvania. Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. The other suggestion, that the company would have been free to deliver any articles equal to sample, as well if bought in Pennsylvania as if coming from Ohio, of course assumes that there was a contract. With regard to this argument it might be an interesting question whether the shipments described amounted to authorized appropriations of the goods to the contracts, notwithstanding the fact that the deliveries were to be only for cash; but we are not required to go into such niceties. The decisions already in the books go as far as it is necessary for us to go in order to decide this case.

"Commerce among the several states" is a practical conception, not drawn from the "witty diversities" ([Yaites v. Gough] Yelv. 33) of the law of sales. Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 398, 399, 49 L. ed. 518, 525, 526, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276. The brooms were specifically appropriated to specific contracts, in a practical, if not in a technical, sense. Under such circumstances it is plain that, wherever might have been the title, the transport of the brooms for the purpose of fulfilling the contracts was protected commerce. In Brennan v. Titusville, supra, pictures were sold by sample, as the brooms were here, and although the pictures were consigned to the purchasers directly, the railroad collecting the price, there was no discussion of the question whether the title had passed. In American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 143, 49 L. ed. 417, 422, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182. that question was referred to only to be waived. In Caldwell v. North Carolina, supra, the pictures were consigned to the defendant, an agent, as here, with the additional facts that the pictures and frames were sent in large packages, which were opened by the agent on their arrival, and that the pictures, then for the first time, were put into their proper frames, and, for all that appears, then for the first time appropriated to specific purchasers. In the court below all the judges agreed that the title did not pass until delivery. 127 N. C. 521, 526, 527, [513] 37 S. E. 138. This court intimated *nothing to the contrary. On the special verdict it well might be that the sale was by sample, as in Brennan v. Titusville. It was decided that the intervention of an agent made no difference in the result. The superior court distinguished that case as one that necessarily involved interstate commerce because it called for the skill of the seller, but no such fact appears in the case or was referred to as a ground of decision, and there is no sufficient warrant for assuming it to be true.

Some argument was made, to be sure, that even if the defendant was engaged in interstate commerce when he delivered the goods, still the ordinance bound him. American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365, was especially relied upon. But that decision did not modify the cases that we have cited. It dealt with a case where a mass of nails and iron wire was collected at Memphis from other states, by a manufacturer, for all purposes; some of the goods to be sold on the spot, some ultimately to be forwarded to purchasers in other states, but no package being consigned to or intended for any special customer, or free from the chance of being sold by a new bargain in Tennessee. Under such circumstances the goods were liable to taxation in that state. The distinction between that case and the present does not need further emphasis. In view of the many decisions upon the matter we deem further argument unnecessary to show that the judgment below was wrong.

Judgment reversed.

[514] *ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
J. U. MCKENDREE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 514-530.)

Error to state court—Federal question—certificate.

1. The certificate of a state court that the defendant railway company, in a suit to recover damages for the infection of cattle because of a violation of the quarantine regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture under cover of the act of February 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 791, chap. 349, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 613), insisted that such statute was unconstitutional, and that, even if constitutional, did not authorize such regulations or give a remedy in damages, removes any doubt as to whether a Federal question was raised within the meaning and intent of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, governing writs of error to state courts, where, after a demurrer to the answer of the railway company setting forth the unconstitutionality of the law and the action of the Secretary thereunder had been sustained, verdict and judgment were rendered against the defendant.

Commerce—quarantine regulations.

2. Quarantine regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture acting under cover of the act of February 2, 1903, entitled "An Act to Enable the Secretary of Agriculture to More Effectually Suppress and Prevent the Spread of Contagious and Infectious Diseases of Live Stock, and for Other Purposes," are void as in excess of the powers conferred by that act, where, on their face, they apply as well to intrastate as to interstate commerce.

[No. 13.]

Submitted December 14, 1905. Restored to docket for oral argument December 18, 1905. Suggestion of lack of jurisdiction submitted April 16, 1906. Decided December 17, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of Carlisle County in the State of Kentucky to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages from a railway company for the infection of cattle because of a violation of quarantine regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

Defendant in error, plaintiff below, brought an action against the railroad company as a common carrier operating a railroad through Carlisle county, Kentucky, setting forth *that the defendant received [515] certain cars of infected cattle and transported them to Arlington, Carlisle county, Kentucky, where they were unloaded July 13, 1903, and placed in stock pens where the cattle of the plaintiff, rightfully running

NOTE.—On the certificate of a state court as showing presence of Federal question—see notes to Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 50 L. ed. U. S. 428; and Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

On the constitutionality of state legislation regulating the importation of infected animals—see notes to Reid v. Colorado, 47 L. ed. U. S. 108, and Grimes v. Eddy, 26 L.R.A. 638.

On inspection laws as regulations of commerce—see note to New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. ante, 78.

On inspection, quarantine, and sanitary regulations interfering with interstate commerce—see note to Smith v. Lowe, 59 C. C. A. 191.

loose upon the commons, could and did come in contact with the infected cattle, and contracted Texas cow fever. That the company knew or could have known, by the exercise of reasonable care, that the cattle had infectious germs when unloaded, having been brought from an infected district, in conflict with well-known quarantine laws.

A general demurrer was interposed by defendant and overruled.

After an answer of general denial the defendant filed an amended answer:

"Further answering herein, the defendant says that the claims of the plaintiff herein asserted are based upon a certain alleged act of Congress of the United States of America approved February 2, 1903, entitled 'An Act to Enable the Secretary of Agriculture to More Effectually Suppress and Prevent the Spread of Contagious and Infectious Diseases of Live Stock, and for Other Purposes,' which act is published and contained in volume 32, United States Statutes at Large, beginning at page 791, chapter 349, and also in a supplement to the United States Compiled Statutes issued in 1903, by the West Publishing Company, St. Paul, Minnesota, beginning at page 372 of said volume (U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 613), and said claims are further based upon certain alleged regulations adopted and promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture on March 13, 1903, pursuant to the authority attempted to be conferred upon him by said alleged act of Congress above mentioned, approved February 2, 1903.

"The defendant says that said act of Congress hereinbefore mentioned, and said regulations adopted by the Secretary of Agriculture, as hereinbefore stated, are each and all of them repugnant to and in contravention of the Constitution of the United States of America, and in excess of the powers of Congress and of the Secretary of Agriculture under the Constitution *of the United States, and they are each and all, therefore, unconstitutional and void, and, under the Constitution of the United States, this defendant has the right, privilege, and immunity of being exempt from the assertion or prosecution of any claims against it based upon or arising under such act of Congress or said regulation, or any of them, and this defendant, as permitted by § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), hereby specially sets up and claims and pleads in defense of this action the right and privilege and immunity which is secured to it by the Constitution of the United States, to be exempt from all suits and prosecutions and all claims against it based upon or arising under such unconstitutional and void act of Congress and regulations adopted or promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture."

203 U. S.

A demurrer was filed by the plaintiff to the amended answer.

The plaintiff filed an amended petition, the affirmative allegations of which were controverted.

This amended petition sets forth:

"The plaintiff, J. U. McKendree, comes, and by leave of the court amends his petition, and says that the defendant, Illinois Central Railroad Company, on the 13th day of June, 1903, received one car of cattle at Grand Junction, Tennessee, to be transported to the town of Arlington, Kentucky, and on the 13th day of said month unloaded them in the stock pens in said town.

"That the town of Arlington is a small town, located on defendant's road in this, Carlisle, county, and defendant's stock pens are located adjacent to the public highway and commons, and that Grand Junction, Tennessee, is located on defendant's road and south of the quarantine line that was established on the 14th day of March, 1903, by and under the existing quarantine laws, and that said quarantine line, beginning on the Mississippi river, at the southeast corner of the state of Missouri, at the western boundary of Tennessee.' [Here follows a description of the quarantine line through the body of the state of Tennessee as set forth in amendment No. 4 to B. A. I., *Or- [517] der No. 107.] And that the defendants received said cattle south of said quarantine line, and transported them north and out of a quarantine district, and south of the said quarantine line, and transported them north through the state of Tennessee into this county and state, and unloaded them in the town of Arlington, and placed them in their stock pens adjacent to the public highway and commons, where plaintiff's cows came in contact with the germ of Texas cow fever that said cattle had on them when put in the pens as aforesaid; that said stock pens were suffered and permitted to remain open and exposed to cattle after the removal of said cattle, without disinfecting, or any other effort to protect exposed stock, and plaintiff's cows contracted Texas cow fever from said germs produced from said cattle while in said stock pens, to the damage of plaintiff.

"Wherefore he prays as in his original petition."

The court sustained the demurrer to the amended answer of the defendant, and upon the issue joined, the case was sent to the jury. A verdict and judgment were rendered against the railroad company, and in favor of the plaintiff below.

There was no dispute as to the transportation of the cattle from a point south of the quarantine line to a point north thereof, and the placing of them in pens at Arlington. The court, over the defendant's objection, submitted the case to the jury upon the questions of whether the transported cattle were infected, and, if so, whether the plaintiff's cattle contracted the disease from them while they were in the pens of the defendant company at Arlington.

The presiding judge of the Carlisle circuit court filed the following certificate:

"I, R. J. Bugg, sole presiding judge of the circuit court of Carlisle county, in the state of Kentucky, now and at the time of the trial of the above entitled cause, do hereby certify:

"That, upon the trial of said cause, the defendant, Illinois Central Railroad Company, relied for its defense upon certain rights, privileges, and immunities specially [518] claimed by it under *the Constitution of the United States of America, and it insisted upon its said rights, privileges, and immunities throughout the trial of said action, and in the assertion of them it claimed and contended that the various regulations and orders made and promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and offered in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff herein over the objections of defendant, were unconstitutional, null, and void, as being in excess of the powers conferred, or which could be conferred, by act of Congress upon the Secretary of Agriculture under the Constitution of the United States of America, and that the said act of Congress, approved February 2, 1903, under which the Secretary of Agriculture assumed to promulgate said orders and regulations, was itself unconstitutional, null, and void, as being in conflict with the Constitution of the United States of America, and in excess of the powers conferred by it upon the Congress.

"Said defendant, Illinois Central Railroad Company, further contended throughout the trial of said cause that no right of action against it accrued to the plaintiff by reason of any of the alleged regulations or orders made or promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and offered in evidence upon the trial of this action, or by reason of the alleged failure on the part of the defendant to observe or to comply with any of said regulations or orders, on the ground that the said regulations or orders did not assume or attempt to give, and that the said act of Congress did not assume or attempt to give, to the plaintiff herein, or to any other in like situation, a remedy by way of civil action against the defendant herein for its alleged breach of any of said regulations or orders made or promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and throughout the trial of said action the defendant, Illinois

Central Railroad Company, specially set up and claimed, even if said act of Congress and said regulations and orders were valid under the Constitution and laws of the United States, still it had a right, privilege, or immunity under the said act of Congress or the said regulations or orders, from any liability to the plaintiff, *J. U. McKendree, [519] in a civil action for damages claimed on account of its alleged breach of said regulations or orders.

"In allowing the said regulations or orders of the Secretary of Agriculture to be given in evidence before the jury, and in overruling the motion of defendant to peremptorily instruct the jury to return a verdict in its favor, the Carlisle circuit court disallowed the various contentions made as above stated on behalf of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and denied the claims made by it of the rights, privileges, or immunities specially claimed by it as above stated, and held that the various claims made by it were not well founded in law under the Constitution and laws of the United States of America, and the claims of the plaintiff herein were established and a judgment in his favor rendered solely by reason of defendant's alleged breach of said regulations and orders."

The testimony tended to show that the cows of the plaintiff came in contact with cattle transported by the railroad company from a point south of the quarantine line set forth in the amended petition.

On March 13, 1903, the Secretary of Agriculture, acting under cover of the act of February 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 791, chap. 349, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 613), entitled "An Act to Enable the Secretary of Agriculture to More Effectually Suppress and Prevent the Spread of Contagious and Infectious Diseases of Live Stock, and for Other Purposes," established a quarantine line from west to east throughout the United States, from California to Maryland, and forbidding the transportation of cattle from points south of the line to points north of the line, except in the manner in the said order specified.

Section 9 of the order provided: "9. Violation of these regulations is punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

By amendment of March 14, 1904, the Secretary of Agriculture adopted as a quarantine line a line running from west *to east [520] of the state of Tennessee, from the south of which the cattle said to have infected those of the plaintiff were transported and placed in pens in a manner not in conformity with the order.

Messrs. J. M. Dickinson and Edmund F. Trabue submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Blewett Lee was on the brief:

The case at bar is one of that comparatively rare class where a decision either way necessarily involves a decision against a claim to a Federal right, so that either party, if defeated, would have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. Each of the contending parties based his right upon the provision of the act of February 2, 1903, and claimed a right, privilege, or immunity thereunder, the plaintiff claiming that it gave him a right of action against the defendant, the defendant claiming that it gave him an immunity from civil suit, and also that the Constitution gave him immunity from liability.

Matthews v. Zane, 4 Cranch, 382, 2 L. ed. 654; Buel v. Van Ness, 8 Wheat. 312, 324, 5 L. ed. 624, 627; Palmer v. Hussey, 119 U. S. 96, 30 L. ed. 362, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 545, 41 L. ed. 817, 820, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

It is quite immaterial that the state court held valid the statutes of the United States and the authority exercised thereunder which were questioned by the defendant, for the ground of appeal is that the state court decided against a right, privilege, or immunity claimed under the Constitution or the statutes of the United States.

Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 687, 20 L. ed. 460; Pennywit v. Eaton (Scott v. Eaton) 15 Wall. 380, 21 L. ed. 72.

No particular form of words is needed to raise the Federal question.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 199, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 67, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

The record shows that the question was necessarily involved in the decision.

Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 334, 335, 40 L. ed. 986, 989, 990, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

In such case the certificate of the presiding judge will be looked to to ascertain whether the question was in fact raised.

Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281, 285, 10 L. ed. 965, 966; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 153, 14 L. ed. 364, 366; Medberry v. Ohio, 24 How. 413, 414, 16 L. ed. 739.

The certificate of the presiding judge is not merely waste paper. It cannot of itself invest this court with jurisdiction, it is true; but, if the record discloses the fact that a Federal question was necessarily involved, and that the judgment could not have been rendered without deciding that question, then the certificate is admissible to show that it was raised, and the attention of the court called to it before judgment, and that the court did in fact pass on it.

Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 68, 46 L. ed. 86, 87, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Armstrong v. Athens County, supra; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 11 Wall. 36, 39, 20 L. ed. 48, 49; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 330, 23 L. ed. 511, 513; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 486, 27 L. ed. 795, 798, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 160, 36 L. ed. 922, 924, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 70, 41 L. ed. 72, 74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 41, 48, 45 L. ed. 415, 418, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256.

The record in the present case leaves no doubt upon the subject that the state court considered the Federal rights and immunities claimed by the plaintiff in error as having been raised, and denied the claim so asserted.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 657, 660, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 1153, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 30, 24 L. ed. 989, 991; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

The Federal questions were sufficiently presented.

Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 440, 37 L. ed. 1134, 1136, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 223, 50 L. ed. 157, 161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

Upon the question of jurisdiction the case is very similar to Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 621, 42 L. ed. 878, 881, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

Where a statute is couched in terms so broad as to exceed the limits of the power of the legislature to enact it, the court will not, by construction, limit the statute to the scope which might constitutionally be given it by the legislature, but will hold the statute unconstitutional.

United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 221, 23 L. ed. 563, 565; Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 98, 99, 25 L. ed. 550, 553, 554; Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80, 85, 26 L. ed. 318, 319; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 641, 642, 27 L. ed. 290, 294, 295, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 305, 29 L. ed. 185, 197, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 94, 30 L. ed. 115, 116, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 685, 689, 30 L. ed. 766, 768, 769, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 565, 46 L. ed. 679, 692, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; James v. Bowman, 190 U. S. 127, 140, 47 L. ed. 979, 983, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

Even an act of Congress covering legitimate as well as illegitimate fields of legislation in a single provision cannot be rendered effective by holding it invalid as to the field wherein Congress had no power to legislate.

United States v. Reese, Trade-Mark Cases, Sprague v. Thompson, Baldwin v. Franks, and Conolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. supra.

Attorney General Moody, Solicitor General Hoyt, and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds submitted the cause for the United States in support of suggestion of lack of jurisdiction:

To give this court jurisdiction the Federal question must have been distinctly raised and passed upon by the state court. It cannot originate in the certificate, assignments of error, or brief.

Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 149, 49 L. ed. 990, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Manning v. French, 133 U. S. 186, 33 L. ed. 582, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 54, 31 L. ed. 687, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506.

Where the state court sustains the validity of an act or authority called in question, its judgment cannot be reviewed by this court.

McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. 327, 35 L. ed. 796, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Jersey City & B. R. Co. v. Morgan, 160 U. S. 288, 40 L. ed. 430, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Baker v. Baldwin, 187 U. S. 61, 47 L. ed. 75, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19; Missouri ex rel. Carey v. Andriano, 138 U. S. 496, 499, 500, 34 L. ed. 1012, 1013, 1014, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

When review of the judgment of a state court is sought, the right, privilege, or immunity claimed under the Constitution must have been indicated specifically by appropriate language, or by necessary intendment, making it clear that a certain definite provision was relied on.

Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 516, 517, 15 L. ed. 506, 508, 509; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 184, 37 L. ed. 941, 302

942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 172, 41 L. ed. 673, 674, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212-224, 50 L. ed. 157-161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

Under the decisions of this court, the alleged Federal question referred to in the certificate was not raised in the court below at the proper time and in the proper way.

Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 152, 14 L. ed. 365; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 439, 37 L. ed. 1136, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 69, 70, 41 L. ed. 74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 41, 45 L. ed. 415, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256.

Where a Federal question is raised in the state court, the party who brings the case to this court cannot raise here another Federal question which was not raised below.

Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

Defendant's alleged right, under the act of February 2, 1903, to be exempt from a civil action by an individual for special damages occasioned him by a violation of the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture made in pursuance thereof, is therefore clearly frivolous and fictitious, and made solely for the purpose of obtaining a review by this court of the constitutional questions involved.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 533, 37 L. ed. 267, 270, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The government objects to the jurisdiction of this court to entertain the writ of error upon the ground that no Federal question is raised within the intent and meaning of § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). But we are of opinion that such questions were raised, and that we are required upon this record to review the judgment of the state court.

An inspection of the record shows that the case as made by the plaintiff below upon the amended petition was to recover damages for the infection of his cattle because of coming in contact with cattle transported by the railroad company from a point south to a point north of the quarantine line established by the Secretary of Agriculture, in a manner violative of regulations for the transportation and keeping of cattle established by the Secretary's order.

It was not an action to recover for negligence upon common-law principles. The complaint was amended in such form as to count upon the supposed right of action accruing to the *plaintiff because of the violation of the Department's order. The demurrer of the plaintiff to the answer of the railroad company, setting forth the unconstitutionality of the law and the action of the Secretary thereunder, was sustained.

The certificate of the court below is given as to the extent and character of the Federal rights and immunities claimed by the defendant and clearly states that the defendant alleged the unconstitutionality of the statute and order, that the order was in excess of the power given the Secretary, and that the statute gave no remedy in damages.

The court left the case to the jury under instructions to find a verdict for the plaintiff if it had been shown that the plaintiff's cattle were infected by coming in contact with those transported by the railroad company. It therefore necessarily decided that the act was constitutional and gave a right to recover damages for breach of the requirements of the Secretary made in pursuance thereof, and that the Secretary's order was not in excess of the statutory power given. The amended complaint, as we have said, counted upon the liability in this form. The traverse of the amended complaint made the issue. The certificate did not originate the Federal question. "It is elementary that the certificate of a court of last resort of a state may not import a Federal question into a record, where otherwise such question does not arise; it is equally elementary that such a certificate may serve to elucidate the determination whether a Federal question exists." Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405-412, 50 L. ed. 527-529, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, 290; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 223, 50 L. ed. 157, 161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

This case comes within the principle decided in Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, in which the court said:

"A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held, within the meaning of § 709, to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although the statutes may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit

[526] against his adversary. *Such has been the view taken in many cases where the authority of this court to review the final judgment of the state courts was involved. Lo- gan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 15 Wall. 3, 21 L. ed. 118; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3, 26 L. ed. 939; Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 486, 34 L. ed. 272, 274, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. 327, 35 L. ed. 796, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Claggett, 141 U. S. 520, 35 L. ed. 841, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 546, 41 L. ed. 817, 820, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831."
203 U. S.

To the same effect is Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., supra.

Upon this record, read in the light of the certificate, we think the defendant raised Federal questions as to the constitutionality of the law, and, if constitutional, whether the Secretary's order was within the power therein conferred, and the right to a personal action for damages, in such manner as to give this court jurisdiction of them under § 709, Rev. Statutes.

The railroad company, by the proceedings and judgment in this case, was denied the alleged Federal rights and immunities specially set up in the proceedings, in the enforcement of a statute and departmental orders averred to be beyond the constitutional power of Congress and the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, and in the rendition of a judgment for damages in an action under the statute and order, in opposition to the insistence of the defendant that, even if constitutional, the statute did not confer such power or authorize a judgment for damages.

The constitutional objections urged to the validity of the statute of February 2, 1903, and the Secretary's order, No. 107, purporting to be made under authority of the statute, raise questions of far-reaching importance as to the power of Congress to authorize the head of an executive department of the government to make orders of this character, alleged to be an attempted delegation of the legislative power solely vested by the Constitution in Congress. These questions, it is suggested by the counsel for the government, have become *academic by [527] reason of the passage of the later act of March 3, 1905, to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and maintain quarantine districts, to permit and regulate the movement of cattle and other live stock therefrom, and for other purposes. 33 Stat. at L. 1264, chap. 1496, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 617.

But we are of opinion that it is unnecessary to determine them in this case. We think the defendant was right in the contention that, if the act of February 2, 1903, was constitutional, and rightfully conferred the power upon the Secretary of Agriculture to make orders and regulations concerning interstate commerce, there was no power conferred upon the Secretary to make regulations concerning intrastate commerce, over which Congress has no control, and concerning which we do not think this act, if it could be otherwise sustained, intended to confer power upon him. Assuming, then, for this purpose, that the Secretary was legally authorized to make orders and regulations concerning interstate commerce, we find that on March 13, 1903, he adopted, in the order No. 107, the following regulation:

"2. Whenever any state or territory located above or below said quarantine line, as above designated, shall duly establish a different quarantine line, and obtain the necessary legislation to enforce said last-mentioned line strictly and completely within the boundaries of said state or territory, and said last above-mentioned line and the measures taken to enforce it are satisfactory to the Secretary of Agriculture, he may, by a special order, temporarily adopt said state or territory line.

"Said adoption will apply only to that portion of said line specified, and may cease at any time the Secretary may deem it best for the interests involved, and in no instance shall said modification exist longer than the period specified in said special order; and, at the expiration of such time, said quarantine line shall revert, without further order, to the line first above described.

[528] *"Whenever any state or territory shall establish a quarantine line, for above purposes, differently located from the above-described line, and shall obtain by legislation the necessary laws to enforce the same completely and strictly, and shall desire a modification of the Federal quarantine line to agree with such state or territory line, the proper authorities of such state or territory shall forward to the Secretary of Agriculture a true map or description of such line and a copy of the laws for enforcement of the same, duly authenticated and certified."

And afterward, on March 14, 1903, the Secretary adopted the quarantine line agreed to be established by the state of Tennessee, and said to run about the middle of the state, and from the south of which the cattle in this case were transported, and provided:

"And whereas said quarantine line, as above set forth, is satisfactory to this Department, and legislation has been enacted by the state of Tennessee to enforce said quarantine line, therefore the above line is adopted for the state of Tennessee by this Department for the period beginning with the date of this order and ending December 31, 1903, in lieu of the quarantine line described in the order of March 13, 1903, for said area unless otherwise ordered."

The terms of order 107 apply to all cattle transported from the south of this line to parts of the United States north thereof. It would, therefore, include cattle transported within the state of Tennessee from the south of the line as well as those from outside that state; there is no exception in the order, and in terms it includes all cattle transported from the south of the line, whether within or without the state of Tennessee. It is urged by the government that it was not the intention of the Secretary to make provision for intrastate commerce, as the recital of the order shows an intention to adopt the state line, when the state by its legislature has passed the necessary laws to enforce the same completely and strictly. But the order in terms applies alike to interstate *and intrastate [529] commerce. A party prosecuted for violating this order would be within its terms if the cattle were brought from the south of the line to a point north of the line within the state of Tennessee. It is true the Secretary recites that legislation has been passed by the state of Tennessee to enforce the quarantine line, but he does not limit the order to interstate commerce coming from the south of the line, and, as we have said, the order in terms covers it. We do not say that the state line might not be adopted in a proper case, in the exercise of Federal authority, if limited in its effect to interstate commerce coming from below the line, but that is not the present order, and we must deal with it as we find it. Nor have we the power to so limit the Secretary's order as to make it apply only to interstate commerce, which it is urged is all that is here involved. For aught that appears upon the face of the order, the Secretary intended it to apply to all commerce, and whether he would have made such an order, if strictly limited to interstate commerce, we have no means of knowing. The order is in terms single and indivisible. In United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 221, 23 L. ed. 563, 565, upon this subject, this court said:

"We are, therefore, directly called upon to decide whether a penal statute, enacted by Congress, with its limited powers, which is in general language broad enough to cover wrongful acts without as well as within the constitutional jurisdiction, can be limited by judicial construction so as to make it operate only on that which Congress may rightfully prohibit and punish. For this purpose we must take these sections of the statute as they are. We are not able to reject a part which is unconstitutional and retain the remainder, because it is not possible to separate that which is unconstitutional, if there be any such, from that which is not. The proposed effect is not to be attained by striking out or disregarding words that are in the section, but by inserting those that are not now there. Each of the sections must stand as a whole, or fall altogether. The language is plain. There is no room for [530] construction, "unless it be as to the effect of the Constitution. The question, then, to be determined, is whether we can introduce words of limitation into a penal statute of as to make it specific, when, as expressed, it is general only."

And the court declined to make such limitation.

And in Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 99, 25 L. ed. 550, 553, the court said:

"If we should, in the case before us, undertake to make, by judicial construction, a law which Congress did not make, it is quite probable we should do what, if the matter were now before that body, it would be unwilling to do; namely, make a trade-mark law which is only partial in its operation, and which would complicate the rights which parties would hold, in some instances, under the act of Congress, and in others under state law. Cooley, Const. Lim. 178, 179; Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray, 482."

And see United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 263, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 1044, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

We think these principles apply to the case at bar, and that this order of the Secretary, undertaking to make a stringent regulation with highly penal consequences, is single in character, and includes commerce wholly within the state, thereby exceeding any authority which Congress intended to confer upon him by the act in question, if the same is a valid enactment. We, therefore, find it unnecessary to pass upon the other questions which were thought to be involved in the case at bar.

The judgment of the state court will be reversed and the cause remanded to it for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice McKenna concurs in the result.

[531] *ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

T. C. EDWARDS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 531.)

This case is governed by the decision in Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, ante, 298.

[No. 12.]

Submitted December 14, 1905. Restored to docket for oral argument December 18, 1905. Decided December 17, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of Carlisle County in the State of Kentucky to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages from a railway company for the infection of cattle because of a violation of quarantine regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Messrs. J. M. Dickinson and Ermund F. Trabue submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions see their brief as reported in Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, ante, 298.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Per Mr. Justice Day:

This case involves the same questions, upon similar facts as No. 13, just decided. Counsel filed a written stipulation that it shall be controlled and determined by the ruling made in that case. The judgment is reversed, and cause remanded to the state court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice McKenna concurs in the result.

ERNEST GATEWOOD, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 531-543.)

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—discrimination.

1. The exception in favor of those engaged in the business of manufacturing or

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to dealings in futures—see notes to Preston v. Cincinnati, C. & H. Valley R. Co. 1 L.R.A. 140; Harvey v. Merrill, 5 L.R.A. 201, and Irwin v. Williar, 28 L. ed. U. S. 225.

As to what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

On statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

wholesale merchandising, made by § 7 of N. C. Laws 1905, chap. 538, enacted to prevent dealing in futures, does not make that act void, as repugnant to the equal protection of the law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, where such section is interpreted by the highest state court simply as a declaration that the courts shall not so construe the act as to prevent persons thus engaged from buying and selling, for future delivery, the necessary commodities required in their ordinary business, and not as relieving them from the operation of the provisions of the 1st section of that act prohibiting the carrying on of a "bucket shop" business, or from the prohibitions of N. C. Laws 1889, chap. 221, concerning the making of gambling contracts for future delivery.

Error to state court—questions reviewable—statutory construction.

2. The construction given by the highest state court to a statute of that state is conclusive on the Supreme Court of the United States in determining, on writ of error to the state court, whether such statute is repugnant to the Federal Constitution.

Error to state court—questions reviewable.

3. Any unconstitutional discrimination in N. C. Laws 1905, chap. 538, enacted to prevent dealing in futures, which may be produced by provisions raising a prima facie presumption of guilt from the proof of certain acts when done by persons generally, and not when done by those engaged in manufacturing or wholesale merchandising, cannot be considered on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to review a conviction under that act, where, from the state of the record, it cannot be affirmed that the finding of the jury as to the keeping of a place for gambling in futures was not based upon independent evidence, wholly irrespective of any presumption authorized by that act.

Statutes—validity—invalid in part.

4. The validity of so much of N. C. Laws 1905, chap. 538, enacted to prevent dealing in futures, as makes indictable the carrying on of a "bucket shop" business, is not affected by any repugnancy to the due process of law or equal protection of the laws clauses of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution of the provisions of that act which raise a prima facie presumption of guilt from the proof of certain acts when done by persons generally, and not when done by those engaged in manufacturing or wholesale merchandising.

Error to state court—questions reviewable.

5. The power of the state, consistently with the due process of law clause of the 14th amendment to the Federal Constitution, to enact the provisions of N. C. Laws 1905, chap. 538, enacted to prevent dealing in futures, which raise a presumption of guilt on proof of the doing of certain acts specified in that statute, cannot be considered by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to review a conviction under that act, where, from the state of the record, it cannot be affirmed that the finding of the jury as to the keeping of a place for gambling in futures was not based upon independent evidence, wholly irrespective of any presumption authorized by the statute.

[No. 105.]

Argued November 16, 1906. Decided December 24, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a conviction in the Superior Court of Person County, in that state, of carrying on a "bucket shop" business. Affirmed.

See same case below, 138 N. C. 749, 51 S. E. 53.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert W. Winston argued the cause, and, with Mr. Victor S. Bryant, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

The case at bar is governed by Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

This case has been uniformly followed by courts since its rendition.

Union County Nat. Bank v. Ozan Lumber Co. 127 Fed. 211; Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 453, 57 L.R.A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553; State v. Mitchell, 97 Me. 66, 94 Am. St. Rep. 481, 53 Atl. 887; Matthews v. People, 202 Ill. 389, 63 L.R.A. 73, 95 Am. St. Rep. 241, 67 N. E. 28; Standard Oil Co. v. Spartanburg, 66 S. C. 37, 44 S. E. 377; Kellyville Coal Co. v. Harrier, 207 Ill. 624, 99 Am. St. Rep. 240, 69 N. E. 927; Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 125 Fed. 129; Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 81 Miss. 507, 62 L.R.A. 407, 95 Am. St. Rep. 476, 34 So. 533; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789; People v. Orange County Road Constr. Co. 175 N. Y. 84, 65 L.R.A. 33, 67 N. E. 129; State v. Shippers Compress & Warehouse Co. 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 58; State v. Laredo Ice Co. 96 Tex. 461, 73 S. W. 951; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

The act of 1905 is unusual in its artificial presumptions and in the manner in which it is engrafted upon the act of 1889, and it is not in harmony with the letter or spirit of the Constitution. The following cases are illustrative of the point at issue:

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302.

Presumptions of guilt attempted to be raised by acts of legislatures are void.

People v. Lyon, 27 Hun, 180; State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 218, 43 Am. Rep. 26; State v. Beach (Ind.) 43 N. E. 951; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 328, 18 L. ed. 364; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 446; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722.

Mr. Walter Clark, Jr. (by special leave), argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert D. Gilmer, filed a brief for defendant in error:

N. C. Laws 1905, chap. 538, § 7, does not conflict with the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution, guaranteeing equal protection of the laws.

Parker v. Otis, 130 Cal. 322, 92 Am. St. Rep. 56, 62 Pac. 571, 927; Fortenbury v. State, 47 Ark. 188, 1 S. W. 58.

Under the construction put upon this act by the supreme court of North Carolina, there is no Federal question presented, as by this construction the act is clearly constitutional.

State v. McGinnis, 138 N. C. 724, 51 S. E. 50; State v. Clayton, 138 N. C. 732, 50 S. E. 866.

When the construction of an act is in doubt, and the highest state court construes it so that it is constitutional, and no Federal question is raised, the Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction.

Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 665; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 6 L. ed. 289; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402; Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 638, 24 L. ed. 1089; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 466, 45 L. ed. 625, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

North Carolina in 1889 enacted "An Act to Suppress and Prevent Certain Kinds of Vicious Contracts." Laws N. C. 1889, chap. 221. This law was thus summarized by the supreme court of that state in State v. McGinnis, 138 N. C. 724, 51 S. E. 50:

"Section 1 made void all contracts for the sale of articles therein named for future delivery, wherein (notwithstanding any terms used) it is not intended that the articles agreed to be sold and delivered shall be actually delivered, but only the difference between the contract price and the market value at the time stipulated shall be paid. Section 2 enacted that when the defense provided by that act is set up in a verified answer the burden shall be upon the plaintiff to prove a lawful contract, but the answer shall not be used against the defendant on an indictment for the transaction. Section 3 made the parties to such contract, and agents concerned therein, indictable, and § 4 made persons, while in this state, consenting to become parties to such contract, made in another state, and all agents in this state, aiding and furthering such contract, made in another state, indictable."

In 1905 there was adopted "An Act . . . to Prevent the Dealing in Futures."

This law contains seven sections. The first and second made it "unlawful for any person, corporation, or other association of persons, either as principal or agents, to establish or open an office or other place of business . . . for the purpose of carrying on or engaging in any such business as is forbidden in this act or in chapter 221 *of the Public Laws of North Carolina, of 1889," and affixed a penalty for so doing. The law of 1889, referred to, is the one of which we have just previously given a summary.

The acts made punishable by the 1st and 2d sections of the act of 1905 were thus defined in State v. McGinnis, supra:

"The business forbidden by the act of 1905 is—to avoid a paraphrasis, and following the usual American method of describing an act by a word or a phrase—the business of running a 'bucket shop,' which is defined by the Century dictionary as 'an establishment, nominally for the transaction of a stock exchange business, or business of a similar character, but really for the registration of bets or wagers, usually for small amounts, on the rise or fall of the prices of stocks, grain, oil, etc., there being no transfer or delivery of the stock or commodities nominally dealt in.'"

The 3d section provided that no person should be excused from testifying in any prosecution under the act of 1889, or its amendments, on the ground of self-incrimination, the section granting immunity to such persons so obliged to testify. It was declared by the 4th, 5th, and 6th sections of the act that in all prosecutions for a violation of the provisions of the act of 1889, or the act of 1905, a prima facie presumption of guilt should arise from the proof of certain facts stated in the sections in question. These sections are reproduced in the margin.† The 7th and last section of the act

† Sec. 4. That in all prosecutions under said act and amendment, proof that the defendant was a party to a contract, as agent or principal, to sell and deliver any article, thing, or property specified or named in said act, chapter 221, Public Laws of 1889, or that he was the agent, directly or indirectly, of any party in making, furthering, or effectuating the same, or that he was the agent or officer of any corporation or association, or person in making, furthering, or effectuating the same, and that the article, thing, or property agreed to be sold and delivered was not actually delivered, [537] contained *provisions concerning dealing in futures by those engaged in the business of manufacturing or wholesale merchandising, which we do not presently reproduce, as we shall hereafter consider the section.

Gatewood, plaintiff in error, was indicted for the offense of establishing and keeping an office and place of business for the purpose of carrying on or engaging in the character of business made unlawful by the 1st section of the act of 1905; that is, the opening and carrying on a "bucket shop." The indictment, moreover, in an additional paragraph, alleged the doing of certain acts as though it was intended to charge them as distinct offenses from the one charged in the first paragraph. The two things thus alleged were as follows: First. That, on a date named, the accused "unlawfully and wilfully did post and publish, from information received over his wires, the fluctuations in prices of grain, cotton, provisions, stocks, bonds, and other commodities, contrary to the form of statute in such case made and provided," the acts so charged being those from the proof of which it was provided in the 6th section of the act of 1905 that a prima facie presumption of guilt would arise as to the commission of the acts forbidden by the 1st section of that act. Second. That, on a date named, the accused "unlawfully and wilfully did take and receive from E. T. Lea an order or contract to purchase on margin 100 bales of cotton for future delivery, to wit, August delivery, at 7 56.100 per pound, and that [538] said Lea did deposit with said *defendant at said time in said county the sum of $50.00 by way of margin fluctuations in said cotton, and that settlement between said parties for said cotton was agreed to be made upon the difference in value of said cotton at said date and the date of its delivery, contrary to the form of the statute in such cases made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state." The acts thus charged being among those from which, when proved, there would arise a prima facie presumption of a guilty violation of certain of the provisions of the act of 1889.

The case was tried to a jury, and, as and that settlement was made or agreed to be made, upon the difference in value of said article, thing, or property, shall constitute against such defendant prima facie evidence of guilt.

Sec. 5. That proof that anything of value agreed to be sold and delivered was not actually delivered at the time of making the agreement to sell and deliver, and that one of the parties to such an agreement deposited or secured, or agreed to deposit or secure, what are commonly called "margins," shall constitute prima facie evidence of a con-stated in the record, after proof and hearing, a special verdict was returned. By this verdict it was separately found that the defendant had committed the several acts separately charged in the indictment; that is, in separate numbered paragraphs the jury returned that the defendant had kept an office for the unlawful dealing in futures forbidden by the 1st section of the act of 1905, that he had posted and published in such office the fluctuating prices of grain, etc., and that he had made the contract for future delivery upon margin with Lea. The evidence at the trial upon which the jury acted is not in the record. The court then directed a general verdict of guilty, and judgment was entered thereon. A motion for a new trial was made, "because the act of 1905, chapter —, is in conflict with the 14th Amendment, § 1, of the Constitution of the United States, to wit, the guaranty of equal protection of the laws." The new trial having been refused, and a fine of $5 and costs having been imposed, the case was taken to the supreme court of North Carolina. That court affirmed the conviction. The reasoning by which the action of the court was controlled was stated as follows: "Upon the authority of State v. McGinnis, at this term, there is no error." And in the judgment of affirmance there was embodied the record and opinion in State v. McGinnis, and such record and opinion are contained in the transcript before us.

*The assignments of error and the argu-[539] ment in support thereof involve three general contentions, viz.: the asserted repugnancy of the statute to the equal protection of the law clause of the 14th Amendment, and the alleged want of power of the state to enact the statute, because its provisions not only abridge the privileges and immunities of the plaintiff in error as a citizen of the United States, but also deprive him of his property without due process of law, in violation of the same Amendment. The contention that the statute denied the equal protection of the laws rests upon the terms of the 7th section, reading as follows:

"Sec. 7. That this act shall not be construed so as to apply to any person, firm, tract declared void by chapter 221 of the Public Laws of 1889.

Sec. 6. That proof that any person, corporation, or other association of persons, either principals or agents, shall establish an office or place where are posted or published from information received the fluctuating prices of grain, cotton, provisions, stocks, bonds, and other commodities, or of any one or more of the same, shall constitute prima facie evidence of being guilty of violating § 1 of this act, and of chapter 221 of the Public Laws of 1889.

corporation, or his or their agent, engaged in the business of manufacturing or wholesale merchandising, in the purchase or sale of the necessary commodities required in the ordinary course of their business."

The alleged repugnancy of § 7, and consequently of the entire act, to the equality clause of the 14th Amendment, is sought to be sustained upon two grounds: First, because it is asserted that those engaged in the business of manufacturing or wholesale merchandising are permitted to commit without offense the act or acts which are made criminal by the laws of 1889 and 1905, when done by any other person; and, second, because, even if the terms of the 7th section do not effect such a result, the section nevertheless operates to produce an unlawful inequality, since it creates a prima facie presumption of guilt from the proof of certain acts as against all persons but those engaged in the business of manufacturing and wholesale merchandising.

It suffices to say, as to the first of these propositions, that the supreme court of the state, in the case upon the authority of which it placed its decision in this, expressly decided that the statute did not operate the asserted discrimination. Thus, after expressly holding that the effect of § 7 was not to relieve those engaged in manufacturing and wholesale merchandising from [540] the operation of the provisions of § 1 of the act of 1905, prohibiting the opening and keeping of a place for gambling dealings in futures, denominated by the court a "bucket shop," the court came to consider whether the provisions of § 7 operated to relieve manufacturers or wholesale merchants from the prohibitions of the act of 1889, concerning the making of gambling contracts for future delivery. Considering this subject, the court, in express terms, decided that the 7th section did not have that effect, since the dealings which were prohibited by the acts of 1889 were alike prohibited as to all, including manufacturers and wholesale merchants. The court said:

"Section 7 does not confer any exclusive right or privilege upon manufacturers or wholesale merchants. It does not authorize them to engage in any business prohibited by the act of 1889. It does not authorize them to speculate in cotton or other commodities. It simply provides that the courts shall not construe the act of 1905 to have the effect of preventing . . . [manufacturers or wholesale merchants] from buying and selling for future delivery the necessary commodities required in their ordinary business."

"But a purchase for actual future delivery of necessary commodities, required in the ordinary course of business, and not for 'wagering' or gambling on the fluctuations of the market, would not be against the statute. The statute of this state does not prohibit all purchases or sales for future delivery, but only such dealings as are in the nature of gambling or wagering contracts. Though § 7 mentions only manufacturers and wholesale mercantile establishments as authorized to make bona fide dealings in 'futures,' this was done unnecessarily, we think, and only out of abundant caution. It is not a discrimination, for there is no prohibition upon anyone else or any other business to buy commodities for future delivery bona fide in the 'ordinary course of such business,' when not for speculative or gambling purposes. That no other businesses or persons are mentioned as authorized to deal bona fide for the purchase of commodities on 'margin' *is not an implied [541] restriction upon others to do an act not forbidden by any statute."

In the argument it is insisted that the construction given by the supreme court of North Carolina to the statute is wrong, since, in effect, it reads out the provisions of § 7, and it is urged that it is the duty of this court to disregard the interpretations affixed by the state court, thereby bringing the statute within the prohibitions of the 14th Amendment. But it is elementary that, under the circumstances, we must follow the construction given by the state court, and test the constitutionality of the statute under that view. Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. ed. 451, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 455, 49 L. ed. 546, 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, and cases cited.

As to the second proposition, viz., the asserted discrimination, because of inequality produced by the engendering a prima facie presumption of guilt from the proof of certain acts when done by persons generally, and not raising such prima facie presumption from the same acts when done by those engaged in manufacturing or wholesale merchandising, we think the question is not open on this record. As we have stated, the indictment distinctly charged the commission of the offense prohibited by the 1st section of the act of 1905, viz., the keeping a place for gambling in futures, and at the same time in a separate paragraph charged the doing of acts from which the presumption of guilt was authorized by certain sections of the act of 1905. Upon the indictment so framed a special verdict was returned, finding that the prohibited place of business had been opened and kept as charged, and that the other acts separately charged in the indictment had been committed. Now, as the evidence upon which the jury acted is not in the record, and as there is nothing in the verdict tending to show that the separate conclusion as to the commission of the act forbidden by § 1 of the statute of 1905, viz., the keeping of a place for gambling in futures, was found by the jury because of the presumptions authorized by the statute, it cannot be af-

[542]firmed that the finding of the jury *as to the keeping of the place for gambling in futures was not based upon independent evidence, wholly irrespective of any presumption authorized by the act of 1905. And this conclusion becomes irresistible when it is considered that there is nothing in the record disclosing any request made to the trial court for instructions concerning the effect of the presumption created by the act of 1905, or that any express rulings on that subject were made by the court.

The contention that the judgment of conviction should be reversed, even although it does not appear that the same was based upon the presumptions authorized by the act of 1905, because of the inseparability of the alleged unequal presumptions, is without merit. In State v. McGinnis, supra, after expressing an opinion as to the right of a state under its police power, without violating the 14th Amendment, to create presumptions of guilt as to some classes of persons which would not be applicable to the same acts when done by other classes, the court said:

"But, aside from what we have already said, the defendant is indicted for carrying on a 'bucket shop' business. The legislature had unquestionably power to make such business indictable. Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425, and other cases cited, supra. The facts found are that the defendant was carrying on the forbidden business. It can in no wise affect the validity of the statute making such business indictable that the purchase of commodities by others upon 'margin' shall, under certain circumstances, raise a prima facie case that such purchases were void, and under other circumstances shall not constitute such prima facie evidence. A statute may be void in part and valid in part. If the provision as to prima facie evidence, as to certain purchases upon 'margin,' were null, because not applying to all purchases upon 'margin,' this would in no wise invalidate that part of the statute which forbids carrying on the business of running a 'bucket shop.' The defendant is not indicted for buying commodities for future delivery upon a 'margin,' nor are manufac-

[543]turers and *wholesale merchants, nor anyone else, exempted from the prohibition of carrying on the 'bucket shop' business. Upon the special verdict the defendant was properly adjudged guilty."

310

This ruling as to the separability of the statute is conclusive, and refutes the contention that the entire law is void, even upon the hypothesis that the creation of presumptions as to one class, not applicable to another class or classes, was repugnant to the 14th Amendment.

It remains only to consider the contentions that the statute upon which the conviction was had was repugnant to the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, and was, moreover, void because it abridged the privileges and immunities of the plaintiff in error as a citizen of the United States. As the first rests solely upon the proposition that there was a want of due process of law, because the state was without power to authorize a presumption of guilt on proof of the doing of certain acts specified in the statute, it is disposed of by what we have already said. And as the second was not pressed in argument, and is not shown by the record to have been raised or even suggested in the court below, we need not further consider it.

Affirmed.

MRS. CAMILLE CAHEN, Mrs. Julie Kahn, Eva Cahen, et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

JOHN BREWSTER, Tax Collector for the Second District of the City of New Orleans,
State of Louisiana, and Andrew H. Wilson, President School Board of the City of New Orleans, State of Louisiana.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 543-553.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—
state inheritance tax.

1. Universal legatees under the will of a person who died before the enactment of the

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. 436, and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L.R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Ro-maine, 12 L.R.A. 401, and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

203 U. S.

Louisiana inheritance tax law of June 28, 1904, are not deprived of their property without due process of law by subjecting their shares to the tax imposed by that statute, although, under the Louisiana Civil Code, the ownership of the property passed to such legatees upon the death of the testator.

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—state inheritance tax.

2. Successions which have been finally closed and administered upon may be exempted from the inheritance tax imposed by the Louisiana act of June 28, 1904, without rendering such statute void as making an arbitrary classification which amounts to a denial of the equal protection of the laws, where the highest state court makes the validity of the tax depend upon this classification by deciding that the state can tax the property until it has passed out of the succession of the testator.

[No. 91.]

Argued November 9, 1906. Decided December 24, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, in that state, imposing an inheritance tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, 115 La. 377, 39 So. 37.

The facts are stated in the opinion

Messrs. Charles Rosen and Gustave Lemle argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

An inheritance tax is not a tax on property, but on the right or privilege of inheriting.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 338.

That the rights of these heirs and legatees vested at the moment of the death of the ancestor is beyond dispute.

Black, Constitutional Prohibitions, 1887 ed. pp. 239-242; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 439; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 142-144.

In Louisiana the property, both real and personal, passes to the heir at the very moment of death, without administration, and without the intervention of a court.

State v. Brown, 32 La. Ann. 1020; O'Donald v. Lobdell, 2 La. 299; Touillier, Droit Civil Française, Div. 3, title 3, chap. 1; No. 79, vol. 4, p. 79; Code Napoleon, 724; Burbridge v. Chinn, 34 La. Ann. 682; Calvit v. Mulhollan, 12 Rob. (La.) 258; Womack v. 203 U. S.

Womack, 2 La. Ann. 339; Frazier v. Hills, 5 La. Ann. 114; Glasscock v. Clark, 33 La. Ann. 584; Ware v. Jones, 19 La. Ann. 428; Le Page v. New Orleans Gaslight & Bkg. Co. 7 Rob. (La.) 184; Addison v. New Orleans Sav. Bank, 15 La. 527; Prevost's Succession, 12 La. Ann. 577; Arnaud v. His Executor, 3 La. 336; Tulane University v. Board of Assessors, 115 La. Ann. 1025, 40 So. 445.

Retroactive legislation that divests vested rights, that interferes with rights already acquired, that imposes a tax for the privilege of inherison where such privilege has been long since exercised, and, therefore, requires payment of such tax merely because it has the physical power to do so by reason of the fact that the owner is, from some delay or other accidental cause, not yet in possession, is a clear taking of property—a clear deprivation of property—without due process of law.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 436; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87; Norman v. Heist, 5 Watts & S. 171, 40 Am. Dec. 493; Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210; Dufour's Succession, 10 La. Ann. 391; Amat's Succession, 18 La. Ann. 403; Crusius's Succession, 19 La. Ann. 369; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789; Re Lansing, 182 N. Y. 238, 74 N. E. 882; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 1906, pp. 155, 215; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36.

To exact such tax from heirs of estates not yet finally closed, and not to exact it from other heirs similarly situated,—in the same class, inheriting at the same time, by the same title, and under the same right,—is a denial of the equal protection of the laws, and contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Re Pell, supra; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150-168, 41 L. ed. 666-673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27-31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 108, 46 L. ed. 108, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Cooley, Const. Lim. 355; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356-369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 526, 42 L. ed. 819, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

Mr. F. C. Zacharie argued the cause, and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The Louisiana statute does not offend against the provisions of the Constitution of the United States by making the statute operative on successions then open and in course of administration at the time of the passage of the act.

Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456, 15 L. ed. 127; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Gelsthorpe v. Furnell (State ex rel. Gelsthorpe v. Furnell) 20 Mont. 299, 39 L.R.A. 170, 51 Pac. 267; Lapeyre v. United States, 17 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 610; Burgess v. Salmon, 97 U. S. 384, 24 L. ed. 1106; United States v. Harris, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 115, Fed. Cas. No. 15,312; Griffing v. Gibb, McAll. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 5,819; Brooke v. McCracken, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 1,932.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The case involves the validity, under the Constitution of the United States, of a burden imposed under the inheritance tax law of the state of Louisiana, passed June 28, 1904.

Mathias Levy, a resident of New Orleans, died in that city May 26, 1904. He was unmarried and left no ascendants, and was, therefore, without forced heirs. He left a last will and testament of the date of December 23, 1903, in which he named executors and made sundry particular bequests to charitable institutions. He bequeathed the balance of his estate, in equal shares, to [547] his two nieces, Camille Cahen and *Julie Kahn, constituting them thereby his universal legatees and instituted heirs.

The will was duly probated in the civil district court for the parish of Orleans, May 30, 1904. An inventory of his estate was taken June 9, 1904, and a supplementary inventory August 3, 1904. The inventories showed the total appraised value of the estate to be $64,676.05. Of this amount, after deducting the debts and charges of the estate and particular legacies, there was left, as the portion going to the universal legatees, $42,927.94.

The final accounting and tableau of distribution was filed August 3, 1904, and approved and homologated by judgment August 16, and the funds ordered to be distributed.

October 16 a motion was made for a rule on the executors to show cause why they should not pay over the legacies as ordered. In answer to which the executors replied that they were willing to do so, but that it was announced to them by the president of the school board of the parish that he intended to claim in behalf of said board a tax under the inheritance tax law of the state on the funds in their hands "and the shares coming to said movers." The executors also alleged the unconstitutionality of the tax and prayed that the school board of the parish, through its president, Andrew H. Wilson, be made a party to the proceedings. Wilson appeared and averred that the taxes were due the state, and not to the school board, and were collectible by the state tax collector, and "that this suit and the matters at issue herein should be litigated contradictorily with the state tax collector for the district in which the deceased resided when he departed this life."

The tax collector appeared. The agents and attorneys in fact of the legatees answered the demand of the school board to be paid the tax that $10,000 of the estate was in United States bonds, and not subject to taxation by the state, and averred that an inheritance tax was not due "to said board for the reason that said act has no application to the property *under this succession [548] or the legacies due to said movers in the motion aforesaid; that to give it such application would be to make said act retroactive and divest the vested rights of the said movers in said rule, which would be in violation of the Constitution of this state, and especially article 166 thereof, and in violation of the Constitution of the United States of America, and especially § 9 of article 1, and the 5th and 14th Amendments thereof, and in violation of the laws of the state and of the land; that it would be a deprivation of property without due process of law and a denial of the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the 5th and 14th Amendments of the Constitution of the United States of America."

Judgment was rendered in favor of the tax collector, condemning the executors to pay the tax, less the amount of United States bonds, and less the charitable and religious bequests. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state.

The law imposes a tax of 3 per cent "on direct inheritances and donations to ascendants or descendants," and 10 per cent upon donations or inheritances to collaterals or strangers. It is provided that the tax is "to be collected on all successions not finally closed and administered upon, and all successions hereafter opened."†

*It will be observed that when Levy died, [549] May 26, 1904, and when the will was probated, May 30, 1904, there was no inheritance tax in Louisiana. The act in controversy was passed June 28, 1904.

†Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Louisiana, That there is now, and shall hereafter be, levied, solely for the support of the public schools, a tax upon all inheritances, legacies, and donations; provided, no direct inheritance or donation to an ascendant or descendant, be-

In support of the attack made upon the law, it is contended that an inheritance tax is not a tax on property, but on the right or privilege of inheriting, and that the right in the case at bar had been exercised at the moment of the testator's death under the then-existing law, and "to pass a law exacting such a tax and make it retroactive so as to divest a right previously acquired under then-existing laws is a deprivation of property already acquired, without due process of law, prohibited by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

To sustain their propositions the plaintiffs in error cite certain articles of the [550] Louisiana Civil Code.† And it is urged *as indubitable that, under the law of Louisiana, a succession is acquired by the legal heir immediately after the death of the deceased, and, by the express terms of the Code, this rule applies to testamentary heirs, to instituted heirs, and universal legatees. In other words, that the acquisition of the succession by plaintiffs in error was at the very moment of Levy's death, and, low $10,000 in amount or value, shall be so taxed; a special inheritance tax of 3 per cent on direct inheritances or donations to ascendants or descendants, and 10 per cent for collateral inheritances and donations to collaterals or strangers; provided, bequests to educational, religious, or charitable institutions shall be exempt from this tax; and provided, further, that this tax shall not be enforced when the property donated or inherited shall have borne its just proportion of taxes prior to the time of such donation or inheritance; this tax to be collected on all successions not finally closed and administered upon, and all successions hereafter opened.

†Article 940. A succession is acquired by the legal heir, who is called by law to the inheritance, immediately after the death of the deceased person to whom he succeeds.

This rule applies also to testamentary heirs, to instituted heirs, and universal legatees, but not to particular legatees.

Article 941. The right mentioned in the preceding article is acquired by the heir, by the operation of the law alone, before he has taken any step to put himself in possession, or has expressed any will to accept it.

Thus, children, idiots, those who are ignorant of the death of the deceased, are not the less considered as being seised of the succession, though they may be merely seised of right, and not in fact.

Article 942. The heir being considered seised of the succession from the moment of its being opened, the right of possession which the deceased had continues in the person of the heir as if there had been no interruption, and independent of the fact of possession.

203 U. S.

therefore, necessarily before the act imposing inheritance taxes was passed. To sustain their view plaintiffs in error cite a number of cases decided prior to the decision of the case at bar, and the case of Tulane University v. Board of Assessors, 115 La. 1026, 40 So. 445, decided since the decision in the case at bar. Having established, as it is contended, that by operation of law the property is transmitted immediately from the testator to the heirs, it is also contended that from the very definition of an inheritance tax none could be imposed on plaintiffs in error as legatees of Levy.

For definitions of an inheritance tax plaintiffs in error adduce United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. The tax was defined in the Perkins Case to be "not a tax upon the property itself, but upon its transmission by will or descent;" and in the Magoun Case, "not one on property, but one on the succession." In Knowlton v. Moore it was said that such taxes "rest in their essence upon the principle that death is the generating source from which the particular taxing power takes its being, and that it is the power to transmit, or the transmission from the dead to the living, on which such taxes are more immediately rested." But these definitions were intended only to distinguish the tax from one on property, and it was not intended to be decided that the tax must attach at the instant of the death of a testator or *intestate. In other [551] words, we defined the nature of the tax;

Article 944. The heir being considered as having succeeded to the deceased from the instant of his death, the first effect of this right is that the heir transmits the succession to his own heirs, with the right of accepting or renouncing, although he himself have not accepted it, even in case he was ignorant that the succession was opened in his favor.

Article 945. The second effect of this right is to authorize the heir to institute all the actions, even possessory ones, which the deceased had a right to institute, and to prosecute those already commenced. For the heir, in everything, represents the deceased, and is of full right in his place, as well for his rights as his obligations.

Article 1609. When, at the decease of the testator, there are no heirs to whom a proportion of his property is reserved by law, the universal legatee, by the death of the testator, is seised of right of the effects of the succession without being bound to demand the delivery thereof.

we did not prescribe the time of its imposition. To have done the latter would have been to prescribe a rule of succession of estates, and usurp a power we did not and do not possess. There is nothing, therefore, in those cases which restrains the power of the state as to the time of the imposition of the tax. It may select the moment of death, or it may exercise its power during any of the time it holds the property from the legatee. "It is not," we said in the Perkins Case, "until it has yielded its contribution to the state that it becomes the property of the legatee." See also Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456, 15 L. ed. 127.

We must turn back, therefore, to the law of Louisiana for the solution of the questions presented in the case at bar. But we are not required to reconcile the Louisiana decisions. We accept that in the case at bar as a correct interpretation of the Code of the state. Nor may we regard Tulane University v. Board of Assessors as irreconcilable with it. That case was brought to enjoin the collection of state and city taxes which had been assessed against the succession of A. C. Hutchinson. The plaintiff university was the universal legatee of Hutchinson, and its property was exempt from taxation under the Constitution of the state. It is true the court said that the Code of the state "leaves no room whatever for doubt or surmises as to the fact of the property of a deceased person being transmitted directly and immediately to the legal heir, or, in the absence of forced heirs, to the universal legatee, without any intermediate stage, when it would be vested in the successive representative or in the legal abstract called 'succession.'"

But the decision in the case at bar was not overruled, but distinguished as follows: "The case of Levy's Succession, 115 La. 377, 39 So. 37, was decided from considerations peculiar to an inheritance tax, and which can have no application in the instant case. This inheritance tax was held to be due notwithstanding that, under the provisions of the Code, the ownership of the property [552]*passed to the heirs. The maxim, Le mort saisit le vif, was expressly recognized." Both decisions, therefore, must be considered as correct interpretations of the Code of the state. It is not our province to pronounce one more decisive than the other, or to pronounce a contradiction between them, which the court which delivered both of them has declared does not exist. We must assume that the Tulane Case approved the view expressed in the case at bar of the rights of legatees, as follows: "Furthermore, we have said, the legatees acquired no vested right to the property bequeathed which could enable them to successfully defend their inheritance against the demand of the state for the inheritance tax. It was property within the limits of the state, which the state could tax, for purposes mentioned, until it had passed out of the succession of the testator."

Plaintiffs in error also contended that the statute denied them the equal protection of the laws. This contention is based on the following provision of the statute: "This tax to be collected on all successions not finally closed and administered upon, and on all successions hereafter opened."

Successions which have been closed, it is said, are exempt from the tax, and a discrimination is made between heirs whose rights have become fixed and vested on the same day. Counsel say: "The closing of the succession cannot affect the question as to when the right of the heirs vested; and cannot be a cause for differentiation among the heirs; and such a classification is purely arbitrary. Besides, such a classification rests on the theory that the tax is one on property, when in fact it is one on the right of inheritance." But, as we understand, the supreme court made the validity of the tax depend upon the very fact which counsel attack as an improper basis of classification. The court decided that the property bequeathed was property the state could tax, "until it had passed out of the succession of the testator." It was certainly not improper classification to make the tax depend upon a fact without which it would have been invalid. In other words, those who [553] are subject to be taxed cannot complain that they are denied the equal protection of the laws because those who cannot legally be taxed are not taxed.

Judgment affirmed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE KENTUCKY ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 553-563.)

Constitutional law—privileges and immunities—equal protection of the laws—state inheritance tax.

Excluding foreign corporations from the exemption from an inheritance tax in favor of property devised for educational or religious uses, which is made by Ill. act May 10, 1901, amending Ill. Laws, 1895, p. 301,

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L. R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, does not abridge privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States or deny the equal protection of the laws.
203 U. S.

[No. 103.]

Argued November 14, 1906. Decided December 24, 1906.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the County Court of Cook County, in that state, imposing an inheritance tax on property devised to a foreign corporation for educational and religious purposes. Affirmed.

See same case below, 216 Ill. 23, 108 Am. St. Rep. 189, 74 N. E. 809.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry S. McAuley and Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiff in error, by probating the will through which its succession is derived, appearing before the state appraiser in the inheritance tax proceeding, appealing from the action of such appraiser to the county court of Cook county, and from its action to the supreme court of Illinois, brought itself within the jurisdiction of the state of Illinois, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment.

Black v. Caldwell, 83 Fed. 880; American & F. Christian Union v. Yount, 101 U. S. 352, 356, 25 L. ed. 888, 890.

This is especially so as there are no rules prescribed by the laws of Illinois regarding the admission to the state of corporations not for pecuniary profit, and the right of such corporations to take and hold property in Illinois is fully established.

Santa Clara Female Academy v. Sullivan, 116 Ill. 375, 56 Am. Rep. 776, 6 N. E. 183; American & F. Christian Union v. Yount, 101 U. S. 352, 25 L. ed. 888; Pennsylvania Co. v. Bauerle, 143 Ill. 459, 33 N. E. 166.

The imposition of the succession tax necessarily implies that the person whose right to succeed is so taxed is within the jurisdiction of the state.

Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 422, 12 L. ed. 702, 760; McGehee, Due Process of Law, p. 218; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 204, 43 L. ed. 665, 668, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 396, 47 L. ed. 513, 518, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Union Refrigerator Transit Co.

v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 204, 50 L. ed. 150, 153, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36.

The prohibitions of the 14th Amendment extend to all state agencies, whether executive, legislative, or judicial.

Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 234, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Missouri v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 170, 48 L. ed. 133, 134, 63 L.R.A. 571, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Huntington v. New York, 118 Fed. 683.

An inheritance tax is not a tax upon property, but upon the privilege or right of succession to property.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 628, 41 L. ed. 287, 288, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 288, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1040, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

A different rule obtains as to claimed exemptions from a general and a special tax, to which latter class the imposition in the case at bar belongs.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Catlin v. Trinity College, 113 N. Y. 133, 3 L.R.A. 206, 20 N. E. 864; Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L.R.A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Gurr v. Scudds, 11 Exch. 190; United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 369, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; United States v. Watts, 1 Bond, 580, Fed. Cas. No. 16,653.

It is conceded that the respective states have plenary power to regulate the tenure of property within their respective limits, the modes of its acquisition and transfers, the rules of its descent, and the extent to which a testamentary disposition may be exercised by its owners, subject, however, to the equal rights clauses of the Constitution of the United States.

Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 493, 12 L. ed. 1168, 1170; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 L. ed. 192; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 292, 294, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 105, 43 L. ed. 909, 913, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

The Constitution of the United States was largely the result of the demand that there should be no discrimination between the several states in commercial regulation and rights of persons or property.

Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 407, 449, 492, 12 L. ed. 702, 754, 771, 789; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 43, 48, 18 L. ed. 745, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritances—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L. 203 U. S.

R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Romaine, 12 L.R.A. 401; and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

747, 748; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 140, 147, 19 L. ed. 382, 387, 391; Hinson v. Lott, 8 Wall. 148, 152, 19 L. ed. 387, 388.

This court has repeatedly denied to the states the right of discrimination in the exercise of their sovereign power of taxation.

Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 430, 431, 20 L. ed. 449, 452, 453; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123, 26 L. ed. 103; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344, 26 L. ed. 565; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454.

Corporations are not "citizens" within article IV., § 2, and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 259, 43 L. ed. 432, 439, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 561, 43 L. ed. 552, 554, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

Corporations are "persons" within the 14th Amendment.

Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 189, 31 L. ed. 650, 653, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 606, 33 L. ed. 1025, 1031, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 391, 35 L. ed. 1051, 1053, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 592, 41 L. ed. 560, 565, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 522, 42 L. ed. 819, 840, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The right of a state to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which foreign corporations may transact business within its borders, or to exclude such corporations altogether, is conceded, subject to the limitation that unconstitutional requirements cannot be made.

Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Cable v. United States L. Ins. Co. 191 U. S. 288, 306, 48 L. ed. 188, 193, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Dayton Coal & I. Co. v. Barton, 183 U. S. 23, 24, 46 L. ed. 61, 64, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 50 L. ed. 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

When the corporation or the property is within the jurisdiction of the state, it is entitled to the equal protection of the laws; and different rates of taxation, either upon property or succession to property, cannot be applied as between foreign or domestic corporations.

Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 316

119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Erie R. Co. v. State, 31 N. J. L. 531, 86 Am. Dec. 226; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, and Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, supra; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 663, 43 L. ed. 323, 325, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 255, 43 L. ed. 432, 438, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 566, 43 L. ed. 552, 555, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Mr. Edwin M. Ashcraft argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Stead, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If plaintiff in error seeks to reverse the judgment of the supreme court of Illinois upon the ground that the amendatory act of 1901, as construed by the supreme court of that state, is invalid because repugnant to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, then

(a) In determining the validity of the amendatory act of 1901, this court should follow the construction placed upon that act by the supreme court of Illinois.

Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Ludeling v. Chaffe, 143 U. S. 301, 36 L. ed. 313, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. ed. 323, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 231, 43 L. ed. 679, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. ed. 86, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. ed. 1116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

(b) The construction of the amendatory act of 1901 by the supreme court of Illinois is correct.

Catlin v. Trinity College, 113 N. Y. 133, 3 L.R.A. 206, 20 N. E. 864; Re Prime, 136 N. Y. 347, 18 L.R.A. 713, 32 N. E. 1091; Re Balleis, 144 N. Y. 134, 38 N. E. 1007; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 26 L.R.A. 259, 38 N. E. 512; Alfred University v. Hancock (N. J.) 46 Atl. 178; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16

Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; People ex rel. Huck v. Western Seaman's Friend Soc. 87 Ill. 246; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 47 L. ed. 641, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386.

(c) The amendatory act of 1901, as construed by the supreme court of Illinois, is not repugnant to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Kochersperger v. Drake, 167 Ill. 122, 41 L.R.A. 446, 47 N. E. 321; Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 L.R.A. 807, 59 N. E. 798, 188 U. S. 97, 47 L. ed. 400, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 24 L. ed. 192; Humphreys v. State, 70 Ohio St. 67, 65 L.R.A. 776, 101 Am. St. Rep. 888, 70 N. E. 957; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Campbell v. California, 200 U. S. 87, 50 L. ed. 382, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court.

This writ of error is directed to a judgment of the supreme court of the state of Illinois sustaining a tax assessed against plaintiff in error under the inheritance tax law of that state, passed June 15, 1895, entitled "An Act to Tax Gifts, Legacies, and Inheritances in Certain Cases, and to Provide for the Collection of the Same." Laws of 1895, p. 301.

The facts are as follows: Fanny Speed, a citizen and resident of Kentucky, died seised of certain real estate in the city of Chicago. She devised a one-half interest to plaintiff in error, to be used as part of its educational fund, "to be held, invested, and administered" as other properties forming a part of that fund. The will was probated in the probate court of Cook county, state of Illinois. An inheritance tax of $6,280.50 was assessed by the county judge against plaintiff in error, based on the value of the interest devised.

Plaintiff in error was incorporated by an act of the legislature of the state of Kentucky to form an educational fund for the promotion of literature, education, art, morality, and religion. Its funds are held and used exclusively for such purposes, and are required to be wholly expended within the state of Kentucky. It is not permitted to make dividends or distribution of profits or assets among its members or stockholders. It does not have or maintain an office in the state of Illinois, or engage in educational or religious work therein.
203 U. S.

From the action of the county judge imposing the tax, plaintiff in error appealed to the county court of Cook county and assigned as grounds of appeal: (1) That by reason of its organization and the purposes of its organization, as shown by the record, it was exempt from such tax under the act of May 10, 1901, amending the act of June 15, 1895. (2) For that the imposition of such tax upon it (the plaintiff in error), when* corporations organized for like pur-[559] poses under the laws of the state were exempt therefrom, was in conflict with the Constitution of the state of Illinois, and rendered said act void as to plaintiff in error, as in conflict with the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, in that it abridged the privileges and immunities of plaintiff in error, who was a citizen of the United States, and denied to it the equal protection of the laws. The county court sustained the tax and the supreme court affirmed the judgment. This writ of error was then sued out.

The assignment of errors in this court, omitting the specification of error based on the Constitution of the state, is the same as that in the state courts.

It is enough for our purpose to say that § 1 of the act of 1895 subjects to a tax all property situated within the state, which shall, by will or by the intestate laws, pass from any person who may die seised or possessed of the same. The act was amended in 1901 by adding thereto the following section:

"When the beneficial interest of any property or income therefrom shall pass to or for the use of any hospital, religious, educational, Bible, missionary, tract, scientific, benevolent, or charitable purpose, or to any trustee, bishop, or minister of any church or religious denomination, held and used exclusively for the religious, educational, or charitable uses and purposes of such church or religious denomination, institution, or corporation, by grant, gift, bequest, or otherwise, the same shall not be subject to any such duty or tax; but this provision shall not apply to any corporation which has the right to make dividends or distribute profits or assets among its members."

The supreme court decided that this amendment did not apply to "corporations created under the laws of a sister state." And also decided, as so construed, the amendment was not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. The court said:

[560] "A clear distinction exists between domestic corporations* and corporations organized under the laws of other states. Such corporations fall naturally into their respective classes. Over the one—that which the state has created—the state has certain powers of control; and the other is beyond its jurisdiction. Those of its own creation have been endowed with corporate powers for the purpose of subserving the interests of the state and its people; those which have been given life by the laws of a sister state have entirely different ends and objects to accomplish. The lawmaking power would find many weighty considerations authorizing the classification of foreign and domestic corporations into different classes and justifying the creation of liability on the part of foreign corporations to pay a tax on the right to take property by descent, devise, or bequest, under the laws of the state, and at the same time leaving the right of a domestic corporation so to take free of any such exaction." [216 Ill. 28, 74 N. E. 811.]

It will be seen by a reference to the assignment of errors that the ground of the attack by the plaintiff in error on the validity of the tax assessed against it is that the imposition of the tax upon it, while other corporations organized for like purposes under the laws of Illinois are exempt, renders the act of May 10, 1901, void, as to plaintiff in error. And, in their argument, counsel say: "It is the effect given by the supreme court of Illinois to this amendment (the act of 1901) that violates the rights claimed by the plaintiff in error under the Constitution of the United States." The construction of the act by the supreme court we must accept as determining the meaning of the act. In other words, we must regard the act as if the legislature had, in explicit language, excluded from its provisions foreign corporations. If this renders the act void, plaintiff in error, whether its argument be tenable or untenable, seems to be put in the dilemma urged by the defendant in error, and an affirmance of the judgment is required. If the act of May 10, 1901, is invalid, it cannot give exemption from taxation to either domestic or foreign corporations, and plaintiff in error was rightly taxed under the act of June 15, 1895.

[561] *Plaintiff in error, of course, does not desire to take exemption from domestic corporations. It desires to remove the discriminatory effect of the amendment of May 10, 1901, by including in its bounty foreign corporations. Can this be done? May a court by construction put into a law that which the legislature has left out? There is a difference between burdens and benefits, and it may well be that a law which confers the latter upon some persons, and thereby increases burdens on others, may be declared invalid by the courts. But if the courts may strike down privileges, may they extend favors and make objects of bounty those whom the legislature has excluded? The questions raise important considerations, but we may pass them, because the contention that the act of 1901 is invalid encounters an insuperable obstacle in the power of the state to classify objects of legislation and discriminate between classes. This power is not unconstitutionally exercised by legislation which exempts the religious and educational institutions of the state from an inheritance tax and subjects educational and religious institutions of other states to the tax. Regarding alone the purposes of the institutions, no difference may be perceived between them, but regarding the spheres of their exercise, and the benefits derived from their exercise, a difference is conspicuous. It is this benefit that may have constituted the inducement of the legislation.

Plaintiff in error contests the classification of the act of 1901 and the conclusions deduced from it in an able argument. We do not reply to the argument in detail, because we have defined so often the principles of classification that we must regard repetition as unnecessary. An observation or two, however, may be worth while. It is contended that the exemption of the amendment of 1901 "is not limited by the decision of the supreme court to corporate takers or users," and that the decision, by treating the act "as a grant of privileges and immunities to corporations," ignored "the test of use found in the inquiry 'To what purpose is the beneficial *interest in [562] the property devoted?'" and the consideration that there was no necessity for corporate agency in that connection. The result of this is, it is urged, that the court made the "power of state visitation and control" over corporations "the test of taxability or nontaxability upon the right of succession." Denying this to be the test, and contending that the test should be the use to which the property is devoted, and the question of tax or freedom from tax determined thereby, and asserting that plaintiff became a person within the jurisdiction of the state by going there to take title to property there situated, and by probating the will of Mrs. Speed as evidence of such title, it is deduced that it was not competent for the state to tax the property of plaintiff in error at one rate and the property of corporations, organized under her laws, at another rate.

It must be kept in mind that the controversies in this case depend upon the power of the state over inheritances, and the conditions she may put upon them in the exercise of that power. And this is prominent in the decision of the supreme court. In considering this power, and classification in the exercise of this power, the court took into account the greater control and direction the state had over domestic than over foreign corporations. It did not put out of view the uses of property expressed in the act of 1901, nor ignore the consideration that there was no necessity for a corporate agency to execute those uses. The case presented especially a comparison of the rights of corporations, but the decision was broad enough to consider natural persons. "In laying such a tax" (an inheritance tax), the court said, "the legislature may consider the relation which the person or corporation given the right of succession sustains to the deceased, to the property, or to the state, and may regulate the amount of the tax to be required in view of such relation, and in exercising this power may lay a tax on the right of one class of persons or corporations to take, and may deem it wise to impose no tax upon the right of other classes of persons or corporations to [563] *take." A Federal court would hesitate indeed to put impediments on this power or declare invalid any classification of persons or corporations that had reasonable regard to the purposes of the state and its legislation. And it cannot be said that if a state exempt property bequeathed for charitable or educational purposes from taxation it is unreasonable or arbitrary to require the charity to be exercised or the education to be bestowed within her borders and for her people, whether exercised through persons or corporations.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
v.

JOHN F. SHIPP et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 563-575.)

Contempt—disobeying order staying proceedings—jurisdiction.

1. Lack of jurisdiction in the Federal circuit court of a petition for habeas corpus, or in the Supreme Court of the appeal from the order denying the writ, does not enable persons to disregard, without liability to process for contempt, the order of 203 U. S.

the Supreme Court that "all proceedings against the appellant be stayed, and the custody of said appellant be retained pending this appeal," since that court necessarily has jurisdiction to decide whether the case is properly before it.

Contempt—purging by sworn denials.

2. Sworn answers denying any participation in the alleged murder of a prisoner under sentence of death in a state court, pending his appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from an order of a circuit court denying relief by habeas corpus, are not sufficient to purge the affiants of a charge of contempt of the Supreme Court by taking part in such murder after the appeal had been allowed and a stay of proceedings ordered.

Contempt—murder of prisoner pending his appeal.

3. Participation in the murder of a prisoner under sentence of death in a state court, with intent to prevent the delay attendant upon an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from an order of the circuit court denying relief by habeas corpus, and to prevent the hearing of such appeal, is a contempt of the Supreme Court, where such murder was committed after the appeal had been allowed and that court had ordered that "all proceedings against the appellant be stayed, and the custody of said appellant be retained pending this appeal."

[No. 12, Original.]

Argued December 4, 5, 1906. Decided December 24, 1906.

INFORMATION charging a contempt of court in murdering a prisoner under sentence of death in the Criminal Court of Hamilton County, State of Tennessee, after his appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from an order of the Circuit Court for the Northern Division of the Eastern District of Tennessee, denying relief by habeas corpus, had been allowed and a stay of proceedings ordered. Certain preliminary legal objections overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause, and, with Attorney General Moody, filed a brief for complainant:

A conspiracy such as alleged here would be punishable under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5508, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712, as depriving a citizen of a privilege secured to him by Federal law; but, whether or not that step shall follow this in due time, that liability cannot affect this proceeding.

Re Savin, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. ed. 150, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

It has been decided so often by this court that there is no right to a jury trial in contempt cases that it is only necessary to cite the decisions.

Eilenbecker v. District Court, 134 U. S. 31, 33 L. ed. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 32 L. ed. 405, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Re Savin, supra; Re Cuddy, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. ed. 154, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 489, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1061, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The circuit court had jurisdiction of Johnson's case.

Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. ed. 868, 871, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Ex parte Terry, supra; Re Loney (Thomas v. Loney) 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. ed. 949, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; Re Neagle (Cunningham v. Neagle) 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Re Wood (Wood v. Brush) 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 36 L. ed. 934, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Re Frederick, 149 U. S. 70, 37 L. ed. 653, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 240, 40 L. ed. 411, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. ed. 748, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 43 L. ed. 91, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 249, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Wildenhus's Case (Mali v. Keeper of Common Jail) 120 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 565, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 516, 29 L. ed. 994, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 848; Re Duncan (Duncan v. McCall) 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Re Burrus, 136 U. S. 586, 34 L. ed. 500, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

On writ of error from the highest court of a state this court sometimes affirms the judgment, but sometimes dismisses the writ of error on the ground that no constitutional or other Federal question is really and substantially involved (Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Spies v. Illinois [Ex parte Spies] 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Craemer v. Washington, 164 U. S. 704, 41 L. ed. 1183, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993); but in cases of habeas corpus from circuit courts involving the authority of state courts, the court has invariably affirmed or reversed the judgment below, thus sustaining the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Always a Federal question was necessarily alleged and was sufficiently involved for jurisdictional purposes.

Lack of jurisdiction in the circuit court to issue the writ would not mean lack of jurisdiction in this court to entertain and act upon the appeal.

Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 29 L. ed. 868, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734.

The power to punish for contempts is inherent in all courts. Its existence is essential to the preservation of order in judicial proceedings and to the enforcement of the judgments, orders, and writs of the courts, and consequently to the due administration of justice. The moment the courts of the United States were called into existence and invested with jurisdiction over any subject, they became possessed of this power.

Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 510, 22 L. ed. 205, 207; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 302, 303, 32 L. ed. 405, 408, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. 204, 227, 5 L. ed. 242, 247; Re Cooper, 32 Vt. 257; Re Savin, 131 U. S. 267, 274, 33 L. ed. 150, 152, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Eilenbecker v. District Court, 134 U. S. 31, 36, 37, 33 L. ed. 801, 803, 804, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 489, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1061, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 595, 596, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1106, 1107, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The opinions in Re Tampa Suburban R. Co. 168 U. S. 583, 42 L. ed. 589, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177, and Re Vidal, 179 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 118, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48, suggest, perhaps that the inherent general power of the court to issue writs may go further than the statutory authority. The statutory authority, however, is invoked in those cases for the refusal to issue the writ, rather than rejected. But we have no doubt that in any proper case the court would hold unhesitatingly that its general and inherent authority, of whatever nature, does not need any statutory grant of power, and is not subject to statutory restrictions.

But if U. S. Rev. Stat. § 725, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 583, shall be held to apply to this court, the present case is included within its very language. We are not now concerned with contempt committed in the face of the court or so near as to be constructively in its presence (Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 307, 32 L. ed. 405, 409, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Re Savin, 131 U. S. 267, 277, 278, 33 L. ed. 150, 153, 154, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; 4 Bl. Com. 286); this is one of the matters that arise at a distance, and accordingly an instant attachment did not issue, but a rule to show cause. But, although a matter arising at a distance, and not a question of disturbance or decorum in or near the presence of the court, it is the vital matter of refusing to obey the court's command, which is as serious at the remotest corners of the country as in the court room.

Eilenbecker v. District Court, 134 U. S. 203 U. S.

31, 38, 33 L. ed. 801, 804, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.

The power of a court to make an order carries with it the equal power to punish for a disobedience of that order.

Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 594, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1106, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The same act may be a crime both against a state and the United States, and the United States has full power to punish, whether the state does or not.

Cross v. North Carolina, 132 U. S. 131, 33 L. ed. 287, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; Crossley v. California, 168 U. S. 640, 42 L. ed. 610, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

Messrs. Judson Harmon and Robert B. Cooke argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Cliff & Cooke and Mr. Robert Pritchard, filed a brief for defendants:

The question is fundamental whether the case in which the order was made was one which, in fact, came within the limited appellate jurisdiction of the court; whether Johnson really had the right of which the defendants are charged with depriving him, to have this court hear his case; because, if an order be made without jurisdiction, there can be no punishment for contempt.

Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604-612, 26 L. ed. 861-864; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482.

It has sometimes been suggested that a person to whom an order is directed will not be heard to question the authority of the court to make it, when he is arraigned for disobedience, as in Tornanses v. Melsing, 45 C. C. A. 615, 106 Fed. 788; Anderson v. Comptois, 48 C. C. A. 1, 109 Fed. 971. This point seems to have been negated by inference in Re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 45 L. ed. 657, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468, the court holding that the orders were not necessarily void, and refusing, for that reason only, to review the action of the circuit court of appeals. But this suggestion has always been by way of admonition only, because we know of no case where it was made in which it was ever the basis of punishment for contempt, the finding having always been that the order disobeyed was in fact authorized. And in such cases generally, if not always, the proceeding has had for its object the suppression of a continuing disobedience, and not mere punishment for past acts.

The extent of the right of Federal courts to interfere by a writ of habeas corpus with proceedings of courts and other authorities of a state is carefully defined by statute.

Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 433, 50 L. ed. 256, 259, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87.

203 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

The reluctance with which this court will sanction Federal interference with a state in the administration of its domestic law for the prosecution of crime has been frequently stated in the deliverances of the court upon the subject. It is only where fundamental rights, specially secured by the Federal Constitution, are invaded, that such interference is warranted.

Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 256, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87.

The case must involve the construction or application of the Constitution within the intent and meaning of the statute.

Re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 399, 37 L. ed. 1120, 1122, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

See also Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 181, 37 L. ed. 1041, 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Carter v. Roberts, 177 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 861, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Thiebaud, 177 U. S. 615, 620, 44 L. ed. 911, 913, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. ed. 432, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Reid v. Jones, 187 U. S. 153, 47 L. ed. 116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 505, 45 L. ed. 639, 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 96, 97, 39 L. ed. 80, 83, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The constitutional question must be real and substantial.

Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 143, 144, 46 L. ed. 120, 124, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Bradley v. Lightcap, 195 U. S. 25, 49 L. ed. 76, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Bonin v. Gulf Co. 198 U. S. 115, 117, 49 L. ed. 970, 971, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 282, 283, 45 L. ed. 527, 530, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

The Federal question cannot be first raised in the assignment of errors, but there must have been a definite claim of a right under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 697, 40 L. ed. 310, 311, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 164 U. S. 454, 41 L. ed. 511, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129.

It is true that the jurisdiction of the court in error to the state court of last resort depends on U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, which in terms requires the Federal right to be specially set up or claimed. But the above cases and many others show that the failure of the record to disclose a case of the kind which this court is authorized by law to review is held to amount to a lack of jurisdiction, not mere ground for affirmance.

See Arkansas v. Schlierholz, 179 U. S. 598, 45 L. ed. 335, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 164 U. S. 454, 457, 458, 41 L. ed. 511, 512, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 281, 50 L. ed. 1026, 1028, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Davis v. Texas, 139 U. S. 651, 657, 35 L. ed. 300, 303, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 50 L. ed. 497, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

No question of the application or construction of the Constitution was raised or suggested at the trial in the state court, nor was there proof or tender of proof which could be the foundation for such question. Martin v. Texas, supra. The petition for habeas corpus alleged no lack of jurisdiction in the state court, either to try Johnson or to adjudge the sentence under which he was in custody. It is not charged that any of the alleged denials of rights secured to him by the Constitution of the United States were made by virtue or under color of the Constitution, laws, or rules of practice of the state. While an alleged denial of Constitutional rights by state officials acting contrary to the laws of the state may be subjected to review in this court, this cannot be done through a writ of habeas corpus, but only by writ of error to the highest court of the state.

Re Wood (Wood v. Brush) 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738.

The same rule was applied in Kentucky v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 633, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387. While that case related to habeas corpus issued under the removal act (U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 641, 642, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 520, 521), it applies equally here because the principle is the same.

As the court said by Mr. Justice McKenna in Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 173, 50 L. ed. 421, 425, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189, it was not designed, as was observed by the Chief Justice in Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 631, 34 L. ed. 796, 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191, to interfere with the power of the state to protect the lives, liberty, and property of its citizens; nor with the exercise of that power in the adjudication of the courts of the state in administering the process provided by the law of the state.

The claims of Johnson that he was deprived of constitutional rights were not real and substantial, but were "absolutely frivolous" and "wholly without foundation."

Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 46 L. ed. 120, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

Mr. Lewis Shepherd also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Martin A. Fleming and T. B. Shepherd, filed a brief for defendants:

The rule at common law was that a person charged with contempt of a court of law was made to answer the contempt on oath, and if, by his oath, he cleared himself of the contempt, he was discharged. No testimony was taken by the court to rebut his own; but, should he swear falsely, he was subsequently prosecuted for perjury. This is still the rule except in cases affecting private property and private rights. It does not make so much difference whether the contempt proceeding is in a court of law or a court of equity. The logical distinction between contempts in this regard relates to the nature of the particular contempt, rather than to the court in which it occurred.

Thompson v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 48 N. J. Eq. 105, 21 Atl. 182.

Manifestly, the contempt charged in this case belongs to the class known as criminal or constructive contempts, in which the answer of the contemner is conclusive.

King v. Vaughan, 2 Dougl. K. B. 516; King v. Sims, 12 Mod. 511; United States v. Dodge, 2 Gall. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 14,975; Re May, 1 Fed. 737; Haskett v. State, 51 Ind. 176; Burke v. State, 47 Ind. 528; State v. Earl, 41 Ind. 464; People ex rel. Lewis v. Few, 2 Johns. 290; Re Walker, 82 N. C. 95; Re Moore, 63 N. C. 397; Thomas v. Cummins, 1 Yeates, 40; Underwood's Case, 2 Humph. 46; 9 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 44; Oster v. People, 192 Ill. 473, 56 L.R.A. 462, 61 E. 469; United States v. Debs, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 163, 64 Fed. 724; Re Savin, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. ed. 150, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

Mr. G. W. Chamlee also argued the cause for defendants.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court: [571]

This is an information charging a contempt of this court, and is to the following effect. On February 11, 1906, one Johnson, a colored man, was convicted of rape upon a white woman, in a criminal court of Hamilton county, in the state of Tennessee, and was sentenced to death. On March 3 he presented a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to the United States circuit court, setting up, among other things, that all negroes had been excluded, illegally, from the grand and petit juries; that his counsel had been deterred from pleading that fact or challenging the array on that ground, and also from asking for a change of venue to secure an impartial trial, or for a continuance to allow the excitement to subside, by the fear and danger of mob violence; and that a motion for a new trial and an appeal were prevented by the same fear. For these and other reasons it was alleged that he was deprived of various constitutional rights, and was about to be deprived of his life without due process of law.

On March 10, after a hearing upon evidence, the petition was denied, and it was ordered that the petitioner be remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Hamilton county, to be detained by him in his custody for a period of ten days, in which to enable the petitioner to prosecute an appeal, and, in default of the prosecution of the appeal within that time, to be then further proceeded with by the state court under its sentence. On March 17 an appeal to this court was allowed by Mr. Justice Harlan. On the following Monday, March 19, a similar order was made by this court, and it was ordered further "that all proceedings against the appellant be stayed, and the custody of said appellant be retained pending this appeal."

[572] The sheriff of Hamilton county was notified by telegraph of the order, receiving the news before 6 o'clock on the same day. The evening papers of Chattanooga published a full account of what this court had done. And it is alleged that *the sheriff and his deputies were informed, and had reason to believe, that an attempt would be made that night by a mob to murder the prisoner. Nevertheless, if the allegations be true, the sheriff, early in the evening, withdrew the customary guard from the jail, and left only the night jailer in charge. Subsequently, it is alleged, the sheriff and the other defendants, with many others unknown, conspired to break into the jail for the purpose of lynching and murdering Johnson, with intent to show contempt for the order of this court, and for the purpose of preventing it from hearing the appeal and Johnson from exercising his rights. In furtherance of this conspiracy a mob, including the defendants, except the sheriff, Shipp, and the night jailer, Gibson, broke into the jail, took Johnson out and hanged him, the sheriff and Gibson pretending to do their duty, but really sympathizing with and abetting the mob. The final acts as well as the conspiracy are alleged as a contempt.

The defendants have appeared and answered, and certain preliminary questions of law have been argued which it is convenient and just to have settled at the outset before any further steps are taken. The first question, naturally, is that of the jurisdiction of this court. The jurisdiction to punish for a contempt is not denied as a general, abstract proposition, as, of course, it could not be with success. Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 510, 22 L. ed. 205, 207; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 302, 303, 32 L. ed. 405, 408, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. But it is argued that the circuit court had no jurisdiction in the habeas corpus case, unless Johnson was in custody in violation of the Constitution (Rev. Stat. § 753, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 592), and that the appellate jurisdiction of this court was dependent on the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 5, 26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549 (Re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 37 L. ed. 1120, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123), and by that act did not exist unless the case involved "the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States." If the case did not involve the application of the Constitution otherwise than by way of pretense, it is said that this court was without jurisdiction, and that its order might be contemned with impunity. And it is urged *that an inspection of the evidence before the circuit court, if not the face of the petition, shows that the ground alleged for the writ was only a pretense.

We regard this argument as unsound. It has been held, it is true, that orders made by a court having no jurisdiction to make them may be disregarded without liability to process for contempt. Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. ed. 861. But even if the circuit court had no jurisdiction to entertain Johnson's petition, and if this court had no jurisdiction of the appeal, this court, and this court alone, could decide that such was the law. It and it alone necessarily had jurisdiction to decide whether the case was properly before it. On that question, at least, it was its duty to permit argument, and to take the time required for such consideration as it might need. See Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 387, 28 L. ed. 462, 465, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510. Until its judgment declining jurisdiction should be announced, it had authority, from the necessity of the case, to make orders to preserve the existing conditions and the subject of the petition, just as the state court was bound to refrain from further proceedings until the same time. Rev. Stat. § 766; act of March 3, 1893, chap. 226, 27 Stat. at L. 751, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 597. The fact that the petitioner was entitled to argue his case shows what needs no proof, that the law contemplates the possibility of a decision either way, and therefore must provide for it. Of course, the provision of Rev. Stat. § 766, that, until final judgment on the appeal, further proceedings in the state court against the prisoner shall be deemed void, applies to every case. There is no implied exception if the final judgment shall happen to be that the writ should not have issued or that the appeal should be dismissed.

It is proper that we should add that we are unable to agree with the premises upon which the conclusion just denied is based. We cannot regard the grounds upon which the petition for habeas corpus was presented as frivolous or a mere pretense. The murder of the petitioner has made it impossible to decide *that case, and what we have said makes it unnecessary to pass upon it as a preliminary to deciding the question before us. Therefore we shall say no more than that it does not appear to us clear that the subject-matter of the petition was beyond the jurisdiction of the circuit court, and that, in our opinion, the facts that might have been found would have required the gravest and most anxious consideration before the petition could have been denied.

Another general question is to be answered at this time. The defendants severally have denied under oath in their answer that they had anything to do with the murder. It is urged that the sworn answers are conclusive; that if they are false the parties may be prosecuted for perjury, but that in this proceeding they are to be tried, if they so elect, simply by their oaths. It has been suggested that the court is a party and therefore leaves the fact to be decided by the defendant. But this is a mere afterthought, to explain something not understood. The court is not a party. There is nothing that affects the judges in their own persons. Their concern is only that the law should be obeyed and enforced, and their interest is no other than that they represent in every case. On this occasion we shall not go into the history of the notion. It may be that it was an intrusion or perversion of the canon law, as is suggested by the propounding of interrogatories and the very phrase, "purgation by oath" (juramentum purgatorium). If so, it is a fragment of a system of proof which does not prevail in theory or as a whole; and the reason why it has not disappeared perhaps may be found in the rarity with which contempts occur. It may be that even now, if the sole question were the intent of an ambiguous act, the proposition would apply. But in this case it is a question of personal presence and overt acts. If the presence and the acts should be proved there would be little room for the disavowal of intent. And when the acts alleged consist in taking part in a murder it cannot be admitted that a general denial and affidavit should dispose of the case.

324

The outward facts *are matters known to[575] many and they will be ascertained by testimony in the usual way. The question was left open in Re Savin, 131 U. S. 267, 33 L. ed. 150, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699, with a visible leaning toward the conclusion to which we come, and that conclusion has been adopted by state courts in decisions entitled to respect. Huntington v. McMahon, 48 Conn. 174, 200, 201; State v. Matthews, 37 N. H. 450, 455; Bates's Case, 55 N. H. 325, 327; Re Snyder, 103 N. Y. 178, 181, 8 N. E. 479; Crow v. State, 24 Tex. 12, 14; State ex rel. Mason v. Harper's Ferry Bridge Co. 16 W. Va. 864, 873. See Wartman v. Wartman, Taney, 362, 370, Fed. Cas. No. 17,210; Cartwright's Case, 114 Mass. 230; Eilenbecker v. District Court, 124 U. S. 31, 33 L. ed. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424. Whether or not Rev. Stat. § 725, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 583, applies to this court, it embodies the law so far as it goes. We see no reason for emasculating the power given by that section, and making it so nearly futile as it would be if it were construed to mean that all contemnors willing to run the slight risk of a conviction for perjury can escape.

The question was touched, in argument, whether the acts charged constitute a contempt. We are of opinion that they do, and that their character does not depend upon a nice inquiry whether, after the order made by this court, the sheriff was to be regarded as bailee of the United States or still held the prisoner in the name of the state alone. Either way, the order suspended further proceedings by the state against the prisoner, and required that he should be forthcoming to abide the further order of this court. It may be found that what created the mob and led to the crime was the unwillingness of its members to submit to the delay required for the trial of the appeal. From that to the intent to prevent that delay and the hearing of the appeal is a short step. If that step is taken the contempt is proved.

These preliminaries being settled the trial of the case will proceed.

Mr. Justice Moody took no part in the decision.

203 U. S.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

[577] *EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF THE SEN-ECA NATION et al., Petitioners. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for Leave to File Petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Chester Howe for petitioners.

Messrs. W. H. Robeson, J. J. Hemphill, A. B. Browne, and Alexander Britton for respondents.

Assistant Attorney General Van Orsdel for the United States.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

FRANK D. ZELL, Plaintiff in Error, v. JUDGES OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA. [No. 297.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 665, 144 Fed. 837.

Messrs. C. L. Frailey, R. D. Brown, Malcolm Lloyd, Jr., Charles H. Burr, and A. S. Worthington for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. D. Lawrence Grover, Tazewell Taylor and Hampton L. Carson for defendant in error.

October 15, 1906. Order affirmed with costs.

GRAHAM & MORTON TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Appellant, v. CRAIG SHIPBUILDING COMPANY. [No. 339.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

[578] Mr. Charles E. Kremer* for the appellant. Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder, S. H. Holding, and Frank S. Masten for the appellee.

October 15, 1906. Decree affirmed with costs, on the authority of People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393, 15 L. ed. 961; Roach v. Chapman, 22 How. 129, 16 L. ed. 294; Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. 532, 22 L. ed. 487; The Robert W. Parsons (Perry v. Haines) 191 U. S. 17, 48 L. ed. 73, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, and cases cited.

203 U. S.

JOSEPH J. WATERS, Administrator of Robert Jackson, Deceased, Plaintiff in Error, v. GEORGE E. EMMONS and J. PAUL SMITH. [No. 19.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 146; on former appeal, 19 App. D. C. 250.

Mr. J. J. Waters for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. William F. Mattingly for the defendants in error.

October 22, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs.

J. A. AXTELL et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. CYRUS WEBBER. [No. 26.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

See same case below, 94 Minn. 375, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 194, 102 N. W. 915.

Messrs. Albert R. Allen, George E. Clarke, and C. M. O'Neill for the plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. F. J. Knox and Andrew C. Dunn for the defendant in error.

October 22, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 397, 34 L. ed. 991, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; National L. Ins. Co. v. Scheffer, 131 U. S. ccciii, Appx. and 26 L. ed. 1110.

DANIEL SULLIVAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. ST. LOUIS, BROWNVILLE, & MEXICO RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 29.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Texas.

Messrs. L. G. Denman and Floyd McGown for the plaintiff in error.

*Messrs. A. W. Houston and Reagan Hous- [579] ton for the defendant in error.

October 22, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Rosenbaum v. Bauer, 120 U. S. 450, 30 L. ed. 743, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co (United States ex rel. Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co.) 197 U. S. 541, 49 L. ed. 871, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

NORTH AMERICAN TRANSPORTATION & TRADING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. W. B. GILL. [No. 35.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

See same case below, 37 Wash. 694, 79 Pac. 778.

Mr. Frederick Bausman for the plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for the defendant in error.

October 22, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Leon v. Galceran, 11 Wall. 185, 20 L. ed. 74; American S. B. Co. v. Chase, 16 Wall. 522, 21 L. ed. 369; The Robert W. Parsons (Perry v. Haines) 191 U. S. 17, 36, 48 L. ed. 73, 81, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8.

W. J. LAFFOON, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. F. KERNER et al. [No. 38.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina.

See same case below, 138 N. C. 281, 50 S. E. 654.

Mr. Louis M. Swink for the plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for the defendant in error.

October 22, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. California Consol. Min. Co. v. Manley, 203 U. S. 579, (next case), 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, and cases cited.

CALIFORNIA CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. CHARLES MANLEY, Sheriff of Shoshone County, State of Idaho, et al. [No. 148.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

See same case below, 10 Idaho, 786, 81 Pac. 50; on rehearing, 10 Idaho, 801, 81 Pac. 54.

Mr. J. H. Forney in support of the motion to dismiss.

Mr. M. A. Folsom in opposition thereto.

October 22, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Green v. Van Buskerk, 3 Wall. 448, 18 L. ed. 245; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 160 U. S. 374, 40 L. ed. 461, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Schlosser v. Hemp- [580] hill, *198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Clark v. Roller, 199 U. S. 541-544, 50 L. ed. 300-302, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

326

W. W. ROSE, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF KANSAS ON THE RELATION OF C. C. COLEMAN, Attorney General. [No. 360.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

See same case below, (Kan.) 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 843, 86 Pac. 296.

Mr. C. C. Coleman in support of motions.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney in opposition thereto.

October 22, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Nonconnah Turnp. Co. v. Tennessee, 131 U. S. clviii, Appx. and 24 L. ed. 368; Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 38 L. ed. 259, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

FERDINAND EIDMAN, Collector, etc., Petitioner, v. FREDERICK B. TILGHMAN et al., Executors, etc. [No. 208.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 69 C. C. A. 139, 136 Fed. 141.

Messrs. Assistant Attorney General McReynolds, Assistant Attorney General Robb and Solicitor General Hoyt for the petitioner.

Mr. E. B. Whitney for the respondents.

October 29, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs by a divided court, and cause remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

THOMAS F. WILSON (on Behalf of the Territory of Arizona), Appellant, v. N. O. MURPHY et al. [No. 6.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives for appellant.

Mr. C. F. Ainsworth for appellees.

October 29, 1906. Decree affirmed* with [581] costs.

THOMAS F. WILSON (on Behalf of the Territory of Arizona), Appellant, v. GEORGE W. VICKERS et al. [No. 7.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives for appellant.

Mr. C. F. Ainsworth for appellees.

October 29, 1906. Decree affirmed with costs.

203 U. S.

HAIGHT & FREESE COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. BEVERLY R. ROBINSON, Receiver, etc. [No. 241.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. Roger Foster in support of motion to dismiss.

Mr. Albert I. Sire for the plaintiffs in error in opposition thereto.

October 29, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Alexander v. United States, 201 U. S. 117, 122, 50 L. ed. 686, 688, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Nelson v. United States, 201 U. S. 92, 50 L. ed. 673, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Hardee v. Wilson, 146 U. S. 179, 36 L. ed. 933, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Masterson v. Herndon (Masterson v. Howard) 10 Wall. 416, 19 L. ed. 953; Beardsley v. Arkansas & L. R. Co. 158 U. S. 123, 39 L. ed. 919, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786.

FREDERICK H. VOGT, Appellant, v. MATILDA S. VOGT by her Guardian ad Litem, Pauline Vogt. [No. 62.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 26 App. D. C. 46.

[582] Mr. John C. Gittings for the appellant. Messrs. J. J. Darlington and Leon To-briner for appellee.

October 29, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; California Consol. Min. Co. v. Manley, 203 U. S. 579, ante, 326, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779 and cases cited.

HUGH P. STRONG et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. BUFFALO LAND & EXPLORATION COMPANY. [No. 36.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

See same case below, 91 Minn. 84, 97 N. W. 575.

Messrs. J. M. Vale, John Brennan, Moses E. Clapp, and Newell H. Clapp for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. William C. White for the defendant in error.

October 29, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs on the authority of Midway Co. v. Eaton, 183 U. S. 602, 46 L. ed. 347, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

203 U. S.

DAKOTA, WYOMING, & MISSOURI RIVER RAILROAD COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. CHARLES D. CROUCH et al., Trustees. [Nos. 45 and 46.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota.

See same case below, 18 S. D. 540, 101 N. W. 722.

Mr. William T. Coad for the plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Frederick C. Bryan for the defendants in error.

October 29, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Hardee v. Wilson, 146 U. S. 179, 36 L. ed. 933, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Sipperley v. Smith, 155 U. S. 86, 39 L. ed. 79, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Mason v. United States, 136 U. S. 581, 34 L. ed. 545, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1062; Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. v. Sweeney, 43 C. C. A. 255, 103 Fed. 342, 37 C. C. A. 127, 95 Fed. 396; Sweeney v. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. 61 Fed. 3; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 45 L. ed. 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245, 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178.

W. S. KEEL, JR., et al., Appellants, v. E. E. DOUVILLE.* [No. 68.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi.

Messrs. D. W. Harper, William R. Harper, and E. M. Barber for the appellants.

Messrs. E. J. Bowers and Walter J. Geo for the appellee.

November 5, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 41 L. ed. 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969, and cases cited.

J. G. RAWLINS, Appellant, v. J. F. PASSMORE, Sheriff of Lowndes County, Ga. [No. 392.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia.

Mr. John Randolph Cooper for the appellant.

Messrs. John C. Hart and W. E. Thomas for appellee.

November 5, 1906. Final order affirmed with costs. Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 L. ed. 899, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560, 124 Ga. 31, 52 S. E. 1; Craemer v. Washington, 168 U. S. 124, 128, 129, 42 L. ed. 407-409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

KATIE MOESCHEN, Plaintiff in Error, v. TENEMENT HOUSE DEPARTMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK. [No. 93.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 90 App. Div. 603, 85 N. Y. Supp. 1148; in Court of Appeals, 179 N. Y. 325, 70 L.R.A. 704, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231.

Mr. Adolph Bloch for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. Theodore Connolly for the defendant in error.

November 12, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 32, 24 L. ed. 989, 991; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 510, 544, 35 L. ed. 1099, 1109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 48 L. ed. 148, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 107 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106. And see Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 233, 38 [584] L.R.A. 305, 38 Atl. 1; Com v. Roberts*, 155 Mass. 281, 16 L.R.A. 400, 29 N. E. 522.

THE JAMES MCCREERY REALTY CORPORATION, Plaintiff in Error, v. EQUITABLE NATIONAL BANK. [No. 109.]

In Error to the City Court of the City of New York.

Messrs. Eugene G. Kremer and E. B. Whitney for the plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles A. Hess and F. D. McKenney for the defendant in error.

November 19, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 367, 42 L. ed. 200, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

DAVID LAMAR, Plaintiff in Error, v. ALBERT G. SPALDING. [No. 110.]

In Error to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey.

See same case below, 68 N. J. Eq. 686, 60 Atl. 66, 63 Atl. 493.

Messrs. Edmund Wilson and Thomas J. Kennedy for the defendant in error.

Messrs. Alan H. Strong and Harry Allen Mendelson for the plaintiff in error.

November 19, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

CARL S. REYNOLDS, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF CONNECTICUT. [No. 111.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut.

Mr. Clayton B. Smith for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. A. Hull for the defendant in error.

November 19, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Schlosser v. Hemp-hill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1001, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; California Consol. Min. Co.* [585] v. Manley (decided October 22), 203 U. S. 579, ante, 326, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, and cases cited.

GRANVILLE STUART, Plaintiff in Error, v. SAMUEL T. HAUSER et al. [No. 60.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

See same case below, 9 Idaho, 53, 72 Pac. 719; on rehearing, 9 Idaho, 82, 72 Pac. 729.

Messrs. George B. Colby and Charles W. Dayton for the plaintiff in error.

Messrs. S. M. Stockslager and W. E. Borah for the defendants in error.

December 3, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 34 L. ed. 869, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 41 L. ed. 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969; Bausman v. Dixon, 173 U. S. 113, 43 L. ed. 633, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 335, 45 L. ed. 220, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Beals v. Cone, 188 U. S. 184, 47 L. ed. 435, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 45 L. ed. 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

ANNIE CAMP FIELD et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. BARBER ASPHALT PAVING COMPANY. [No. 114.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 188 Mo. 182, 86 S. W. 860.

Mr. Richard H. Field for the plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. W. C. Scarritt and E. L. Scarritt for the defendant in error.

December 3, 1906. Judgment affirmed with costs. Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

[586]ROBERT D. KINNEY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JAMES T. MITCHELL.* [No. 131.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

See same case below, 138 Fed. 270.

Mr. Robert D. Kinney pro se.

Messrs. Marlin E. Olmsted and Samuel Dickson for the defendant in error.

December 17, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF FRANK D. ZELL, Petitioner. [No. —, Original]

Motion for Leave to File Petition for Writs of Prohibition or Mandamus.

Mr. Charles L. Frailey for the petitioner. December 17, 1906. Denied.

PEARL H. SMITH, Appellant, v. SAMUEL G. IVERSON as State Auditor, etc. [No. 124.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

Messrs. H. H. Grace, John Brennan, and T. D. O'Brien for the appellant.

Messrs. C. S. Wilson, Edward T. Young, and J. L. Washburn for the appellee.

December 17, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Hohorst v. Hamburg-American Packet Co. 148 U. S. 262, 37 L. ed. 443, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Re Hohorst, 150 U. S. 653, 37 L. ed. 1211, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Bowker v. United States, 186 U. S. 135, 138, 46 L. ed. 1090, 1091, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802.

HIRAM T. CHAPMAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. FLORENCE ELLIOTT CHAPMAN. [No. 239.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

See same case below (Neb.) 104 N. W. 880.

Messrs. E. F. Colladay, W. F. Gurley, and W. J. Woodrough in support of motions.

Messrs. William E. Ganitt and Herbert L. Baker in opposition thereto.

[587]December 17, 1906. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Schlosser v. Hemphill, 198 U. S. 173, 49 L. ed. 1000, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

203 U. S.

ATLANTIC TRUST COMPANY, Petitioner, v. EDGAR C. CHAPMAN, Receiver, etc., et al. [No. 413.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Messrs. Edward B. Whitney and Stanley W. Dexter for petitioner.

Mr. Edgar C. Chapman for respondents. October 15, 1906. Granted.

HENRY ARNOLD RICHARDSON, as Trustee, etc., Petitioner, v. JOHN M. SHAW et al. [No. 433.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. John Brooks Leavitt for petitioner.

Mr. E. S. Theall for respondents.

October 15, 1906. Granted.

EAGLE ORE SAMPLING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. DUNCAN CHISHOLM, Trustee. [No. 142.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 472, 144 Fed. 670.

Mr. Henry M. Teller for the petitioner.

Messrs. C. A. Brandenburg, E. C. Brandenburg and Joel F. Vaile for respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

M. P. REEVE, Petitioner, v. NORTH CAROLINA LAND AND TIMBER COMPANY et al.* [No. 298.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 72 C. C. A. 287, 141 Fed. 821.

Mr. Henry H. Ingersoll for the petitioner.

Mr. R. E. L. Mountcastle for the respondents.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

ARTHUR WEINREB et al., Petitioners, v. JOSEPH H. FINK. [No. 305.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 76 C. C. A. 609, 146 Fed. 243.

Mr. F. M. Ozaki for the petitioners.

Mr. Adolph Bloch for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

CARMELO GRECO, Petitioner, v. THE STEAMSHIP SARNIA, etc. [No. 322.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 332, 147 Fed. 106.

Mr. Wilford H. Smith for the petitioner.

Mr. Percy S. Dudley for the respondent.
October 15, 1906. Denied.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM W. RUTTER et al., Executors, etc. [No. 330.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 315, 147 Fed. 51.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and Henry D. Hotchkiss for the petitioner.

Mr. Augustus Van Wyck for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

DAVID MACKENZIE, Petitioner, v. JAMES PEASE, Sheriff, etc. [No. 337.]

[589] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Robert G. Dyrenforth for the petitioner.

Mr. Harris F. Williams for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

SAGINAW MATCH COMPANY, Petitioner, v. DIAMOND MATCH COMPANY. [No. 397.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 74 C. C. A. 59, 142 Fed. 727.

Messrs. R. A. Parker and Charles F. Burton for the petitioner.

Mr. John R. Nolan for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

CUMBERLAND TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF NASHVILLE, TENN. [No. 436.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 76 C. C. A. 297, 145 Fed. 607.

Mr. William L. Granbery for the petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOSEPH SIMON. [No. 441.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 366, 147 Fed. 224.

Messrs. Edward T. Fenwick and Clarence J. Shearn for the petitioner.

Mr. Edward K. Jones for the respondent.
October 15, 1906. Denied.

ATLANTIC TRANSPORT COMPANY, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. FRANCES M. BARNES. [No. 442.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit *Court of Appeals for [590] the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 217, 146 Fed. 509.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for the petitioner.

Mr. Louis H. Porter for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

JAMES P. STEWART et al., Petitioners, v. H. S. WRIGHT. [No. 443.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 499, 147 Fed. 321.

Mr. W. R. Robertson for the petitioners.

Mr. John W. Halliburton for the respondent.

October 15, 1906. Denied.

OLD DOMINION STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Owner, etc., Petitioner, v. PRIMUS GILMORE, Administrator, etc., et al. [No. 350.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Harrington Putnam for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and George Whitfield Betts, Jr., for respondent.

October 22, 1906. Granted.

ELBERT R. ROBINSON, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN CAR & FOUNDRY COMPANY. [No. 165.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 68 C. C. A. 331, 135 Fed. 693.

Mr. J. Gray Lucas for the petitioner.

Messrs. Thomas A. Banning and Ephraim Banning for the respondent.

October 22, 1906. Denied.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MATTIE J. STUTTS, Administratrix, etc. [No. 318.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 588, 144 Fed. 948.

Mr. Milton Humes for the petitioner.

Mr. Richard W. Walker for the respondent.

October 22, 1906. Denied.

[591]*ABRAM ROSENBERGER, Petitioner, v. JOSEPH H. HARRIS. [No. 366.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 76 C. C. A. 225, 145 Fed. 449.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and James C. Jones for the petitioner.

Messrs. Solicitor General Hoyt and Assistant Attorney General Robb for the respondent.

October 22, 1906. Denied.

MORITZ EISNER et al., Petitioners, v. EMILIE SAXLEHNER. [No. 414.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 417, 147 Fed. 189.

Messrs. Charles K. Allen, Leopold Wal-lach, and Charles G. Coe for the petitioners.

Mr. Antonio Knauth for the respondent.

October 22, 1906. Denied.

JAMES W. DONNELL, Petitioner, v. HERRING-HALL-MARVIN SAFE COMPANY et al. [No. 409.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. George Peck Merrick and S. S. Gregory for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles H. Aldrich and Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., for respondents.

October 29, 1906. Granted.

HERRING-HALL-MARVIN SAFE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HALL'S SAFE COMPANY et al. [No. 462.]

Petition and Cross-Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., and Charles H. Aldrich for petitioner.

Messrs. Judson Harmon and William C. Cochran for respondents.

October 29, 1906. Granted.

203 U. S.

ALEXANDER D. SHAW et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 460.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 291, 144 Fed. 329.

Mr. Edward S. Hatch for the petitioners.

Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the respondent.

October 29, 1906. Denied.

ROSA M. COLE, Executrix, etc., Petitioner, v. CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS et al. [No. 465.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 442, 144 Fed. 640.

Messrs. Ferdinand Winter and Alexander C. Ayres for the petitioner.

Messrs. Frederick E. Matson, Henry War-rum, and Merrill Moores for the respondents.

October 29, 1906. Denied.

GEORGE R. FINCH et al., Petitioners, v. MARYLAND CASUALTY COMPANY. [No. 423.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 566, 147 Fed. 388.

Mr. P. J. McLaughlin for the petitioners.

Mr. Emerson Hadley for the respondent.

November 5, 1906. Denied.

C. H. SCOTT et al., Petitioners, v. CHARLES P. GUICE, an Infant, etc. [No. 453.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and C. H. Scott for the petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

November 5, 1906. Denied.

CHESAPEAKE & OHIO STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Limited, Petitioner, v. EDWARD MORRIS. [No. 483.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 11.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for the petitioner.

Mr. William S. Opdyke for the respondent.

November 19, 1906. Denied.

MERCANTILE TRUST COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. SAMUEL P. WHEELER, Receiver, etc. [No. 490.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 147 Fed. 699.

Messrs. Philip Barton Warren and Bluford Wilson for the petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

November 19, 1906. Denied.

GEORGE W. CRICHFIELD, Petitioner, v. JUAN P. JULIA. [No. 491.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 297, 147 Fed. 65.

Mr. L. Laflin Kellogg for the petitioner.

Messrs. Henry W. Herbert and W. Benton Crisp for the respondent.

November 19, 1906. Denied.

MICHIGAN STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HUGH MCGILL et al. [No. 459.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 75 C. C. A. 518, 144 Fed. 788.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, J. Parker Kirlin, and C. R. Hickox for the petitioner.

Mr. William Denman for the respondent.

December 3, 1906. Denied.

OHIO TRANSPORTATION COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. DAVIDSON STEAMSHIP COMPANY. [No. 486.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 185.

[594] Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder, S. H. Holding, F. S. Marten, and Wm. E. Church* for the petitioners.

Messrs. C. E. Kremer and F. H. Canfield for the respondent.

December 3, 1906. Denied.

WILLIAM SOBEY, Petitioner, v. WILFORD H. HOLSCLAW. [No. 466.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 28 App. D. C. 65.

Messrs. Melville Church, James H. Peirce, and George P. Fisher, Jr., for the petitioner.

Messrs. Edgar M. Kitchen and Edward T. Fenwick, for the respondent.

Mr. Albert G. Davis as amicus curiæ.

December 10, 1906. Denied.

WILLIAM MCCOACH, Collector etc., Petitioner, v. PHILADELPHIA TRUST, SAFE DEPOSIT, & INSURANCE COMPANY, Executors, etc., et al. [Nos. 502, 503]; WILLIAM MCCOACH, Collector, etc., Petitioner, v. GEORGE W. NORRIS et al., Executors, etc. [No. 504.]

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 73 C. C. A. 610, 142 Fed. 120.

The Attorney General, Solicitor General, and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds for petitioner.

Mr. H. Gordon McCouch for respondents.
December 10, 1906. Granted.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. MARION TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, etc. [No. 505.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 74 C. C. A. 439, 143 Fed. 301.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds for petitioners.
December 10, 1906. Granted.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF VANDALIA, ILL., et al., Petitioners, v. EDWARD FLICKINGER. [No. 473.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 76 C. C. A. 132, 145 Fed. 162.

Mr. John W. Van Deman for the petitioners.

Mr. T. E. Powell for the respondent.

December 10, 1906. Denied.

DE WANE B. SMITH, Petitioner, v. DEXTER G. LOOK et al. [No. 489.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 12.

Mr. Milton E. Robinson for the petitioner.

Mr. Fred L. Chappell for the respondents.
December 10, 1906. Denied.

EDWARD B. LEIGH, Petitioner, v. KEWANEE MANUFACTURING COMPANY. [No. 498.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 147 Fed. 693.

Messrs. David S. Geer and John P. Ahrens for the petitioner.

Messrs. Joseph H. Defrees and William Brace for the respondent.

December 10, 1906. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. R. HOE & CO. [No. 506.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 427, 147 Fed. 201.

Messrs. Solicitor General Hoyt and W. Wickham Smith for the petitioner.

Mr. Albert H. Washburn for the respondents.

December 17, 1906. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. JAMES C. MORGAN. [No. 507.]

[596] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 189.

Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

December 17, 1906. Denied.

EVA A. INGERSOLL, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner, v. JOSEPH A. CORAM et al. [No. 519.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Messrs. E. N. Harwood, Hannis Taylor, Hollis R. Bailey, and John H. Hazelton for petitioner.

Messrs. Louis D. Brandeis and William H. Dunbar for respondents.

December 24, 1906. Granted.

CLARA CHAISON et al., Petitioners, v. LAWRENCE HYDE et al. [No. 487.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 72 C. C. A. 655, 140 Fed. 433.

Mr. George C. Greer for the petitioners.

Messrs. William Hepburn Russell and William Beverly Winslow for the respondents.

December 24, 1906. Denied.

GEORGE F. VIETOR et al., Petitioners, v. BENJAMIN LEVI et al. [No. 509.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 74 C. C. A. 132, 142 Fed. 962.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus for the petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

December 24, 1906. Denied.

MYRON W. ANDRUS, Petitioner, v. BERKSHIRE POWER COMPANY. [No. 511.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals *for [597] the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 248, 147 Fed. 76.

Mr. C. Walter Artz for the petitioner.

Messrs. Arthur L. Shipman and William Waldo Hyde for the respondent.

December 24, 1906. Denied.

CHARLES THORLEY, Petitioner, v. PABST BREWING COMPANY. [No. 521.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 76 C. C. A. 87, 145 Fed. 117.

Messrs. Joseph Fettretch and Wm. F. Sheehan for the petitioner.

Mr. A. S. Gilbert for the respondent.

December 24, 1906. Denied.

ROBERT A. MILLER, as Special Master, et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY. [No. 61.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico.

See same case below, 1 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 420.

Mr. Fritz V. Briesen for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. F. H. Dexter and F. D. McKenney for defendant in error.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for the defendant in error.

AMERICAN RAILROAD COMPANY OF PORTO RICO, Plaintiff in Error, v. JUAN MATIAS FERNANDEZ. [No. 95.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico.

Messrs. F. H. Dexter, F. D. McKenney, and J. S. Flannery for plaintiff in error.

*No appearance for defendant in error. [598]

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for the plaintiff in error.

ALLIANCE GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Appellant, v. THE CITY ALLIANCE. [Nos. 161 and 162.]

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

Mr. Wm. B. Sanders for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

NEWPORT NEWS & OLD POINT RAILWAY & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. HAMPTON ROADS RAILWAY & ELECTRIC COMPANY et al. [No. 5.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia.

See same case below, 102 Va. 795, 47 S. E. 839.

Messrs. Fred Harper and S. Gordon Cumming for plaintiff in error.

Mr. R. G. Bickford for defendant in error.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

COVINGTON & CINCINNATI BRIDGE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. THE CITY OF COVINGTON. [No. 183.]

Mr. S. D. Rouse for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for plaintiff in error.

OKLAHOMA GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. MYRTLE LUKERT. [No. 203.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma.

Messrs. D. T. Flynn and C. B. Ames for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Chester Howe for defendant in error.

[599] October 9, 1906. Dismissed*, per stipulation.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellant, v. ROBERT O. FINK, Treasurer, etc., et al. [No. 22.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and John N. Baldwin for the appellant.

Mr. Norris Brown for appellee.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Maxwell Evarts for the appellant.

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON, & QUINCY RAILWAY COMPANY, Appellant, v. A. F. CARLSON et al. [No. 23.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska.

Messrs. Charles J. Greene and Ralph W. Breckenridge for the appellant.

Mr. Norris Brown for appellee.

October 9, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Maxwell Evarts in behalf of counsel for the appellant.

GEORGE D. COLLINS, Plaintiff in Error, v. THOMAS F. O'NEIL, Sheriff of the City and County of San Francisco, Cal. [No. 452.]

In Error to the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

Mr. William Hoff Cook for the defendant in error.

October 9, 1906. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. William Hoff Cook for the defendant in error.

C. W. BUSTER et al., Appellants, v. J. GEORGE WRIGHT, United States Indian Inspector, et al. [No. 39.]

Appeal *from the United States Circuit [600] Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Wm. F. Hutchings for appellants.

No appearance for appellees.

October 17, 1906. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

WILLIAM J. GALLAGHER, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS. [No. 20.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

See same case below, 211 Ill. 158, 71 N. E. 842.

Mr. Charles H. Soelke for plaintiff in error.

Mr. E. C. Lindley for defendant in error.

October 22, 1906. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JAMES VAN BUREN, Appellant, v. P. F. HENNESSEY, Testamentary Executor, etc., et al. [No. 65.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Branch K. Miller for appellant.

Mr. Wm. J. Hennessey for appellee.

October 24, 1906. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JULIAN CASTILLO SLAUGHTER et al., Appellants, v. CECILE R. LOEB, Executrix, etc. [No. 348.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Wilton J. Lambert for the appellants.

No appearance for appellee.

October 29, 1906. Dismissed with costs on motion of Mr. Charles L. Frailey, in behalf of counsel for the appellants.

WILLIAM F. HOLTZMAN et al., Appellants, v. IRWIN B. LINTON, Executor, etc. [No. 274.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington and E. Hilton Jackson for appellants.

Messrs. Irwin B. Linton and J. Altheus Johnson for appellee.

[601] *November 5, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for appellants.

UNITED STATES, Complainant, v. STATE OF MICHIGAN. [No. 4, Original.]

See same case on demurrer, 190 U. S. 379, 47 L. ed. 1103, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the complainant.

Messrs. John E. Bird, Horace M. Oren and Charles A. Blair for defendant.

November 19, 1906. Dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the complainant.

STEPHEN R. WIGHTMAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF CONNECTICUT. [No. 113.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut.

Mr. Samuel Park for plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. A. Hull for defendant in error.

December 3, 1906. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. D. ROY MUMFORD. [No. 205.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

Mr. Robert Mather for the plaintiff in error.

Messrs. N. D. Ely, Arthur G. Bush, and Charles F. Wilson for defendant in error.

December 3, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on authority of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

203 U. S.

SAM LEE et al., Appellants, v. HERBERT E. ELLIS. [No. 135.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of *Oklahoma.

Mr. S. H. Harris for appellants.

Mr. Fred Beall for appellee.

December 10, 1906. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

[602]

ALBERT T. PATRICK, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK. [No. 336.]

In Error to the Court of General Sessions for the Peace for the County of New York.

Mr. William Lindsay for the plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

December 13, 1906. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. William Lindsay for the plaintiff in error.

PETRONA DEL CARMEN GONZALEZ RESTO, Appellant, v. PETRONA RESTO Y NEGRÓN et al. [No. 524.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Mr. Perry Allen for the appellees.

December 17, 1906. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Perry Allen for the appellees.

RICHARD HYNES, Appellant, v. LEO V. YOUNGORTH, United States Marshal, etc. [No. 529]; A. H. HEDDERLY, Appellant, v. LEO V. YOUNGORTH, United States Marshal, etc. [No. 530.]

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellee.

December 24, 1906. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellee.

335

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

S U P R E M E C O U R T

OF THE

U N I T E D S T A T E S

A T

OCTOBER TERM, 1906.

Vol. 204.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1906,
AND REPORTED HEREIN,
VOLUME 204,
AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in	Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in
1-2	Jerome v. Cogswell	343	85-86	Elder v. Colorado ex rel. Badg- ley	382
2-7	" "	344	87-88	" "	384
7-8	" "	345	88-89	" "	385
8	Old Wayne Mut. L. Asso. v. McDonough	345	89-90	Newman v. Gates	385
12-14	" "	347	90-92	" "	380
14-16	" "	348	92-93	" "	388
16-19	" "	349	93-95	" "	389
19-21	" "	350	95	" "	390
21-23	" "	351	96-97	J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green	390
24	Wilson v. Shaw	351	97-101	" "	391
24-25	" "	352	101-103	" "	392
30-31	" "	355	103	" "	393
31-33	" "	356	103-105	American Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Colorado ex rel. Lindsley	393
33-35	" "	357	105-107	" "	394
36	Bachtel v. Wilson	357	107	" "	395
36-39	" "	358	111-113	" "	397
39-41	" "	359	113-116	" "	398
41-42	" "	360	116-117	{ Cleveland Electric R. Co. v. Cleveland Cleveland v. Cleveland Elec- tric R. Co.	399
42	{ Bachtel v. Wilson Miller v. Wilson Davis v. Wilson Van Horn v. Wilson	360	117-119	" "	400
43	{ Kann v. King Webb v. King	360	119-122	" "	401
47	" "	362	122-124	" "	402
47-50	" "	363	124-127	" "	403
50-52	" "	364	127	" "	404
52-55	" "	365	129-130	" "	405
55-57	" "	366	130-133	" "	406
57-59	" "	367	133-135	" "	407
59-62	" "	368	135-137	" "	408
62-64	" "	369	137-140	" "	409
64	Garrozi v. Dastas	369	140-142	" "	410
67-69	" "	374	142	" "	411
69-71	" "	375	143	United States v. G. Falk & Bro.	411
71-74	" "	376	145-147	" "	412
74-76	" "	377	147-149	" "	413
76-78	" "	378	149-152	" "	414
78-81	" "	379	152	" "	415
81-83	" "	380	152	New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon	415
83-85	" "	381	156-159	" "	421
85	Elder v. Colorado ex rel. Badg- ley	381

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in	Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in
159-161	New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon	422	272-273	Armstrong v. Ashley	482
161-162	"	423	273-276	"	483
162-163	Ohio Valley Nat. Bank v. Hulitt	423	276-278	"	484
163	"	424	279-282	"	486
163-164	"	425	282-284	"	487
164-167	"	426	284-286	"	488
167-169	"	427	286	Merchants Heat & L. Co. v. James B. Clow & Sons	488
169-170	"	428	288-289	"	489
170-172	Zartarian v. Billings	428	289-291	"	490
172-174	"	429	291	Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice	490
174-176	"	430	291-293	"	491
176	Wecker v. National Enameling & S. Co.	430	293-296	"	492
177-180	"	433	297	"	493
180-182	"	434	297-299	"	494
182-185	"	435	299-301	"	495
185-186	"	436	302	Walker v. McLoud	495
186	Shropshire, Woodliff & Co. v. Bush	436	302-304	"	496
187-188	"	437	304-306	"	497
188-189	"	438	308-309	"	498
190	Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien	438	309-311	"	499
192-193	"	439	311	Bacon v. Walker	499
193-196	"	440	313-314	"	500
196-198	"	441	314-316	"	501
198-200	"	442	316-319	"	502
200-203	"	443	319-320	"	503
203	"	444	320	Bown v. Walling	503
204-205	Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co.	444	320-321	"	504
205-207	"	445	321	Chicago v. Mills	504
207-208	"	446	325	"	507
212-214	"	447	325-328	"	508
214-217	"	448	328-330	"	509
217-219	"	449	330-331	"	510
219-220	"	450	331	Kansas v. United States	510
220	Erie R. Co. v. Erie & W. Transp. Co.	450	337	"	511
223	"	452	337-340	"	512
223-226	"	453	340-342	"	513
226-228	"	454	342-343	"	514
228	Crowe v. Trickey	454	343-345	United States v. Hite	514
229-230	"	455	345-348	"	515
230-233	"	456	348-349	"	516
233	"	457	349	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States	516
234-235	"	458	349-350	"	517
235-237	"	459	350-355	"	518
237-240	"	460	355-357	"	519
240	"	461	357-359	"	520
241	Crowe v. Harmon	461	359	Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg	520
241	Ballard v. Hunter	461	361	"	521
242	"	462	361-364	"	522
242-245	"	463	461	"	523
245-247	"	464	364	Union Bridge Co. v. United States	523
247-250	"	465	365-367	"	527
250-251	"	466	367-370	"	528
254-255	"	471	370-372	"	529
255-257	"	472	372-379	"	530
257-259	"	473	379-381	"	531
259-262	"	474	381-384	"	532
262-265	"	475	384-386	"	533
265	"	476	386-389	"	534
266	East Central Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co.	476	389-391	"	535
267-269	"	480	391-394	"	536
269-272	"	481	394-396	"	537
272	"	482	396-398	"	538
			398-401	"	539
			401-403	"	540
			403	Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas	540

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in	Off. Rep. 204 U. S.	Title.	Here in
404	Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas	541	538	Hammond v. Whittredge	606
404-405	"	542	538-541	"	607
405-407	"	543	541-543	"	608
407-408	"	544	543-544	"	609
411	"	545	547-548	"	611
411-414	"	546	548-551	"	612
414	"	547	551	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Smith, H. & Co.	612
415	Wallace v. Adams	547	551-553	"	613
418-420	"	550	553-554	"	614
420-423	"	551	556	"	615
423-425	"	552	556-559	"	616
425-426	"	553	559-561	"	617
426	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co.	553	561	"	618
430-432	"	555	562-563	United States v. Keatley	618
432-435	"	556	563-565	"	619
435-437	"	557	565	Osborne v. Clark	619
437-440	"	558	567	"	624
440-442	"	559	567-568	"	625
442-445	"	560	568-569	"	626
445-447	"	561	569	"	627
447-448	"	562	570	Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Boynton	629
449	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill	562	570-573	"	630
449-452	"	563	573-575	"	631
452	"	564	578-580	"	633
453-454	American R. Co. v. Castro	564	580	"	634
454-456	"	565	581-582	Allen v. United States	634
456-458	"	566	582-584	"	635
458	McKay v. Kalyton	566	584	"	636
458-461	"	567	585	{ Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Babcock
461	"	568		{ Union P. R. Co. v. Fink	636
463-465	"	569	591-593	"	638
465-468	"	570	593-596	"	639
468-470	"	571	596-598	"	640
470	Serra v. Mortiga	571	598	"	641
471-473	"	572	599	Doyle v. London Guarantee & Acci. Co.	641
473-475	"	573	601-602	"	642
475-477	"	574	602-604	"	643
477	"	575	604-607	"	644
478-479	Iglehart v. Iglehart	575	607-608	"	645
479-480	"	576	609	Computing Scale Co. v. Auto-matic Scale Co.	645
483-485	"	579	609-613	"	647
485-488	"	580	611-612	"	648
488	"	581	613-616	"	649
489-490	McGuire v. Gerstley	581	616-618	"	650
490-492	"	582	618-621	"	651
492-495	"	583	621-622	"	652
495-496	"	584	623	Duke v. Turner	652
499-500	"	587	625-627	"	653
500-502	"	588	627-630	"	654
502-503	"	589	630-632	"	655
504-505	Clark v. Gerstley	589	632-634	Smithers v. Smith	656
505-507	Arthur v. Texas & P. R. Co.	590	634-636	"	657
507-509	"	591	639-641	"	659
509-510	"	592	641-643	"	660
514-515	"	593	643-646	"	661
515-517	"	594	646	"	662
517-520	"	595	647-648	Cunningham v. Springer	662
520-521	"	596	651-652	"	663
522	Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jack-man	596	652-654	"	664
522-523	"	597	654-657	"	665
523-526	"	598	657-658	"	666
526-528	"	599	659	Coffey v. Harlan County	666
531-532	"	603	661-663	"	668
532-534	"	604	663-665	"	669
534-537	"	605	667-675	Memorandum Cases	671-674
537-538	"	606			341

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1906.

[1] *FRANKLIN S. JEROME, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CHARLES P. COGSWELL, the State Savings Bank, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-8.)

National banks—reduction of capital stock —distribution of charged-off assets.

The stockholders of record at the time of the reduction of the capital stock of a national bank, and not those of record at the expiration of its charter, are entitled to the proceeds of the bad or doubtful assets set apart at the time of such reduction in compliance with the requirement of the Comptroller of the Currency that such assets should be charged off or set aside for the benefit of those who were then stockholders, the bank, after such reduction, being left with its capital stock, as reduced, unimpaired, and a surplus exclusive of the assets in question.

[No. 80.]

Argued November 2, 1906. Decided January
7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the Superior Court of New London County, in that state, adjudged that the stockholders of record of a national bank at the time of its reduction of its capital stock were entitled to the charged-off assets, and directed distribution accordingly. Affirmed.

See same case below, 78 Conn. 75, 60 Atl.
1059.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:
The Second National Bank of Norwich,
204 U. S.

Connecticut, was a banking association, organized and existing under the laws of the United States, with a capital stock of $300,000.

As stated, in substance, by the supreme court of errors of Connecticut, the directors, having voted to recommend a reduction of the capital stock from $300,000 to $200,000, were advised by the Comptroller of the Currency that it would be approved, "provided so much of the amount as is necessary is used to charge off bad, doubtful, and unproductive assets, the difference only being paid to the shareholders in cash," *and [2] that "the shareholders of a national bank, upon a reduction in capital stock, are entitled to either receive the cash or the charged-off assets, and neither can be withheld without their consent." The Comptroller also informed the president of the bank: "The assets belong to the stockholders of record, and a trust fund must be created, so that those assets may be distributed among the stockholders of record when your capital is reduced." The stockholders, in May, 1900, voted to make the reduction, and the president first, and then the directors, filed with the Comptroller a written statement that "the whole amount of the reduction, viz., $100,000, will be used for the purpose of charging off bad, doubtful, and unproductive assets, no money to be paid to the shareholders unless realized from said assets, which are to be set aside and collected for the benefit of the shareholders of record at date of the issuance of the Comptroller's certificate approving the reduction." The Comptroller gave his certificate, dated June 9, 1900, approving the reduction, without any qualifications.

"On June 27th a schedule of certain assets of the bank, each item being given a valuation, and the total valuations of all amounting to $100,307.86, was presented to the directors, who thereupon voted that the assets so scheduled, 'which assets are considered either bad or doubtful, and on account of which the capital stock of the bank has been reduced from $300,000 to $200,000, be set aside from the other assets of the bank, and be held by it in trust for the stockholders of record on the 9th day of June, 1900, and that whatever may be realized from said assets be distributed from time to time as may be reasonable among said stockholders in proportion to their respective holdings on said date.'

"Thereupon the account with capital stock on the books of the bank was credited with a reduction of $100,000, and the items named in the schedule above described were charged to the account of profit and loss at the valuation of $100,307.86. Some of the items were of real estate; the rest were not [3] well *secured; and all were those referred to in the directors' statement to the Comptroller, dated June 9th.

"This left the bank with good assets worth over $240,000.

"The bank thereafter, until its charter expired in 1903, kept a separate account relating to the assets included in the schedule, entitled 'Stockholders' Trust,' in which were credited all collections and charged all expenditures arising in connection with endeavors to realize upon them.

"Two of the scheduled items represented claims for a larger amount; the valuation affixed to each representing the estimated loss upon it. The same claims were also entered in the books of the bank, as part of its remaining capital, at a valuation for each equal to the difference between its face and the valuation assigned to it in the schedule.

"The receiver has received $20,240 on account of the scheduled assets. Some of them also remain uncollected, but have a value. To one of the items, entered as 'Demand loans, E. A. Packer, $15,647.50,' belonged certain railroad stock held as collateral security. A note for over $1,000, made by 'C. P. Cogswell, trustee,' and discounted by the bank to pay an assessment on this stock, was included in the reduced capital of $200,000, and in March, 1903, was paid off from the proceeds of sales of the stock; leaving a balance of such proceeds, which was included in the $20,240 above mentioned.

"All the certificates representing the shares in the original capital were, on or about July 1st, 1900, exchanged by the holders for certificates in favor of each for two thirds of the number of his original shares."

The charter of the bank expired by lapse of time February 24, 1903, and its affairs were being settled in the manner provided by law, when a complaint in equity was filed by a stockholder in the superior court of Connecticut, asking for the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs, because of alleged misappropriation, and a receiver was appointed. The receiver filed a petition with the court, stating that in May, 1900, the capital stock of the bank was reduced from $300,000 *to $200,000, and that there-[4] upon assets of the face value of $100,000 were charged off and set aside, and that a question had arisen as to whether the proceeds of those assets be distributed to the stockholders of record at the time of the reduction or of the expiration of the charter.

Claims to the charged-off assets by virtue of ownership of original stock when capital was reduced; of such stock, although it had been surrendered and new stock issued; and of stock after the reduction,—were filed.

The superior court held that those assets belonged to the bank, and should be distributed to the stockholders of record at the expiration of its charter.

The supreme court of errors adjudged that the stockholders of record at time of reduction were entitled to the charged-off assets,* and reversed the judgment of the superior court, with directions to distribute accordingly. 78 Conn. 75, 60 Atl. 1059.

Whereupon this writ of error was brought.

Mr. Donald G. Perkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Shields, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Frank T. Brown argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hadlai A. Hull, filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is not a case involving the rights of creditors or of minority stockholders as such, but a case raising the bare question to whom assets remaining on a valid reduction of the capital stock of a national bank belong.

The national banking act (title 62, Rev. Stat.) provides:

"Sec. 5143 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3463). Any association formed under this title may, by the vote of shareholders owning two thirds of its capital stock, reduce its capital to any sum not below the amount *required by this title to authorize[7] the formation of associations; but no such reduction shall be allowable which will reduce the capital of the association below the amount required for its outstanding circulation, nor shall any such reduction be made until the amount of the proposed reduction has been reported to the Comptroller of the Currency, and his approval thereof obtained."

The reduction in this case was accomplished at a time when the bank was not being wound up, by the required vote of the stockholders, and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the new shares on the basis of the reduction were accepted by all the stockholders.

The bank was left with good assets of more than $240,000, or, in other words, with an unimpaired capital stock of $200,000 and a surplus of 20 per cent,—that is, $40,000, exclusive of the assets, the distribution of which is the matter in controversy. These assets were set apart in compliance with the requirement of the Comptroller that certain bad, doubtful, and unproductive assets should be charged off or set aside for the benefit of those who were stockholders at the date of the approval. This requirement, though not stated in the certificate of approval, was evidently, on the facts, made a condition thereof, and presumably in accordance with the practice of the Comptroller's office, and was imposed to the end that justice might be done to the owners of the original shares.

It is said that the original capital of the bank of $300,000 was impaired prior to the reduction, say to the extent of $30,000, as shown by adding to the $240,000 the value of the scheduled assets, estimated at $30,000.

As a general rule, it may be admitted that where capital stock is impaired and a reduction is made merely to meet that impairment, there can be no distribution. But that is not this case, in which the stockholders of record June 9, 1900, had a right to require a distribution among them of an excess upon reduction in proportion to their respective holdings. In the language of the [8] Connecticut supreme court: "The *right to receive what might ultimately be realized from the fund thus set apart became, therefore, irrevocably vested in those who were shareholders on June 9th, 1900, and they or their assigns are now entitled to whatever is to be distributed from it." [78 Conn. 79, 60 Atl. 1060.]

It follows, as held, that the transfer of shares after the reduction of June 9, 1900, did not carry any right to an interest in the special trust fund, the proportionate interest therein having vested in the then shareholders as individuals. The result is unaffected by the fact that distribution in cash may have been contemplated as the assets set aside were realized upon.

204 U. S.

The conclusion at which we have arrived dispenses with the necessity of discussing other questions suggested.

Judgment affirmed.

OLD WAYNE MUTUAL LIFE ASSOCIATION OF INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SARAH McDONOUGH, and John Herrity,
Administrator of the Estate of Winnifred Herrity, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 8-23.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—enforcing foreign judgment.

1. Due process of law is denied by the action of a state court in according full faith and credit to a judgment in personam rendered by a court of a sister state against a nonresident who was not personally served with process within the state, and who made no appearance in the action.

Judgment—of sister state—conclusiveness—jurisdiction.

2. The jurisdiction of the court rendering a judgment or decree is open to inquiry under proper averments, where its conclusiveness is questioned in a court of another state.

Burden of proof—in action on foreign judgment.

3. The burden of proof is on the plaintiffs in an action on a judgment of a sister state, where the answer contains a general denial, which, under the local procedure, is sufficient to put plaintiffs upon proof of every fact essential in establishing the cause of action, to show by what authority the court of such other state could legally enter the judgment sued upon, which was one in personam against a corporation, which, according to the complaint itself, was a corporation of another state, and was not alleged to have appeared in person, or by an attorney of its own selection, or to have been personally served with process within the state.

Evidence—presumption as to jurisdiction.

4. The presumption that a court of superior authority whose judgment is at-

NOTE.—As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see notes to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest Co. 50 L.R.A. 577, and Moyer v. Buck, 16 L.R.A. 231.

On presumption as to jurisdiction—see note to Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574.

As to service of process on state officer as service on foreign corporation—see note to Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Phelps, 47 L. ed. U. S. 987.

tacked collaterally for the want of jurisdiction acted within its jurisdiction when proceeding within the general scope of its powers cannot be indulged when it affirmatively appears from the pleadings or evidence that jurisdiction was wanting.

Writ and process—service on state officer as service on foreign corporation.

5. The implied assent of a foreign insurance company transacting business in Pennsylvania without complying with Pa. act of June 20, 1883, that service of process in a suit brought against it there in respect of business transacted in that state may be made upon the state insurance commissioner, as prescribed by that statute, does not extend to a suit brought by citizens of that state on a contract of insurance executed in another state.

[No. 57.]

Argued October 25, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Marion County, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in an action on a Pennsylvania judgment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 164 Ind. 321, 73 N. E. 703.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Pennsylvania judgment is invalid, outside of that state, at least, because it does not appear that, when process was served on the insurance commissioner, the plaintiff in error was doing business in Pennsylvania.

Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 111, 42 L. ed. 968, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 137 U. S. 98, 106, 34 L. ed. 608, 611, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Central Grain & Stock Exchange v. Board of Trade, 60 C. C. A. 299, 125 Fed. 467.

A single transaction does not constitute doing business in the state.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Ammons v. Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. 72 C. C. A. 614, 141 Fed. 570; State use of Hart-Parr Co. v. Robb-Lawrence Co. (N. D.) 106 N. W. 406; Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co. 2 Cal. App. 582, 84 Pac. 289.

A state may, of course, exclude altogether a foreign corporation, or may, in general, allow it to do business within its territory upon such terms as it deems proper.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519, 10 L. ed. 274; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 12 Wall. 65, 20 L. ed. 354; Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 853.

On the other hand, a judgment rendered in a state court, without personal service on the defendant, may be a good judgment, even in personam, against such defendant in that state, but void everywhere else.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, supra; Grover & B. Sewing Mach Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 670, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 406, 15 L. ed. 452.

Due process of law requires notice and an opportunity to be heard.

Lasere v. Rocherchau, 17 Wall. 437, 21 L. ed. 694; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 383, 39 L. ed. 737, 741, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259, 20 L. ed. 80.

And upon the very point of the right of a state to determine the conditions upon which it will permit foreign corporations to carry on their business within its borders this court has repeatedly held that such right may be affected by the Constitution of the United States.

Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 410, 415, 19 L. ed. 972, 973; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 406, 407, 15 L. ed. 452, 455; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 249, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Dayton Coal & I. Co. v. Barton, 183 U. S. 23, 46 L. ed. 61, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 656, 39 L. ed. 297, 301, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 451, 455, 22 L. ed. 365, 368, 369; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 942, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931.

The fundamental objection to the Pennsylvania statute under consideration is that it does not directly or indirectly require, or even authorize, the insurance commissioner to notify foreign corporations of the service of process upon him.

Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L.R.A. 655, 19 N. E. 474; Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 106 Wis. 402, 50 L.R.A. 577, 80 Am. St. Rep. 41, 82 N. W. 308; Rothrock v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co. 161 Mass. 425, 23 L.R.A. 863, 42 Am. St. Rep. 418, 37

N. E. 206; Carroll v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 65 N. J. L. 124, 46 Atl. 708.

English cases hold that service upon a nonresident by leaving the summons at a public office is a good service when he has agreed to accept such service, but is of no validity when the law declares that it shall be a good service, but he has not given his assent to that provision.

Vallee v. Dumergue, 4 Exch. 290; Copin v. Adamson, L. R. 9 Exch. 345, Affirmed in L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 17.

No counsel for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action in an Indiana court against the plaintiff in error upon a judgment against it in a Pennsylvania court. The decisive questions in the case have reference to the clause of the Constitution of the United States, requiring full faith and credit to be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of other states, and, also, to the clause forbidding the deprivation by a state of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. There was a judgment for the plaintiffs, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the state.

The questions before us arise out of facts now to be stated.

On the 22d day of February, 1900, the defendants in error brought an action in the court of common pleas of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, against the Old Wayne Mutual Life Association of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, upon a certificate or policy of life insurance dated December 3d, 1897, whereby that association agreed to pay to Winnifred Herrity and Sarah McDonough, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, or their legal representatives, the sum of $5,000 upon the condition, among others, that if the person whose life was insured—Patrick McNally, of Scranton, Pennsylvania—should die within one year from the date of the certificate, then Herrity and McDonough should not receive more than one fourth of the above sum. McNally died on the 14th day of November, 1898.

A summons, addressed to the sheriff of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, was sued out and the following return thereof was made: "Served the Old Wayne Mutual Life Association *of Indianapolis, Indiana, an insurance company incorporated under the laws of the state of Indiana, by giving, September 26th, 1900, a true and attested copy of the within writ to Israel W. Durham, insurance commissioner for the state of Pennsylvania, and making known to him the contents thereof, the said association having no attorney in the state of Pennsylvania upon whom service could be made." It does not appear, if the fact be material, that any notice of this summons was given by the commissioner to the defendant.
[13] 204 U. S.

Subsequently, the plaintiffs filed a declaration or statement in the Pennsylvania case, which contained, among other things, the following: "That the said the Old Wayne Mutual Life Association of Indianapolis, Indiana, defendant, is a mutual life insurance association, foreign to the state of Pennsylvania, to wit: of the state of Indiana, as aforesaid, and as such has been doing business of life insurance in the state of Pennsylvania, more particularly in the counties of Susquehanna and Lackawanna, in said state of Pennsylvania, issuing policies of life insurance to numerous and divers residents of said counties and state for many years, upon application therefor taken in said counties of Susquehanna and Lackawanna, and was transacting such business of life insurance in said state and counties on the 3d day of December, 1897, and before and since till July 5th, 1900, and after. That the said the Old Wayne Mutual Life Association has no duly appointed agent in said county of Susquehanna, state of Pennsylvania, for the acceptance of service of process other than the commissioner of insurance of the state of Pennsylvania. The writ of summons in this action, duly issued by the court of common pleas of Susquehanna county, directing the said defendant, the Old Wayne Mutual Life Association of Indianapolis, Indiana, to appear and answer, was legally and duly served on the commissioner of insurance of the state of Pennsylvania on the 26th day of September, 1900, the said commissioner of insurance for the state of Pennsylvania being the proper person for service in this case."

*This was followed by a notice in that case[14] addressed to the insurance commissioner, and stating that judgment would be taken if no appearance was entered or an affidavit of defense filed by the association within fifteen days after service of that notice. At a later date, the insurance commissioner not having appeared, and no affidavit of defense having been filed, judgment was taken against the life association, by default, April 16th, 1901.

The present action was brought on that judgment. The complaint in this case, filed June 21st, 1900, alleged that the defendant association was, on the 3d day of December, 1897, and long prior and subsequent thereto, engaged in the transaction of business in Pennsylvania. After setting out the provisions of the statute of Pennsylvania (to be presently referred to), the issuing of the policy, the death of McNally, and the making of the requisite proofs of loss, the complaint alleged that process in the Pennsylvania case was served upon the insurance commissioner for Pennsylvania, "the said defendant having no other agent or attorney upon whom process could be served in said state of Pennsylvania."

The defendant demurred to the complaint as insufficient in law, but the demurrer was overruled. It then filed its answer, denying "each and every material allegation" in the complaint. In a separate paragraph it alleged that its only offices for the transaction of business were, and at all times had been, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where its officers had always resided; that it had never been admitted to do business in Pennsylvania, and never had an office or agency there for the transaction of business; that no one of its officers or agents was in that commonwealth at the date of the alleged suit, nor had been there since; that no summons was ever served upon it at any time, and that it did not appear in that action; that no one ever appeared for it there who had authority to do so; and that the first notice or knowledge it ever had of the alleged judgment against it was long after the day when it appears to have been rendered.

[15] *The plaintiffs replied, denying each and every material allegation of the answer.

The plaintiff in error insists that the Pennsylvania court had no jurisdiction to proceed against it; consequently the judgment it rendered was void for the want of the due process of law required by the 14th Amendment. If the defendant had no such actual, legal notice of the Pennsylvania suit as would bring it into court, or if it did not voluntarily appear therein by an authorized representative, then the Pennsylvania court was without jurisdiction, and the conclusion just stated would follow, even if the judgment would be deemed conclusive in the courts of that commonwealth. The constitutional requirement that full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state is necessarily to be interpreted in connection with other provisions of the Constitution, and therefore no state can obtain in the tribunals of other jurisdictions full faith and credit for its judicial proceedings if they are wanting in the due process of law enjoined by the fundamental law. "No judgment of a court is due process of law, if rendered without jurisdiction in the court, or without notice to the party." Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 46, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108. No state can, by any tribunal or representative, render nugatory a provision of the supreme law. And if the conclusiveness of a judgment or decree in a court of one state is questioned in a court of another government, Federal or state, it is open, under proper averments, to inquire whether the court rendering the decree or judgment had jurisdiction to render it.

Such is the settled doctrine of this court. In the leading case of Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 468, 21 L. ed. 897, 901, the whole question was fully examined in the light of the authorities. Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court and delivering its unanimous judgment, stated the conclusion to be clear that the jurisdiction of a court rendering judgment in one state may be questioned in a collateral proceeding in another state, *notwithstanding the [16] averments in the record of the judgment itself. The court, among other things, said that if it be once conceded that "the validity of a judgment may be attacked collaterally by evidence showing that the court had no jurisdiction, it is not perceived how any allegation contained in the record itself, however strongly made, can affect the right so to question it. The very object of the evidence is to invalidate the paper as a record. If that can be successfully done no statements contained therein have any force. If any such statements could be used to prevent inquiry, a slight form of words might always be adopted so as effectually to nullify the right of such inquiry. Recitals of this kind must be regarded like asseverations of good faith in a deed, which avail nothing if the instrument is shown to be fraudulent." This decision was in harmony with previous decisions. Chief Justice Marshall had long before observed in Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241, 269, 2 L. ed. 608, 617, that, upon principle, the operation of every judgment must depend on the power of the court to render that judgment. In Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 495, 540, 12 L. ed. 1170, 1189, it was said to be well settled that the jurisdiction of any court exercising authority over a subject "may be inquired into in every other court when the proceedings in the former are relied upon and brought before the latter by a party claiming the benefit of such proceedings," and that the rule prevails whether "the decree or judgment has been given in a court of admiralty, chancery, ecclesiastical court, or court of common law, or whether the point ruled has arisen under the laws of nations, the practice in chancery, or the municipal laws of states." In his Commentaries on the Constitution, Story, § 1313, referring to Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch, 481, 484, 3 L. ed. 411, 413, and to the constitutional requirement as to the faith and credit to be given to the records and judicial proceedings of a state, said: "But this does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court in which the original judgment was given, to pronounce it; or the right of the state itself to exercise authority over the person or the subject-matter. The Constitution *did not mean to confer [upon the states] a new power or jurisdiction, but simply to regulate the effect of the acknowledged jurisdiction over persons and things within the territory.'" In the later case of Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 365, 366, 368, 21 L. ed. 959, 962, 963,—decided after, but at the same term as, Thompson v. Whitman,—the court, after referring to the general rule as to the presumption of jurisdiction in superior courts of general jurisdiction, said that such presumptions "only arise with respect to jurisdictional facts concerning which the record is silent. Presumptions are only indulged to supply the absence of evidence or averments respecting the facts presumed. They have no place for consideration when the evidence is disclosed or the averment is made. When, therefore, the record states the evidence or makes an averment with reference to a jurisdictional fact, it will be understood to speak the truth on that point, and it will not be presumed that there was other or different evidence respecting the fact, or that the fact was otherwise than as averred." In the same case: "It is a rule as old as the law, and never more to be respected than now, that no one shall be personally bound until he has had his day in court; by which is meant until he has been duly cited to appear, and has been afforded an opportunity to be heard. Judgment without such citation and opportunity wants all the attributes of a judicial determination; it is judicial usurpation and oppression, and never can be upheld where justice is justly administered."

The question of the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania court being, then, open, on this record, let us see what presumptions arise from the showing made by it.

The complaint in this case, as we have seen, alleged that on the 3d day of December, 1897,—the date of the insurance certificate,—as well as prior and subsequent thereto, the defendant association engaged in business in Pennsylvania, soliciting applications for insurance and issuing policies to residents of that commonwealth. The answer denied each and every material allegation in the complaint, and such a *denial under the Indiana Code of Civil Procedure was sufficient to put the plaintiffs upon proof of every fact that was essential in establishing their cause of action. Thorn- ton's Code Ind. art. 10, § 47, title "Pleadings;" U. S. Rev. Stat. § 914, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 684.

The burden of proof was therefore upon the plaintiffs to show by what authority the Pennsylvania court could legally enter a personal judgment against a corporation which, according to the complaint itself, was a corporation of another state, and was not alleged to have appeared in person or by an attorney of its own selection, or to have been personally served with process. This burden the plaintiffs met by introducing in evidence a complete transcript of the record of the action in the Pennsylvania court, from which it appeared: 1. That the defendant association was sued in the Pennsylvania court as a life insurance association of Indiana, was alleged to have been engaged in business in Pennsylvania, and was so engaged before and after the certificate of insurance in question was issued. 2. That the summons in that action was served on the commissioner of insurance for Pennsylvania, the defendant association not having appointed an agent in that commonwealth upon whom process could be served nor having appeared by an attorney or representative. 3. That, the insurance commissioner not having appeared in the action, judgment was taken against the defendant; and that is the judgment here in suit.

It was further made to appear in the present action that when the contract of insurance was executed, as well as before and since, it was provided by a statute of Pennsylvania, approved June 20th, 1883, amendatory of a previous statute of that commonwealth establishing an insurance department, as follows: "No insurance company not of this state, nor its agents, shall do business in this state until it has filed with the insurance commissioner of this state a written stipulation, duly authenticated by the company, agreeing that any legal process affecting the company, served on the insurance commissioner, or the party designated by *him, or the agent specified [19] by the company to receive service of process for said company, shall have the same effect as if served personally on the company within this state, and, if such company should cease to maintain such agent in this state so designated, such process may thereafter be served on the insurance commissioner; but, so long, as any liability of the stipulating company to any resident of this state continues, such stipulation cannot be revoked or modified, except that a new one may be substituted, so as to require or dispense with the service at the office of the said company within this state, and that such service of process according to this stipulation shall be sufficient personal service on the company. The term 'process' shall be construed to mean and include any and every writ, rule, order, notice, or decree, including any process of execution that may issue in or upon any action, suit, or legal proceeding to which said company may be a party by themselves, or jointly with others, whether the same shall arise upon a policy of insurance or otherwise, by or in any other court of this commonwealth having jurisdiction of the subject-matter in controversy, . . . and, in default of an agent appointed by the company, as aforesaid, then the officer so charged with the service of said process shall, in like manner, depute the sheriff, constable, or other officer aforesaid of the county where the agent, if any there be, named by the insurance commissioner, may reside, to serve the same on him, and, in default of such agent named by such commissioner, as aforesaid, then in like manner to depute the sheriff, constable, or other officer, as aforesaid, of the county where the office of the insurance commissioner may be located, to serve the same on him; and each and every service so made shall have the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as personal service on said company in the county where said process issued; . . ."

[20] The defendant association introduced no evidence. If, looking alone at the pleadings in the Pennsylvania suit, it be taken that, at the time of the contract in question, the *Indiana corporation was engaged in transacting, at least, some business in Pennsylvania, without having complied with the provisions of the above statute of that commonwealth,—that is, without having filed with the insurance commissioner the written stipulation required by that statute,—still, plaintiffs cannot claim, on the present record, the full benefit of the general rule that the judgment of a court of superior authority, when proceeding within the general scope of its powers, is presumed to act rightly within its jurisdiction; that nothing shall be "intended to be out of the jurisdiction of a superior court but that which specially appears to be so." Peacock v. Bell, 1 Wms' Saund. 74. When a judgment of a court of superior authority is attacked collaterally for the want of jurisdiction, such a presumption cannot be indulged when it affirmatively appears from the pleadings or evidence that jurisdiction was wanting. We make this observation in view of the fact, distinctly shown by the plaintiffs themselves, that the policy of insurance and contract in question was, in fact, executed in Indiana, and not in Pennsylvania. The policy sued on provided as one of its conditions that "for all purposes and in all cases this contract shall be deemed to have been made at the special office of this association in the state of Indiana, U. S. A., and all benefits and claims thereunder shall be payable at such office." Besides, to the complaint or petition in the Pennsylvania court was appended the following memorandum signed by the attorney for the plaintiffs: "The above contract of insurance is governed by the laws of the state of Indiana, the contract having been entered into at Indianapolis." And when the suit was brought in Pennsylvania the plaintiffs were confronted with the condition in the policy that "it is expressly understood and agreed that no action shall be maintained nor recovery had for any claims under or in virtue of this policy, after the lapse of six months from the death of said member,"—McNally. More than six months had elapsed after McNally's death before the suit was instituted in Pennsylvania. In order to obviate this difficulty the plaintiffs, in *their declaration or statement [21] in assumpsit, in the Pennsylvania court, alleged that the contract of insurance was governed by the laws of Indiana, "the contract having been entered into at Indianapolis, Indiana;" also, that "said policy of insurance and the contract touching the issuing the same were executed in the state of Indiana, in which state all provisions limiting liability on policies where suit is not brought within a certain time are held void and of no account." The plaintiffs cannot, therefore, be heard now to say that the contract was not, in fact, made in Indiana. What they alleged in the Pennsylvania suit precluded the idea that the contract of insurance was made in that commonwealth. Indeed, if they had alleged that the business was transacted in Pennsylvania, their action on the contract would have been defeated by the condition in the policy that no suit thereon could be brought on it after the expiration of six months from the death of the person whose life was insured.

But even if it be assumed that the insurance company was engaged in some business in Pennsylvania at the time the contract in question was made, it cannot be held that the company agreed that service of process upon the insurance commissioner of that commonwealth would alone be sufficient to bring it into court in respect of all business transacted by it, no matter where, with, or for the benefit of, citizens of Pennsylvania. Undoubtedly, it was competent for Pennsylvania to declare that no insurance corporation should transact business within its limits without filing the written stipulation specified in its statute. Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 653, 39 L. ed. 297, 300, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207, and authorities cited; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 45, 44 L. ed. 657, 664, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518. It is equally true that, if an insurance corporation of another state transacts business in Pennsylvania without complying with its provisions, it will be deemed to have assented to any valid terms prescribed by that commonwealth as a condition of its right to do business there; and it will be estopped to say that it had not [22] done what it should *have done in order that it might lawfully enter that commonwealth and there exert its corporate powers. In Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 12 Wall. 65, 20 L. ed. 354, the question was as to the jurisdiction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia of a suit against a corporation in Maryland, whose railroad entered the District with the consent of Congress. This court said: "It [the corporation] cannot migrate, but may exercise its authority in a foreign territory upon such conditions as may be prescribed by the law of the place. One of these conditions may be that it shall consent to be sued there. If it do business there it will be presumed to have assented, and will be bound accordingly." This language was cited and approved in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Whitton, 13 Wall. 270, 285, 20 L. ed. 571, 576. The same question was before the court in Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 376, 24 L. ed. 853, 854, and the principle announced in the Harris and Whitton Cases was approved. In the Schollenberger Case the Pennsylvania statute here in question was involved. To the same effect are the following cases: Ehrman v. Teutonia Ins. Co. 1 McCrary, 123, 129, 1 Fed. 471; Knapp, S. & Co. v. National Mut. F. Ins. Co. 30 Fed. 607; Berry v. Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. 46 Fed. 439, 441, 442; Diamond Plate Glass Co. v. Minneapolis Mut. F. Ins. Co. 55 Fed. 27; Stewart v. Harmon, 98 Fed. 190, 192.

Conceding, then, that by going into Pennsylvania, without first complying with its statute, the defendant association may be held to have assented to the service upon the insurance commissioner of process in a suit brought against it there in respect of business transacted by it in that commonwealth, such assent cannot properly be implied where it affirmatively appears, as it does here, that the business was not transacted in Pennsylvania. Indeed, the Pennsylvania statute, upon its face, is only 204 U. S.

directed against insurance companies who do business in that commonwealth,—“in this state.” While the highest considerations of public policy demand that an insurance corporation, entering a state in defiance of a statute *which lawfully prescribes [23] the terms upon which it may exert its powers there, should be held to have assented to such terms as to business there transacted by it, it would be going very far to imply, and we do not imply, such assent as to business transacted in another state, although citizens of the former state may be interested in such business.

As the suit in the Pennsylvania court was upon a contract executed in Indiana; as the personal judgment in that court against the Indiana corporation was only upon notice to the insurance commissioner, without any legal notice to the defendant association, and without its having appeared in person or by attorney or by agent in the suit; and as the act of the Pennsylvania court in rendering the judgment must be deemed that of the state within the meaning of the 14th Amendment,†—we hold that the judgment in Pennsylvania was not entitled to the faith and credit which, by the Constitution, is required to be given to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of the several states, and was void as wanting in due process of law.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Indiana must, therefore, be reversed, with directions for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

* WARREN B. WILSON, Appt.,

v.

LESLIE M. SHAW, Secretary of the Treasury.

[24]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 24-35.)

Panama canal zone—title of United States.

1. Subsequent ratification by Congress is a sufficient answer to the contention that the title of the United States to the Isthmian or Panama canal zone was not acquired as provided in the act of June 28, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 481, chap. 1302, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 707), by treaty with the Republic of Colombia.

†Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 346, 347, 25 L. ed. 676-680; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 40 L. ed. 1075, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 233, 234, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Treaty—acquisition of territory by.

2. The United States may acquire territory by treaty.

Panama canal zone—title of United States.

3. The title of the United States to the Isthmian or Panama canal zone under the treaty of November 18, 1903 (33 Stat. at L. 2234), with the Republic of Panama, is no less perfect because of the omission from that treaty of some of the technical terms used in ordinary conveyances of real estate.

Panama canal zone—title of United States.

4. Failure to define the exact boundary of the Isthmian or Panama canal zone in the treaty of November 18, 1903, with the Republic of Panama, does not affect the title of the United States, where the description is sufficient for identification, and the boundaries have been practically identified by the concurrent action of the two nations alone interested.

Panama canal—power of Congress to construct.

5. Congress has power to construct the Panama canal in the territory acquired by the treaty of November 18, 1903, with the Republic of Panama.

[No. 43.]

Argued and submitted October 19, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

A PPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of that District, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill to restrain the Secretary of the Treasury from paying out money for the construction of the Panama canal, from borrowing money for that purpose, and from issuing bonds of the United States therefor. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 510.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

In a general way it may be said that this is a suit brought in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by the appellant, alleging himself to be a citizen of Illinois and the owner of property subject [25] to taxation by the United States, *to restrain the Secretary of the Treasury from paying out money in the purchase of property for the construction of a canal at Panama, from borrowing money on the credit of the United States, from issuing bonds or making any payments under the act of Congress, June 28, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 481, chap. 1302, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 707), providing for the acquisition of property and rights from Colombia and the canal company, and the construction and operation of the canal and the Panama railroad. The Republic of Panama and the New Panama Canal Company of France were named parties defendant, but they were not served with process and made no appearance. A demurrer to the bill was sustained, and the bill dismissed. This decree was affirmed by the court of appeals, from whose decision this appeal was taken.

Mr. Warren B. Wilson, in propria persona, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

A deed describing property in terms, equally applicable to two or more pieces of property, carries a patent ambiguity, and even when affecting only property rights is absolutely void for uncertainty.

Boardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 345, 8 L. ed. 422; Deery v. Cray, 10 Wall. 269, 19 L. ed. 888; United States v. King, 3 How. 773, 11 L. ed. 824; Shackelford v. Bailey, 35 Ill. 387; Hill v. Mowry, 6 Gray, 551.

But the case is much stronger when, as here, the grant is by the public; and includes, if valid, not merely property rights, but portions of the lawmaking power of the grantor, an independent nation. In the case of grants of property between individuals, courts, in construing the language of conveyances, construe the language, if doubtful, with the presumption against the grantor.

Douglass v. Lewis, 131 U. S. 75, 33 L. ed. 53, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

In the case of grants by the public, especially carrying such power, this presumption is reversed, and all intendments are against the grantee. Everything not clearly shown to have been granted is held not to be granted.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 544, 9 L. ed. 822; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 588, 41 L. ed. 563, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939.

Questions similar to this have arisen as to municipal corporations, and in every instance it has been held that, unless the boundaries are clearly established, no person is subject to their laws. Corporations have boundaries, or they have no existence.

Little Rock v. Parish, 36 Ark. 172; Gray v. Sheldon, 8 Vt. 403; Pierce v. Carpenter, 10 Vt. 480; Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 482, 483; Enterprise v. State, 29 Fla. 128, 10 So. 740; Cutting v. Stone, 7 Vt. 471; Plantation No. 9 v. Bean, 40 Me. 218; Howell v. Kinney, 99 Ga. 544, 27 S. E. 204; State ex rel. Holcomb v. Pocatello, 3 Idaho, 174, 28 Pac. 411.

Even if treaties, according to the laws of Panama, are, as here, the supreme law of the land, such laws may be repealed at the pleasure of the legislature.

The Cherokee Tobacco (207 Half Pound
204 U. S.

Papers of Smoking Tobacco v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 194, 31 L. ed. 388, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

Before the legislature, in enacting a statute, or the treaty-making power in creating a law under its lawmaking power, can be held to have attempted to do or to have promised the unlawful thing of perpetually binding their respective successors not to exercise their lawful powers in perpetuity, that meaning must affirmatively appear in the clearest terms.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, supra.

Any such attempted making of irrevocable laws, or any such irrevocable grant to any agent, foreign or domestic, is ultra vires of the people themselves.

Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. ed. 1079.

The treaty-making power of Panama does and can include no constitutional power to give or sell such authority to a stranger. It is entirely elementary that legislative power cannot be delegated.

Ibid.

The only even apparent exception to this universal rule that legislative power cannot be delegated is the case of subordinate local municipal or quasi-public corporations. As to them it has been held that they may be given the power of local self-government.

Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 147, 32 L. ed. 637, 638, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256.

The invalidity of such an attempted grant by treaty was declared by the Supreme Court in Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565.

The United States has no constitutional power to buy such a grant or exercise such authority.

Ibid.

There was no constitutional power in Congress to enact such legislation as the canal act.

This measure can derive no support from the power to regulate commerce among the several states, with foreign states, and with the Indian tribes.

The power is to regulate, not to carry on, commerce. The power to regulate commerce is the power to prescribe the rule according to which it shall be carried on or governed.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Cooley v. Board of Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 279, 23 L. ed. 349; Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123, 26 L. ed. 103; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14

204 U. S.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

There is a manifest distinction between the ordinary public highway which was all anyone ever claimed power to make till now, and what is attempted to be provided for by the present legislation.

The construction and operation of such "highways," as has been repeatedly adjudged, is carrying on commerce, and is regulated as such.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 312, 41 L. ed. 1017, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 275, 21 L. ed. 146, 161; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 464, 26 L. ed. 1067, 1068; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 515, 43 L. ed. 265, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 38 L. ed. 808, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891.

The power to carry on commerce cannot be implied from the power to regulate it.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. supra; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 401, 4 L. ed. 600.

Even if, instead of providing that the United States should carry on the commerce described in the bill, the act had attempted to prescribe the rule by which it should be carried on, it would be invalid because the commerce affected by the legislation is not the commerce the Constitution subjects to the control of Congress. The commerce Congress is authorized to regulate is commerce among the several states and with foreign nations and the Indian tribes.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

Even if Panama were made a county of Louisiana this commerce would not be interstate commerce. The fact that one party to a trade completely carried out in a state is a foreigner does not change the character of the commerce; it is still local, not interstate or international.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357.

Congress has power to regulate the classes of commerce described, throughout the length and breadth of the land (Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96), not throughout the length and breadth of the whole world.

Carrying on commerce is not government at all.

Rippe v. Becker, 56 Minn. 100, 22 L.R.A. 857, 57 N. W. 331; State ex rel. Coleman v. Kelly, 71 Kan. 811, 70 L.R.A. 450, 81 Pac. 450.

The commerce clause gave to Congress all the authority it was designed Congress should have in the entire field of commerce, and nothing can be done in that field under any other power.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat, 201, 6 L. ed. 71; Wheeling, P. & C. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 25 L. ed. 412; Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wall. 73, 22 L. ed. 528; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281.

The measure can derive no support from the power to establish postoffices and post-roads.

No attempt is made to establish this as a post-road, and if it were, it would be manifestly a covert attempt to legislate upon another subject under the appearance of legislating on this one, and, therefore, void.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605.

The measure can derive no support from the power to declare war.

This, as construed in M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 407, 4 L. ed. 601 and Miller v. United States (Page v. United States) 11 Wall. 268, 20 L. ed. 135, means the power to declare and carry on war. That means, of course, the whole power of the United States,—both the power of the President and Congress.

The power is to carry on war, not to carry on commerce. This is commerce; transportation is commerce.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. supra.

No power in the field of taxation can be implied from the commerce or war powers; all the authority intended to be given in the field of taxation is in the taxing clause. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 201, 6 L. ed. 71; Wheeling, P. & C. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, supra; Hamilton v. Dillin, 21 Wall. 73, 22 L. ed. 528.

The first two are commerce cases and the last a war case. So, nothing in the judicial field can be implied from the war power.

Ex parte Milligan, supra; Ex parte Valandigham, 1 Wall. 243, 17 L. ed. 589.

If the convention that framed and the people that adopted the Constitution, by this grant of power to declare war meant to include a general power in time of peace to prepare for war, broad enough for the present purpose, it is hard to see why it was thought necessary to specifically provide for power to raise and support armies, to provide and maintain a navy.

Brown v. United States, 8 Cranch, 116, 125, 3 L. ed. 506, 509.

A railroad is not a public highway.

Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 199 U. S. 279, 50 L. ed. 192, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91.

A highway or public road only as any other property employed by its owner in a business affected with a public interest is public property.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

The fact that eminent domain laws are employed in the construction of any road or the industrial plant of any corporation is not sufficient to establish that a road is a public highway or the plant a public plant.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 50 L. ed. 581, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301.

The general governing powers of a state, as understood in 1789, did not include the power to carry on any kind of commerce, even the kind affected in the highest degree with a public interest.

South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 50 L. ed. 261, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

Solicitor General Hoyt, Assistant Attorney General Russell, and Mr. Glenn E. Husted submitted the cause for appellee:

When the lawmakers pass a law to accomplish a certain object, the courts are to keep in mind the object to be accomplished, and so read the act as not to defeat, but to further, the accomplishment of the object in view.

United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 486, 487, 19 L. ed. 278, 280; Blake v. National City Bank, 23 Wall. 307, 320, 23 L. ed. 119, 121; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 59, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 661, 667, 41 L. ed. 1154, 1158, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 37, 39 L. ed. 601, 611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 245, 46 L. ed. 1147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 34, 43 L. ed. 60, 61, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 77, 44 L. ed. 969, 984, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 866, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

The construction given to a statute by those charged with the duty of executing it is always entitled to the most respectful consideration, and ought not to be overruled without cogent reasons.

United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 582, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1067, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 23, 35 L. ed. 363, 370, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 383, 39 L. ed. 737, 741, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

Grants of land to be thereafter identified and made certain have frequently been upheld.

Rutherford v. Greene, 2 Wheat. 196, 4 L. ed. 218; Lessieur v. Price, 12 How. 59, 13 L. ed. 893.

Treaties may make changes in statutory laws as statutes may abrogate treaties.

The Cherokee Tobacco (207 Half Pound Papers of Smoking Tobacco v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 621, 20 L. ed. 227, 229.

Within the territories of the United States Congress exercises the combined powers of the general and state governments. That the people of a state might construct a highway or canal will not be denied.

Monogahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 334, 37 L. ed. 463, 470, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

Congress may, in exercising its power to regulate interstate commerce, construct, or authorize individuals or corporations to construct, railroads across the states and territories of the United States (California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073), and may, directly or through a corporation created for that purpose, construct bridges for the accommodation of interstate commerce by land (Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 530, 38 L. ed. 808, 810, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891). The canal when constructed will be an important roadway for both interstate and foreign commerce.

Under the commerce clause Congress has power over navigation (2 Story, Const. §§ 1061, 1063), and removes obstructions to navigation.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96.

The construction of this canal will be a very effective and important removal of such an obstruction.

The canal will also be a post-road.

It is not necessary that the construction of the canal should be authorized by the Constitution in express language.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Legal Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 439, 28 L. ed. 204, 211, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

If the bill was only to restrain the Secretary of the Treasury from paying the specific sums named therein, to wit, $40,000,-
204 U. S.

000 to the Panama Canal Company, and $10,000,000 to the Republic of Panama, it would be sufficient to note the fact, of which we may take judicial notice, that those payments have been made, and that whether they were rightfully made or not is, so far as this suit is concerned, a moot question. Cheong Ah Moy v. United States, 113 U. S. 216, 28 L. ed. 983, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; American Book Co. v. Kansas, 193 U. S. 49, 48 L. ed. 613, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Jones v. Montague, 194 U. S. 147, 48 L. ed. 913, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

But the bill goes further and seeks to restrain the Secretary from paying out money for the construction of the canal, from borrowing money for that purpose and issuing bonds of the United States therefor. In other words, the plaintiff invokes the aid of the courts to stop the government of the United States from carrying into execution its declared purpose of constructing the Panama canal. The magnitude of the plaintiff's demand is somewhat startling. The construction of a canal between the Atlantic and Pacific somewhere across the narrow strip of land which unites the two continents of America has engaged the attention, not only of the United States, but of other countries, for many years. Two routes, the Nicaragua and the Panama, have been the special objects of consideration. A company chartered under the laws of France undertook the construction of a canal at Panama. This was done under the superintendence and guidance of the famous Ferdinand de Lesseps, to whom the world owes the Suez canal. To tell the story of all that was done in respect *to the construc-[31] tion of this canal, prior to the active intervention of the United States, would take volumes. It is enough to say that the efforts of De Lesseps failed. Since then Panama has seceded from the Republic of Colombia and established a new republic, which has been recognized by other nations. This new republic has by treaty granted to the United States rights, territorial and otherwise. Acts of Congress have been passed providing for the construction of a canal, and in many ways the executive and legislative departments of the government have committed the United States to this work, and it is now progressing. For the courts to interfere, and, at the instance of a citizen, who does not disclose the amount of his interest, stay the work of construction by stopping the payment of money from the Treasury of the United States therefor, would be an exercise of judicial power which, to say the least, is novel and extraordinary.

Many objections may be raised to the bill. Among them are these: Does plaintiff show sufficient pecuniary interest in the subject-matter? Is not the suit really one against the government, which has not consented to be sued? Is it any more than an appeal to the courts for the exercise of governmental powers which belong exclusively to Congress? We do not stop to consider these or kindred objections; yet, passing them in silence must not be taken as even an implied ruling against their sufficiency. We prefer to rest our decision on the general scope of the bill.

Clearly there is no merit in plaintiff's contentions. That, generally speaking, a citizen may be protected against wrongful acts of the government affecting him or his property may be conceded. That his remedy is by injunction does not follow. A suit for an injunction is an equitable proceeding, and the interests of the defendant are to be considered as well as those of the plaintiff. Ordinarily it will not be granted when there is adequate protection at law. In the case at bar it is clear not only that plaintiff is not entitled to an injunction, but also that he presents no ground for any relief.

[32] *He contends that whatever title the government has was not acquired as provided in the act of June 28, 1902, by treaty with the Republic of Colombia. A short but sufficient answer is that subsequent ratification is equivalent to original authority. The title to what may be called the Isthmian or canal zone, which, at the date of the act, was in the Republic of Colombia, passed by an act of secession to the newly formed Republic of Panama. The latter was recognized as a nation by the President. A treaty with it, ceding the canal zone, was duly ratified. 33 Stat. at L. 2234. Congress has passed several acts based upon the title of the United States, among them one to provide a temporary government (33 Stat. at L. 429, chap. 1758, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 711); another, fixing the status of merchandise coming into the United States from the canal zone (33 Stat. at L. 843, chap. 1311, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 394); another, prescribing the type of canal (34 Stat. at L. 611, chap. 3597). These show a full ratification by Congress of what has been done by the Executive. Their concurrent action is conclusive upon the courts. We have no supervising control over the political branch of the government in its action within the limits of the Constitution. Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 34 L. ed. 691, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80, and cases cited in the opinion; Re Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 499, 503, 36 L. ed. 232, 240, 242, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

356

It is too late in the history of the United States to question the right of acquiring territory by treaty. Other objections are made to the validity of the right and title obtained from Panama by the treaty, but we find nothing in them deserving special notice.

Another contention, in support of which plaintiff has presented a voluminous argument, is that the United States has no power to engage in the work of digging this canal. His first proposition is that the canal zone is no part of the territory of the United States, and that, therefore, the government is powerless to do anything of the kind therein. Article 2 of the treaty, heretofore referred to, "grants to the United States in perpetuity the use, occupation, and control of a zone of land and land under water for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of said *canal." By article 3, Panama "grants to [33] the United States all the rights, power, and authority within the zone mentioned and described in article 2 of this agreement, . . . which the United States would possess and exercise if it were the sovereign of the territory within which said lands and waters are located, to the entire exclusion of the exercise by the Republic of Panama of any such sovereign rights, power, or authority."

Other provisions of the treaty add to the grants named in these two articles further guaranties of exclusive rights of the United States in the construction and maintenance of this canal. It is hypercritical to contend that the title of the United States is imperfect, and that the territory described does not belong to this nation, because of the omission of some of the technical terms used in ordinary conveyances of real estate.

Further, it is said that the boundaries of the zone are not described in the treaty; but the description is sufficient for identification, and it has been practically identified by the concurrent action of the two nations alone interested in the matter. The fact that there may possibly be in the future some dispute as to the exact boundary on either side is immaterial. Such disputes not infrequently attend conveyances of real estate or cessions of territory. Alaska was ceded to us forty years ago, but the boundary between it and the English possessions east was not settled until within the last two or three years. Yet no one ever doubted the title of this Republic to Alaska.

Again, plaintiff contends that the government has no power to engage anywhere in the work of constructing a railroad or canal. The decisions of this court are adverse to this contention. In California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 157, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 160, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, 1080, it was said:

"It cannot at the present day be doubted that Congress, under the power to regulate commerce among the several states, as well as to provide for postal accommodations [34] and *military exigencies, had authority to pass these laws. The power to construct, or to authorize individuals or corporations to construct, national highways and bridges from state to state, is essential to the complete control and regulation of interstate commerce. Without authority in Congress to establish and maintain such highways and bridges, it would be without authority to regulate one of the most important adjuncts of commerce. This power in former times was exerted to a very limited extent, the Cumberland or National road being the most notable instance. Its exertion was but little called for, as commerce was then mostly conducted by water, and many of our statesmen entertained doubts as to the existence of the power to establish ways of communication by land. But since, in consequence of the expansion of the country, the multiplication of its products, and the invention of railroads and locomotion by steam, land transportation has so vastly increased, a sounder consideration of the subject has prevailed and led to the conclusion that Congress has plenary power over the whole subject. Of course the authority of Congress over the territories of the United States, and its power to grant franchises exercisable therein, are, and ever have been, undoubted. But the wider power was very freely exercised, and much to the general satisfaction, in the creation of the vast system of railroads connecting the East with the Pacific, traversing states as well as territories, and employing the agency of state as well as Federal corporations. See Pacific Railroad Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 14, 18, 29 L. ed. 319, 323, 325, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113."

In Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 529, 38 L. ed. 808, 810, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891, 892, Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court, says:

"Congress, therefore, may create corporations as appropriate means of executing the powers of government; as, for instance, a bank for the purpose of carrying on the fiscal operations of the United States, or a railroad corporation for the purpose of promoting commerce among the states. McCulloch v. Maryland. 4 Wheat. 316, 411, 422, 4 L. ed. 579, 602, 605; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 861, 873, 6 L. 204 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

ed. 204, 233, 236; Pacific Railroad Removal Cases, *115 U. S. 1, 18, 29 L. ed. 319, 325, 5[35] Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 157, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073. Congress has likewise the power, exercised early in this century by successive acts in case of the Cumberland or National road, from the Potomac across the Alleghenies to the Ohio, to authorize the construction of a public highway connecting several states. See Indiana v. United States, 148 U. S. 148, 37 L. ed. 401, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564."

See also Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

These authorities recognize the power of Congress to construct interstate highways. A fortiori, Congress would have like power within the territories and outside of state lines, for there the legislative power of Congress is limited only by the provisions of the Constitution, and cannot conflict with the reserved power of the states. Plaintiff, recognizing the force of these decisions, seeks to obviate it by saying that the expressions were obiter dicta; but plainly they were not. They announce distinctly the opinion of this court on the questions presented, and would have to be overruled if a different doctrine were now announced. Congress has acted in reliance upon these decisions in many ways, and any change would disturb a vast volume of rights supposed to be fixed; but we see no reason to doubt the conclusions expressed in those opinions, and adhere to them. The Court of Appeals was right, and its decision is affirmed.

*CORWIN D. BACHTEL, Plff. in Err., [36]

v.
R. FRANK WILSON, Sheriff of Stark County, Ohio.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 36-42.)

Error to state court—Federal question—decision on non-Federal ground.

The judgment of the Ohio supreme court upholding the validity of the provisions of the free banking act of March 21, 1851, § 30, as amended April 24, 1879, under which an indictment had been found against the cashier of a bank incorporated under that act, in the face of the objection that such section, by subjecting officers of institutions so incorporated to criminal liability, when officers of other banking institutions guilty of similar acts are not so subjected, denies the equal protection of the laws,

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court, where the failure of the state court to file an opinion leaves it doubtful whether that court may not have held that the words "any banking company," as used in the section in question, embrace all banking institutions in the state, whether incorporated under the free banking act or not.

[No. 446.]

Argued November 14, 15, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Stark County, in that state, dismissing a writ of habeas corpus sued out by the cashier of a bank incorporated under the free banking act, who had been indicted for a violation of such act. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The sole question in this case, as stated by counsel for plaintiff in error, is whether the following section of the statutes of Ohio contravenes § 1 of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States:

"Every president, director, cashier, teller, clerk, or agent of any banking company who shall embezzle, abstract, or wilfully misapply any of the moneys, funds, or credits of such company, or shall, without authority from the directors, issue or put forth any certificate of deposit, draw any order or bill of exchange, make any acceptance, assign any notes, bonds, drafts, or bills of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree, or shall make any false entry in any book, report, or statement of the company, with intent in either case to injure or defraud the company, or any other company, body politic or corporate, or any individual person, or to deceive any officer of the company, or any agent appointed to inspect the affairs of any banking company in this state, shall be guilty of an offense, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be confined [37] in the penitentiary, *at hard labor, not less than one year nor more than ten years." Section 30, act of March 21, 1851, entitled, "An Act to Authorize Free Banking," as amended April 24, 1879, 76 Ohio Laws, 74; 2 Bates's Anno. Stat. (Ohio) 6th ed. §§ 3821-3885.

v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—

358

Plaintiff in error, who was cashier of the Canton State Bank, a bank incorporated under the above "free banking" act, was indicted in the court of common pleas of Stark county for a violation of this section. A demurrer to the indictment having been overruled, he, before arraignment, sued out a writ of habeas corpus in the circuit court of that county. Thereafter, the final judgment of the supreme court of the state in that proceeding having been adverse, he brought the case here on this writ of error.

Mr. William A. Lynch argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles C. Upham and John W. Craine argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Counsel predicate the unconstitutionality of this statute, not on its provisions standing by themselves, but on its relation to other statutes.

On February 26, 1873 (70 Ohio Laws, 40), an act was passed in terms incorporating savings and loan associations, but with powers such as in fact authorized the carrying on of ordinary commercial banking. Under this statute a few institutions were organized. In 1880 a general incorporation law was enacted (Rev. Stat. Ohio 1880, § 3235 and following), and under it many banks were formed. In addition the banking statistics of the state show that there are several banks owned by unincorporated stockholders, copartnerships, or individuals. Now, in no statute, save the free banking act, is there any *section with provisions[39] kindred to those in § 30, above quoted, and the contention is that the plaintiff in error was denied the "equal protection of the laws" guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, in that he was subject to prosecution and punishment for matters and things which, if done by a cashier of any similar institution, whether unincorporated or incorporated under the statutes of Ohio other than the free banking act, would not subject him to punishment. The cashiers of such other institutions are charged with duties substantially the same as those of this plaintiff in error, and yet the one may be punished for a violation of those duties and the others not. Can the state single out a few see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States, of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

204 U. S.

men and punish them for acts, when for like acts others are free from liability?

No opinion was filed by the supreme court of the state, and we, therefore, are not advised of the grounds upon which that court held § 30 valid; yet that court did hold it valid, and in the face of the same objections that are made to it here. If "any banking company," as found in the free banking act, is applicable to every banking institution, no matter under what statute organized, there is no violation of the equal protection of the laws. Counsel for plaintiff in error contend that the supreme court could not have given so broad a meaning to those words, because they are in a section treating of crimes, and the rule of strict construction, which is universal in respect to criminal statutes, forbids its extension to institutions other than those incorporated under the act of which it is a part; because the title of the original act, "An Act to Authorize Free Banking," limits the scope of the statute, and therefore the applicability of every section therein; and, further, that, as the free banking act, as originally passed, was only to be in force until the year 1872, it is improbable that a criminal provision of general application should be inserted in an act so limited in the matter of time. On the other hand, it is contended by the defendant in error that the words in § 30, "any banking company," [40] embrace *all banking institutions in the state of Ohio, whether incorporated under the free banking act or not, and this because the words themselves are broad and comprehensive, because there is no other provision in the statutes for punishing those who commit the offenses named in said section, and it cannot be supposed that the legislature intended that other like officials should be immune from punishment, and also because § 30, both in the original act and also in the Revised Statutes, has no apparent connection with, in no way modifies or affects, any other sections, and might as well have been placed in the criminal code or by itself in the statutes.

But we are not called upon to decide which is the correct interpretation. The supreme court of a state is the ultimate tribunal to determine the meaning of its local statutes. We are not to assume that that which seems more reasonable to us also seemed more reasonable to and was adopted by it. Before we can pronounce its judgment in conflict with the Federal Constitution it must be made to appear that its decision was one necessarily in conflict therewith, and not that possibly, or even probably, it was. It surely is not unworthy of consideration that the legislature, having before it the question of punishment for offenses committed by banking officers, having made provision therefor by one section in which it used the term "any banking company," may have believed that thereby it had included in its punitive provisions all banking institutions, and that a repetition of that section in other statutes was unnecessary. We do not decide that this was so, but we do hold that, in view of the silence of the supreme court, we are not justified in assuming that it held that it was not so.

Further, if we assume that the supreme court was of the opinion that § 30 was limited in its applicability to institutions incorporated under the free banking act, a question will then be whether the selection of officers of those institutions and subjecting them to punishment, when the officers of all other banking institutions, guilty of similar offenses, are *not so subject, is a [41] denial of the equal protection of the laws. The power of a state legislature to select certain individuals for the operation of a statute is not an arbitrary power, one that it can exercise without regard to any principle of classification. And yet there is a power of selection. The 14th Amendment was not designed to prevent all exercise of judgment by a state legislature of what the interests of the state require, and to compel it to run all its laws in the channels of general legislation. It may deem that social and business conditions, without penal legislation, afford ample protection to the public against wrongdoing by certain officials, while such legislation may be deemed necessary for like protection against wrongdoing by other officials charged with substantially similar duties. The duties of a county or city treasurer may be very like those of the treasurer of a charitable or business corporation, and yet if the legislature prescribed penalties for misconduct of the former, and none for similar misconduct of the latter, it would be giving the Amendment extreme force to make it efficient to overthrow the statute and thus relieve all treasurers from punishment. In short, the selection, in order to become obnoxious to the 14th Amendment, must be arbitrary and unreasonable; not merely possibly, but clearly and actually so. Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 411, 50 L. ed. 246, 250, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66. Would the singling out for punishment of the officers of the free banks be an arbitrary selection? The free banks, though they may be like other banking institutions, are not in all respects the same.

But here, too, we are not called upon for an absolute decision, nor do we deem it necessary to determine whether there be such differences as will sustain the imposition of punishment of their officers, when none is cast upon the like officers of other banks. We only refer to these matters to indicate that there were at least two questions before the supreme court involving the validity of § 30, one of which, at least, presents no matter of a Federal nature, and in respect to each of which something may [42] be said one way *and the other, and until it is shown what the supreme court did, in fact, decide, it is impossible to hold that the section, as construed by it, is in conflict with the Federal Constitution.

Under those circumstances it is clear that we have no jurisdiction (Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, and cases cited in opinion), and the writ of error is dismissed.

CORWIN D. BACHTEL, Plff. in Err.,
v.

R. FRANK WILSON, Sheriff of Stark County, Ohio. (No. 447.)

HARVEY H. MILLER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

R. FRANK WILSON, Sheriff of Stark County, Ohio. (No. 448.)

WILLIAM L. DAVIS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

R. FRANK WILSON, Sheriff of Stark County, Ohio. (No. 449.)

CHARLES H. VAN HORN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

R. FRANK WILSON, Sheriff of Stark County, Ohio. (No. 450.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 42.)

These cases are governed by the decision in Bachtel v. Wilson, ante, p. 357.

[Nos. 447, 448, 449, 450.]

Argued November 14, 15, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review four separate judgments which affirmed judgments of the Circuit Court of Stark County, in that state, dismissing writs of habeas corpus sued out by officers of a bank incorporated under the free banking act of that state, who had been indicted for violations of such act. Dismissed.

Mr. William A. Lynch argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles C. Upham and John W. Craine argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

360

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The same question controls these cases as the one just decided, and, for the reasons given in the foregoing opinion, they are dismissed.

*LOUIS KANN, Sigmund Kann, and Myer [43] Cohen, Appts.,
v.

CAROLINE KING.

HENRY RANDALL WEBB, Executor, etc., Appts.,
v.

CAROLINE KING.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 43-64.)

Landlord and tenant—forfeiture of lease—equitable relief.

1. A court of equity cannot, in the exercise of its general power to relieve from a forfeiture, endow a tenant with the right to create, at the risk of the owner, a contest involving the validity of an irredeemable tax sale, for the purpose of giving such tenant the right, if the tax title be held invalid, to pay the taxes and thus be relieved of a forfeiture for his breach of his covenant to pay such taxes.

Landlord and tenant—forfeiture of lease—equitable relief—accident or mistake.

2. Equity will not relieve from the forfeiture of a lease for the breach by a tenant of his covenant to pay the taxes on any theory that his default was due to the misleading conduct of the landlord or to his own temporary oversight, where the testimony conclusively demonstrates the tenant's gross negligence.

Landlord and tenant—forfeiture of lease—equitable relief—accident or mistake.

3. Relief from a forfeiture of a lease, incurred by a tenant because of his breach of his covenant to pay the taxes, cannot be given by a court of equity on the ground of accident or mistake, where the relief sought cannot be afforded without subjecting the lessor to the peril of contesting the validity of an outstanding prima facie irredeemable tax title.

Landlord and tenant—forfeiture of lease—equitable relief—fraud.

4. The purchase of an irredeemable tax title with a view to securing a lease of the property is not such a fraud on the tenant in possession as entitles him to relief in equity from a forfeiture of the lease for a breach of his covenant to pay the taxes.

Landlord and tenant—forfeiture of lease—equitable relief—fraud.

5. The act of the landlord in accepting as a new tenant the purchaser of an irredeemable tax title to the property is not

NOTE.—On equitable relief against forfeiture of estate—see note to Maginnis v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 69 L.R.A. 833.

204 U. S.

such a fraud on the tenant in possession as entitles him to relief in equity from a forfeiture of the lease for his breach of his covenant to pay the taxes,—especially where the landlord offered to condone the forfeiture if the tenant would commence proceedings to have the outstanding tax title declared invalid, and would secure the landlord from loss in the event that such title should be sustained, which offer the tenant declined.

[Nos. 16, 17.]

Argued March 8, 9, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

APPEALS from the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District adjudging a tax sale to be void and relieving the tenant from a forfeiture of the lease for his breach of his covenant to pay the taxes. Reversed with directions to dismiss the bill for want of equity.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 182.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants in No. 16:

The forfeiture for breach of covenant to pay taxes, after a tax sale, though the tax sale be still redeemable, is not relievable in equity.

Gordon v. Richardson, 185 Mass. 492, 69 L.R.A. 867, 70 N. E. 1027.

Mr. R. Ross Perry argued the cause, and, with Messrs. R. Ross Perry, Jr., and E. S. Theall, filed a brief for appellants in No. 17:

A court of equity will not relieve a tenant from a forfeiture incurred by breach of a covenant to pay taxes, in consequence of which breach a third party has acquired a deed to the demised premises, unless the breach was the result of fraud, accident, mistake, or surprise.

2 Platt, Leases, p. 475; Rolfe v. Harris, 2 Price, 206, note; White v. Warner, 2 Meriv. 459; Green v. Bridges, 4 Sim. 96; Reynolds v. Pitt, 19 Ves. Jr. 134; Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 683; Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J. Ch. N. S. 433; Job v. Banister, 2 Kay & J. 374; Wafer v. Mocato, 9 Mod. 112; Wadman v. Calcraft, 10 Ves. Jr. 67; Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves. Jr. 63; Lovat v. Ranelagh, 3 Ves. & B. 31; Bracebridge v. Buckley, 2 Price, 200; Macher v. Foundling Hospital, 1 Ves. & B. 188; Woodfall, Land. & T. 13th ed. p. 328; Sheets v. Selden, 7 Wall. 416-422, 19 L. ed. 166-168; Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 1314, 1323; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 453; Smith v. Mariner, 68 Am. Dec. 73, note, 5 Wis. 551; Bacon v. Park, 19 Utah, 246, 57 Pac. 28; Maginnis v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 69 L.R.A. 833, note, 112 Wis. 385, 88 N. W. 204 U. S.

300; Gordon v. Richardson, 185 Mass. 492, 69 L.R.A. 867, 70 N. E. 1027; Baldwin v. Rees, 6 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 869; Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, 27 L. ed. 780, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878; Klein v. New York L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 88, 90, 26 L. ed. 662, 663; Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 252, 257, 26 L. ed. 765, 767; Nederland L. Ins. Co. v. Meinert, 199 U. S. 171, 50 L. ed. 139, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Skinner v. Dayton, 2 Johns. Ch. 526; Baxter v. Lansing, 7 Paige, 350; Dunklee v. Adams, 20 Vt. 415, 50 Am. Dec. 44; Ottawa Northern Pl. Road Co. v. Murray, 15 Ill. 336; Noonan v. Lee (Noonan v. Braley) 2 Black, 499, 509, 17 L. ed. 278, 281; Hukill v. Guffey, 37 W. Va. 425, 16 S. E. 544; People's Bank v. Mitchell, 73 N. Y. 406; Parsons v. Smilie, 97 Cal. 647, 32 Pac. 702; South Carolina & G. R. Co. v. Augusta Southern R. Co. 111 Ga. 420, 36 S. E. 593.

Such breach is not one that can be compensated to a landlord.

Hand v. Suravitz, 148 Pa. 202, 23 Atl. 1117; Trinity Church v. Higgins, 48 N. Y. 532; Noyes v. Anderson, 124 N. Y. 175, 21 Am. St. Rep. 657, 26 N. E. 316; Fry, Spec. Perf. of Contracts, § 41; Hill v. Barclay, Rolfe v. Harris, Green v. Bridges, Reynolds v. Pitt, and Bracebridge v. Buckley,—supra.

A tenant who agrees to pay taxes thereby makes these taxes a personal debt of his own as between himself and his landlord.

Trinity Church v. Higgins, supra; Hand v. Suravitz, 148 Pa. 207, 23 Atl. 1117; McFarlane v. Williams, 107 Ill. 42; Ricou v. Hart, 47 La. Ann. 1373, 17 So. 878; Allen v. Dent, 4 Lea, 680.

Do the acts of the landlord in herself paying these taxes (she collecting them from the tenant) down to a certain date, relieve the tenant from her covenant to pay taxes subsequently accruing?

Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 252, 26 L. ed. 765; Oldewurtel v. Wiesenfeld, 97 Md. 165, 54 Atl. 969; Times Co. v. Siebrecht, 15 Phila. 235, 11 W. N. C. 283.

What diligence must a complainant show who applies to a court of equity for relief against a forfeiture declared by the landlord on account of such a breach?

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. pt. 2, chap. 1, section VIII., § 418; Smith v. Clay, 3 Bro. Ch. 639, note.

Where the tenant has not only allowed the demised premises to be sold for taxes, but has continued his breach until a tax deed for the demised premises has issued to an assignee of the purchaser, can the tenant litigate the question of the validity of that tax sale with the holder of the tax title at the risk of the landlord?

Bacon v. Park, supra.

Negligence or forgetfulness is not mistake.

Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 78, 146, 147; Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. §§ 452, 823, 828, 856; Parsons v. Smilie, supra; South Penn Oil Co. v. Edgell, 48 W. Va. 348, 86 Am. St. Rep. 43, 37 S. E. 596; Beaufort v. Neeld, 12 Clark & F. 248; Barrow v. Isaacs [1891] 1 Q. B. 417; Eastern Teleg. Co. v. Dent [1899] 1 Q. B. 835; Grymes v. Sanders, 93 U. S. 55, 23 L. ed. 798; Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. Jr. 269, 2 Kent, Com. 485; Attwood v. Small, 6 Clark & F. 338; Jennings v. Broughton, 17 Beav. 234; Campbell v. Ingilby, 1 DeG. & J. 405; Garrett v. Burleson, 25 Tex. Supp. 44; Warner v. Daniels, 1 Woodb. & M. 91, Fed. Cas. No. 17,181; Ferson v. Sanger, 1 Woodb. & M. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 4,752; Lamb v. Harris, 8 Ga. 546; Trigg v. Read, 5 Humph. 529, 42 Am. Dec. 447; Haywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 143; Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co. 4 Sawy. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 7,827; Hunt v. Hardwick, 68 Ga. 100; Churchill Twp. v. Cummings Twp. 51 Mich. 446, 16 N. W. 805; Persinger v. Chapman, 93 Va. 349, 25 S. E. 5.

Inasmuch as the charge against the defendants is that of actual fraud, recovery must be had upon that ground or not at all.

Price v. Berrington, 7 Eng. L. & Eq. 254; Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 56, 14 L. ed. 592, 598; Warner v. Godfrey, 186 U. S. 365, 46 L. ed. 1203, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852.

The lessor's motive in declaring forfeiture is immaterial.

Fitzroy v. Cave, 21 Times L. R. 612; 18 Harvard Law Rev. 411; Brothers v. Morris, 49 Vt. 460; South Royalton Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Vt. 505; Jacobson v. Van Boening, 48 Neb. 80, 32 L.R.A. 229, 58 Am. St. Rep. 684, 66 N. W. 993; Bragg v. Raymond, 11 Cush. 274; Morris v. Tuthill, 72 N. Y. 575; Bloxam v. Metropolitan R. Co. L. R. 3 Ch. 337.

In any case, can a defaulting tenant have relief from a forfeiture save on the condition of paying all costs and reasonable counsel fees to the landlord, incurred in resisting such relief?

Eichenlaub v. Neil, 3 Ohio Dec. 365.

To give relief in the case at bar is to do violence to the law.

Bracebridge v. Buckley, 2 Price, 200; Beaufort v. Neeld, Eastern Teleg. Co. v. Dent, and Barrow v. Isaacs,—supra.

Mr. J. J. Darlington argued the cause, and, with Mr. Leon Tobriner, filed a brief for appellee:

This court cannot be called upon to review or reverse the findings of fact of the lower courts, unless there is a clear showing of error.

Dravo v. Fabel, 132 U. S. 487, 33 L. ed. 421, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Stuart v. Hay- den, 169 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 639, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Shappirio v. Goldberg, 192 U. S. 232, 240, 48 L. ed. 419, 424, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

To sum up the authorities upon the question of the jurisdiction to relieve against forfeiture for breach of a covenant to pay taxes, those denying it are three in number only; namely, Bacon v. Park, 19 Utah, 246, 57 Pac. 28; Baldwin v. Rees, 6 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 869; Gordon v. Richardson, 185 Mass. 492, 69 L.R.A. 867, 70 N. E. 1027,—the first two being cases of wilful default, and it not appearing in the last of them whether the default was or was not the result of inadvertence, misadventure, or wilfulness. Of them, Baldwin v. Rees is expressly overruled in Eichenlaub v. Neil, 3 Ohio Dec. 365, while Gordon v. Richardson is based upon the fact only that, the tax sale in that case being valid, and the tax already paid, it was impossible for the lessee to perform, so that the very thing the lessee contracted to do can no longer be done, as in the case of rent and as in the case at bar.

On the other hand, sustaining the jurisdiction, besides Eichenlaub v. Neil, supra, and Gordon v. Richardson, where the tax may still be paid, are Garner v. Hannah, 6 Duer, 262; Giles v. Austin, 62 N. Y. 493; McClartey v. Gokey, 31 Iowa, 505; Noyes v. Anderson, 124 N. Y. 175, 21 Am. St. Rep. 657, 26 N. E. 316; Tibbetts v. Cate, 66 N. H. 550, 22 Atl. 559; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Diggs, 8 Baxt. 563; Muller v. Earle, 3 Jones & S. 461; Maginnis v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 112 Wis. 385, 69 L.R.A. 833, 88 N. W. 300.

Analogous to these, and repudiating the doctrine that breach of collateral covenants to repair, insure, or the like, cannot be relieved against, are Mactier v. Osborn, 146 Mass. 399, 4 Am. St. Rep. 323, 15 N. E. 641, to insure; Lundin v. Schoeffel, 167 Mass. 465, 45 N. E. 933, to repair; Hand v. Suravitz, 148 Pa. 207, 23 Atl. 1117, to pay water rents; Fernwood Masonic Hall Asso. v. Jones, 102 Pa. 307, to pay gas bills; Sanborn v. Woodman, 5 Cush. 41, to pay interest on a mortgage, etc.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These appeals are from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, which adjudged that a tax sale of certain real estate in the District was void, and which relieved the lessee of the premises from a threatened forfeiture of the lease, asserted to have resulted from the failure of the tenant to pay the taxes to enforce which the tax sale was made. The complainant in the original bill was Caroline [48] King, the lessee *of the premises, and the defendants were Marianne A. B. Kennedy (the lessor) and Louis Kann, Sigmund Kann, and Myer Cohen, whom it was alleged claimed to be either the equitable or legal owners of the tax title in question. The defendant Kennedy died the day the bill was filed, and Henry Randall Webb, as her executor, and Maria G. Dewey, as her heir at law, were substituted as defendants.

The lessor prosecuted an appeal from an order granting an injunction pendente lite, restraining him, among other things, from prosecuting landlord and tenant proceedings, based upon a right of re-entry arising from the alleged forfeiture caused by the non-payment of taxes and tax sale referred to in the bill. The court of appeals, on the face of the bill, sustained the order of injunction. 21 D. C. App. 141. The cause, having been put at issue by separate answers asserting the right of the lessor to forfeit and the right of the holders of the tax title, was tried on the merits and was decided in favor of the complainant. It was taken to the court of appeals on behalf of all the defendants except Mrs. Dewey, and the decree of the lower court, adjudging the tax sale to be void and relieving from the alleged forfeiture, was affirmed. 25 D. C. App. 182.

The origin of the controversy and the facts, as to which there is no dispute, are as follows:

The property in controversy, No. 715 Market space, in the city of Washington, was owned by and assessed for taxation in the name of Maria T. Gillis at the time of her death, intestate, in 1871. Marianne A. B. Kennedy, as the heir at law of Mrs. Gillis, took possession of the property as owner, without any administration upon the estate of Mrs. Gillis. After the death of Mrs. Gillis, continuously up to the making of the tax sale hereafter referred to, the property remained on the public records and continued to be assessed in the name of Mrs. Gillis, except that a small portion of the rear end of the premises was, at a time not shown, but prior to the tax sale before referred to, assessed for taxation in the name of Mrs. Kennedy and her husband.

[49] *In 1890, Mrs. Kennedy leased in writing the premises to Henry King, Jr., the husband of complainant, for use as a fancy dry goods store, and by several extensions the period of expiration of this lease came to be October 1, 1908. By the lease the lessee, his executors and administrators or assigns, were bound, "during the continuance and until the end and determination of the said term for which the said premises are demised, to pay or cause to be paid in each and every year thereof the taxes, general and special, of every character and description, assessed against and levied upon the said premises by the authorities of the general or local government." The right to terminate the lease and to re-enter upon the breach of any of the conditions was stipulated. When the lease was made, King, the lessee, was engaged in the dry goods business in a store on Seventh street, not far from the Market space store. Under the lease he entered into possession of the Market space store and carried on, in addition, business there until his death on August 18, 1897. Sanctioned by an order of the probate court, an assignment of the lease covering the store on Market space was made to Caroline King, the widow. The business was thereafter conducted for a time solely in her name. She did not, however, actively supervise it. Her elder son, Harry King, who had been, during the latter years of his father's life, in general charge of the business for his father, remained in that capacity, after the death of the father, as the representative of his mother, assisted at the Market space store, in a subordinate capacity, by a brother, Joseph King, who, during the father's life, had also, in a subordinate capacity, been engaged in business at that place. From the making of the lease in 1890 to the death of King in 1897 it was the habit of Mrs. Kennedy, when the tax on the Market space store was about to become payable, to request the lessee to send her a check for the amount of the tax, and on the receipt thereof the tax was paid either by Mrs. Kennedy or her agent. This course was not, however, followed, after the death of King. The first instalment of taxes which fell due in November, 1897, soon after the *death of King, was directly discharged by [50] Mrs. King, who took and retained the receipt. This was done at the request of Mrs. Kennedy, who called at the Market space store about Christmas, 1897, and asked that the tax be paid. From that time no request was made by the lessor to the tenant, as the taxes fell due, to send her the money to enable her to pay them, nor is it shown that any express demands were made that the tenant pay the taxes directly. From the time of the payment, by the tenant, near the close of 1897, of the first instalment of taxes which fell due after the death of her husband, until the summer of 1900, a period of more than two and a-half years, no taxes whatever were paid upon the leased premises. In the interval the following taxes became overdue:

Second instalment of tax for 1898, due in May, 1898;

First instalment of tax for 1899, due in November, 1898;

Second instalment of tax for 1899, due in May, 1899;

First instalment of tax for 1900, due in November, 1899; and,

Second instalment of tax for 1900, due in May, 1900.

On July 24, 1900, the two instalments of the tax for 1900, due in November, 1899, and May, 1900, with accrued penalties, were paid by the tenant under the following circumstances: As testified by Harry King, he being concerned over past-due taxes owing on a large number of tracts of real estate owned by the estate of his father, it "occurred" to him to have the "bookkeeper go down to the tax office and inquire for the tax bills of 715 Market space." The bookkeeper went and subsequently reported that the two instalments for 1900 were due, and Harry King paid them. The nature of the inquiry made by the bookkeeper at the tax office, and what occurred, is the subject of controversy, and we premit its consideration. Nearly a year after, in May, 1901, the two instalments of taxes for 1899, due in November, 1898, and May, 1899, with interest and penalties, along with the taxes for 1901, were paid by the tenant. The payment of the 1899 taxes was by way of redemption of a sale of the property for [51] such taxes made on April 12, *1900. There is no doubt that the payment of the arrears for 1899 was a result of the visit by the bookkeeper to the tax office. It will be observed that the payments which were made in 1900 and 1901, of taxes which were in arrears, did not embrace the second instalment of the tax of 1898, due in May, 1898. To enforce that instalment a sale had been made in April, 1899, and a certificate was issued to the purchaser a few days thereafter, which was subject to a right of redemption during a period of two years. In other words, when the instalments of taxes which were in arrears were paid on July 24, 1900, the property had been sold for the last half of the tax of 1898, and when the payment was made in 1901 of the arrears for 1899 the period for redemption had elapsed.

On July 25, 1901, Mrs. King received a letter sent from Rochester, New York, by one Wiltsie, stating that he had bought the property in April, 1899, at a tax sale to enforce the tax for the second half of the year 1898, and that he was entitled to a deed of the property, but would surrender the tax certificate if immediate payment was made of the amount of his, Wiltsie's, advance, viz., $143.93, together with the statutory interest at the rate of 15 per cent, and a charge for releasing, to be agreed upon. Harry King, Jr., replied to this letter on July 30, 1901, and asked to be informed of the charge for redemption. Wiltsie answered on August 1, 1901, calculating the statutory interest at $50.38, and naming $100 as his fee or charge for releasing. To this letter reply was made that Harry King was out of town, and that on his return the letter of Wiltsie would be laid before him. On September 17, 1901, Wiltsie wrote King, and called attention to the fact that he had not heard from him, and requested to be informed by return mail when the matter would have attention. To this King replied, objecting to the charge of $100 for releasing, and stated that in his opinion $50 would be an equitable charge. The letter concluded as follows:

"Unfortunately we have paid you quite a considerable amount of money in the past for tax sales. We are not interested *in [52] this piece of property in any way except as tenant, as we are not the owners or the mortgagees. If it should meet with your approval send us a bill and we will send check."

It was replied on September 24, 1901, that if the matter was attended to promptly $75 would be accepted for the release certificate, and that the papers had been sent to the Central National Bank of Washington, where, on payment of $272.90, they would be delivered up.

Neither Mrs. King nor her representatives, after learning in July of the sale of the property and of the outstanding tax title, gave any notice of that fact to the lessor, nor did they apparently concern themselves further about the matter until the purchase of the certificate from Wiltsie, as hereafter stated, by Cohen, one of the defendants.

Both the Kann defendants carried on business on Market space, having stores on each side of the property leased to King, and the situation was therefore such that the possession of that property was particularly advantageous to the Kanns. Indeed, they had at some previous time stated to Webb, the attorney of the lessor, that if they could obtain a long lease of the premises they would be willing to pay a rent much in advance of that paid by Mrs. King. Some time in September, 1901, one Knight called upon the Kanns and informed them that the property at 715 Market space had been sold for taxes. They referred him to Webb, the attorney of the lessor. Knight called upon Webb, said to him that Wiltsie had bought the property at the tax sale, and solicited employment to set aside the sale. Webb on the next day made inquiry, and discovered the fact of the sale and the outstanding certificate and the lapse of the period of redemption. He informed the lessor of the fact and of her right to forfeit the lease. Mrs. Kennedy, who was advanced in age, being nearly eighty years old, was perturbed, and, in a letter to Webb, expressed solicitude as to obtaining a new tenant in case the lease of Mrs. King was forfeited. As a result of the conferences and the correspondence between Mrs. Kennedy and her counsel, the latter called on [53] Cohen, *another defendant, who was the attorney of the Kanns, and desired to know whether the Kanns were yet willing to lease at an increased rent, and was informed they were. Shortly after Cohen advised the Kanns to purchase the Wiltsie tax certificate, and upon their giving him authority to use his discretion in the matter he determined to go at once to Rochester to accomplish that purpose. He communicated his intentions to Webb, who endeavored to dissuade him. Cohen went to Rochester. The papers which had been sent to Washington in consequence of the correspondence between Wiltsie and King were returned to Rochester. Cohen bought the certificate, took an assignment of the same in October, 1901, and, returning to Washington, procured a tax deed for the property from the commissioners of the District, which was duly recorded. Thereafter Mrs. Kennedy notified Mrs. King of her intention to re-enter because of the forfeiture of the lease resulting from the sale of the property for the nonpayment of taxes. Harry King then called at the bank to take up the certificate, and found that it had been returned to Wiltsie. Negotiations ensued between Mrs. King and Mrs. Kennedy, looking to a compromise of the matter, and a letter was written by the counsel of Mrs. King to Mrs. Kennedy, asking to be permitted to use her name in proceedings to be brought to cancel the tax sale. This was declined. At all times Mrs. King insisted upon her right to continue in possession under the lease despite the default. The Kanns notified Mrs. Kennedy that they were the real holders of the tax title, and would attempt to enforce their rights under it unless a lease of the property was made to them at the previously suggested increased rental. The counsel of Mrs. Kennedy, Webb, advised making such a lease. Placed between the threatened assertion by the Kanns of the tax title, unless they obtained a lease, and the insistence of Mrs. King that she was entitled to retain the property under her lease, Mrs. Kennedy wavered. The result was a letter addressed by Webb, the counsel for Mrs. Kennedy, to the counsel for Mrs. King, submitting a proposition of compromise, which was in substance *that Mrs. Kennedy [54] would waive the forfeiture upon condition that Mrs. King promptly commenced and prosecuted proceedings to have the tax deed to Cohen declared a nullity or defend against any claim under the tax title, and upon the further condition that Mrs. King furnish a bond with sufficient surety to pay the sum of $70,000 in the event that the tax title was held to be valid. Counsel for Mrs. King in writing declined this offer. The letter doing this made no counter proposition, but referred to and did not expressly withdraw the previous offer of Mrs. King, if she were allowed the use of Mrs. Kennedy's name, to conduct proceedings to vacate the tax title. In addition the letter, which was quite lengthy, expressly stated the opinion of the counsel of Mrs. King to be that the tax title was void and could be set aside. It insisted that Mrs. King would be relieved by a court of equity from the forfeiture alleged to have resulted from her inadvertent omission to pay the tax, and besides stated various grounds which, it was deemed, placed Mrs. Kennedy in a position where she could not, as against Mrs. King, ask to be protected against the risk, if any, of the outstanding tax title held by the Kanns. These grounds were, in substance, that the tax certificate had been bought by the Kanns at the instance of the counsel of Mrs. Kennedy, for the purpose of making sure of a forfeiture of Mrs. King's rights, and with the knowledge that negotiations were pending between Mrs. King and Wiltsie, and for the purpose of forestalling the acquisition by Mrs. King of the tax certificate.

The negotiations having failed, Mrs. Kennedy commenced landlord and tenant proceedings to recover possession. Before the time set for the trial of the proceedings Mrs. King commenced this suit, which, as we at the outset stated, sought to have the tax title declared void, to have complainant relieved from the forfeiture, and for an injunction restraining the prosecution of a landlord and tenant proceeding.

That a court of equity, even in the absence of special circumstances of fraud, accident, or mistake, may relieve against a *forfeiture incurred by the breach of a cove- [55] nant to pay rent, on the payment or tender of all arrears of rent and interest by a defaulting lessee, is elementary. Sheets v. Selden, 7 Wall. 416, 19 L. ed. 166. But that principle cannot control this case, even if it be conceded, for the sake of argument, that it applies to collateral covenants in leases, such as the obligation to repair, to insure, and even to pay taxes, said in the Sheets case to be settled in England adversely to such right, but to be an open question in this country, and as to which there may be differences of opinion in state courts of last resort. Noyes v. Anderson, 124 N. Y. 175, 21 Am. St. Rep. 657, 26 N. E. 316; Giles v. Austin, 62 N. Y. 491; Gordon v. Richardson, 185 Mass. 492, 69 L. R. A. 867, 70 N. E. 1027; Lundin v. Schoeffel, 167 Mass. 465, 45 N. E. 933; Mactier v. Osborn, 146 Mass. 399, 4 Am. St. Rep. 323, 15 N. E. 641; Tibbetts v. Cate, 66 N. H. 550, 22 Atl. 559; Bacon v. Park, 19 Utah, 246, 57 Pac. 28. We say this, because the general principle, as declared in the Sheets Case, rests upon the ground that "the rent is the object of the parties and the forfeiture only an incident intended to secure its payment; that the measure of damages is fixed and certain, and that when the principal and interest are paid the compensation is complete." When the foundation upon which the doctrine is based is borne in mind it becomes apparent that it affords no ground for the contention that it is applicable to a case where the failure to perform a covenant to pay taxes has led to a tax sale, ripening into a prima facie irredeemable title held adversely to the lessor. In other words, the doctrine lends no support to the proposition that a court of equity can require an owner to risk the loss of his property by compelling him to engage in a contest involving the validity of an irredeemable tax sale, for the purpose of endowing the tenant with the right, if the tax title be held invalid, to pay the taxes and thus be relieved of a forfeiture. To extend the principle to such a degree would be destructive of rights of property, since it would subject everyone who made a lease of his property, containing a covenant by the lessee to pay taxes, to the hazard of the loss of his title, if only the tenant chose to violate the covenant, and thus give rise to the coming [56] into existence of a tax title prima facie valid and irredeemable in character. And the force of these considerations is not avoided by the reasoning which led the court below to its conclusion, or by the arguments at bar advanced to support that conclusion.

Thus, the court, in its opinion, considering the paramount issue to be the validity of the tax sale, first disposed of that question, and, concluding that the sale was void, proceeded to determine its power to grant relief from the forfeiture, upon the hypothesis that there never had been a tax sale, that the taxes were still due, and could be paid, and that the tenant was willing to pay them. But thus to contemplate the controversy was to assume the very question for decision; that is, the power of a court of equity, in order to relieve from a forfeiture, to endow a tenant with the right to create, at the risk of the owner, a primary controversy, viz., to compel the owner against his will to jeopardize his title by testing the validity of the irredeemable tax sale,—a hazard which the owner was desirous of avoiding. The paramount issue was not, as assumed, the invalidity of the tax sale as a mere abstract question, but, we repeat, was the right of the tenant to invoke at the hands of the court a determination of that question at the risk of the owner. And this view is not changed by saying that the decision at the instance of the tenant as to the validity of an irredeemable tax title, held by a third person, was an incident to the right of the tenant to be relieved from the forfeiture, for to so say is but to destroy the foundation upon which the right to relief from the forfeiture rested; that is, the ability of the tenant, when applying for relief, to make complete compensation. And the misconception of the general doctrine just pointed out pervades the argument at bar of the appellee. Thus, while no authority is referred to sustaining the right of a tenant to test the validity of an outstanding prima facie irredeemable tax deed, caused to exist by the default of the tenant, the ultimate result of the contentions is to assume that principle as established and to predicate rights upon that hypothesis. In other words, in substance, by a petitio principii, the propositions urged treat the outstanding tax title [57] as void and proceeded to demonstrate the right to relief under that assumption.

There being, then, no foundation for the contention that it was within the ordinary power of a court of equity to relieve from the forfeiture, we come to consider whether the case as made by the record is brought within the general authority of a court of equity to relieve in cases of fraud, accident, or mistake. We put out of view, for ulterior consideration, the question of fraud, and therefore presently examine only the contentions as to the existence of the elements of accident or mistake. In considering this subject two propositions are obvious: First, where the forfeiture from which relief is sought has been occasioned by the gross negligence of the person claiming to be relieved the default so occasioned is not one brought about by accident or mistake; and, second, that even where accident or mistake has been shown, especially in the absence of culpability or fraud on the part of the other party, a court of equity will not grant re-relief from the forfeiture, unless it can be done with justice to that party.

Referring to its opinion on the appeal from the order granting an injunction pendente lite, and in effect reiterating the view therein expressed; that the averments of the bill justified the relief prayed, the court, in its opinion on the final hearing, said:

"But the testimony makes it more plain than even the allegations of the bill of complaint did, that she is entitled to the relief which she asks. The testimony shows quite conclusively that, while the lease required the annual taxes on the property to be paid by the lessee, yet the invariable custom of the lessor down to the time of the default had been to demand and receive the amount of the taxes from the lessee, and to pay the taxes herself by her own agents. For the taxes of the second half of the year 1898, in connection with which the default occurred, the lessor failed for some reason to make the usual demand for the money wherewith to pay the taxes; and the lessee was in the midst of financial trouble and distress caused by the recent death of her husband, who had been the lessee down to [58] the *time of his death. The record shows to us quite plainly that the default of the lessee was excusable under the circumstances; and that no harm would be done to anyone by her relief from the nominal forfeiture which she has incurred."

By this reasoning it was assumed the case was brought within the grounds of relief for accident or mistake upon two inferences, both treated as alleged in the bill and established by the testimony; first, the prior practice of the lessor in calling upon the tenant to hand her the money to pay the taxes and then herself paying them; and second, the failure of the lessee, after this practice was discontinued, to call to mind that the tax was due and payable, owing to her disturbed state of mind at that particular time. In the argument at bar reliance is principally rested upon the first of these grounds, and indeed it is insisted that the testimony goes much further than implied by the court below, and demonstrates that the conduct of the lessor was such as to mislead the lessee, and thereby estop the former from asserting the forfeiture.

Let us consider separately the two grounds: First, accident or mistake as engendered by the course of dealing of the lessor, and, second, accident or mistake arising from oversight, the alleged result of the particular circumstances surrounding the tenant at the time of the failure to pay the taxes. As to the first ground it would seem to be an afterthought, since it was not suggested in the correspondence between the parties immediately preceding the litigation that Mrs. Kennedy by her conduct had in anywise led to the default of the tenant. To the contrary, that view was excluded, for in the letter written to Mrs. Kennedy, dated October 8, 1901, asking authority to use her name in proceedings to be brought by the tenant to cancel the tax sale, the attorneys of Mrs. King said:

"We assume that you are aware that your tenant has always paid the taxes upon the demised premises, and the failure to pay the one made the basis of the notice was an oversight, caused by the death of Mr. Henry King, Jr., which was being remedied at the time your notice was received."

*And although it would seem that the [59] court below assumed to the contrary, the fact is the bill contained no averment justifying the default in paying, upon the theory that it had been induced by the conduct of the lessor. To the reverse it was specifically stated in the fifth paragraph of the bill that the alleged single default in the payment of taxes arose "wholly through oversight and inadvertence," without in anywise charging that the conduct of Mrs. Kennedy was in whole or in part the cause of the oversight or inadvertence. Besides, in the eleventh paragraph of the bill, explicit reference was made to the letter to which we have just above referred, and it was alleged that by its terms Mrs. Kennedy was notified "that the failure to pay the taxes was simply an oversight, which was being remedied at the time the notice of refusal to accept the rent was received." True it is that the testimony shows that prior to the death of Henry King, Jr., in August, 1897, the lessor was in the habit of calling upon the tenant for the amount required to pay the tax then due or about to become due, in order that she might herself pay them. True also is it that Harry King, in testifying, made statements from which the inference can be deduced that in conducting the business for his mother, after the assignment of the lease subsequent to the death of his father, he relied upon a continuance of this practice. But it must be borne in mind these statements were made after the death of Mrs. Kennedy, who died on the day the bill was filed, and their inaccuracy is, we think, conclusively shown by the mode of dealing following the assignment of the lease and the conduct of the tenant in respect to the matter of taxes. The very first payment of taxes made after the death of Henry King was made by the tenant herself, paying the taxes at the request of Mrs. Kennedy, and retaining the receipt. Nearly three years of default followed, without any payment of taxes by the tenant whatever and without any inquiry being made by the tenant on the subject. When in July, 1900, the two defaulting instalments of the tax for 1900 were paid by the tenant they were not paid at the instance of Mrs. Kennedy, or be-

[60] cause *of any request upon her part, but because it "occurred" to the tenant to do so. When they were paid the payment embraced interest and penalties, for which the tenant could not have deemed herself responsible if the course of dealing asserted had been relied upon. Despite this fact, no proof whatever was made of any notice to Mrs. Kennedy of the fact or of any claim being made against her in the premises. And the same thing is true as to the payments made in May, 1901, of the current taxes and some of the overdue instalments. Besides, when these payments were made the property had been sold for the overdue instalments, but was yet subject to redemption, and the statutory interest of 15 per cent was paid by the tenant without any intimation of a claim of any character against the lessor. Indeed, the conduct of the tenant in respect to the very tax for which a forfeiture was asserted is absolutely inconsistent with the theory that she deemed that her landlord was the cause of the default, for, when notice was received by the tenant from the purchaser at the tax sale of the outstanding irredeemable tax certificate, more than two months and a half elapsed before the purchase of the certificate by Cohen, and no complaint was made to the landlord that she had neglected to demand payment of the tax, and that in consequence the default and loss was occasioned, but a negotiation was opened to purchase the outstanding title for the account of the tenant alone. When this line of conduct is considered in connection with the fact, already stated, the conclusion is inevitable that the suggestion that the conduct of the landlord had induced the failure to pay, first made after the death of Mrs. Kennedy, is without foundation.

And the facts which we have just stated also render it impossible to conclude that the nonpayment of the tax was due to a mere temporary oversight, and not to gross negligence. How can an inference of temporary oversight be possible when the long period of the failure by the tenant to pay any tax whatever is borne in mind, and when we also consider the delay of more than two months and a half which took [61] place after *knowledge was conveyed, by the letter of Wiltzie, of the outstanding irredeemable tax certificate?

368

The fact that the tenant was a merchant, and of necessity kept mercantile books, is significant. The mind cannot conceive of adequate entries being made of the taxes which were belatedly paid, which would not have at once suggested those which were unpaid. The inference fairly deducible from the letter to Wiltzie—"Unfortunately we have paid you quite a considerable amount of money in the past for tax sales"—adds cogency to the irresistible inferences as to negligence.

And even if the foregoing considerations which establish the absence of accident or mistake and demonstrate the presence of gross negligence are put out of mind, and accident or mistake be assumed, for the sake of the argument, nevertheless, under the circumstances of the case, a court of equity could not give relief. This follows since the relief sought could not be afforded without subjecting the lessor to the peril of contesting the validity of the outstanding prima facie irredeemable tax title.

We come to the question which we hitherto put aside for final consideration; viz., the alleged fraud. It, in any event, only involves a consideration of what took place with regard to the purchase of the tax certificate by Cohen as the agent of the Kanns, and the circumstances surrounding and connected with that purchase, and the use made of the certificate. Concerning these matters the court below said:

"We find no evidence whatever in the record of any fraud or wrongdoing perpetrated by anyone concerned. We only find the evidence of a situation created by a keen commercial rivalry and shrewd management, wholly untainted by wrongdoing, but still a situation from which injury is threatened to the complainant's rights of property, and against which she is entitled to be relieved. For that there was an arrangement between the defendants whereby the tax certificate was to be used to oust the complainant from the property, we think is too plain to be reasonably questioned. There was, undoubtedly, a concurrence of effort for that purpose; perhaps no formal combination *or preconcerted [62] action. But it matters not what we call it. The undoubted fact is there was co-operation between the defendants to use the tax certificate to the detriment of the complainant's rights; and there being such co-operation, the defense of multifariousness cannot prevail. The one purpose of the bill is to relieve the complainant from the effect of this tax certificate and of the tax title based upon it."

For the reason that we agree with the finding that there is no evidence whatever of any fraud or wrongdoing by anyone concerned, we are constrained to disagree with the conclusion that the complainant was entitled to relief. We say this, because we are of opinion that the relief awarded could only have been justified upon the finding that there was fraud and wrongdoing. We so conclude, because if it be accepted that there was an agreement and combination as to the certificate, entirely free from every element of fraud or wrongdoing, we fail to perceive how an agreement of that character afforded ground for granting the relief which was given. But, disregarding mere forms of expression, and assuming that the general finding that there was no fraud or wrongdoing was intended to be limited to intentional as distinguished from constructive fraud or wrongdoing, let us briefly review the facts concerning the acquisition and use made of the certificate, in order to fix whether such a finding is at all sustained by the record. Although we think it immaterial, as there was no evidence whatever tending to show that the lessor or her attorney procured the purchase of the certificate by Cohen, that subject may be put out of view. The irredeemable tax certificate was in the hands of and belonged to Wiltsie. He notified the tenant that he held it more than two months and a half before the purchase by Cohen, and proffered his willingness to assign it to the tenant. As shown by the undisputed facts which we have stated, with indifference both to her own interest and the interest of the landlord, the tenant neither acted for herself by accepting the offer, nor gave any notification whatever to the landlord on the subject. Cohen, as the agent of the [63] Kanns, learned of the existence of the *irredeemable tax sale and of the person who held the certificate. He purchased it by the authority of and for the benefit of his principals, the Kanns. By the express terms of the statute under which the certificate was issued it was assignable. Granting that the purchase was made in order to aid the Kanns in obtaining a lease of the property, in the absence of any legal duty owing by them to the tenant, we fail to perceive how the motive of Cohen or his principals could operate to make the otherwise lawful action constructively wrongful. The tenant, by whose negligent default the sale of the property had been occasioned, certainly had no exclusive pre-emptive right to the purchase of the certificate, which would operate to render its purchase by anyone else in his own interest void. After the purchase of the certificate by Cohen, what was the position of the landlord? On the one hand confronted by the assertion of the tenant that the outstanding tax title was void, that she had a right to be relieved from the forfeiture caused by the nonpayment of the tax, and was entitled to continue in possession under the lease, and, on the other, with an offer on the part of the holder of the tax title to quitclaim the same, and thus avoid testing its validity, if only a lease was made which would be advantageous. When it is again borne in mind that this situation was brought about by the neglect of the tenant to perform his covenant to pay the taxes, and by his procrastination in respect to acquiring the tax certificate which had been previously offered to him, we can conceive of no principle of equity preventing the landlord from taking a course not forbidden by law, which was not only most conducive to her own interest, but which besides obviated the danger of submitting her title to a contest concerning the validity of a tax sale. But, if an equitable principle could be conceived of which prevented the landlord from so acting under the circumstances stated, that principle would be inapplicable to the case before us, when one of the undisputed facts to which we have already called attention is considered. That fact is this: Before the landlord irrevocably determined to avail of the forfeiture and thus avoid *the risk to [64] herself concerning the outstanding tax title, she offered to condone the forfeiture, provided the tenant commenced proceedings to have the outstanding tax title declared invalid, and also secured the landlord from loss in the event that such tax title should be sustained, which offer was declined, on grounds substantially asserting that the risk resulting from the default of the tenant should be borne by the owner, and not by the tenant.

204 U. S.

The decree of the court below is reversed and the cause remanded with instructions to dismiss the bill for want of equity.

Reversed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice Harlan dissent.

TOMAS GARROZI, Juana Maria Gonzalez, and Domingo Piazzzi, Appts.,

v.

JUANA DASTAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 64-85.)

NOTE.—Appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rican courts.

Writs of error from and appeals to the 369

Appeal—from district court for Porto Rico.

1. An appeal lies to the Supreme Court of the United States from a decree of the district court for the district of Porto Rico in a suit brought by a wife to obtain liquidation of the community, in which the matter in dispute exceeds the sum of $5,000.

Removal of causes—from Porto Rican court—objection by party causing removal.

2. The party who has wrongfully procured a removal from the local Porto Rican court to the Federal district court of a case within the original jurisdiction conferred upon the latter court by the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 953, chap. 812), § 3, cannot be heard, after judgment against him, to assert that the Federal court had no jurisdiction, because of the irregularity of the removal, although, by the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 84, chap. 191), § 34, it is provided that the laws of the United States relating to the removal of causes shall govern as between the district court of the United States for Porto Rico and the courts of Porto Rico.

Husband and wife,—community property—rights of divorced wife.

3. A rule of limited forfeiture in lieu of the rigorous rule of the Spanish law that the wife against whom a divorce for adultery was decreed forfeited all right to her share in the community property was adopted for Porto Rico by the provisions of Civil Code 1889, art. 73, ¶ 3, Civil Code 1902, tit. 5, chap. 5, § 174, to the effect that the guilty spouse shall forfeit all gifts from the innocent party, who shall retain everything which has been acquired from the other.

Husband and wife—community property—rights of divorced wife.

4. The rule of the Spanish law that the wife against whom a judgment of divorce for adultery has been decreed forfeits all right to her share in the community property does not obtain in Porto Rico because of the provision of Civil Code 1889, art. 1417, Civil Code 1902, § 1330, that the spouse who, by bad faith, has been the cause of the nullity of the marriage, shall not have a share in the common property, since this provision relates, not to the dissolution of a marriage by a decree of divorce, but to the recognition of the nullity of a seeming marriage for causes which have operated to prevent it from ever having existed.

Husband and wife—community property—liquidation—accounting for reckless expenditures.

5. The power of the husband as the head and master and administrator of the community property, under Porto Rico Civil Federal Supreme Court to review final decisions of the supreme court of Porto Rico and the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico are, by the express provisions of the act of April 12, 1900, § 35, authorized in the same cases as will sustain the exercise of this appellate jurisdiction to review decisions of the territorial supreme courts, and in all cases where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or an act of Congress is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied. J. Ribas y Hijo v. United States, 194 U. S. 315, 48 L. ed. 994, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727.

The review in the Federal Supreme Court of final judgments of the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico is not necessarily confined by this section to the class of cases therein described as those "where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or an act of Congress is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied," in view of the prior clause of that section, authorizing such review if the case be one which, if determined in a territorial supreme court, may be carried up to the Federal Supreme Court. Amado v. United States, 195 U. S. 172, 49 L. ed. 145, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

A direct review in the Supreme Court of the United States of a judgment of the district court for the district of Porto Rico in an action on a policy of insurance issued by a foreign corporation in which the matter in dispute exceeds the sum of $5,000 may be had on writ of error to the latter court under this statute, since the judgment, if rendered by a territorial supreme court, would not have been reviewable in the circuit court of appeals under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 554), § 15, on the theory that the case was one of the class in which the judgments of the latter court are made final by § 6 of that act. Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149, 48 L. ed. 385, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

The question is not affected by any statutory provisions relating to the re-examination in certain designated circuit courts of appeals of judgments of the highest courts of the Indian territory, Hawaii, and Alaska. Ibid.

A case in which "an act of Congress is brought in question, and the right claimed thereunder is denied," within the meaning of the statute under discussion, is presented by an unsuccessful contention by an accused that, pursuant to the act of April 12, 1900, the trial court, in the matter of the qualifications of grand jurors, should have been controlled by the provisions of the local law relating to jurors, in connection with statutes of the United States relating to the organization of grand juries, and the trial and disposition of criminal causes. Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 1075, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731.

The overruling of a motion in arrest of judgment, in which the accused asserted that the grand jurors were not selected or drawn as required by the Federal statutes, also presents such a case. Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 156, 49 L. ed. 994, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

This provision also covers a judgment of Code 1889, arts. 1412, 1413, Civil Code 1902, §§ 1327, 1328, is such that, in the absence of express limitation, he cannot, after the dissolution of the community, be required to account for money which he may have recklessly and extravagantly expended during the existence of the community.

Husband and wife—community property—right of divorced wife to liquidation.

6. A divorced wife is entitled to obtain the liquidation of the community and the payment to her of her share, under Porto Rico Civil Code, 1902, § 173, providing that a divorce carries with it a complete dissolution of all the matrimonial ties, and the division of all property and effects between the parties to the marriage.

Judgment—community property—liquidation—money judgment.

7. The objection that the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico should not have given a money decree in a suit by the wife to obtain the liquidation of the community is not a valid one, where the rights of the wife arise simply from an increased value of property or assets brought by the husband to the marriage, or as a result of the falling into the community of the revenues of the property of the husband.

the supreme court of Porto Rico requiring an indebtedness to be liquidated in United States currency at the rate of 100 cents for each peso of indebtedness, on the ground that the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191), § 11, under which the debtor claimed the right to pay in such currency at the rate of 60 cents for each peso of indebtedness, had no application to the case. Serralles v. Esbri, 200 U. S. 103, 50 L. ed. 391, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

But the ruling of the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico that the recovery for the breach of a promise to marry was not limited to the expense incurred in reliance on the promised marriage, as provided by Porto Rico Civ. Code, art. 44, is not the equivalent, for the purpose of sustaining a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, of a denial of a right claimed under a law of the United States, on the theory that this article became a law of the United States by reason of the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191) § 8, continuing local laws in force. Ortega v. Lara, 202 U. S. 339, 50 L. ed. 1055, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707.

The claim in a written motion in arrest of judgment or sentence that the indictment did not set forth "an offense under the statutes of the United States" is too indefinite to give the Federal Supreme Court jurisdiction of a writ of error to the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico, under the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 85, chap. 191), § 35, as of a case where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or an act of Congress was brought in question and the 204 U. S.

Husband and wife—community property—liquidation—allowance of alimony and expenses of divorce.

8. The amount of alimony pendente lite and the expenses incurred by the wife in a divorce suit in a Porto Rico court, which were sanctioned by that court, are properly allowed to the divorced wife in her suit to obtain a liquidation of the community and a decree for the payment of her share.

Husband and wife—community property—liquidation—allowance of counsel fees.

9. Counsel fees cannot be allowed by the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico to a wife in her suit to obtain a liquidation of the community and a decree for the payment of her share.

[No. 72.]

Argued October 31 and November 1, 1906.
Decided January 7, 1907.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a decree in favor of the wife in a suit by her for the liquidation of the community and the payment to her of her share. Reversed and remanded with directions to disallow an award of counsel fees and a credit to the community property of right claimed thereunder denied. Amado v. United States, 195 U. S. 172, 49 L. ed. 145, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

The rule which governs the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts, viz., that the Federal question must be real, and not fictitious or without color of merit (See note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513), is applicable here. Applying this rule, the court, in American R. Co. v. Castro, 204 U. S. 453, post, 564, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466, in view of the substantially uniform requirement of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 664-669, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 543-545, that special terms of the circuit courts are to be held at the same places as the regular sessions, held that a writ of error to the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico was not supported by the unsuccessful contention that because such court is required, by the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191), § 34, to proceed in the same manner as a Federal circuit court, a term of that court held at Mayaguez, under the authority of the further provision of that section that regular terms of such court shall be held at stated times in San Juan and Ponce, and special terms at Mayaguez at such other times as the judge may deem expedient, is a "special," as contradistinguished from a "regular," term, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 670, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 545, forbidding jury trials at special terms of the circuit courts except in certain specified districts.

the amount of reckless and extravagant expenditures by the husband.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles M. Boerman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

This court has jurisdiction of this case on appeal.

Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 150, 48 L. ed. 385, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

It has been repeatedly held that the Supreme Court will reverse the judgment of the lower court in case that court had no jurisdiction in a case removed to it from a state court, although it was the party appellant that had petitioned for the removal. It has been held that it is the duty of the Supreme Court, even of its own motion, to note critically the record upon which a case comes before it, in order to test the jurisdiction of the court below.

Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 28 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Capron v. Van Noorden, 2 Cranch, 126, 2 L. ed. 229; Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 8 L. ed. 885; Jackson v. Ashton, 8 Pet. 148, 8 L. ed. 898; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393-400, 15 L. ed. 691-698; Börs v. Preston, 111 U. S. 252, 28 L. ed. 419, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Piquignot v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 16 How. 104, 14 L. ed. 863; Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 12 L. ed. 890; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Rhoads, 119 U. S. 237, 30 L. ed. 380, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 532, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192-198, 38 L. ed. 685-687, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Neel v. Pennsylvania Co. 157 U. S. 153, 39 L. ed. 654, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589.

To entitle a party to removal the jurisdiction of the United States court must appear affirmatively and unequivocally.

Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 38 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Gibson v. Bruce, 108 U. S. 561, 27 L. ed. 825, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278-283, 27 L. ed. 932-934, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 646, 24 L. ed. 1057; New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L. ed. 44; Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 26 L. ed. 719.

A defect to show positively the requisite diverse citizenship of each party at the time of the commencement of the suit cannot be cured by amendment of the bill.

Stevens v. Nichols, 130 U. S. 230, 32 L. ed. 914, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 33 L. ed. 144, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Jackson v. Allen, 132 U. S. 27, 33 L. ed. 249, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 33 L. ed. 462, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196.

All the defendants must be nonresidents.

Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 37 L. ed. 602, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Parkinson v.

Barr, 105 Fed. 83; Cudahy v. McGeoch, 37 Fed. 1; Walker v. O'Neill, 38 Fed. 374; Scott v. Texas Land & Cattle Co. 41 Fed. 225; Purcell v. British Land & Mortg. Co. 42 Fed. 465; Tracy v. Morel, 38 Fed. 801.

If the removal right is urged on the ground of a separable controversy, then the case at bar is not removable, because that clause in the third subdivision speaks only of cases pending between citizens of different states. And it was uniformly held that only citizens of any of the states can take advantage of that clause. Even a state cannot take advantage of it, and aliens surely not.

Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. ed. 144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. ed. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. United States (Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Alabama) 155 U. S. 482, 39 L. ed. 231, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395, 27 L. ed. 60, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312.

In removals on the ground of a separable controversy all the parties on one side must differ in citizenship from all the parties on the other side.

Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Blake v. McKim, 103 U. S. 336, 26 L. ed. 563.

Besides, it appears from the examination of the allegations of the complaint as well as of the whole record, that there was no separable controversy, as conspiracy between all the defendants to defraud the complainant was charged, and the annulment of deeds between the three defendants was prayed for, and no judgment separately could be given in the case which would not affect all the defendants alike. It was held that, in conspiracy cases, defendant cannot remove on separate counts.

Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 30 L. ed. 269, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52, 29 L. ed. 63, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 138, 29 L. ed. 114, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41, 29 L. ed. 331, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034, 1161; Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 56, 29 L. ed. 328, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1154; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248, 29 L. ed. 388, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 278, 29 L. ed. 900, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 280, 29 L. ed. 898, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Core v. Vinal, 117 U. S. 347, 29 L. ed. 912, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Plymouth Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264, 30 L. ed. 232, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; Hyde

v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 407, 26 L. ed. 823; Ayres v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187-192, 28 L. ed. 693-695, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Under the civil law a woman divorced for her adultery has no right of action for any share in the marriage community assets.

Ballinger, Community Property, § 5, p. 6; Schmidt, Civil Law, art. 68, L. 5 & 11, t. 9, I. 5 Rec. I. 5 & 11, t. 4, I. 10, Nov. Rec.

In the liquidation of the marriage co-partnership assets the legitimate expenses made by the husband during the duration of the marriage, no matter how large they were, cannot be charged against his share.

Spreckels v. Spreckels, 116 Cal. 339, 36 L. R.A. 497, 58 Am. St. Rep. 170, 48 Pac. 228; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; Guice v. Lawrence, 2 La. Ann. 226; Packard v. Arellanes, 17 Cal. 525; Ballinger, Community Property, § 79; 22 Mucius Scaevola, Com. on Civ. Code, pp. 313, 319, 320.

Counsel fee and suit money cannot be given in a suit for liquidation of her share of property by a divorced wife after divorce; and in the courts of the United States counsel fee can never exceed the sum of $20.

Ballinger, Community Property, § 119; Drais v. Hogan, 50 Cal. 121; Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Chandler, 27 Fed. 9; Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, 7 Blatchf. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 14,197; Goodyear v. Sawyer, 17 Fed. 13; Williams v. Morrison, 32 Fed. 683; Cleaver v. Traders' Ins. Co. 40 Fed. 864; Parks v. Booth, 102 U. S. 96, 26 L. ed. 54; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 16 L. ed. 226.

Fraud will never be presumed, and the fact that the husband, two years before the divorce, and long before the divorce proceedings were commenced by him, sold property to the value of $77,000, while the share of his wife amounts to the paltry sum of $2,750, cannot warrant a conclusion that the sales were fraudulently made in order to deprive the wife of her share.

Hager v. Thomson, 1 Black, 80, 17 L. ed. 41; Clark v. Hackett, 1 Black, 77, 17 L. ed. 69; Collins v. Thompson, 22 How. 246, 16 L. ed. 280; Connor v. Featherstone, 12 Wheat. 199, 6 L. ed. 601; Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. 356, 13 L. ed. 172; Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 102 U. S. 148, 26 L. ed. 106; Moore v. Page, 111 U. S. 117, 28 L. ed. 373, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388; Schreyer v. Scott, 134 U. S. 405, 33 L. ed. 955, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229, 5 L. ed. 603; Mattingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. 370, 19 L. ed. 380; Hinde v. Longworth, 11 Wheat. 199, 6 L. ed. 454; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 22 L. ed. 313; Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183, 23 L. ed. 481; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. ed. 908; Clark v. Killian, 103 U. S. 766, 26 L. ed. 607; Horbach v. Hill, 112 U. S. 144, 28 L. ed. 670, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81. 204 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

Mr. Fritz von Briesen also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

In order that the United States district court should have had jurisdiction in this case, it was necessary to show not merely that the court might have had jurisdiction if the action had been begun by its own process, but that the law authorized the removal of the case.

18 Enc. Pl. & Pr. title "Removal of Causes," pp. 159, 366; Black's Dill. Removal of Causes, §§ 13, 220; Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 37 L. ed. 602, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706.

All the defendants must be nonresidents in order to remove.

Parkinson v. Barr, 105 Fed. 81.

While the court below might have had jurisdiction of this suit if it had originally been brought therein, it had no jurisdiction on removal. Such a construction of the act of 1891 cannot be presumed, as it is not warranted by the express words of the statute or by necessary implication.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, title, "Statutes," p. 615, note; Ex parte Story, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 166; Kite's Case, 1 Barn. & C. 107.

The fact that the defendants-appellants themselves removed the case to the United States district court did not give that court jurisdiction.

18 Enc. Pl. & Pr. title, "Removal of Causes," pp. 369, 375; Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 37 L. ed. 602, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706.

The separation of property, even after a divorce has been granted, cannot be decreed except upon the petition of the innocent spouse.

9 Manresa, Código Civil Español, p. 769.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis H. Dexter and John Spalding Flannery, filed a brief for appellee:

In view of the fact that at least three out of the four persons, parties to the cause, are admittedly citizens of the Republic of France, can it be doubted that the United States district court of the district of Porto Rico also had original jurisdiction of the controversy concurrent with the insular district court?

Ortega v. Lara, 202 U. S. 339, 344, 50 L. ed. 1055, 1057, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707.

As the amount of the judgment appealed from, exclusive of interest and costs, exceeds $5,000, it is certain that this court has jurisdiction to entertain this appeal.

Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 150, 48 L. ed. 385, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

It appearing that the lower court had jurisdiction of the cause by reason of the fact that one or more of the parties to the controversy were citizens or subjects of a state foreign to both Porto Rico and the United States, the party who, over the objection of his adversary, successfully invoked that jurisdiction, will not now be heard to complain of its exercise.

Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 569, 583, 40 L. ed. 263, 267, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127.

The effect of the divorce for the adultery of the wife is simply to stop the further participation of the wife in the future conjugal profits which may be earned by the husband, and gives rise to the obligation of separating the interest of the husband and wife in the community property.

22 Mucius Scaevola, Com. on Civ. Code, pp. 374-377.

While costs in actions at law are governed by fixed and arbitrary rules, in equity the award or denial of costs is always in the discretion of the court (Riddle v. Mandeville, 6 Cranch, 86, 3 L. ed. 161), and courts of chancery in general follow the rule of the civil law,—victus victori in expensis condemnatus est,—and they decree the payment of costs by the unsuccessful to the successful party.

The provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 824, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 632, declaring that, "on a final hearing in equity," a docket fee of $20 may be allowed to the solicitor of the prevailing party, is not necessarily exclusive of other allowance by the court,—e. g., in cases of costs paid out of a fund in court.

Internal Improv. Fund v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527, 26 L. ed. 1157; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 28 L. ed. 915, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In the district court of Ponce, in October, 1891, through a representative (next friend), Juana Dastas, alleged to be a resident of Porto Rico and a married woman, commenced this suit against her husband, Tomas Garrozi y Pictri, as also against Juana Maria Gonzalez and Domingo Piazzi y Pictri, all three of whom were alleged to be residents of Porto Rico. We shall hereafter speak of the plaintiff as the wife and the principal defendant, Garrozi; as the husband.

As far as essential to be considered, the facts alleged, the cause of action relied on, and the proceedings had, up to the pleading by the defendants, are summarized as follows: The marriage took place in May, 1886, and as no antenuptial contract was made, their property relations were governed by the community system under the Code of Porto Rico. They lived together until November, 1898, when they separated, and the wife, under the direction of the husband, resided in a house provided by him. There she lived until December, 1899, when, owing to the failure of the husband to support her, she removed to Ponce.

The husband in 1901 sued for a divorce on the ground of *the wife's adultery and she, [68] by a reconventional demand (cross bill), prayed for a divorce on the same ground, and because of cruel treatment. In this suit the court awarded the wife $75 a month alimony pendente lite. This not having been paid, the wife issued execution and realized from a sale of certain furniture one month's alimony. The remainder of the alimony up to the commencement of this suit, aggregating $225 and 598 pesos, Porto Rican currency, the amount of legal expenses incurred by the wife in defending the divorce suit, and which had been allowed by the court, were yet unpaid. These amounts were uncollected because of the apparent insolvency of the husband. This insolvency was, however, only apparent, because there was a large amount of real and personal property belonging separately to the husband, or to the community, which the husband had, with the object of defrauding the wife, apparently disposed of by simulated transfers to the defendants Maria Gonzalez and Domingo Piazzi. The character and extent of this property were detailed as well as the various alleged simulated contracts, which it was averred had been made concerning the same. The prayer was that the contracts in question be set aside as mere fraudulent simulations, so as to enable the wife to exert her rights therein or thereagainst. The court admitted the petition to be filed and authorized the suit by the wife in the name of her representative or next friend. Before the day for pleading, the husband, alleging himself to be a citizen and subject of France, and that by operation of law the wife was of the same nationality, obtained an order for removal to the court below. Subsequently the two other defendants also prayed and were allowed a removal. On the filing of the record a motion to remand was made, based upon the fact that the husband's petition for removal contained no averment of residence. The court refused to remand and allowed an amendment alleging the residence of the husband to be in France.

Without attempting to state the many pleadings which *followed, the ultimate is [69] suits and the action of the court may be thus summarized: The petition of the wife was amended and reformed, authority being given by the court for the prosecution of the suit on her behalf by her representative or next friend. The petition in its final form was less prolix, and the allegation was added that the divorce proceeding between the husband and wife, referred to in the original petition, had gone to the supreme court of Porto Rico, and had by that court been finally decided, decreeing a divorce in favor of the husband. The prayer for relief was amended to conform to this situation; that is, it was prayed not only that the simulated contracts be set aside, but, further, that the community be liquidated, and the wife be awarded her share. The defense, as finally made on the part of the husband, as well as the other defendants, was an averment of the good faith and reality of all the contracts alleged to have been simulated. Moreover, the husband denied that there was community property, because nothing had been acquired during marriage which fell into the community, and because all the property which he possessed, even assuming that the assailed contracts were simulated, was separate property, either owned at the date of the marriage or thereafter acquired as a reinvestment of separate funds. It was, moreover, specially alleged that, as the divorce had been decreed against the wife on account of her adultery, she had forfeited all her interest in the community if any community property existed. Besides, the right of the wife to compel the liquidation of the community, even if she had not forfeited her right to a participation in the community assets, if any, was specially challenged.

The court appointed an examiner, who took and reported the testimony. Under a stipulation and order the cause was referred for report to a special master upon the facts and law. Before the master reported the wife prayed a receiver and an injunction, upon averments that the two defendants, to whom it was charged the property of the husband had been seemingly [70] *transferred or encumbered by simulated contracts, were dealing with the same so as to dissipate the estate and frustrate the relief prayed. A receiver was appointed, and the defendants were enjoined as prayed. The report of the special master, as to both the facts and law, substantially sustained the claims of the wife. Exceptions taken to the report were overruled and the report was confirmed. The court below adopted the facts found by the master and reiterated them in the findings in the nature of a special verdict, made for the purposes of the present appeal. By those findings all the charges of fraudulent simulation relied upon by the wife were found to be true, and, as a legal conclusion, all the property and assets to which the simulated contracts related were held to belong to the husband. Concerning the community and its liquidation, it was found, as a matter of fact, that the wife, at the time of the marriage, had no property, and subsequently acquired none, whilst the husband, at the time of the marriage, was the owner of various assets and described property, which was found to have been of the value, at the time of the marriage, of $71,500. The net property of the husband at the date of the dissolution of the marriage, including all reinvestments or avails of his separate property existing at the time of the marriage, and, allowing for community debts, was found by the court to be $77,000, thus leaving $5,500 as the acquêt or gain of the community, which was subject to be divided equally between the husband and wife. In addition, the court found that during the marriage the husband had spent, out of the revenues of his property, which revenues fell into the community, the sum of $47,000, during various trips made by him to Europe, and that these expenditures by the husband, from revenue which belonged to the community, were unreasonable to the extent of $22,000. From the facts thus found, as a matter of law, it was concluded that the $22,000 should be treated as an existing acquêt of the community, subject to be equally divided between the parties. The sum, therefore, of the community property for distribution, was *fixed at $27,500, the wife's [71] share, therefore, being $13,750. The court in its final decree annulled the simulated contracts, and decreed the property to which such contracts related to belong to the husband, and, fixing the sum of the community as above stated, a money decree was entered in favor of the wife for her share thereof,—$13,750. The decree reserved the right of the court to make such further orders as might be necessary, the receiver was directed to make full report, and a special master was appointed with power to sell the property in the custody of the receiver, if necessary, to pay the decree in favor of the wife. On the day after the entry of the final decree, on motion of the wife, the court passed a further decree in her favor, directing the payment to her, first, of the sum of $598, awarded to her by the district court of Ponce as her expenses in the divorce litigation, and the sum of $133.50; interest thereon to the date of the decree; second, the sum of $885, due for alimony awarded by the district court of Ponce to the date of the decree of divorce; and, third, the sum of $1,500, on account of solicitors' fees in the pending litigation,—a total of $3,116.50.

The receiver was directed to pay these several sums out of any money in his hands, and, in default of sufficient funds, execution to enforce against the husband was authorized.

The court, in its findings, has stated the rulings which were excepted to with respect to the admission or rejection of evidence, accompanied with such portions of the evidence as it deemed adequate to enable a review of such rulings.

Before coming to the merits we must dispose of three preliminary questions. First. The suggestion of a want of jurisdiction in this court is without merit. Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149, 48 L. ed. 385, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247. Second. The contention that the court below was without jurisdiction, and that the cause, therefore, should not be passed upon on the merits, but should be remanded to the court below, with directions to remand to the local court from which it was removed, is also without merit. That the case was within the [72] original jurisdiction of *the United States district court of Porto Rico clearly results from the broad grant of jurisdiction conferred by the 3d section of the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 953, chap. 812), reading as follows:

"That the jurisdiction of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico in civil cases shall, in addition to that conferred by the act of April twelfth, nineteen hundred [31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191], extend to and embrace controversies where the parties, or either of them, are citizens of the United States, or citizens or subjects of a foreign state or states, wherein the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest or costs, the sum or value of one thousand dollars."

The assertion of the want of jurisdiction in the court below rests, however, not upon a denial of power in that court to have entertained the controversy if the suit had been originally brought there, but upon the contention that, as a defendant other than the husband was a resident and citizen of Porto Rico, the cause was improperly removed from the local court. And the proposition goes to the extent of insisting that such want of jurisdiction may be asserted by the person who procured the removal, who resisted the effort to remand, and when the want of jurisdiction is only suggested after trial and final decree. The premise upon which these contentions are based is a portion of the text of the 34th section of what is known as the Foraker act (act of April 12, 1900, 31 Stat. at L. 84, chap. 191) which provides that—

"The laws of the United States relating to appeals, writs of error and certiorari, removal of causes, and other matters and proceedings as between the courts of the United States and the courts of the several states, shall govern in such matters and proceedings as between the district court of the United States [for Porto Rico] and the courts of Porto Rico."

Without so deciding, we concede, for the sake of the argument, that where the power to remove from a state court to a court of the United States is restricted by statute to a certain class of cases, a removal operated contrary to the statute *does not divest [73] the state court of jurisdiction, and, therefore, does not confer jurisdiction on the court to which the cause has been wrongfully removed, even although the cause may have been one of which such court might have taken jurisdiction originally. So, also, we concede for argument sake that in such a case the party wrongfully procuring the removal may escape the effect of a judgment rendered against him in the forum to which he voluntarily resorted, by suggesting after judgment the want of power to remove. But these concessions are not decisive of the case at bar, because of the extent of the jurisdiction conferred upon the United States court in Porto Rico by the act of 1901; that is to say, in consequence of the enlarged character of the jurisdiction conferred by that act, and the obvious departure which it manifests from the principles controlling the jurisdiction of a United States court as contradistinguished from a state court, we do not think the rule which demarks the line between the courts of the United States and state courts within the removal act should be held applicable to Porto Rico to the extent which might have obtained had the act of 1901 not been enacted. We conclude, therefore, that where a case is removed from the local Porto Rican court to the United States court, over which case the latter court would have had jurisdiction as to all the parties impleaded if the case had been there originally brought, even though the removal was irregular, the party who caused the removal cannot be heard, after judgment against him, to assert that the United States court was wanting in jurisdiction solely on the ground that the case was erroneously removed.

3. The objections to rulings made by the court in admitting and rejecting evidence are numerous. We shall not undertake to review them in detail or state at length our conclusions concerning them, contenting ourselves with saying that, after examining them all, we think they are without foundation, either because fundamentally unsound or because the objections concerned not the admissibility but the mere weight of *the [74] evidence offered or rejected, or because the record is not in such a condition as to enable us to overcome the strong impression we form that no prejudicial error resulted from the rulings complained of.

The conclusive effect of the facts found below narrows the issues. Thus the finding that the contracts were fraudulent simulations sustains the legal conclusion that the property to which the contracts related belonged to the husband, and therefore that subject is put out of view. Again, as the facts found concerning the sum of the property owned by the husband at the date of the marriage and the amount owned by him at the date of the dissolution of the community by the divorce sustain the conclusion that the difference between the two was an acquêt or gain of the community, to be divided equally, that question need not be further considered. In order, therefore, to dispose of the entire controversy, it will be necessary to decide only four questions: First, whether the wife, as a consequence of the judgment of divorce rendered against her, had forfeited her interest in the community, if there was any such interest. Second, whether error of law was committed in crediting the community with $22,000, the amount expended by the husband for traveling and medical expenses during the years 1889 and 1890, and during the years 1895 to 1898, both inclusive, upon the ground that such expenditures were unreasonable and extravagant, and therefore created an obligation on his part to return the amount to the community as an acquêt or gain thereof. Third, if there was due the wife any amount on account of her interest in the community, and such interest had not been forfeited, was she entitled, as a divorced wife, to provoke a liquidation of the community, and to a decree in her favor for the amount, if any, of her interest in such community? Fourth, did the court below err as a matter of law, in addition to giving the wife a decree for her interest in the community, in allowing her the sum of the alimony pendente lite decreed in her favor by the local court up to [75] the date of the divorce, the sum of her *expenses in the divorce suit which had been approved by the local court, and an additional sum of $1,500 for the services of the counsel of the wife in the cause.

1. It may be conceded that, by the law of Spain, prior to the adoption of the Spanish Civil Code, the wife against whom a judgment of divorce for adultery was decreed forfeited all right to her share in the community existing between herself and husband. But that rigorous rule was not incorporated into the Spanish Civil Code, which was in force in the island of Porto Rico when the territory was acquired. Spanish Code of 1889, War Department translation, title 4, § 5, articles 67 et seq. Such forfeiture, moreover, did not obtain in the Porto Rican Civil Code, adopted after the acquisition of the island by the United States, and which was in force in that island when the decree of divorce which was here involved was rendered. Porto Rico, Civil Code 1902, title 5, chap. 5, §§ 173, 174. To the contrary, the Code of 1889 provided that, in case of a divorce for adultery, the guilty spouse should forfeit or lose, not his or her interest in the community, but "all that may have been given or promised him or her by the innocent one, or by any other person, in consideration for the latter." Code of 1889, art. 73, ¶ 3. And a similar provision was incorporated in the Code of 1902, as follows:

"The party against whom the judgment is rendered (of divorce) shall forfeit to the party obtaining the divorce all gifts which the other party may have conferred upon such party during the marriage, or when the same was contracted, and the innocent party shall retain everything which has been acquired from the other." Sec. 174.

Both these provisions were plainly intended to depart from the rule of forfeiture prevailing in the more ancient Spanish law and to incorporate the rule of limited forfeiture, as existing in the Louisiana (article 156) and Napoleon (article 299) Codes; a similar provision to which has been enacted in the codes of some other countries, which have modeled their *codes on the Code Napoleon [76] 1 De Saint-Joseph, Concordance, pp. 24 et seq. This conclusion is reinforced by the consideration that, at the time of the adoption of the Spanish and Porto Rican Codes, the provision of the Napoleon Code on that subject had been conclusively determined not to operate a forfeiture of the community property. See authorities collected in note to article 299 in the Fuzier-Herman edition of the Code Napoleon, Paris, 1896.

The argument advanced in the brief of one of the counsel, that, despite the change in the Code to which we have referred, the old rule of forfeiture should be held to obtain, because of the provision of article 1417 of the Code of 1889 and § 1330 of the Code of 1902, saying: "The spouse who, by bad faith, has been the cause of the nullity (of the marriage), shall not have a share in the common property," rests upon a mere misconception. The provision relied on in both the Codes relates not to the dissolution of a marriage by a decree of divorce or for any other cause, but to the recognition of the nullity of a seeming marriage for causes which have operated to prevent the marriage from having ever existed. In other words, the distinction between the article relied upon and the other articles to which we have previously referred is that which obtains between a decree of a court dissolving a marriage which has existed and a decree establishing that there never had been a marriage to dissolve. The pertinency of this distinction again becomes manifest when it is observed that a similar distinction and consequence exists in the Code Napoleon.

2. Owing to an apparent ambiguity in the finding of fact concerning the liability of the husband to the community for $22,000 it becomes necessary, before reviewing the legal conclusion of the court below on that subject, to fix the exact meaning of the facts found upon which that legal conclusion was based. As a preliminary to so doing we reproduce in the margin† the finding of fact on the subject, as well as the legal conclusion drawn by the court therefrom.

[77] *Whilst there are expressions in the finding referred to which, isolatedly considered, might lead to the inference that it was the intention of the court to find that the husband had not expended the money, but had concealed it or yet had it in his possession, we think the context of the finding and the result of the other findings establish that the court intended to and did find that the money was expended, and that the legal conclusion as to the liability of the husband to the community was arrived at because it was deemed that the expenditure of the money by the husband was unreasonable and extravagant. We say this results from the context, because, taking the whole finding, it seems to us clear that the purpose of the court was as stated. We say also it results from the other findings, because the facts found as to the sum of the property owned by the husband at the time of the marriage *and the sum possessed by [78] him at the time of the divorce exclude, by necessary implication, the possession by the husband of the $22,000.

It is provided in both the Code of 1889 (article 1412) and the Code of 1902 (§ 1327) the husband "is the administrator of the conjugal partnership." By the first of these Codes (article 1413) this power of the husband was so complete as to endow him with authority to sell and encumber, not only all the movable, but also the immovable, property of the community. In the second Code, however (§ 1328), the power of the husband to sell or encumber the immovable property is not given, except a contract to that effect is made with the consent of the wife. And by both Codes all contracts of the husband in violation of definite provisions of the Code or in fraud of the rights of the wife are made null and void against the wife or her heirs. Code of 1889, art. 1413; Code of 1902, § 1328. The provisions in both Codes making the husband the administrator of the community are here again like unto those obtaining in other countries where the community system prevails. Code Napoleon, art. 1421; Louisiana Code, art. 2404. The question, therefore, is this: Is the power of the husband, as the head and master and administrator of the community, in its nature so restricted that, in the absence of express limitation, he can, after the dissolution of the community, be called to account and compelled to return to the community money which he has actually expended during the existence of the community, because, in the judgment of a court, such expenses may be deemed to have been not suitable to his situation in life, extravagant, or even reckless? To answer this question in the affirmative would be to destroy the whole fabric of the community system as prevailing, not only under the Spanish and Porto Rican Code, but as ob-

†That said defendant Garrozi made several trips to Europe during the continuance of his marital partnership, and spent large sums of money by reason thereof, which were, as near as can be determined from his testimony, the following amounts:

In 1889	$10,000.00
In 1890	7,000.00
In 1895	5,000.00
In 1896-98	25,000.00

Total $47,000.00

Said defendant claims in his testimony that these trips to Europe and the expenditure of these large sums of money was rendered necessary by reason of his serious and continued illness. But said testimony is not substantiated by that of any other credible witness, while, if true, it could have been easily proven by the testimony of some of the physicians who attended him, and who must have had full knowledge of his condition during these times. But even granting that the journeys were necessary to defendant's health, the court is forced to the conclusion, either that said defendant has exaggerated the amounts expended or that such extravagant expenditures were not either necessary or reasonable, and hence not a proper charge against the property of the marital partnership.

It seems that twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000.00) would have been a liberal expenditure under the circumstances for a man in defendant Garrozi's condition of life.

The court therefore concludes that twenty-two thousand dollars ($22,000.00) of the amount should be charged against the separate property of defendant Garrozi.

taining in those countries of the continent of Europe and here where that system prevails. We need not consider whether the community was derived from the Roman law, from an express provision of the early [79] Saxon law, or from *the ancient customary law of the continent. For, however derived, the very foundation of the community and its efficacious existence depends on the power of the husband, during the marriage, over the community, and his right, in the absence of fraud or express legislative restriction, to deal with the community and its assets as the owner thereof. The purpose of the community, as expounded from the earliest times, whilst securing to the wife, on the dissolution of the marriage, an equal portion of the net results of the common industry, common economy, and common sacrifice, was yet, as a matter of necessity, during the existence of the community, not to render the community inept and valueless to both parties by weakening the marital power of the husband as to his expenditures and contracts, so as to cause him to be a mere limited and consequently inefficient agent. See a very full citation of authority in Journal du Palais Repertoire, verbo, "Communauté," pp. 739, 741 et seq.

In determining the authority of the husband as to the common property two considerations are essential: The character of the right of the wife to the common property during the existence of the marriage, and the scope of the power of the husband during the same period. In speaking on the nature of the right of the wife, Troplong says:

"The rights of the wife are dormant during the marriage, because the husband is charged to watch over and conduct the affairs of the conjugal society. But this right, which is inert as long as the husband is at the head of the affairs of the community, becomes active when the marital authority ceases to exist. The wife is like a silent partner, whose rights arise and reveal themselves when the partnership ceases." 2 Troplong, Contrat de Mariage, p. 136, No. 855.

Under the law of France prior to the Napoleon Code the extent of the power of the husband as to the community property was so great that it was considered in theory that the rights of the wife in or to the community were not merely dormant during the marriage, but had no existence what-

[80] ever. *In other words, the doctrine was upheld that the wife, during the existence of the community, had but a mere hope or expectancy, and hence no interest whatever in the property or goods of the community until the community was dissolved. Dumoulin, Sur Part. 25, Cout. de Paris. And from this arose the expression that the community was a partnership which only commenced on its termination. As the result, however, of the right conferred upon the wife by some of the customs of France before the Code Napoleon, and also expressly given by that Code (Code Napoleon, 1443 et seq.), to procure a decree dissolving the community when the affairs of the husband were in such disorder as to entail risk upon the wife, it is the generally accepted doctrine under the Napoleon Code that the wife's interest in the community prior to the dissolution is subsisting, though dormant. But this implies no limit on the power of the husband whilst the community exists. In other words, although the right to a separation of property arises from the reckless conduct of the husband, thus affording a means of guarding against the consequences of such conduct in the future, the right to ask a separation does not give rise to the inference that the husband, after the dissolution of the community, may be held to account for money expended by him during the community because of reckless or extravagant conduct. Speaking on this subject, Rodiere and Pont (Traité du Contrat de Mariage) say (p. 596, No. 657):

"The husband can then sell [the immovable property of the community] by onerous title; he has in this respect an absolute power, and if, in disregard of the confidence which the law reposes in him, the husband, in disposing of the property, is impelled by the wish to indulge extravagant tastes or to provide for reckless dissipation, and not by the purpose of protecting the rights of the wife, the latter, even under these circumstances, has no recourse but to obtain a judicial termination of the community."

Referring to the power of the husband over the community, Troplong says:

*"This power of the husband, which ef-[81] faces the personality of the wife, and which is manifested by the name of lord and master of the community, given to the husband,—this power, which seems like unto an absolute sovereignty,—exists as well in the relations of the spouses between themselves as in their dealings between third parties. In effect, the husband can dissipate the goods of the community; he can lose, destroy, break, and dilapidate. Maritus potest perdere, dissipare, abuti; this is an elementary axiom of the Palace (of Justice). The wife has no right to call the husband to account, no damage to obtain for his acts. Hence it is true, indeed, that the husband is more than an administrator: he is an administrator com libera." Ibid. p. 138, No. 158.

See, to the same effect, the copious collection of authority found under article 1421 of the Code Napoleon, in the Fuzier-Herman edition of that Code, supra.

That there is a substantial similarity between the law of the community under the Napoleon Code and the law on the same subject of Spain, prior to the Civil Code, and as now existing under that and the Code of Porto Rico, was conceded in the argument of the appellee. Indeed, that argument refers to and rests on some of the provisions of the Napoleon Code. Besides, when it is considered that the ancient Spanish law, and that law as formulated in the Code of 1889 or in the Porto Rican Code of 1902, confers no authority upon the wife to obtain a judicial dissolution of the community merely because of the disorder of the husband's affairs, it follows that the power of the husband under the Spanish system is in principle more extensive than it is under the Code Napoleon and the law of the countries which have followed that Code. The practical identity of the husband's general authority, as head and master of the community, under the law of Louisiana, the Code Napoleon, and the Spanish law, was clearly expounded by the supreme court of Louisiana, in Guice v. Lawrence, 2 La. Ann. 226, as follows:

[82] "The laws of Louisiana have never recognized a title in the *wife during marriage to one half of the acquêts and gains. The rule of the Spanish law on that subject is laid down by Febrero with his usual precision. The ownership of the wife, says that author, is revocable and fictitious during marriage. As long as the husband lives and the marriage is not dissolved, the wife must not say that she has gananciales, nor is she to prevent the husband from using them, under the pretext that the law gives her one half. But, soluto matrimonio, she became irrevocably the owner of one undivided half, in the manner provided by law for ordinary joint ownership. The husband is, during marriage, real y verdadero dueño de todos, y tiene en el efecto de su dominio irrevocable. Febrero, Adic. tomo 1 y 4, pt. 2d, bk. 1st, chap. 4, ¶ 1, nos. 29 and 30; Pothier, Communauté, p. 35 and following; 12 Toullier, chap. 2, nos. 22 to 31; 14 Duranton, Droit Français, p. 281 and following; 10 Dalloz, Jurisp. p. 198 and following.

"The provisions of our Code on the same subject are the embodiment of those of the Spanish law, without any change. The husband is head and master of the community, and has power to alienate the immovables which compose it by an encumbered title, without the consent or permission of his wife. Civil Code, art. 2373."

380

True it is that in the Porto Rican Code of 1902 there was inserted a provision, previously commented on (§ 1328), limiting the power of the husband to dispose of the immovable property of the community without the consent of the wife. But this express limitation as to one particular class of property, by inverse reasoning, is a reaffirmance of the power of the husband as head and master of the community in all other respects. The contention that because both by the Code of 1889 and of 1902 acts done by the husband as head and master of the community in fraud of the wife shall be void, therefore the expenses of the husband made during the community are subject to be reviewed on the dissolution of the community because of their unreasonable character, is without merit. The fraud referred to of necessity relates to acts done by the *husband beyond his lawful au-[83]thority, or which, if within his authority, have been done for the purpose of enriching himself or his separate estate or some third person, and which, therefore, whilst seemingly acts of community administration, are really not of that character.

3. The contention that the wife, even after the dissolution of the marriage, was without power to obtain the liquidation of the community and a payment to her of her share thereof, is based upon what is asserted to be the correct interpretation of articles 73, 1733, 1434, and 1435 of the Code of 1889. By these articles, it is insisted, where the dissolution of the marriage has been decreed because of the fault of one of the parties, the separation of property does not follow as a legal right in favor of the party for whose wrong conduct the divorce has been decreed, and may only be allowed by a court at the request or option of the one in whose favor the decree was rendered. And it is, moreover, insisted that if the divorce has been rendered in favor of a husband and against a wife for her fault, and a separation of property has been thereafter decreed at the instance of the husband, the power of the husband to administer the wife's share of the community remains whilst her interest in future acquêts or gains disappears. But this reduces itself to the contention that in the case stated the community is dissolved, yet continued. But whilst this reduction may point to the want of coherency in the proposition, it is no reason why the Code should not be enforced, if so it is plainly written. We do not stop to analyze the texts of the Code of 1889, relied on, for we think they are not controlling, even if they have the peculiar meaning contended for. We so conclude because of a change made by the Code of 1902. As we have already said, we are of the opinion that that Code was in effect at the date of the rendering of the divorce decree. Now, that Code not only eliminated the provisions of article 73 of the Code of 1889, relied on, but substituted a wholly different provision, directly repugnant to the contention we are considering. The provision [84] referred to is § 173 of the Code of 1902, saying: "A divorce carries with it a complete dissolution of all matrimonial ties and the division of all property and effects between the parties to the marriage." The argument made in the brief of one of the counsel that, even although the wife was entitled to a liquidation of the community and to a decree for her share, the court below erred in giving a money judgment in her favor, because in any event it could only have lawfully awarded an aliquot share of the community property subject to be subsequently realized by a partition in kind or by licitation (sale), is unsound. As to the merit of the contention, if any, as a general proposition, we are not called upon in this case to express an opinion. We say this because, as a necessary result of the findings below, all the property either belonged to the husband at the date of the marriage or was afterwards acquired by him as a reinvestment of funds derived from such property owned by him at the marriage. It follows, therefore, that the rights of the wife arose simply either from an increased value of property or assets brought by the husband into marriage, or as a result of the falling into the community of the revenues of the property of the husband. Under these circumstances we think the decree below was right.

204 U. S.

4. The amount of the decree for alimony pendente lite and for expenses incurred by the wife in the divorce suit had been sanctioned by the local court and were binding upon the husband. We see no reason, therefore, why the court below should not have allowed those items. So far as the sum of $1,500 for counsel fees in the pending litigation, which the court allowed as a charge against the husband, we have been referred to no authority sustaining the right to allow it, and our own researches have enabled us to discover no sanction for such an award.

It follows that whilst the court below was right in allowing the wife the sum of $2,750 as her share of the acquêts and gains of the community as established by the findings of fact, the court was wrong in allowing the $22,000, and the $1,500 *attorney's fee. The decree below must therefore be reversed and the cause be remanded with directions to enter a decree for the $2,750 and the alimony and expenses incurred in [85] the divorce suit with the approval of the court as previously allowed, but rejecting the claim for $22,000 and $1,500, the costs of this court to be borne by the appellee and those of the court below by the appellants. Reversed and remanded.

CHARLES S. ELDER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF COLORADO
ON THE INFORMATION OF GEORGE
STIDGER, the District Attorney of the Second Judicial District of the State of Colorado, ON THE RELATION OF CHARLES W. BADGLEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 85-89.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

A contest over a state office, dependent for its solution exclusively upon the application of the Constitution of the state or upon a mere construction of a provision of a state law, involves no possible Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court.

[No. 132.]

Argued December 13, 14, 1906. Decided
January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment in favor of the relator in a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto to test the title to a state office, entered by that court after reversing the judgment of the District Court of the City and County of Denver in that State, which sustained a demurrer to the complaint and entered judgment for the defendant. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 34 Colo. 197, 86 Pac. 250.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This was a proceeding, in the nature of quo warranto, brought in a district (state) court of Colorado, to test, as between conflicting claimants (Charles W. Badgley and Charles S. Elder), the title to the office of NOTE.—On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

county treasurer of the city and county of Denver. The relator (Badgley) relied upon a general election held pursuant to the general statutes of Colorado on November 8, 1904, while the defendant (Elder) claimed to be the legal incumbent of the office by virtue of his election to the office of treasurer of the city and county of Denver in May, 1904, under authority of the charter of said city and county of Denver. The question presented for decision was whether the election held in May, 1904, [86] under the charter, of officers to perform *the duties required of county officers in the city and county of Denver, was lawful, or whether such officers should have been voted for under the general statutes of the state at the election held in November, 1904. A determination of this question made necessary a consideration of certain provisions of article 20 of the state Constitution, providing for the creation, from the old county of Arapahoe and the old city of Denver and other municipalities, of a new entity to be known as the city and county of Denver, and conferring authority to provide in the charter for the appointment or election of officers of such city and county. In particular, a construction was required of a clause providing that "every charter shall designate the officers who shall respectively perform the acts and duties required of county officers to be done by the Constitution or the general laws, as far as applicable." The district court sustained a demurrer to the complaint and entered judgment for the defendant. This judgment was reversed by the supreme court of the state, upon the authority of People ex rel. Miller v. Johnson (86 Pac. 233) and judgment was entered in that court in favor of the relator (86 Pac. 250), deciding in effect that the charter provision under which defendant claimed was repugnant to the Constitution of Colorado. The case was then brought here.

Messrs. Charles R. Brock and Robert H. Elder argued the cause, and, with Mr. Milton Smith, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Colorado, in amending her Constitution, exercised an authority under the United States.

1 Burgess, Political Science & Comparative Const. Law, p. 89; 1 Wilson's Works, 321-325; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 403, 404, 4 L. ed. 600, 601; Davis, International Law, 32, 33; Black, Const. Law, 16-26; Farrar, Const. 37; 2 Curtis, History of U. S. Const. 71-74, 520, 521; Bliss, Sovereignty, 73, 74; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 324, 4 L. ed. 97, 102; Van Holst, Const. Law, pp. 39-44; Miller, Const. pp. 38-58; Abbott, 382

Judge & Jury, pp. 4-7; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581; Woolsey, International Law, §§ 36, 37.

In this case (a) the validity of that authority exercised was actually drawn in question; (b) it was decisive of the case and there was no other matter adjudged by the court below broad enough to sustain the judgment; and (c) the decision below was against the validity of that authority.

Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 48 L. ed. 1124, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767.

The question here is a judicial question; it is not one for the political departments of government, but is properly in this court for decision.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 34, 12 L. ed. 581, 595; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 571, 572, 44 L. ed. 1198, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 36 L. ed. 103, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Re Duncan (Duncan v. McCall) 139 U. S. 449, 33 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L. ed. 227; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212.

The real lesson of the Civil War is that the people of the United States are sovereign; that their power is absolute and supreme, and that the states are merely local government, operating under and by the authority of the United States.

1 Burgess, Political Science & Comparative Const. Law, pp. 67, 98-108; McClain, Const. Law, pp. 32, 33; Flanders, Const. pp. 34-36; Farrar, Const. chap. 39, §§ 569 et seq; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. ed. 581; Walker, Making of Nation, pp. 20-30, 37, 38; Burgess, Reconstruction & the Const. (discussing the state in the Federal system), chap. I. et seq; 1 Curtis History of U. S. Const. pp. 364, 365, 367; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 404, 4 L. ed. 579, 601; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 187, 6 L. ed. 23, 68; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 441, 15 L. ed. 691, 715.

The whole of the above view is also justified by an examination of the Constitution of the United States. It is the only view that is justified by the Constitution. On no other theory can all of the provisions of the Constitution be rationally construed.

Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 449, 457, 470, 471, 1 L. ed. 440, 453, 456, 462, 463; Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 236, 237, 1 L. ed. 584, 585; 1 Davis, Rise & Fall of Confederate Government, p. 155; 2 Webster, Speeches, 8th ed. pp. 174-176.

Mr. Henry J. Hersey argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Counsel for plaintiff in error are utterly unable to point out where any Federal question was necessarily involved in the case below. The only part of the opinion that they refer to is the argumentative portion, which exposes the fallacy of both their position and argument. This is of no more effect in conferring jurisdiction on this court than arguments of counsel, which this court has always held could not be resorted to for the purpose of showing that a question of Federal cognizance was decided by the state court.

Gibson v. Chouteau, 8 Wall. 314, 19 L. ed. 317; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

The opinion of the supreme court of Colorado shows conclusively that the questions decided below were those relating to the conflict between the provisions of the charter of the city and county of Denver, a municipal corporation, and the state Constitution. Such questions and the decisions thereon are not reviewable by this court.

Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182, 42 L. ed. 998, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Missouri v. Dockery, 191 U. S. 165, 48 L. ed. 133, 63 L.R.A. 571, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53.

There are many Federal questions, even, upon which the state courts can pass, and over which the Federal courts have no right of review; such, for example, as the mere construction either of Federal or state laws.

Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Kennard v. Nebraska, 186 U. S. 304, 46 L. ed. 1175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879.

Even were a Federal question involved and decided by the state court, yet the decision against the plaintiff in error was also based upon independent grounds, not involving a Federal question, which were broad enough to sustain the judgment. Under such circumstances this court has uniformly dismissed the writ of error without considering the Federal question, because it has no jurisdiction.

Kennebec & P. R. Co. v. Portland & K. R. Co. 14 Wall. 23, 20 L. ed. 850; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

Even if we should accept the proposition of counsel for plaintiff in error that the opinion of the state court, holding that the charter provisions relied on were unconstitutional, was in effect a decision that they were repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States, yet that would not give this court jurisdiction to review, because not only is the charter in this instance not a state statute, but, if it were, the decision was against its validity. It is only when the decision is in favor of the validity of a state statute which is claimed to deprive a party of his rights under the Federal Constitution and laws that this court has jurisdiction.

Commonwealth Bank v. Griffith, 14 Pet. 56, 10 L. ed. 352; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. The Treasurer (Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Gardiner) 11 Wall. 204, 20 L. ed. 112; Missouri ex rel. Carey v. Andriano, 138 U. S. 496, 34 L. ed. 1012, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

Nor is a Federal question sufficiently shown by the fact that a state court, while declaring a statute to be in violation of the Federal Constitution, yet, by its judgment, gave effect to it, when the decision of the Federal question was not an essential element in determining the right adjudicated.

Rutland R. Co. v. Central Vermont R. Co. 159 U. S. 630, 40 L. ed. 284, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113.

It is well settled that, in order to raise a Federal question, general references to the Federal Constitution or even to specific articles of the Constitution are not sufficient. It is only by the most general references that plaintiff in error attempts to point out the alleged violation of the Federal Constitution.

Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

Moreover, we shall search the record in vain in an endeavor to find anything showing that any Federal question was raised and decided below. The fact that plaintiff in error in his assignment of errors has sought to raise Federal questions cannot help him. An assignment of errors cannot be availed of to import questions into a cause which the record does not show were raised, and properly raised, in the court below, and rulings asked thereon, so as to give this court jurisdiction.

Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 41 L. ed. 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112.

It would seem that this case is either one of those in which, under the settled rule in this court, the writ of error must be dismissed because the Federal question asserted is manifestly lacking all color of merit (Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 38, 48 L. ed. 328, 331, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224), or one in which the Federal question asserted was not, in the sense which would give this court jurisdiction, raised or involved below.

New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

Authorities are not required to support the general proposition that, in the consideration of the Constitution or laws of a state, this court follows the construction given to those instruments by the highest court of the state.

Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 592, 42 L. ed. 865, 870, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

Even though, in the opinion of this court, the court below erred in its construction of the state Constitution and of the charter of Denver, and moreover, even though the views expressed by our supreme court should be in conflict with views expressed by this court in other cases (which we deny), yet neither of those facts, nor both of them, would give this court jurisdiction.

Bank of West Tennessee v. Citizens' Bank, 13 Wall. 432, 20 L. ed. 514; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 342, 343, 12 L. ed. 169, 181; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 455, 49 L. ed. 546, 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Newport Light Co. v. Newport, 151 U. S. 527, 538, 38 L. ed. 259, 262, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 410, 28 L. ed. 470, 474, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 518, 519, 41 L. ed. 1095, 1100, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665.

The Federal questions must not only have been actually raised and presented to the court below, but must also have been necessarily involved.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 286, 287, 23 L. ed. 709; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 285, 286, 34 L. ed. 700, 702, 703, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

The validity of an authority under the United States is not drawn in question, but, at most, if anything, only the construction and application of regulations of the exercise of such authority. This has been held by this court not to give it jurisdiction.

United States v. Lynch, supra; South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871.

Very similar questions, at least, so far as the jurisdiction of this court is concerned, were involved in two recent cases, in which the writs of error were dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Rose v. Kansas, 203 U. S. 580, ante, 326, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 203 U. S. 461, ante, 269, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The assignments of error are twenty-one in number. All of them rest upon the assumption that the supreme court of Colorado held that article 20 of the state Constitution, particularly §§ 2 and 3, were repugnant to the provision of the Constitution of the United States guaranteeing to every state a republican form of government and to the act of Congress known as the Colorado enabling act, and that by such ruling rights possessed by the people of the state of Colorado and rights vested in the people of the city and county of Denver were invaded. And upon the assumption that such rulings were made all the Federal questions relied on are based.

On behalf of the defendant in error it is insisted that the supreme court of Colorado did not decide any question under the Constitution of the United States, but merely disposed of the case before it upon its construction of the meaning of the provision of the state Constitution which was involved and upon the authority of a previous decision rendered by the Colorado court. It is not denied that in the course of the opinion of the supreme court of Colorado it was said that if the article of the state Constitution in question was susceptible of a contrary *construction to that [88] affixed to it by the court, it would be repugnant to the guaranty of a republican form of government, etc. This, it is said, was mere obiter, as the court considered and held the provision valid.

If we were to indulge in the hypothesis that the assumptions upon which the assignments of error rest were sustained by the record, and were besides to assume that, at the proper time and in the proper manner, it had been asserted that to hold article 20 invalid would be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, the case would yet not be within the purview of § 709, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). Under this section the power to review the judgment of a state court exists only in the following classes of cases: a. Where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against their validity; b. Where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of their validity; c. "Where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the Constitution, or any treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States."

It is plain that the case is not embraced within subdivision a. Nor can it be said to be embraced within subdivision b, for if we consider that the court below, instead of construing and upholding the constitutional provision in question, actually held it to be invalid because repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, such decision was against, and not in favor of, the validity of the article. Nor is the case embraced within subdivision c, for nowhere in the record does it appear that the plaintiff in error, specially or otherwise, set up or claimed in the courts of Colorado any title, right, privilege, or immunity under the Constitution of the United States.

Indeed, under the circumstances disclosed, if there had been an assertion of a right, title, privilege, or immunity under the Constitution of the United States it would [89] have been so frivolous *as not to afford a basis of jurisdiction, since it is foreclosed that a mere contest over a state office, dependent for its solution exclusively upon the application of the Constitution of a state or upon a mere construction of a provision of a state law, involves no possible Federal question. Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009. Whilst, when a state court has considered a Federal question, that fact may serve to elucidate whether a Federal issue properly arises for consideration by this court, that doctrine has no application to a case where the controversy presented is inherently not Federal, and incapable of presenting a Federal question for decision. Writ of error dismissed.

JACOB NEWMAN and Salmon O. Levinson, Surviving Partners of the Firm of Newman, Northrup, & Levinson, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

HARRY B. GATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89-95.)

Error to state court—decision of Federal question by highest state court.

There has been no decision of the Federal question in the highest court of the state in which a decision in the suit could be had, which is essential to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, where the highest state court dismissed an appeal in the suit because of a defect in the parties to such appeal.

[No. 137.]

Argued December 14, 17, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

NOTE.—On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

As to when writ of error may run to inferior state court—see note to Kentucky v. Powers, 50 L. ed. U. S. 633.

204 U. S.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a judgment dismissing, for a defect in parties, an appeal from a judgment of the Marion County Superior Court in favor of defendant in an action on a foreign judgment, such action having been removed into the Supreme Court for decision after the Appellate Court of that state had reversed the judgment below and ordered the cause remanded for a new trial. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 165 Ind. 171, 72 N. E. 638.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Jacob Newman, George Northrup, Jr., and S. O. Levinson commenced this action in the superior court of Marion county, Indiana, against the defendant in error, Harry B. Gates. Recovery of the sum of $1,400, was sought upon a judgment obtained by Newman and his coplaintiffs against Gates in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois. The defendant filed an answer in two paragraphs, but, as the defenses therein *asserted [90] were ultimately abandoned, they need not be detailed. A counterclaim was also filed, in which it was alleged that the plaintiffs were, and for more than two years had been, attorneys at law engaged in the practice of their profession at Chicago, Illinois, under the firm name of Newman & Northrup; that the Illinois judgment sued upon was founded upon a claim for legal services rendered to the defendant; that the services had been rendered in advising the defendant, as trustee, in and about the management of the property and assets of a corporation known as the American Motor Company while in course of administration in insolvency proceedings, and that the defendant had sustained damage to the extent of $2,000 by reason of a breach of duty alleged to have been committed by the plaintiffs in the course of their employment in failing to obtain an order of the court in the insolvency proceedings relieving the defendant from personal liability for attorney's fees, and providing for payment of his compensation, etc. It was also charged that the plaintiffs had been guilty of a breach or neglect of duty in connection with a sale of the trust property in the insolvency proceedings, whereby defendant had sustained damages in the sum of $2,500. A reply was filed to the counterclaim, in two paragraphs, one embracing a general denial and the other setting up the Illinois judgment as res judicata as to all the matters embraced in the counterclaim.

On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co., 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998, and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

In due course the case came on for trial and the plaintiffs recovered a judgment for the amount of their claim. The case was taken to the appellate court of Indiana. That court reversed the judgment and remanded the case for a new trial (18 Ind. App. 392, 46 N. E. 654), and for want of authority a petition for a writ of certiorari was denied by the supreme court of Indiana (150 Ind. 59, 49 N. E. 826). In the opinion of the appellate court, as also in a dissenting opinion, the character of the counterclaim and the question whether, as respects the matters therein set forth, the Illinois judgment was res judicata, were considered [91] at great length. Following an inspection *of the record of the Illinois action the court held that the counterclaim stated matters which constituted something more than a mere defense to the claim asserted in the Illinois action, that it could not be said that, under the plea of the general issue, interposed by the defendant in that action, the matters averred in the counterclaim were necessarily adjudicated, and that it was a question to be determined upon the trial whether in fact such matters had been theretofore litigated and determined. On the new trial the court held that certain of the issues made by the counterclaim and reply had been litigated in the Illinois action and that the Illinois judgment was res judicata as to such issues, but submitted to the jury the question of the alleged neglect of plaintiffs in failing in the insolvency proceedings to procure an order charging the trust estate with the fees in question and the compensation earned by defendant as trustee. And the court left it to the jury to determine, upon a preponderance of evidence, whether or not it was the law of Illinois that the failure of plaintiffs to procure such an order—if they did so fail—was a matter which was adjudicated in the Illinois action, whether evidence was introduced on such point or not, and the jury was instructed that, if such was the law of Illinois, recovery could not be had upon the counterclaim.

The second trial resulted in a verdict of $181.74 for the defendant Gates, that being the sum found to be due him in excess of the amount of the judgment sued upon. After the entry of judgment and before the taking of an appeal, George W. Northrup, Jr., one of the original plaintiffs, died. An appeal, however, was taken to the appellate court of Indiana by Jacob Newman and S. O. Levinson, describing themselves as surviving partners of the firm of Newman, Northrup, & Levinson. The personal representative of the deceased partner was not made a party to the appeal. The appellate court of Indiana overruled an objection to the sufficiency of the appeal and on the merits reversed the judgment and ordered the cause remanded for a new trial. On the petition of the *defendant Gates the supreme [92] court of Indiana removed the cause into that court for decision and subsequently dismissed the appeal, holding that, on account of the omission to make the personal representative of George W. Northrup, Jr., a coappellant, the appeal could not be determined upon the merits. 165 Ind. 171, 72 N. E. 638. A petition for a rehearing having been denied, the cause was brought here.

Messrs. Charles Martindale and S. S. Gregory argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

If the Federal right of immunity set up would require that judgment should have been rendered for the plaintiffs in error, that result could not be avoided merely by silence on the Federal question, and by placing the judgment on some principle of the local law. The constitutional grounds relied on must, if sustained, displace or supersede any principle of general or local law which, but for such grounds, might be sufficient for the complete determination of the rights of the parties.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. ed. 845, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 48 L. ed. 1124, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

Where the Federal question was properly set up and relied upon and was necessarily involved in the decision of the cause, although the state court was silent on the Federal question, and placed its judgment upon a point of local law, the necessary effect of which was to deny the Federal right and immunity specially set up and claimed, this court will not sustain a motion to dismiss or affirm, unless such Federal question is (1) wholly formal, or (2) so absolutely devoid of merit as to be frivolous, or (3) has been so explicitly foreclosed by a decision of this court as to leave no room for real controversy.

Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308; 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

The jurisdiction of this court is not defeated because it may appear upon examination of the Federal question that the decision upon the merits should be adverse to the plaintiffs in error.

Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, and West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, supra.

No particular form of words or phrases has ever been declared necessary in which the claim of Federal right must be asserted. It is sufficient if it appears from the record that such rights were specially set up and claimed in the state court in such manner as to bring them to the attention of that court. If, from the whole record, this court is able to see clearly that the title, right, privilege, and immunity under article 4, § 1, of the Constitution of the United States, requiring that full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state, was set up and claimed in the state court and relied upon by the plaintiffs in error, and that the necessary effect of the decision of the state court was to deny that right, the Federal question is sufficiently presented.

Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Braham, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. ed. 823, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 583, 46 L. ed. 1241, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 139 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

It is plain that, if Gates's counterclaim is not valid, but is sham and frivolous, as is most obvious, Northrup's personal representative is not a necessary party to the appeal. It is also obvious, we think, that if full faith and credit be given the judgment of the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, between the parties, Gates had no counterclaim. Hence, the decision of the court below necessarily involved the denial of the Federal right. Whether due faith and credit were denied by the state court to the judgment of the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, is a Federal question which this court has jurisdiction on writ of error to examine.

Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Harris v. Hardeman, 14 How. 334, 14 L. ed. 444; Jacobs v. Marks, and Huntington 204 U. S.

v. Attrill, supra; Jaster v. Currie, 198 U. S. 144, 49 L. ed. 988, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 48 L. ed. 1124, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

This court is not bound by the decision of the state court as to its (the state court's) own jurisdiction, if the ultimate determination of that inquiry involves a Federal right or immunity set up and relied on in the state court, merely because the state court has the power to decide as to its own jurisdiction.

D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Wilson v. Seligman, 144 U. S. 41, 36 L. ed. 338, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 541; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 30 L. ed. 992, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 513, 30 L. ed. 1159, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1262; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. ed. 462, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 47 L. ed. 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Plaintiffs in error ask that this court shall examine Gates's counterclaim and, looking into the whole record, say that after the conclusion of the trial between the parties in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, Gates had no vestige of a cause of action left unmerged in the judgment of that court, and nothing upon which to base a counterclaim when sued upon the Illinois judgment in the courts of Indiana; that the "full faith and credit" clause requires this conclusion, and that this conclusion destroys the foundation upon which the decision of the jurisdictional question by the supreme court of Indiana rests.

Atherton v. Atherton, 181 U. S. 155, 45 L. ed. 794, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

The court below, for the purpose of determining its jurisdiction, and to that end to ascertain who were the necessary parties to the appeal, had the power to look behind the mere paper case made by the pleading of a counterclaim by defendant in error. Pleadings must be bona fide; and if, from the record before it, the fact appeared that the counterclaim was a sham defense, entitled to no consideration, it could not affect the jurisdiction of that court founded upon the cause of action set up in the complaint to which the surviving partners of Newman, Northrup, & Levinson alone were necessary parties appellant. The allegations of the counterclaim did not preclude the court from examining as to whether it pleaded a valid cross demand to which the personal representative of Northrup was a necessary party.

M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 325, 10 L. ed. 177, 183; Thompson v. Whitman, and Atherton v. Atherton, supra; Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 45 L. ed. 804, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551; Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 45 L. ed. 807, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Andrews v. Andrews, Finney v. Guy, and Jaster v. Currie, supra.

The question of the force and effect of a judgment in the state wherein it was rendered as an adjudication between the parties, when raised in a foreign jurisdiction, is not a question of fact, upon which the verdict of a jury is conclusive.

Finney v. Guy, supra; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Williamson, 189 U. S. 122, 47 L. ed. 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

Mr. Edward E. Gates argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Albert Baker, Edward Daniels, and Lewis C. Walker, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Questions of practice and proceeding in state courts are for the exclusive determination of the tribunals of the state where they may arise.

Tripp v. Santa Rosa Street R. Co. 144 U. S. 130, 36 L. ed. 373, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 586, 12 L. ed. 1201, 1208.

Where the opinion of the state court is confined to the construction or interpretation of a state statute, and there is no contention that such statute conflicts with any right, privilege, or immunity preserved by the Federal Constitution, the opinion of the state supreme court is final, and the Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction to revise such opinion, whether it be erroneous or not.

M'Bride v. Hoey, 11 Pet. 167, 9 L. ed. 673; Nesmith v. Sheldon, 7 How. 812, 12 L. ed. 925; Grand Gulf R. & Bkg. Co. v. Marshall, 12 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 938.

This court has refused, in cases in which questions of a similar nature have arisen, to review the decision of the state tribunal.

Tripp v. Santa Rosa Street R. Co. 144 U. S. 130, 36 L. ed. 373, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Chappell Chemical & Fertilizer Co. v.

Sulphur Mines Co. 172 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 520, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268.

In this case the supreme court of Indiana in its decision proceeded upon the general principles of the jurisprudence of the state, and all the matters in the issue decided were questions of general law, without reference to any Federal question. This being so the Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the supreme court of Indiana even upon the suggestion made that, if the state court erred, it thereby deprived the plaintiffs in error of some safeguard insured by the Federal Constitution.

Sevier v. Haskell, 14 Wall. 15, 20 L. ed. 827; Palmer v. Marston (Worthy v. Marston) 14 Wall. 10-12, 20 L. ed. 826, 827; Hoyt v. Shelden (Hoyt v. Thompson) 1 Black, 521, 17 L. ed. 66.

The supreme court of Indiana in no way questioned the judgment of the Illinois court, and full faith and credit was not denied it.

Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 226, 39 L. ed. 128, 129, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 368, 37 L. ed. 203, 206, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 339, 47 L. ed. 839, 841, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

A motion has been filed to dismiss the writ of error or to affirm, and we proceed at once to its consideration. Several grounds are urged in argument in support of the motion, but we do not find it necessary to do more than consider an objection based upon the absence of a Federal question.

The errors assigned are as follows:

"The supreme court of Indiana erred in holding and deciding:

"1. That the counterclaim set up by appellee Gates, the defendant in the trial court, based upon a breach of the same contract of hiring, which was the basis of the action of the appellants against the appellee Gates in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, was not adjudicated by the judgment in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, and by so deciding denied to the judgment of the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, the force and effect which it has between the parties in the state of Illinois, wherein it was rendered, and denies full faith and credit to said judgment, contrary to and in violation of article 4, § 1, [93] of the Constitution of the United States.

"2. That the appellee's counterclaim being valid, and not merged and adjudicated by the judgment of the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, it was of a nature which survived against the personal representatives of a member of the partnership of Newman, Northrup, & Levinson, and that the personal representatives of the deceased partner were necessary parties to the appeal, and, not having been made parties, that neither the appellate court of the state of Indiana, nor the supreme court of the state of Indiana, has jurisdiction to determine the appeal, and the same must be dismissed, and judgment of dismissal was so rendered. Which final judgment of the supreme court necessarily involved the adjudication of the claim of the appellants to the protection of article 4, § 1, of the Constitution of the United States, "that full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings, of every other state," which adjudication was adverse to appellants' claim under said provision of the Constitution of the United States."

These assignments plainly import that the supreme court of Indiana, on dismissing the appeal, considered and decided a question which had been submitted to the jury on the trial; viz., whether the matters alleged in the counterclaim as the basis for a recovery over against the plaintiffs had or had not been concluded by the Illinois judgment sued upon by the plaintiffs. We do not so construe the opinion and decision of the court.

The appellate court of Indiana had held on the first appeal that the action of the trial court, in refusing to admit evidence in support of the counterclaim, because the Illinois judgment constituted res judicata, was error. It had further decided that the counterclaim was "based upon a breach of contract," and constituted an independent, affirmative cause of action in favor of the defendant, and that whether the questions therein involved were in fact adjudicated in [94] the Illinois action *was a question for the jury. As a result of this ruling evidence was introduced at the subsequent trial to establish what were the questions litigated and determined in the Illinois action and the extent to which, by the laws of Illinois, the judgment in that case possessed conclusive force.

Now, in the opinion delivered by the supreme court of Indiana, on dismissing the appeal, the court did not discuss or in any wise refer to the scope and conclusive effect of the Illinois judgment. Undoubtedly, the court, in view of the law of the case as declared on the first appeal, treated the counterclaim as containing allegations of actionable breaches of duty which might have formed the subject of an independent action, and it is likewise evident that the court was of opinion that the plaintiffs were bound to perfect their appeal from the judgment upon the counterclaim, upon the hypothesis that the counterclaim set forth a valid cause of action against three individuals, viz., the plaintiffs in the main action. But substantially the court only considered and disposed of a preliminary question as to its authority to pass upon the controverted questions contained in the record before it. It found that there were in the counterclaim averments which it had been held early in the litigation required to be submitted to a jury, that the record exhibited a recovery upon the counterclaim against three persons, and that one of such persons had died after the rendition of judgment against him and his associates. Construing the statutes of Indiana, the court held that the cause of action asserted in the counterclaim survived the death of the party deceased, against whom a recovery had been had, that such cause of action could have been revived against the personal representative of the deceased, and that the personal representative was a necessary party appellant, and, not having been made a coappellant and served with notice of the appeal, the court was without jurisdiction to pass upon the errors assigned upon the appeal. To give effect to the assignments of error we should be obliged to make the impossible ruling that, despite the overruling of a demurrer *to the counter-[95] claim by the trial court, and the decision in respect to that pleading made by the appellate court on the first appeal, a mere inspection of the counterclaim so plainly demonstrates that the pleading is destitute of merit that it should be held to have been the duty of the state court of last resort to have treated the pleading as a sham and to have disposed of the appeal upon the hypothesis that the counterclaim was non-existent.

The removal of the cause from the appellate court into the supreme court of Indiana vacated the decision of the former tribunal, and after transfer the case stood in the highest court of Indiana as though it had been appealed to that court directly from the trial court. Oster v. Broe, 161 Ind. 114, 64 N. E. 918. Had the appeal been properly taken it would have been the duty of the supreme court of Indiana to pass upon the questions presented by the record before it, including, it may be, a Federal question, based upon the due faith and credit clause of the Constitution, which, on various occasions, was pressed upon the attention of the trial court. In legal effect, however, the case stands as though no appeal had been prosecuted from the judgment rendered by the trial court. As the jurisdiction of this court to review the judgments or decree of state courts when a Federal question is presented is limited to the review of a final judgment or decree, actually or constructively deciding such question, when rendered by the highest court of a state in which a decision in the suit could be had, and as, for the want of a proper appeal, no final judgment or decree in such court has been rendered, it results that the statutory prerequisite for the exercise in this case of the reviewing power of this court is wanting.

Writ of error dismissed.

[96]*J. B. ORCUTT COMPANY, Charles Dunean, Charles H. Dauchy Company, and Charles Dunean, Trustee, Petitioners,
v.
CHARLES H. GREEN et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 96-103.)

Bankruptcy—validity of general order—filing claim.

1. The Supreme Court of the United States was empowered by the provision of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 554, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3434), § 30, that all necessary rules, forms, and orders as to procedure and for carrying the act into force and effect shall be prescribed, and may be amended from time to time, by that court, to provide by general orders in bankruptcy No. 21, that proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred.

Bankruptcy—filing claim with trustee.

2. The presentation and delivery of proof of claim to the trustee in bankruptcy within a year after the adjudication is a sufficient filing within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 561, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3443), § 57, when read in connection with general orders in bankruptcy No. 21, providing that proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred.

Bankruptcy—filing claim—trustee's own claim.

3. A trustee in bankruptcy cannot file with himself his proof of his own claim against the bankrupt estate, nor will the delivery of such claim to his attorney, to be filed with the referee, be deemed the equivalent of a delivery to such referee.

[No. 116.]

Argued December 6, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review an order reversing an order of the District Court for the Northern District of New York, which, reversing the determination of a referee in bankruptcy, directed that certain claims against the bankrupt estate should be filed as of the date when delivered to the trustee. Order of the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and that of the District Court modified by refusing the filing of the proof of claim of the trustee himself, and as so modified affirmed.

See same case below, 70 C. C. A. 101, 137 Fed. 517.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This case comes here upon return to a writ of certiorari, issued by this court to the circuit court of appeals of the second circuit. It is a proceeding in bankruptcy, and the question involved is one in regard to the sufficiency of the filing of certain proofs of claims against the bankrupts' estate.

The facts are these: Messrs. Ingalls Brothers were adjudicated bankrupts in proceedings in the district court of the United States for the northern district of New York on the 3d day of December, 1902. Soon thereafter one Charles Dunean was appointed trustee, and on the 19th day of December, 1902, he duly verified a proof of claim in his own behalf for $4,171, admitting an offset of $327. On the 1st of April, 1903, the J. B. Orcutt Company duly verified a proof of claim against the bankrupts' estate for $893.68, and in a short time delivered it to the trustee. At the first meeting of creditors Charles H. Dauchy Company presented to the referee a defective proof of claim against said bankrupts for $3,335.67, which was returned by the referee to said company for correction. Prior to [97] January 23, 1903, the Dauchy Company duly verified another proof of claim in the same amount, prepared by Henry W. Smith, the attorney for the trustee, who had volunteered to prepare the same so as to comply with the rules, and on or about March 15, 1903, the Dauchy Company delivered this proof of claim to the trustee. Prior to June 1, 1903, the trustee delivered all three claims to said Henry W. Smith, with directions to file the same with the referee, which the attorney promised to do. In this he failed. When the attorney Smith received these claims from the trustee he handed them to a clerk in his office, directing him to put them with the papers in this proceeding, and shortly after told the clerk to file the proofs of the claim with the referee. The clerk neglected to do so, and some time afterwards, upon being asked in regard to it, said that he would do so immediately. This was before the expiration of the year after the adjudication. But he again failed to make the filing. The Dauchy proof, which had been left with the attorney, is lost and cannot be found, after diligent search made by the attorney for it in his office. The other two claims, the Orcutt Company and Duncan's own claim, were found in a package of papers relating to another bankruptcy proceeding. Another proof of claim, for the same amount, was made by the Dauchy Company April 2, 1904, and, with the Duncan and Orcutt proofs, was presented to the referee for filing, each proof being accompanied by a petition, dated April 2, 1904, for leave to file each of said claims nunc pro tunc as of a date prior to December 3, 1903, or for such other or further relief as might be just and proper. Smith was not the attorney for any of the claimants, and his failure to file with the referee was not by virtue of any instructions to withhold such claims from filing, nor was it known on the part of any of the claimants that he had failed to file them until more than a year after the adjudication.

[98] Upon the presentation of these claims with the petition, other creditors of the bankrupts objected to the granting of the relief asked in the petition, upon the ground that the claims *had not been seasonably presented to the court, and were barred under the provisions of § 57n of the bankruptcy act. [30 Stat. at L. 561, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3444.]

Upon the hearing of the petition for leave to file these proofs of claim, the referee to whom the case had been referred denied the petition, under the objection of other creditors, on the ground that, one year having expired subsequent to the adjudication of bankruptcy and prior to the filing of the several petitions and the presentation therewith to the referee, the referee had no power to permit the filing of said proofs of claims, and that neither the referee nor the court had any discretionary power to permit either of said proofs of claims to be filed, either nunc pro tunc or otherwise. An order denying the relief asked was duly entered.

The referee then certified for review by the district court the question whether his decision was correct in refusing the relief stated by the claimants.

The district court directed that the claims of the petitioning creditors should be filed as of the date when delivered to the trustee.

Charles H. Green, one of the creditors of the bankrupts, thereupon appealed from the order of the district court reversing the determination made by the referee, to the United States circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, and in his appeal, in view of the position of the trustee and his refusal himself to act in the matter, Green asked that he might be permitted to prosecute the appeal for himself and the other creditors. The district court thereupon allowed the appeal and cited the respondents to appear in the circuit court of appeals. That court, having heard the case argued, reversed the decision of the district court, and affirmed that of the referee. A brief memorandum was filed by the court, in which it was stated that the referee had given a very full examination of the question of law involved, and that the court concurred in his interpretation of the statute, and that his opinion might be printed as a supplement to the memorandum of the court.

Messrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper and Charles Cowles Tucker argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. Miller Kenyon, filed a brief for petitioners.

Mr. Herbert D. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank H. Deal, filed a brief for respondents.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in this case resolves itself into one of the sufficiency of the presentation of proofs of claims of the creditors named in the foregoing statement. They were, in reality, presented and delivered to the trustee in bankruptcy before the expiration of one year after adjudication, but there was no actual filing of the claims with the referee until after the expiration of that time, when the attempt to file them with the petition was made as above stated.

The question turns upon the construction of some of the subdivisions of the 57th section of the bankruptcy act, together with the 21st general order in bankruptcy, the last part of which reads: "Proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred."

Subsection a of § 57 provides that "proof of claims shall consist of a statement under oath, in writing, signed by a creditor, setting forth the claim, the consideration therefor, and whether any, and, if so, what, securities are held therefor; and whether any, and, if so, what, payments have been made thereon, and that the sum claimed is justly owing from the bankrupt to the creditor."

Subsection c provides that "claims, after being proved, may, *for the purpose of al-[101] allowance, be filed by the claimants in the court where the proceedings are pending, or before the referee if the case has been referred."

Subsection d provides that "claims which have been duly proved shall be allowed, upon receipt by or upon presentation to the court, unless objection to their allowance shall be made by parties in interest, or their consideration be continued for cause by the court upon its own motion."

Subsection n provides that "claims shall not be proved against a bankrupt estate subsequent to one year after the adjudication."

If the presentation and delivery of these proofs of claim in the case before us with the trustee was sufficient within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, then the referee should have proceeded to determine the question of their allowance, when presented to him, the same as if they had been filed with him personally within the year subsequent to adjudication.

We have been referred to no case in this court deciding the exact question, nor is there cited any case in the lower courts wherein it has been decided, with the exception of that of Re Seff, district court of United States, southern district of New York (not reported), where the question before us seems to have been directly before that court, and the decision was in favor of the sufficiency of the filing with the trustee. The parties hereto have cited a great many cases in the lower courts deciding questions somewhat analogous to the one now before us, but none in which this question has been decided. We, therefore, think it unnecessary to refer to them.

We are of opinion, taking into consideration the various provisions of the 57th section of the bankruptcy act, in connection with No. 21 of the general orders in bankruptcy, adopted by this court, that the presentation and delivery of proofs of claim to the trustee in bankruptcy within the year after the adjudication is a filing within the statute and the general order above mentioned.

[102] The general orders of this court are provided for by § *30 of the bankruptcy act, which enacts that "all necessary rules, forms, and orders as to procedure and for carrying this act into force and effect shall be prescribed, and may be amended from time to time, by the Supreme Court of the United States." Under that section this court had the power to provide, as it has done in order 21, that "proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred." There is nothing in that provision inconsistent with, or opposed to, anything stated in the bankruptcy law upon the subject, and we must, therefore, take the statute and the order and read them together, the order being simply somewhat of an amplification of the law with respect to procedure, but nothing which can be construed as beyond the powers granted to the court by virtue of the law itself. The question is not whether anyone but the court or referee can pass upon a claim and allow it or disallow it. That must be done by the court or referee; but it is simply whether a delivery of a claim, properly proved, to the trustee, is a sufficient filing. The law provides (subsection c of § 57) that the claims, after being proved, may, for the purpose of allowance, be filed by the claimants in the court where the proceedings are pending, or before the referee, if the case has been referred; but that does not prohibit their being filed somewhere else prior to their allowance, and the order in bankruptcy in substance provides that they may be filed, after being proved, with the trustee. Such order is equivalent to saying that proofs of debt (or claim) may be received by the trustee. When they are so received by him they are in legal effect received by the court, whose officer the trustee is. Having been received by the trustee, under authority of law, the proofs of debt are thereby sufficiently filed so far as the creditors are concerned, and it is the duty of the trustee to deliver them to the referee. If the trustee inadvertently neglects to perform that duty it is the neglect of an officer of the court, and the creditors are in no way responsible therefor. The presentation and filing have been made within the time provided for and with one of the proper *officers, his failure to de-[103] liver to the referee cannot be held to be a failure on the part of the creditor to properly file his proofs.

Not much benefit can be derived from an examination of the bankruptcy act of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176], in reference to the provisions therein contained, granting power to the justices of the Supreme Court to frame general orders for the purpose named. See § 10, bankruptcy act of 1867. We think it plain that, so far as this matter is concerned, the Supreme Court had full power to make the general order it did.

Different considerations, however, apply to the one claim made by the trustee himself. We do not think that in any event a trustee could file with himself his proof of his own claim against the estate of the bankrupt. General principles of law forbid that he should so act in his own case. And his delivery of his own claim to his attorney could not make such delivery stand in the place of a delivery to the referee.

These views lead to a reversal of the order of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the affirmance of the order made by the District Court, with the modification, refusing the filing of the proof of claim of the trustee himself.

And it is so ordered.

AMERICAN SMELTING & REFINING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF COLORADO
EX REL. HENRY A. LINDSLEY, District Attorney of the Second Judicial District of the State of Colorado, Deft. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 103-116.)

Constitutional law—impairing contract obligations—taxation of foreign corporation.

A contract right to do business in the state during the corporate lifetime of domestic corporations without being subject to any greater liabilities than then were or might be imposed upon domestic corporations was acquired by a foreign corporation by virtue of its admission into the state of Colorado with the right to do business therein under the then-existing laws of that state, which, inter alia, subjected foreign corporations coming into the state to the liabilities, restrictions, and duties which then were or might thereafter be imposed upon domestic corporations of like character, and such right was unconstitutionally impaired by Colo. act of March 22, 1902, § 65, exacting from such corporation an annual tax or license fee in double the amount of that imposed by § 64 upon domestic corporations.

[No. 143.]

Argued December 20, 21, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the County of Denver, in that state, forfeiting the right of a foreign corporation to do business in the state until a certain tax shall be paid. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 34 Colo. 240, 82 Pac. 531.

NOTE.—On corporate taxation as affected by the contract clause in the Federal Constitution—see note to Adams v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 60 L.R.A. 33.

As to impairing the obligation of a contract for exemption from taxation—see note to Wicomico County v. Bancroft, 70 C. C. A. 294.

204 U. S.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The writ of error in this case brings up for review the judgment of the supreme court of Colorado, which affirmed the judgment of the trial court, forfeiting the right of the plaintiff in error, hereinafter called the corporation, to do business as a foreign corporation within the state until a certain tax therein adjudged to be due should be paid. The corporation refused to pay the tax, and thereupon, at the instance of the district attorney and the attorney general of the state, a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto against the corporation was commenced for the purpose of obtaining a forfeiture of the franchise of the corporation for its failure to pay the "annual state corporation license tax." The defense set up that the tax was a violation of the Federal Constitution as impairing the obligation of a contract, and in other particulars named. Upon the trial the court found that there was due to the state of Colorado the sum of $4,000, being the amount of the annual tax due by reason of the statute, which was held valid. A decree was thereupon entered, forfeiting the right of the corporation to do business within the limits of the state of Colorado until the tax was paid, and it was "absolutely and wholly deprived of all rights and privileges within the state of Colorado until such tax is paid." Upon appeal to the supreme court of the state this judgment was affirmed, and the corporation then sued out this writ of error.

The corporation was incorporated April 4, 1899, in New Jersey, and it is permitted by its articles of incorporation to do business in other states, and to carry on a general ore reduction, milling, mining, and other business mentioned in such articles. On April 28, 1899, it duly made application to the proper state authorities of Colorado for permission to enter and transact business in that state, under the laws thereof. At this time its capital stock was $65,000,000, divided into shares of the par value of $100 each. Subsequently, and on April 8, 1901, its capital stock was increased to $100,000,000, and the certificate of such increase was duly filed in Colorado. Section 499 (Mills' Annotated Statutes of Colorado), after making provision for the performance of certain conditions by a foreign corporation entering the state, continued: "And such corporation shall be subjected to all the liabilities, restrictions, and duties which are or may be imposed upon such corporations of like character organized under the general laws of this state, and shall have no other or greater powers." Section 500 of the same statute provided that a foreign corporation must file in the office of the secretary of state a copy of its charter, or, if incorporated under a general corporation law, a copy of such certificate of incorporation, and such general corporation law, duly certified. Section 1 of chapter 51 of the Session Laws of Colorado for 1897 provided that every foreign corporation should pay to the secretary of state, for the use of the state, a fee of $10 if the capital stock did not exceed $50,000. If in excess of that sum the corporation was to pay "the further sum of 15 cents on each and every thousand dollars of such excess, and a like fee of 15 cents on each thousand of the amount of each subsequent increase of stock. The said fee shall be due and payable upon the filing of certificate of incorporation, articles of association, or charter of said incorporation, joint stock company, or association, in the office of the secretary of state; and no such corporation, joint stock company, or association shall have or exercise any corporate powers or be permitted to do any business in this state until the said fee shall have been paid; and the secretary of state shall not file any certificate of incorporation, articles of association, charter, or certificate of the increase of capital stock, or certify or [106]give any certificate to "any such corporation, joint stock company, or association, until said fee shall have been paid to him." By § 10 of chapter 52 of the Session Laws of Colorado for 1901 it was provided that no foreign corporation could "exercise any corporate power or acquire or hold any real or personal property, franchises, rights, or privileges, or do any business or prosecute or defend in any suit, in this state, until it shall have received from the secretary of this state a certificate setting forth that full payment has been made by such corporation, joint stock company, or association of all fees and taxes prescribed by law to be paid to the secretary of state, and every such corporation, joint stock company, or association shall pay to the secretary of state for each such certificate a fee of $5."

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20, and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

393

In accordance with the provisions of § 1 of the Laws of 1897, above mentioned, the corporation paid, upon filing its certificate, April 28, 1899, to the secretary of state, for the use of the state, $9,792.50 on its original capitalization; and on May 17, 1901, the further sum of $5,250 upon its increase of capital stock to $100,000,000.

394

Thereupon the secretary of state issued a certificate, stating the filing of the proper papers with him, and further stating that "pursuant to the provisions of § 10 of said act (1901) I hereby certify that the said company has made full payment of all fees prescribed by law to be paid to the secretary of state and due at the time of the issuing of this certificate, and is hereby authorized to exercise any corporate powers provided for by law." This was given under the hand and official seal of the secretary of state, and was dated on the 21st day of May, 1901. There were at this time no other statutes providing for the payment of any charges, fees, or taxes for coming into and doing business in the state of Colorado.

The corporation, upon entering the state in 1899 under its permission to enter and transact business therein, immediately commenced to erect a plant for the purpose of carrying on its business as a corporation, and before the commencement* of these pro-[107]ceedings it had invested for that purpose in the state sums amounting to more than $5,000,000. At the time the corporation was permitted to enter and carry on its business in the state the statute of Colorado provided that the term of life of corporations formed under the laws of that state should be twenty years. After the corporation had been doing business for some three years, and on March 22, 1902, the legislature of Colorado passed an act in relation to taxes. Colo. Sess. Laws 1902, pp. 43, 160, etc.

Section 64 of that act provided that all domestic corporations should thereafter and on or before the 1st day of May of each year, or at the time of obtaining such charter or certificate of incorporation, pay "an annual state corporation license tax," to the auditor of the state, of 2 cents upon each $1,000 of its capital stock.

Section 65 provides that every foreign corporation which had theretofore obtained "the right and privilege to transact and carry on business within the limits of the state of Colorado shall, in addition to the fees and taxes now provided for by law, and as a condition precedent to its right to do any business within the limits of this state, pay annually . . ." a state license tax of 4 cents upon each $1,000 of its capital stock.

Section 66 provided that every corporation which should fail to pay the tax provided for in §§ 64 and 65 (supra) should forfeit its right to do business within the state until the tax was paid, and should be deprived of all rights and privileges, and the fact of such failure might be pleaded as an absolute defense to any and all actions, suits, or proceedings, in law or in equity, brought or maintained by or on behalf of such corporations, in any court of competent jurisdiction within the limits of the state, until such tax was paid.

204 U. S.

This corporation refused to pay, and the state, through its district attorney and attorney general, commenced this suit for the purpose of forfeiting its right to remain in that state unless and until it paid the money under the statute of 1902.

Mr. Thomas Thacher argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The intention of the Colorado law was to create substantial uniformity as to corporations, whether originally incorporated in or out of the state, which have complied with its conditions for acquiring the right of incorporation within its boundaries.

Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cowie, 31 Colo. 450, 72 Pac. 1067; Stevens v. Pratt, 101 Ill. 208.

It is not necessary to consider whether investments made upon the faith of such a franchise are sufficient consideration, so that thereafter the grant of the franchise must be deemed a binding contract (Powers v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 201 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 860, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556), for in this case not only was such investment made up to millions, but a substantial sum was required to be paid and was paid at the time of the grant. Here there can be no question as to the consideration.

What the corporation got in this case was not a mere revocable license.

Home for the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 495; Powers v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. supra.

There is a wide distinction between the power to alter or annul, here reserved, and the unrestricted reserved power in the laws and Constitutions of many states.

Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660.

Foreign corporations are not outside of the protection of the Constitution for the reason that the states may impose conditions as to their admission.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 332, 46 L. ed. 922, 935, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662.

Mr. Charles W. Waterman also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joel F. Vaile and William W. Field, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The period for which a foreign corporation has the right to do business in this state—whatever the life of that corporation under the laws of the state of its origin,—is limited to the statutory life of corporations created under the laws of Colorado, to-wit: twenty years.

204 U. S.

Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cowie, 31 Colo. 450, 72 Pac. 1067.

The plaintiff in error obtained the right, by grant from the state, made for valuable consideration, to do business in this state for a period of twenty years; subject, of course, to the ordinary rules as to taxation of its property equally with that of any other person within the jurisdiction of the state. The right, so granted, cannot be taken away by the imposition of a subsequent additional burden, as a condition to the "doing of business" in this state. Relying upon the grant made to it under the laws of the state, and for which it had paid the sum of $15,000, it invests capital, acquires property, has established a business, and has definite vested rights which cannot thereafter be taken away by the imposition of new conditions.

County Comrs. v. Colorado Seminary, 12 Colo. 497, 21 Pac. 490; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1049; Com. v. New Bedford Bridge, 2 Gray, 339; Washington Bridge Co. v. State, 13 Conn. 53; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. Coon, 6 Pa. 379, 47 Am. Dec. 474; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. ed. 357; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 320, 21 L. ed. 179, 187; Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 488, 21 L. ed. 98, 101; Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529; Wendover v. Lexington, 15 B. Mon. 258; Atty. Gen. v. Bank of Charlotte, 57 N. C. (4 Jones, Eq.) 287.

The constitutional reserved power as to corporations will not support this legislation.

Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 497, 498, 21 L. ed. 98, 104; Coast-Line R. Co. v. Savannah, 30 Fed. 646; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S. 628, 38 L. ed. 846, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952.

The obligation of a contract consists of the duty imposed by the law on the parties to perform their agreement.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1040; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 197, 4 L. ed. 529, 549; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 75, 76, 5 L. ed. 547, 565; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 257, 6 L. ed. 606, 620, 621; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. ed. 143, 144; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. ed. 397, 399; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 600, 24 L. ed. 793, 796; Lapsley v. Brashears, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 47.

This obligation the law enforces through its remedies.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1040.

The validity, construction, and remedy are part of the obligation.

Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 75, 76, 5 L. ed. 547, 565, 566; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 257, 6 L. ed. 606, 620, 621; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 315, 11 L. ed. 143; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. ed. 397, 399; Von Hoffman v. Quincy (United States ex rel. Von Hoffman v. Quincy) 4 Wall. 535, 550, 18 L. ed. 403, 408; People ex rel. McLane v. Bond, 10 Cal. 563; Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 214; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 318, 21 L. ed. 357, 358.

The legislature may modify, but cannot take away all remedy from a contract.

Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221, 46 Am. Dec. 447; Wood v. Child, 20 Ill. 209; Templeton v. Horne, 82 Ill. 491; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 128; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 350; Call v. Hagger, 8 Mass. 423; Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. 654, 662, 20 L. ed. 689, 695; United States v. Conway, Hempst. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 14,849; Johnson v. Bond, Hempst. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 7,374; West v. Sansom, 44 Ga. 295; Penrose v. Erie Canal Co. 56 Pa. 46, 93 Am. Dec. 778; Thompson v. Com. 81 Pa. 314.

Impairing the validity of a contract includes acts taking away remedies upon contract.

Von Hoffman v. Quincy (United States ex rel. Von Hoffman v. Quincy) 4 Wall. 535, 552, 18 L. ed. 403, 409; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 774, 27 L. ed. 468, 471, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; White v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 199, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923, 962; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 303, 29 L. ed. 185, 197, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Chaffin v. Taylor, 114 U. S. 309, 29 L. ed. 198, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924, 962; Allen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. ed. 200, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925, 962; Tax Assessors v. State, 44 N. J. L. 395; Morton v. Comptroller General, 4 S. C. N. S. 430; Tracy v. Reed, 2 L.R.A. 773, 13 Sawy. 622, 38 Fed. 69; Collins v. Collins, 79 Ky. 88; Scibert v. Lewis (Scibert v. United States) 122 U. S. 284, 294, 30 L. ed. 1161, 1165, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1190; Moore v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 338, 27 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Oatman v. Bond, 15 Wis. 22; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612, 11 L. ed. 397, 399; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 197, 4 L. ed. 529, 549; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 256, 257, 6 L. ed. 606, 620, 621; Robinson v. Magee, 9 Cal. 81, 70 Am. Dec. 638; Smith v. Cleveland, 17 Wis. 573; Scarborough v. Dugan, 10 Cal. 305; Patterson, Federal Restraints on State Action, 1888, pp. 152, 153, 181, § 77; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 1049, 1052; Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 24 L. ed. 920; Lockett v. Usry, 28 Ga. 345; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221, 46 Am. Dec. 447; Fullerton v. Bank of United States, 1 Pet. 604, 614, 615, 7 L. ed. 280, 284, 285; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 317, 21 L. ed. 357.

Mr. N. C. Miller argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The charter may constitute a contract between the state granting it and the company. Even if it contain a clause exempting it from taxation in the parent state, the filing of a certified copy in another state would not constitute a contract of exemption. The fact that an additional tax is imposed on a person or corporation is not a change or alteration of the contract. Among the laws most likely to be enacted after its creation were those changing and altering the revenue laws, adding new subjects of taxation, or changing the burden of existing revenue laws. The general statute reserving the right in the legislature to amend or repeal the laws pertaining to corporations is constitutional. But the right to change the revenue laws exists regardless of this statute or constitutional provision.

Griffin v. Kentucky Ins. Co. 3 Bush, 592, 96 Am. Dec. 259; Tomlinson v. Branch, 15 Wall. 460, 21 L. ed. 189.

A corporation claiming to be exempt from any form of taxation must show a clear and unequivocal provision to that effect, either in its charter or under the general law under which it is incorporated.

Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; North Missouri R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 46, 22 L. ed. 287; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York, 199 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 531, 45 L. ed. 986, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Taxing District, 109 U. S. 398, 27 L. ed. 976, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

There is an obvious distinction between the charter of a corporation or the general statutes under which corporations file their articles, which are legislative in character and subject to alteration, amendment, or repeal in pursuance of the Constitution and statutory provisions, and business contracts or franchises, entered into between corporations and the state or municipality. The latter is protected by all the provisions of the Federal Constitution, the same as a contract between two natural persons. But articles of incorporation filed under the constitutional provisions and statutes in Colorado are legislative in character, and are subject to change from time to time.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. ed. 127, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

It is conceded that the corporation has paid all its indebtedness for taxes or otherwise to the state of Colorado, except the amount demanded under the above-mentioned law of 1902, and that it has obeyed all the laws of the state with that exception. It is urged, however, upon the part of the corporation, that, by its admission into the state, with its right to do business therein by the payment of the amount of money required for such purpose under the then-existing law, a contract between the state and itself was thereby made that it should be permitted to remain therein during the term of life which the state by law allowed to corporations created by it (which was twenty years), without being again subjected to further exactions of money for what it had once paid for, viz., the right to remain and transact business in that state. Undoubtedly, if the corporation violated the laws of the state properly applicable to it, or if otherwise it gave just cause for its expulsion, it could not insist upon such a contract as a defense.

It is also conceded on behalf of the corporation that it is not entitled to any exemption from taxes which the state of Colorado can properly impose upon persons or corporations within her borders.

[112] Having obtained permission to enter the state and do business as above mentioned, the question, aside from that of the *extent of the term, is whether any contract between the state and the corporation arose under these laws and the facts above mentioned.

In 1899, when this (foreign) corporation applied for a permit to enter and do business in the state, the laws of Colorado only granted such application on the payment of a certain fee named in the statute of 1897, which was payable upon filing its certificate of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state of Colorado, and until that payment was made and the certificate filed no such corporation was permitted to have or exercise any corporate powers, nor was it permitted to do any business in the state. Section 30 of the act of 1901 provided that, upon payment of all taxes, etc., due under the law, the secretary of state was to issue a certificate acknowledging the fact, for which the corporation was to pay a stated fee; and until the certificate was received from the secretary of state by the corporation it should not exercise any corporate powers or do any business in the state, as provided for by the act of 1897.

The result of these statutes was that the foreign corporation, upon filing the proper papers and paying the statutory fees and obtaining the certificate to that effect from the secretary of state, obtained the right to enter and do business in Colorado. The act of 1901 did not increase the amount of the exaction for entering and doing business in the state, but simply provided for a certificate, acknowledging payment, from the secretary, and it imposed the payment of a small fee for such certificate. The right obtained was a right to enter the state and do business therein as a corporation. It was also subject by statute to the liabilities, restrictions, and duties which were or might thereafter be imposed upon domestic corporations of like character. Domestic corporations at that time had the right to a corporate existence of twenty years.

These provisions of law, existing when the corporation applied for leave to enter the state, made the payment required, *and [113] received its permit, amounted to a contract that the foreign corporation so permitted to come in the state and do business therein, while subjected to all, should not be subjected to any greater, liabilities, restrictions, or duties than then were or thereafter might be imposed upon domestic corporations of like character.

A provision in a statute of this nature subjecting a foreign corporation to all the liabilities, etc., of a domestic one of like character must mean that it shall not be subjected to any greater liabilities than are imposed upon such domestic corporation. The power to impose different liabilities was with the state at the outset. It could make them greater or less than in case of a domestic corporation, or it could make them the same. Having the general power to do as it pleased, when it enacted that the foreign corporation, upon coming in the state, should be subjected to all the liabilities of domestic corporations, it amounted to the same thing as if the statute had said the foreign corporations should be subjected to the same liabilities. In other words the liabilities, restrictions, and duties imposed upon domestic corporations constitute the measure and limit of the liabilities, restrictions, and duties which might thereafter be imposed upon the corporation thus admitted to do business in the state. It was not a mere license to come in the state and do business therein upon payment of a sum named, liable to be revoked or the sum increased at the pleasure of the state, without further limitation. It was a clear contract that the liabilities, etc., should be the same as the domestic corporation, and the same treatment in that regard should be measured out to both. If it were desired to increase the liabilities of the foreign, it could only be done by increasing those of the domestic corporation at the same time and to the same extent.

Such being the contract, how long was it to last? Only until the state chose to alter it? Or was it to last for some definite time, capable of being ascertained from the terms of the statutes as they then existed?

[114] It seems to us that the *only limitation imposed is the term for which the corporation would have the right to continue in the state as a corporation. One of the restrictions as to domestic corporations is that which limits their corporate life to twenty years, unless extended as provided by law. The same restriction applies to the foreign corporation. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cowie, 31 Colo. 450, 72 Pac. 1067. Counsel for the state concedes that the corporation was admitted for a period of twenty years, but subject to the power of the state to tax. During that time, therefore, the contract lasts. This is the only legitimate, and we think it is the necessary, implication arising from the statute.

This is not an exemption from taxation, it is simply a limitation of the power to tax beyond the rate of taxation imposed upon a domestic corporation. Instead of such a limitation the act of 1902, already referred to, imposes a tax or fee upon or exacts from the foreign corporation double the amount which is imposed upon or exacted from the domestic one. The latter is granted the right to continue to do business upon the annual payment of 2 cents upon each $1,000 of its capital stock, while the former must pay 4 cents for the same right. This cannot be done while the right to remain exists. It is a violation of the obligation of an existing valid contract. Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 495.

Nor is this a case where the power given by the state Constitution to the general assembly to alter, amend, or annul a charter is applicable. The act does not alter the charter or annul or amend it. It simply increases the taxation which, up to the time of its enactment, had been imposed on all foreign corporations doing business in the state.

A discussion as to the name or nature of the tax imposed by the act of 1902, or the former acts, is wholly unimportant with reference to the view we take of this case. After the payment of the money and the receipt of the permit to enter and do business in the state the corporation could not, [115] as we *have said, be thereafter further taxed than was the domestic one. The tax on the latter under that act is the same in substance and effect as that upon the foreign corporation, but it is for only one half thereof in amount. The domestic must pay "an annual state corporation license tax," while the foreign corporation must pay "a state license tax" annually. The means of enforcing payment are not different, and such means are stated in § 66 of the act of 1902.

Whatever be the name or nature of the tax, it must be measured in amount by the same rate as is provided for the domestic institution, and, if the latter is not taxed in that way, neither can the state thus tax the foreign corporation.

It is unnecessary to refer to the many cases cited by both parties hereto. Some of them refer to the question as to the nature of such a tax, while others decide, upon the facts appearing in them, whether there was a contract or not. As already stated, the name of the tax or its kind is not important so long as it is plain that the act of 1902 increases the liabilities of the foreign corporation over those which obtain in that of the domestic. And in regard to the cases of contract, while the principle that a contract may arise from a legislative enactment has been reiterated times without number, it must always rest for its support in the particular case upon the construction to be given the act, and in this case we are not greatly aided by the former cases regarding taxation and legislative contract. We may, however, refer to the following out of many cases regarding contracts as to taxation: Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 21 L. ed. 98; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S. 628, 38 L. ed. 846, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952; Powers v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 201 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 860, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556.

Holding that the act of 1902 impaired the obligation of the contract existing between the corporation and the state, and is therefore void as to the corporation, it becomes unnecessary to decide the other questions discussed at the bar.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Colorado is reversed *and the case remanded [116] to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Holmes, and Mr. Justice Moody dissented.

CLEVELAND ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF CLEVELAND and Forest City Railway Company. (197.)CITY OF CLEVELAND and Forest City Railway Company, Appts.,

v.

CLEVELAND ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY. (321.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 116-142.)

Street railway—franchise—construction.

1. Municipal grants of street railway franchises must be strictly construed.

Street railways—franchise—term.

2. Municipal ordinances extending the life of the franchise of the Euclid avenue or main line of the Cleveland street railway system will not be construed as applicable to a road with a separate route and a different term of life, known as the Garden street branch, on the theory that the latter road became a part of the main line because it was permitted to run in connection with such main line, and to use a portion of that line to reach a public square.

Street railways—franchise—term.

3. The words "main line" in municipal ordinances granting respectively the right to construct a small extension to the Garden street branch of the Cleveland street railway system and the right to lay a second track on a portion of that branch, to terminate with the expiration of the grant for the main line, must be deemed to refer to the rest of the Garden street branch, and not to the Euclid avenue line.

Street railways—franchise—term.

4. A street railway franchise made to terminate with the grant to the main line is to be measured by the grant as it then exists, and not by any subsequent extension of the term which may be granted.

Street railway—franchise—term.

5. A grant of a street railway franchise by the Cleveland common council, to be valid "until the expiration of the grants for said company's tracks on said Quincy street east of Lincoln avenue, to wit: July 13, 1913," is not a grant extending to that date, where the Quincy street grants were then in fact to terminate at an earlier date.

Street railway—franchise—term.

6. An extension of the time for the NOTE.—As to rights of street railways in the city streets—see note to Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 43 L. ed. U. S. 67.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

204 U. S.

termination of the franchise of the Garden street branch of the Cleveland street railway system to the date set for the termination of the Euclid avenue or main line was not effected by a municipal ordinance consenting to a consolidation of several street railroads, including the Euclid avenue and Garden street lines, on condition that but one fare should be charged for a continuous ride.

Street railway—title to property after expiration of franchise.

7. The title to the rails, poles, and other appliances for operating the Garden street branch of the Cleveland street railway system remaining in the various streets at the expiration of its franchise is in the railway company which has been operating the road.

Constitutional law—due process of law.

8. The right to take possession of the property of a street railway company remaining in the streets at the expiration of its franchise cannot, consistently with due process of law, be conferred by municipal ordinance upon another street railway company.

[Nos. 197, 321.]

Argued November 12, 13, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

CROSS APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio to review a decree adjudging that a street railway franchise has expired and enjoining the municipality from attempting to put another street railway company in possession of the rails, poles, and other appliances remaining in the city streets. Affirmed.

See same case below, 137. Fed. 111.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This bill was filed in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Ohio on the 21st of March, 1905, against the city of Cleveland and the Forest City Railway Company, for the purpose of obtaining an injunction to restrain the city from carrying out a certain ordinance relating to the Garden street branch of complainant's railroad, passed by the city council January 11, 1904, on the ground that it was null and void, because it impaired the obligations of various contracts which the complainant alleged had been entered into between the complainant and the city, providing for the use until either July 13, 1913, or July 1, 1914, of certain streets by the railroad owned by the complainant, and known as the Garden street or Central avenue branch, and hereafter called the Garden street branch. The ordinance granted to the Forest City Railway Company (a stranger to the original grants) the renewal right to maintain and operate the existing street railroads through the streets named therein, which were the same streets theretofore granted to the Garden street railroad. The right was granted upon condition that the grantee should pay to the owners of the poles and other property being in the streets an amount to be agreed upon therefor, or such sum as should be finally adjudicated upon by a court. A temporary restraining order was granted. The defendants made separate answers, denying the existence of any contract between the complainant and the city upon the subject of the Garden street branch subsequent to March 22, 1905, and the Forest City Railway Company claimed under the ordinance of January, 1904, the right to take possession of such Garden street branch after March, 1905, and to use the tracks of the complainant's railroad. The case was heard upon the pleadings and various ordinances and resolutions of the council of the city.

[118] *After hearing, a decree was made by the circuit court (137 Fed. 111) which decreed that the right claimed by the complainant to operate its Garden street branch railroad in the streets named in the bill expired on the 22d day of March, 1905. It was also decreed that the ordinance of January 11, 1904, was inoperative, so far as it assumed to confer upon the defendant the Forest City Railway Company any legal right to take the tracks, poles, wires, and appliances erected and maintained by the complainant in the streets, because such ordinance authorized the taking of the property of complainant without due process of law. The railroad company, therefore, was enjoined from interfering with the complainant in the peaceable possession of the property mentioned, and the city was enjoined from attempting in any manner, by virtue of the ordinance, to put the defendant the Forest City Railway Company into possession of the same. From the decree the complainant and both of the defendants appealed directly to this court, as involving questions arising under the Constitution of the United States. The complainant's appeal is No. 197, and is from that portion of the decree which adjudges that the right of the complainant to maintain and operate its Garden street branch railroad expired on the 22d of March, 1905. The cross appeal of the defendants is from that portion of the decree which enjoins the Forest City Railway Company from taking possession of the property described, and which also enjoins the city from in any manner attempting to put that company into possession thereof. It thus appears that the whole controversy turns upon the question whether the right of the Garden street railroad terminated March 22, 1905, or lasts until July 1, 1914, or possibly only until July 13, 1913.

The record shows that there are, among others, two lines of railroad belonging to the complainant, one of which is known as the Euclid avenue, sometimes called the "main" line, and the other the Garden street branch. Both lines run from east to west through the city in different, though generally parallel, streets up to the point of their intersection at Erie street and *Euclid[119] avenue (or Prospect street) from which point west, for a short distance, to the public square and Water street, the Garden street branch is authorized to use the Euclid avenue tracks.

The following (among many other) ordinances and resolutions of the council of the city were put in evidence on the trial, together with the various resolutions of complainant, in which it accepted such ordinances and resolutions. These constitute the case between the parties, and there is no contradictory evidence. Complainant contends that the Garden street grant must be measured in time by that provided for the termination of the Euclid avenue grant.

The ordinances and resolutions relating to the Euclid avenue line will be first stated. The first is a resolution which granted to the East Cleveland Railroad Company, a corporation incorporated February 28, 1859, for that purpose, the right to construct and operate a railroad from a point on Prospect street at its intersection with Erie street, to the eastern terminus of Prospect street, which grant was for the term of twenty years from September 20, 1859. The company, having obtained the necessary consents of the property owners along the line, duly located, constructed, and operated the road under that resolution and within a short time after it was authorized so to do.

This was the commencement of what is known as the Euclid avenue, or sometimes (after 1868) the main line of one of the roads owned now by the complainant.

By ordinance, April 15, 1862, the company was authorized to extend its line from the intersection of Erie and Euclid streets west to the public square.

September 15, 1879, an ordinance was passed which granted a renewal of the franchise to the East Cleveland Railroad Company to maintain and operate its whole Euclid avenue street railroad as far as Willson avenue, on the east, for a period of twenty-five years from September 20, 1879 (September 20, 1904). This ordinance makes no reference to the Garden street line, which had then been built and was in operation, and does not mention any of the streets through which that line passed, [120] *although the Garden street line had the right, under the ordinance of 1868, herein-after mentioned, to use the tracks of the Euclid avenue line from the point of junction therewith westerly to its terminus.

On the 4th of April, 1883, another ordinance was passed, granting to the East Cleveland Railroad Company the right to extend, lay, and operate its double track on Euclid avenue from the west line of Willson avenue easterly to the east line of Fairmount street, the right granted to terminate on the 20th of September, 1904, "with the said renewal of that part of said company's line lying west of Willson avenue." Ordinance of September 15, 1879, above referred to.

By ordinance of March 15, 1886, another grant was made to the Euclid avenue line east of Fairmount street, which grant was to cease and terminate upon the 20th of September, 1904, "as provided for said company's tracks in Euclid avenue, west of Fairmount street."

In order to change from animal power to electricity an ordinance was passed July 13, 1888, granting to the East Cleveland Street Railway Company the right to construct and operate an electric street railway on Euclid avenue from Willson avenue easterly to the city limits, and on Cedar avenue from a point near the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railway Company's right of way in that avenue, easterly to a point about 1,500 feet east of Fairmount street. The permission was given on the condition that the grant was to be exercised within six months from the passage of the ordinance. The grant was also upon condition that if the company, from any cause, should fail to extend the electric system over its entire main and Cedar avenue lines within eighteen months from the date of the passage of the ordinance, then the ordinance should be void. Nothing in the ordinance was to be construed as authorizing any increase in the fare for transportation over any portion of the company's line. The 6th section of the ordinance stated that the privilege of constructing the electric system, as provided in the ordinance, was granted "in consideration of the improved [121] facilities *hereby contemplated and the large expenditures necessary to secure the same, and shall be in force for the period of twenty-five years from and after the date of the passage of this ordinance, upon its main and Cedar avenue lines." The right to change to electric power, as given by the foregoing ordinance, was confined, it will be observed, to that portion of the Euclid avenue line east of Willson avenue, and on Cedar avenue to that part lying between the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railway Company's right of way and a point 1,500 feet east of Fairmount street. Nothing west of Willson avenue is included in that grant.

On May 13, 1889, a resolution was adopted, which authorized and required the railroad company, "as soon as practicable, to extend the use of such motive power over its main and Cedar avenue lines to the westerly termini thereof." This included those lines west of Willson avenue, and under the ordinance and resolution the Euclid avenue line was changed to an electric street railroad within the times mentioned in the ordinance and resolution.

There was no extension of time granted by the resolution of 1889 for the termination of the grant on any portion of the Euclid avenue line.

On July 17, 1893, the right was given to the company to extend its road at the intersection of Prospect and Erie streets to the intersection of Prospect and Ontario streets, and also at the intersection of Superior and Seneca streets, thence along Seneca, Lake, and Ontario streets, and the council imposed upon it the duty, if required by the council, of operating its cars over the entire length of any of the lines. Other duties were imposed upon it. Complainant contends that some part of this ordinance refers to a portion of the Garden street extension, and that it requires the operation of all the Garden street cars over these tracks, and the grant is to terminate at the time mentioned in the 1888 ordinance,—July 13, 1913.

The above list includes the material ordinances and resolutions pertaining particularly to Euclid avenue.

*After the Euclid avenue line had been [122] built the council, on the 14th of January, 1868, passed a resolution granting its consent to the East Cleveland Street Railroad Company to lay down its tracks from the intersection of Prospect and Brownell streets, "to connect with the main line of its railroad," running thence through Garden and other streets to and across Willson avenue, to the eastern boundary of the city, during the period of twenty years. Willson avenue was then the eastern boundary of the city. The road could continue to use and occupy the streets, avenues, and public grounds over which its main line was then constructed and operated westerly from the junction (at Brownell and Prospect streets) of said road with the main line to its westerly terminus, for the same length of time.

This Garden street line was thereafter built, and it is asserted that it was the inception of a new and separate street railroad. It has been extended at various times since, and forms, with its various extensions, what is called the Garden street branch, and is the railroad in question.

On the 30th of March, 1868, the railroad company was permitted by ordinance of the village of East Cleveland to construct a branch railroad on Garden street, which would form an extension, in fact, of the Garden street line easterly through the village to the line of Wade street. The grant was for twenty years from the time of the completion of the work, which was to be completed within five years from the date of the passage of the resolution granting the right,—March 30, 1868.

On the 25th of March, 1873, the council passed a resolution, in the preamble of which it was stated that the East Cleveland Railroad Company desired and proposed to connect their Garden street branch with the main line of their road at the intersection of Erie and Prospect streets, and thereupon the council granted to the railroad company the "right to lay down a double track street railroad in Ohio street from their present track in Brownell street [123] to Erie street, and in Erie street, *from Ohio street to Prospect street, to connect with their main track at this point." This made a junction at Erie and Prospect streets, with the Euclid Avenue Railroad, instead of at Brownell and Prospect streets,—a small difference as to length of road.

On the 23d of May, 1876, the council authorized the East Cleveland Railroad Company to extend the Garden street branch of its road at the easterly end thereof along Garden street to Baden avenue thence to Quincy, along Quincy to New, and along New street to Garden street, there to connect with the Garden street tracks. The ordinance provided that the right therein granted should continue for twenty years from that date.

This extension placed a track in Quincy street from Baden to New street, which was a very short distance. It did make a different date for the termination of the grant than was provided for the rest of the branch, and it was to be operated "in connection with said branch and its main line." No increase of fare was to be charged by the company on any part of its branch or of its main line or extension by reason of the extension.

In the year 1880, on the 22d of March, the council passed an ordinance authorizing the East Cleveland Railroad Company to extend the Garden street branch of its railway from the then-existing track at the intersection of Baden avenue and Quincy street, on and along said Quincy street, in an easterly direction to the intersection of Quincy street and Lincoln avenue, and to equip and operate the said extension and its Garden street branch for the period of twenty-five years from and after the passage of the ordinance." When this ordinance was passed the eastern limits of the city of Cleveland had been extended, so that the territory covered by the grants to the Garden street line was at that time included in the city of Cleveland.

In 1885, February 9, the council passed an ordinance permitting the East Cleveland Railroad Company "to extend its *Garden street branch from the intersection of Quincy street and Lincoln avenue, in an easterly direction, to Woodland Hills avenue, . . . and equip and operate said extension as a single track railroad, with all necessary switches, turnouts, and turntables" in connection with said branch and its main line, and terminating with the grant for the main line, but with the express condition that "no increase of fare shall be charged by said company on any part of its main line, or on said extension, by reason of said extension."

On the 17th of June, 1887, the council granted another extension to the Garden street branch on Garden street from Baden avenue easterly to Lincoln avenue, the grant to terminate "with the grant for the Garden street main line," and no extra fare.

On the 10th of March, 1890, the council passed an ordinance which "granted the right to operate its Garden street branch by electricity" from and to the points named in the ordinance, and this grant was "to operate by electric power the said Garden street branch during the term of its present grant for said Garden street branch." Both roads were thereafter operated as electric street railroads.

On the 30th day of March, 1891, another ordinance was passed, authorizing the railroad company "to operate a second or additional track in and upon Central avenue (Garden street) from the east line of Willson avenue to the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railroad tracks." It was provided that the "right herein granted shall be valid until the expiration of the grants for the said company's main line."

On the 20th of April, 1891, an ordinance was passed which authorized the railroad company to "operate a second or additional track in and upon Quincy street from New street to Woodland Hills avenue." This was part of the Garden street line. Section 3 of the ordinance contained the provision that the "right herein granted shall be valid until the expiration of the grants for said company's tracks on said Quincy street east of Lincoln avenue; to wit, July 13, 1913."

[125] *These are the material ordinances which particularly relate to the Garden street railroad.

During March and April, 1893, the complainant herein was organized as a consolidation of several street railroads, which, it is enough to say, included, among others, the Euclid avenue and the Garden street lines, and on the 22d day of May, 1893, the consolidated railroad company (this complainant), through its vice president, addressed a communication to the council, stating that the various consolidations had been made under advice of counsel, but inasmuch as some question seemed to have arisen as to the intention of the company, it was stated that the company did not claim any rights greater than the constituent companies forming the organization; that it intended to obey all ordinances to which each and all the constituent companies were subject, and that it had, since the consolidation had been effected, issued transfer checks to all persons desiring them, to enable such persons to have a continuous ride from any East Side line to any South Side or West Side line, and from any South or West Side line of the company to any East Side line, for one fare, and would continue such system of transfers where it could not better accommodate its patrons by such through lines as it might establish; and that it disclaimed all intention of charging more than one fare for any such continuous ride; "and that its aim has been and will be to give its patrons vastly improved service and accommodations by reason of such consolidation."

The council thereupon, by resolution, consented to the consolidation of the various railroad companies named in the resolution under the name of the Cleveland Electric Railway Company, upon the condition that "only one fare shall be charged for a continuous ride on or over any line of railway formerly owned by any other of said constituent companies within the limits of the city of Cleveland; and passengers on any of such lines paying one fare shall be entitled, without extra or additional charge, to be transferred to any other of said lines and have a continuous ride thereon for said single fare." The conditions *contained in the resolution were thereafter accepted by the complainant in writing.

On the 19th day of February, 1894, the council adopted "an ordinance granting permission to the Cleveland Electric Railway and the Cleveland City Railway Company to extend their tracks in Willson avenue." This avenue runs north and south and crosses many of the avenues in which some of the constituent companies of the consolidated road had laid their tracks.

The ordinance granted each railroad company the right to extend its double track railroad along Willson avenue from and to the various points named in the ordinance, and the road was to be constructed and operated in connection with the existing tracks in Willson avenue as a double track street railroad. The two companies named in the ordinance were to jointly construct and maintain the road, and each was to have the right to occupy and use the track, wires, etc., of the other company then in Willson avenue, on such terms and conditions as the council might deem just and reasonable, unless the companies should otherwise agree. Provision was then made for the running of through cars on Willson avenue between certain points, and night cars were to be operated by the companies throughout the entire length of Willson avenue. A passenger on any car operated on any part of said Willson avenue was to have the right, on the payment of one fare, without additional or extra charge, to be transferred to any other line of either of said companies intersecting or coming to said Willson avenue, and was to have a continuous ride thereon, with the right, without additional charge, to be transferred from said second line to a car on any other line of either of these companies intersecting or coming to Willson avenue, and was to be entitled, without additional or extra charge, to be transferred to the Willson avenue line and to have a continuous ride thereon. Regulations were made for the paving of certain portions of the street by the company under the direction of the city authorities, and provision was made for widening the roadway on Willson avenue *between certain points named, and for setting back curbs, hydrants, etc., all of which was to be done at the expense of the companies, which were also to comply with and perform all the general ordinances of the city relating to street railroads, then or thereafter in force. By § 10 it was provided that the grant should be in force until the 1st day of July, 1914.

On the 25th of June, 1894, the council passed "An Ordinance Granting the Cleveland Electric Railway the Right to Extend and Operate Its Double Track Street Railroad in Quincy Street from New Street to Willson Avenue." This ordinance provided for the extension and operation by the Cleveland Electric Railway Company of a double track street railroad on and along Quiney street, from its then present tracks thereon, westerly to Willson avenue, connecting by curves with its Willson avenue tracks. The 6th section provided that "this grant shall terminate with the grant for said company's present line in Quiney street."

[126]

[127]

These ordinances and resolutions are those which particularly relate to the extent of the grants to the railroad company for the Euclid avenue and for the Garden street lines. Other ordinances and resolutions were passed, showing, in connection with those already in evidence, as insisted upon by the complainant, the existence of a general system for the operation of the roads owned by the complainant, including the Euclid avenue and Garden street lines, as a unit, and the necessity existing for operating all of the lines in connection with each other for the life of the longest grant. And it is insisted that this was the obvious intention of the council, to be gathered from the various ordinances, among them those especially above adverted to.

Messrs. William B. Sanders and John W. Warrington, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Andrew Squire, filed briefs for the Cleveland Electric Railway Company.

All questions necessary to the solution of this difference as to date ultimately fixed for grants in question to expire, that is, whether March, 1905, on the one hand, or July, 1913 or 1914, on the other, were involved and decided in the cases of Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 50 L. ed. 854, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

The holding of the court below and the contention of counsel are in the teeth of the decision of the supreme court of Ohio in State ex rel. Hadden v. East Cleveland R. Co. 27 Ohio L. J. 64, Affirming 6 Ohio C. C. 318.

See also Belle v. Glenville, 27 Ohio C. C. 181, Affirmed in 73 Ohio St. 392, 78 N. E. 1117.

That the tracks, poles, wires, and appliances in use by the appellant upon Garden street constitute private property, protected by the same guaranty of the Constitution against being taken without due process of law as is the property of an individual, is settled.

Hamilton, G. & C. Traction Co. v. Hamilton & L. Electric Transit Co. 69 Ohio St. 402, 69 N. E. 991; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Salt Creek Valley Turnp. Co. v. Parks, 50 Ohio St. 568, 28 L.R.A. 769, 35 N. E. 304; Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185, 18 N. W. 611; Kinsman Street R. Co. v. Broadway & N. Street R. Co. 36 Ohio St. 239; Toledo Consol. Street R. Co. v. Toledo Electric Street R. Co. 50 Ohio St. 603, 36 N. E. 312.

Mr. Newton D. Baker argued the cause and filed a brief for the city of Cleveland:

The rule of strict construction applies with unimpaired force alike to legislative enactments, properly so called, and to contracts affecting the public interest, made by municipal corporations.

Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 50 L. ed. 854, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; 2 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 548; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. 353, 20 L. ed. 455; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 61 Fed. 161; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Grand Rapids Electric Light & P. Co. v. Grand Rapids Edison Electric Light & Fuel Gas Co. 33 Fed. 659; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 598, 45 L. ed. 688, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. ed. 353, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Booth, Street Railways, § 33; New Orleans & C. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 34 La. Ann. 429; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 488; Bank of Toledo v. Toledo, 1 Ohio St. 622; Straus v. Eagle Ins. Co. 5 Ohio St. 59; State v. Vanderbilt, 37 Ohio St. 590; Zanesville v. Zanesville Gaslight Co. 47 Ohio St. 31, 23 N. E. 55; State ex rel. Kidder v. Eagle Ins. Co. 50 Ohio St. 252, 33 N. E. 1056.

Mr. D. C. Westenhover argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Garfield, Howe, & Westenhover, filed a brief for the Forest City Railway Company:

The rules of construction so vigorously announced by the learned judge who decided the case below are sound.

Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 471, 50 L. ed. 801, 830, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 34, 50 L. ed. 359, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

There is no foundation for the assertion that a unified system has been created, with a uniform date of expiration for all its franchises, and that such date is that of the longest continuing franchise.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 334, 47 U. S. App. 36, 76 Fed. 296.

The misrecital after the videlicet cannot control the fact which is made the primary test as to the date of expiration of the new right conferred by the ordinance last mentioned. The uniform rule of construction, when there is a conflict between the precedent matter and that which follows a videlicet, is well known. The former controls and the latter is disregarded.

Sullivan v. State, 67 Miss. 346, 7 So. 275; Gleason v. M'Vickar, 7 Cow. 42; Com. v. Quinlan, 153 Mass. 483, 27 N. E. 8; Buck v. Lewis, 9 Minn. 314, Gil. 298; Stukeley v. Butler, Hobart, 175; Cotton v. Ward, 3 T. B. Mon. 310.

In Ohio the municipalities are the owners of the fee in the streets.

Hamilton, G. & C. Traction Co. v. Parish, 67 Ohio St. 181, 60 L.R.A. 531, 65 N. E. 1011.

Rails, ties, poles, when laid and constructed on an ordinary right of way of a railroad company, become a part of the realty, both for the purpose of taxation and as between the mortgagee of the realty and the mortgagee of the chattel, given before it was annexed to the realty.

Cleveland v. C. & N. R. Co. 1 Cleveland L. Rep. 304; Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Connelly, 10 Ohio St. 130; Meriam v. Brown, 128 Mass. 391; Hunt v. Bay State Iron Co. 97 Mass. 279; Clemens Electrical Mfg. Co. v. Walton, 173 Mass. 286, 52 N. E. 132, 53 N. E. 820; Providence & W. R. Co. v. Wright, 2 R. I. 459.

Even in those cases of landlord and tenant in which the right of removal exists, it must be exercised at or before the expiration of the lease. In this case, at the time the decree was made, the right of the complainant in the streets had expired. It stood in the same situation as a tenant for a fixed term, who, if he wishes to exercise his right of removal, must do so before the expiration of his term. The law with respect to landlord and tenant may be found in the following authorities:

2 Taylor, Land. & T. 8th ed. § 55; Watriss v. First Nat. Bank, 124 Mass. 571, 26 Am. Rep. 694; Stokoe v. Upton, 40 Mich. 581, 29 Am. Rep. 560; Ex parte Brook, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 100; Merritt v. Judd, 14 Cal. 59; Loughran v. Ross, 45 N. Y. 792, 6 Am. Rep. 173; Carlin v. Ritter, 68 Md. 478, 6 Am. St. Rep. 467, 13 Atl. 370, 16 Atl. 301; Haflick v. Stober, 11 Ohio St. 482.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Out of these various ordinances and resolutions arise the difficulties suggested in this case. The facts are somewhat complicated by reason of their number, and the inferences to be drawn from them are not always perfectly plain and certain. The complainant contends that, by reason of the action of the city council and the acceptance by the complainant of the various ordinances and resolutions adopted by that council, a valid contract has been entered into between the city and the complainant, by which the right to use the streets named in the ordinances by the Garden street branch has been granted to complainant up to July 1, 1914; or, if it is mistaken as to that time, that then the contract terminates on the 13th of July, 1913. The city contends that neither date is right, but that the contract, so far as it related to the Garden street branch, terminated on the 22d of March, 1905.

The rules of construction which have been adopted by courts in cases of public grants of this nature by the authorities of cities are of long standing. It has been held that such grants should be in plain language, that they should be certain and definite in their nature, and should contain no ambiguity in their terms. The legislative mind must be distinctly impressed with the unequivocal form of expression contained in the grant, "in order that the privileges may be intelligently granted or purposely withheld. It is matter of common knowledge that grants of this character are usually prepared by those interested in them, and submitted to the legislatures with a view to obtain from such bodies the most liberal grant of privileges which they are willing to give. This is one among many reasons why they are to be strictly construed." Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 471, 50 L. ed. 801, 830, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. In the case cited this court has had occasion to state the principle of construction and to cite some of the authorities upon which it is based. This has been so lately done that it is unnecessary to more than refer to that case as authority for the doctrine above stated.

Before proceeding with an examination of the various ordinances and resolutions referred to in the foregoing statement, it is well to say that we do so upon the assumption that the legislature has heretofore granted to the city council of Cleveland most comprehensive power to contract with street railroads within its limits, with regard to the use of its streets, and the length of time for which such use may be granted, not longer than twenty-five years. Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 533, 48 L. ed. 1102, 1107, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 541, 50 L. ed. 854, 859, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513. Therefore, in deciding this case, we assume the validity of the contract, whatever it is, that was made. The only question involved herein is one of construction and intent.

The most important of the many ordinances and resolutions relating to the Euclid avenue line, commencing in 1859, have been referred to in the foregoing statement of facts because of the contention of complainant that the Garden street branch is nothing but an extension and, in reality, as in law, a component part of the Euclid avenue line, and that the Garden street grant is limited and governed by the time of the expiration of the Euclid avenue grant. In [131] other words, that the grant *of 1888 to the Euclid avenue line of the right to change its motive power, and extending the termination of the grant until twenty-five years from that date, thereby extended the termination of the grant to the Garden street branch to the same time, although the whole branch road had been separately and otherwise provided for, and had never before had the same termination as the Euclid avenue line. The grant is to be implied which is to work such a change in a grant then existing in specific and direct language. The same argument is also set forth in regard to the ordinance of July 17, 1893, which will be again referred to.

Under these circumstances it is important to direct special attention to the Garden street branch.

The East Cleveland Railroad Company, having built and operated its road through the various streets mentioned in the ordinance of 1859, granting it leave so to do, became desirous of building another road in connection with the one it was then operating, but there was no statute at that time in Ohio permitting the extension of a road then built, and the company, therefore, in 1867 and the early part of 1868, took the same proceedings to acquire the right to build the new road that it had taken to build the former, although it did not seek a new incorporation. As a railroad company already existing, it applied to the council of the city of Cleveland for leave to construct a street railroad from the intersection of Prospect and Brownell streets, to connect with the main line of its road, and thence through various streets and along the center of Garden street, to and across Willson avenue, to the easterly boundary of the city. It procured the consents of the property owners along the line; notice for the reception of bids was published by the city as provided for in the statute, and the railroad company made a formal bid for the privilege of laying down its tracks through the various streets, and named the rates of fare which would be charged. That bid was the lowest, if not the only one, made, and it was duly accepted, and the privilege was granted to build a railroad in Garden street, and to operate *it for twenty years from the date [132] of the adoption of the ordinance, January 14, 1868, and the company was to continue to use the western end of the Euclid avenue road as stated in the ordinance. The ordinance was accepted and the road built. At this time the grant to the Euclid avenue line expired September 20, 1879.

Referring to the procedure under which the Garden street branch was created and the permission of the city council to build the road obtained, it is plain that the branch thus built was not a mere extension or part of the Euclid avenue line, so that a grant to the latter necessarily covered the other as an inseparable part of it, but was a distinct line, with a separate route, with the exception of a short distance at the west end, where it was permitted to use the tracks of the Euclid avenue line. The termination of the right was at a different time from that provided for the Euclid avenue line. This use of the Euclid avenue tracks for a short distance did not make the Garden street branch a mere extension of the former road. Whether authorized by its charter to build the Garden street road is not important. It did so, and its right to do it was given by an ordinance of the council which has been recognized as valid ever since. Because on some occasions it has been called a branch does not alter the weight to be given the facts stated, or turn the branch into a mere extension where it has been otherwise uniformly treated.

It is contended that by the resolution of March 25, 1873, which granted to the East Cleveland Railway Company the right to lay a double track street railroad, intersecting with its main line at Erie street and Prospect street, and thence through other streets mentioned in the resolution, the Garden street line thereby became an extension of the main line, or was recognized as a mere extension. The preamble to that resolution recites that the railroad company desires to connect the Garden street branch with the main line of their road at the intersection of Erie and Prospect streets, and to remove the other track from Brownell street, between Ohio and Prospect streets, *and therefore permission [133] is granted to the company so to do. That resolution provided simply for changing the connection of the Garden street branch with the Euclid avenue line from Brownell street to Erie street, and for the taking up of the track on Brownell street, between Ohio and Prospect streets. It did not make the Garden street branch any more of an extension of the main line than it had been before. The branch road certainly did not become a part of the main road simply because it ran in connection with it, or because it ran over a small portion of the tracks of that road. It remained what it started out as, a road with a separate route and a different term of life.

The grant made in 1876 to the company to extend its Garden street tracks from its then terminus at Baden street, to and along other streets towards the east, with the right to equip and operate said extension for twenty years, in connection with the said Garden street branch and its main line, had no effect upon the question we are discussing. That extension of the tracks of the Garden street branch spoken of in the ordinance was also a short one, and was to terminate at a different time from that then existing in regard to the other portion of the Garden street branch. That it was to be operated in connection with its Garden street branch and the main line did not make the branch as extended a part of the main line, or alter the fact that the branch was a separate road, although operated in connection with the main line. It is quite difficult to see why the right to operate this particular extension should have been granted for twenty years or until 1896, instead of being limited to terminate with the branch, but, at any rate, the grant is in unambiguous terms, and states in so many words the length of time it is to last. Its importance is not very great, and is entirely effaced by the subsequent ordinance of 1880, which provided for the termination of the whole Garden street branch at the time specified,—1905.

[134] By that ordinance (March 22, 1880) the question of the termination of the grant for the whole Garden street branch was distinctly settled. By it the right to extend that branch of its *railroad in an easterly direction, on and along Quincy street, was given to the company, and the right "to equip and operate the said extension and its Garden street branch" was given for the period of twenty-five years from the passage of the ordinance, but without increase of fare on any portion. This, of course, placed the termination of the whole grant to the Garden street branch on March 22, 1905. There is no ambiguity as to this grant, and the termination of the grants to the two roads was kept apart, one being September 20, 1904, the other March 22, 1905.

Much stress is laid by the complainant on the ordinance of the 9th of February, 204 U. S.

1885, which was entitled "An Ordinance to Permit the East Cleveland Railroad Company to Extend the Garden Street Branch of Its Railway." The company was thereby authorized to extend the Garden street branch from the intersection of Quincy street and Lincoln avenue in an easterly direction, to Woodland Hills avenue. It was to be operated in connection "with said branch and its main line and terminating with the grant for the main line," but with no increase of fare. It is contended that the particular grant mentioned in this ordinance was to terminate with the grant for the main line, which would make it terminate September 20, 1904, instead of March 22, 1905. If this were the only question, of course, the complainant would not insist that the grant to it should be shortened six months. But it is cited for the purpose of showing an intention of the council to limit the termination of the Garden street branch by the limitation then existing in regard to the Euclid avenue line. It is contended that from the time of the passage of this ordinance by the council and its acceptance by the complainant the parties thereby agreed that the extension should be operated with the main line, and that its grant for such operation should expire with the grant for the main or Euclid avenue line, and that this was in pursuance of the plan by the city to have the grants to the two roads expire at the same time. And the claim is that the subsequent ordinances must be construed in the same manner *and for the purpose of carrying out [135] the same scheme. There is here undoubtedly some room for the contention of complainant, but we think, upon looking at all the facts in connection with this question, that the intention of the council was not that way. The Garden street branch, running from the intersection of Erie and Prospects streets, towards the east, terminated, at the time of this grant, at Lincoln avenue. This made a long line of road. By the ordinance it was lengthened from Lincoln avenue to Woodland Hills avenue,—a comparatively short extension of track. The right granted to the whole branch line as far east as Lincoln avenue then terminated on the 22d of March, 1905, and yet, by this construction of the ordinance of 1885, this small extension of track from Lincoln avenue to Woodland Hills avenue was to expire September 20, 1904. Why this difference? The ordinance did not assume in any way to alter the time of the termination of the then-existing grant to the rest of the Garden street branch, but it simply limited the time of the termination of the grant for the extension then given. Hence it is difficult to see how any agreement can be found to arise from the ordinance for the simultaneous termination of all the grants to both the main line and the Garden street branch. Nor can any general scheme to have the grants of both roads terminate together be evolved from anything done by the parties up to and including 1885.

There is nothing in Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 539, 50 L. ed. 854, 858, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, that covers this case. The language of the ordinance adverted to in that case is to be applied to very different facts from those existing here. We assume the ability of the council to make such a contract as complainant contends for herein, but we think none such was made in fact.

[136] So far as can be determined from this record, there was absolutely no reason for terminating the right to use this small extension of track in September, 1904, while the rest of the branch then existing was not to terminate until six months later. It cut up the branch line in a way which it is impossible from this record to give any reason for, and accordingly, under the then-existing circumstances, it might be argued that the words, "terminate with the grant for the main line," did not mean the Euclid avenue line, but it referred to the Garden street branch, which was, as a matter of fact, the main line so far as concerned the small extension of the track from Lincoln avenue to Woodland Hills avenue. To terminate the grant for the extension at the same time with the grant for the line thereby extended would be the most obvious and natural course to pursue. It is true the ordinance itself recognizes the "branch and its main line" as constituting two different lines, and provides that the grant is to terminate with the grant for the main line. And yet the real meaning of the ordinance, when regarded in the light of the facts then existing, becomes, to say the least, ambiguous. The general provision for the termination of the grant for the whole Garden street branch, as made in 1880, ought not to be expunged by an implication arising out of such doubtful language as is found in this 1885 ordinance. But if otherwise, it results only that the particular extension expired in September, 1904, with the grant to the Euclid avenue line, which, at that period, expired on that date.

In 1887, June 17, an extension of the Garden street branch was granted, which, by the terms of the ordinance, was to terminate "with the grant for the Garden street main line," without increase of fare being charged. Here the council, it will be observed, expressly referred to the Garden street branch as the main line, and it is undoubtedly plain that it was properly so referred to. In extending the branch, and with reference to the extension, the branch would naturally be regarded and spoken of as the main line. If not done in all cases it is somewhat difficult to find any reason for it.

Again, by an ordinance passed March 10, 1890, granting leave to change the motive power on the Garden street branch, the right was given to operate that branch by electric power "during the term of its present grant of said Garden street branch." The "present grant" for the Garden street branch *was that which was granted in [137] March, 1880, which was to terminate in twenty-five years, or March 22, 1905. Here was a clear recognition of the time when that grant expired, and there had been no ordinance or resolution of the council, since 1880, which, in our opinion, changed the termination of that grant. It is an entire mistake to say that at this time the right to operate the Garden street tracks terminated at the same time with the right of the company to operate the Euclid avenue line, or that the Garden street branch was but an extension of that line.

On the 30th of March, 1891, the right was granted to construct and operate a second or additional track upon Central avenue (Garden street) from the east line of Willson avenue to the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad tracks. It was provided in that ordinance that the right therein granted should be for and until the expiration of the grants for the said company's main line. Here again the question arises, What was the meaning of the expression "main line" as used in this connection? The ordinance allowed a second or additional track in a street in which the company then had the right to use, and was using, a single track. So far as that extended grant was concerned, the main line was the rest of the Garden street branch, and the same observations that we have made heretofore in regard to the main line are operative here.

It cannot be possible that it was intended to limit the right to use the second or additional track, in the portion of the street mentioned, to a different time than that which existed with relation to the first track laid down by the company in the same street. Of course, the two grants were meant to terminate at the same time.

At this time the grant to the company's Euclid avenue line had been extended so that it did not expire until July 13, 1913. Can it be supposed that the council intended that this short length of road, in which a second or additional track was to be laid, was to be operated with two track until 1905 and after that with one track until 1913? We think such a construction [138] *is not permissible, and that what is meant by the language, "main line," in that ordinance, means the line which is the main line with reference to the extension therein granted; namely, the Garden street branch, and not the Euclid avenue line.

The ordinance of the 20th of April, 1891, is somewhat important. It granted the East Cleveland Railroad Company permission to lay an additional or second track in Quincy street, from New street to Woodland Hills avenue. That street at the point indicated is part of the Garden street branch, and, as compared with the rest of the Garden street branch, is a very small portion thereof, and the ordinance only grants the right to lay an additional track. The right granted was, by the terms of § 3, to "be valid until the expiration of the grants for said company's tracks on said Quincy street, east of Lincoln avenue, to wit, July 13, 1913."

It is said that the council, in such ordinance, expressly authorizes the continuation of the operation of this Central avenue (Garden street) extension until July 13, 1913, the date of the expiration of the Euclid avenue line of the company. But the language used in this ordinance as to the time of the expiration of the grant for the company's tracks on Quincy street, east of Lincoln avenue, is a clear mistake of fact. The grant, it will be observed, is not in terms an extension to July 13, 1913. The reference to that date is but the expression of an opinion that the date named is the true time of the termination of the Quincy street grants. It is not a grant extending to that date, unless the previous grants are limited to that time. Now, on April 20, 1891, the grants on Quincy street, east of Lincoln avenue, in fact terminated either in 1904 or 1905, depending upon the construction of the language of the original grant in Quincy street, made in February, 1885. That was a grant which was to expire with the termination of the grant for the main line. For the reasons already given we think that that language meant the Garden street branch, which was the main line as to that extension, and that it, there-[139] fore, expired *in 1905, March 22. There was no subsequent legislation which extended that grant beyond that time.

204 U. S.

But if it be assumed that the grant for the company's tracks on Quincy street, east of Lincoln avenue, was to terminate with the grant for the Euclid avenue line as the main line, it must be recollected that that grant on Quincy street was made February 9, 1885, to the Garden street branch, and at that time the grant to the Euclid avenue line terminated in September, 1904. The grant of 1885 was not made to terminate with the grant for the main line, as that main line might thereafter be extended, but it referred to that grant as it then existed, and it was to be measured by such existing grant, and not by any subsequent extension which might be granted to the Euclid avenue line.

Nor do we think the time for the termination of the Garden street branch was in any degree affected by the consolidation of the various roads in 1893. The communication from the railway company, through its vice president, May 22, 1893, states distinctly that it "does not claim any rights greater than the constituent companies forming the organization, and that it intends to obey all ordinances to which each and all of the constituent companies were subject." Its intention to issue transfer checks, so as to have a continuous ride for one fare, gave no greater rights to the company than it theretofore had, nor did the resolution of the council, consenting to the consolidation on condition that but one fare should be charged for a continuous ride, give any greater rights to the consolidated company than each of the constituent companies had theretofore enjoyed. The consolidation does not require, in order to comply with the conditions specified in the resolution consenting to the consolidation, that the consolidated companies should be permitted to operate until the expiration of the longest grant to any of the companies. At the expiration of the grant to the Garden street branch the operation of that road might terminate, while the operation of the rest of the consolidated roads could go on perfectly well. To hold that, by virtue *of the consolidation, upon the conditions [140] stated, there was an implied extension of the grant to the Garden street branch of at least eight years, is to violate the rules of construction above referred to in regard to grants of this nature.

It is also strongly urged by the complainant that the ordinance passed soon after the consolidation ordinance, viz., the ordinance of July 17, 1893, not only imposed additional burdens on the consolidated company, but that the ordinance relates to a portion of the line originally constructed as part of the Garden street branch, and that it also required the operation of all the Garden street cars over these tracks, so that the council legislated as to the operation of the tracks upon Garden street and provided that such operation should continue until July 13, 1913. It is true the ordinance provided that the grant therein made should be limited to the above date, and there were certain conditions attached to the making of the grant, but it is quite plain to us that the ordinance could not be read as thereby extending the time for the termination of the Garden street branch without a most violent implication, based upon a very small foundation. This is made clear when it is seen that the streets through which the ordinance provides for extending the double track railroad formed no part of the line originally constructed as part of the Garden street branch. The latter road was permitted to use, for a short distance, the tracks of the Euclid avenue line from a point at the junction of Brownell street (subsequently made Erie street) with Prospect street, west to the public square. But that portion of the track of the Euclid avenue line was never part of the line originally constructed for the Garden street branch, nor did it become such because subsequently the branch road was permitted to use it for the passage of its cars to the public square. It is quite clear, therefore, that the limitation of the time for the termination of the grant provided for in the 6th section of the ordinance was not also an extension of the time for the termination of the separate grant to the Garden street branch from 1905 to 1913.

[141] The same may be said of the ordinance of February 19, 1894, *extending the tracks in Willson avenue. While the council consented to the extension by the complainant and the Cleveland City Railroad Company of the line of railway in Willson avenue, and also to the operation of that line in connection with other lines of the consolidated company, which included the Garden street branch, yet it cannot be held that there arose from that ordinance, when accepted by the company, a contract which should extend the time on all of the roads until the expiration of the grant contained in that ordinance, July 1, 1914. By such means an implied extension of time, affecting over 200 miles of track, as is stated, would be accomplished by making these conditions in regard to the Willson avenue grant a substitute for a grant, in plain language, affecting the Garden street branch. On the contrary, we think that the effect of that ordinance was simply to make it necessary for the Garden street branch and the other roads also, to comply with the conditions set forth in the ordinance until the expiration of their respective and existing grants, but that ordinance did not thereby extend the various other railroad grants by implication. There is no such connection between the various roads as to make it necessary, in order to operate one, that all the others should be in operation as a unit, and as comprehending one indivisible system. There is nothing in this record which shows any difficulty whatever in operating the Garden street branch as separate from the rest of the so-called system, or in operating that system separate from the branch. If the council had intended to extend the time of the termination of the various grants to these railroads it surely would have said so, and not left it to such vague and uncertain presumptions.

The chief importance of the various ordinances and resolutions for the extension of the Garden street branch, coupled with the user of the tracks of the Euclid avenue line by the branch road from Erie street west to the public square, and providing for but one fare over the whole road, is to strengthen, if possible, the contention of complainant that such branch has always been treated by the city and the company as a mere *ex-[142] tension of the Euclid avenue line, and to be operated in connection with it, so that a grant extending the time of the termination of the latter line included thereby the Garden street branch. We think the contention is not justified by the facts. The whole history of the branch line shows differently. Even in the important matter of a change of motive power, the Euclid avenue line was provided for in 1888 and 1889, while there was a separate and distinct provision made for the Garden street branch in 1890, and a statement therein made that the permission was granted to the Garden street branch during the term of the present grant to said branch.

A careful examination of the whole record leads us to the opinion that there is no error therein so far as the complainant's appeal is concerned, and the decree upon its appeal is affirmed.

Upon the appeal of the defendants, we think little need be said. The defendants insist that, upon the termination of the grant to the Garden street branch, the rails, poles, and other appliances for operating that road, and then remaining on the various streets, became the property of the city; or, at least, that the city had the right to take possession of the streets and of the rails, tracks, etc., therein existing. We agree with the court below in the opinion that the title to the property remains in the railroad company which had been operating the road, and we are of opinion that the Forest City Railway Company had no rights in the streets, so far as to affect the right of the complainant to its property then existing in such streets. How that property may be disposed of is not now a matter before this court. We only hold that the defendant company cannot avail itself of the provisions of the ordinance of January 11, 1904, so far as taking possession of the property of the complainant is concerned.

The decree upon the defendants' appeal is also affirmed.

[143] *UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
G. FALK & BROTHER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 143-152.)

Duties—on withdrawals from bonded warehouses.

1. The duty upon leaf tobacco which, when withdrawn from a bonded warehouse, has lost in weight through evaporation of moisture, must be assessed on the basis of weight at the time of the original entry, as prescribed by the proviso to the act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 213, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1701), § 33, which is general in its application, and not restricted to merchandise imported before the act took effect.

Duties—on withdrawals from bonded warehouses.

2. The duty on imports withdrawn from bonded warehouses must be assessed on the basis of weight at the time of original entry, as prescribed by the proviso to act of July 24, 1897, § 33, notwithstanding the addition by the act of Dec. 15, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 753, chap. 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 419), of a proviso to § 20 of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 407), that the same rate of duty shall be collected upon such merchandise as may be imposed by law upon like articles imported at the time of withdrawal, since this provision refers to the rate of duty, and not to the date at which the weight is to be taken as the basis of such duty.

Statutes—provisos—adoption of official construction by re-enactment.

3. Congress, by enacting the proviso to the act of July 24, 1897, § 33, which differs from the proviso to the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 624, chap. 1244), § 50, only in substituting the word "entry" for the word "withdrawal" as the date when the weight of merchandise withdrawn from bonded warehouses is to be taken as the basis of the duty, must be deemed to have adopted the construction given to the earlier proviso by the Attorney General and followed by the executive officers charged with the administration of the law, viz., that such proviso was general in its application, and not restricted to merchandise imported before the act took effect.

[No. 259.]

Argued December 4, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York sustaining the decision of the board of general appraisers, which had affirmed the ruling of the collector that the duty on imports withdrawn from bonded warehouses must be assessed on the basis of the weight at the time of the original entry. Judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and that of the Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 77 C. C. A. 40, 146 Fed. 484.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

A construction accepted and acted on for sixteen years by the executive departments should not be rejected except for cogent and persuasive reasons.

Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 607, 32 L. ed. 269, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136, 40 L. ed. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

To give this proviso general application conforms to the principles of statutory construction.

United States v. Whitridge, 197 U. S. 135, 143, 49 L. ed. 696, 698, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; United States v. Downing, 76 C. C. A. 376, 146 Fed. 56.

Mr. John G. Carlisle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward S. Hatch, J. Stuart Tompkins, and Hatch, Keener, & Clute, filed a brief for respondents:

A proviso refers only to the provision of a statute to which it is appended.

Minis v. United States, 15 Pet. 423, 10 L. ed. 791; United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 10 L. ed. 689; United States v. Slazenger, 113 Fed. 525; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 186.

It is, of course, the intent of the statute that must prevail, but that intent must be gathered from the language used.

Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157

U. S. 1, 36, 37, 39 L. ed. 601, 611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508.

The meaning of the statute may not be looked for in the opinions of individual legislators.

Re Schilling, 3 C. C. A. 440, 11 U. S. App. 603, 53 Fed. 81; United States v. Downing, 5 C. C. A. 575, 14 U. S. App. 434, 56 Fed. 474; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 79, 23 L. ed. 224, 228.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the question whether, upon withdrawal of imports from a bonded warehouse, duties should be collected according to their weight then or upon their greater weight when entered and imported into the country, the loss having been occasioned by evaporation of moisture.

The merchandise in question was leaf tobacco imported into the port of New York, a part before and a part after July 24, 1897. It was entered under bond for warehousing without the payment of duty, and withdrawn from warehouse after the present tariff act went into effect, and was assessed by the collector for duty on the basis of weight at the time of its entry. The importers, Falk & Brother, protested and appealed from the decision of the collector to the board of general appraisers. The board affirmed the ruling of the collector on its opinion in Re Schmidt (G. A. 4214, T. D. 19715). Falk & Brother then instituted proceedings for review before the circuit court for the southern district of New York, and that court sustained the decision of the board of appraisers. 145 Fed. 574. The circuit court of appeals reversed the circuit court. 146 Fed. 484.

The contention of the importers is that the merchandise is subject to duty under the provisions of Schedule F of the act of July 24, 1897, based upon weight at the time of withdrawal from bond for consumption, under the provisions of § 50 of the act of October 1, 1890. It is contended that the proviso of the latter act has not been repealed but is in full force and effect, and is applicable to merchandise entered in bond subsequent to the passage of the act of July 24, 1897. The board of appraisers held that the proviso of § 50 of the act of 1890 was repealed by § 33 of the act of 1897.

Those sections are, respectively, as follows:

[146] *"Sec. 50. That on and after the day when this act shall go into effect all goods, wares, and merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made, and all goods, wares, and merchandise previously entered without payment of duty and under bond for warehousing, transportation, or any other purpose, for which no permit of delivery to the importer or his agent has been issued, shall be subjected to no other duty upon the entry or the withdrawal thereof than if the same were imported, respectively, after that day: Provided, that any imported merchandise deposited in bond in any public or private bonded warehouse, having been so deposited prior to the first day of October, eighteen hundred and ninety, may be withdrawn for consumption at any time prior to February first, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, upon the payment of duties at the rates in force prior to the passage of this act: Provided, further, That, when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse, said duties shall be levied and collected upon the weight of such merchandise at the time of its withdrawal." 26 Stat. at L. 624, chap. 1244.

"Sec. 33. That on and after the day when this act shall go into effect all goods, wares, and merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made, and all goods, wares, and merchandise previously entered without payment of duty, and under bond for warehousing, transportation, or any other purpose, for which no permit of delivery to the importer or his agent has been issued, shall be subjected to the duties imposed by this act, and to no other duty, upon the entry or the withdrawal thereof: Provided, That, when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse, said duties shall be levied and collected upon the weight of such merchandise at the time of its entry." 30 Stat. at L. 213, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1701.

The circuit court held that those sections were not repugnant. The court said: "Neither is general in its application, but is restricted to merchandise previously imported for which *no entry has been made." [147] The court, however, sustained the decision of the board on the ground that § 2983 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1958) was applicable. That section is as follows: "In no case shall there be any abatement of the duties or allowance for any injury, damage, deterioration, loss, or leakage sustained by any merchandise while deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse."

The importers denied the application of that section, and contended that under the law, and particularly under § 20 of the customs administrative act of June 10, as amended December 15, 1902 (presently to be stated), they were authorized to withdraw the merchandise from warehouse upon the payment of duties and charges based upon its weight at the time of withdrawal. The court ruled against the contention, and said: "It seems too plain for discussion that the word 'loss' [referring to § 2983], coupled as it is in the disjunctive with 'leakage,' applies precisely to such a case as the one before us. I cannot find any sound reason for believing that the Congress did not have § 2983 in mind when it enacted said § 20, as amended. It is obvious that § 20, especially as amended, refers exclusively to rate rather than weight." The circuit court of appeals differed from the circuit court in the application of § 2983. It held that the loss there provided for related solely to the loss of merchandise subject to duty, and such loss had not occurred. The court further held that the other terms of the section referred to actual reduction in the value or quantity of the merchandise itself. "It is clear," it was said, "that evaporation of moisture is not 'loss' . . . sustained by . . . merchandise." The case of Seeberger v. Wright & L. Oil & Lead Mfg. Co. 157 U. S. 183, 39 L. ed. 665, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583, was referred to as analogous. The court also disagreed with the construction of the circuit court of § 20 of the customs administrative act, and held that by virtue of the proviso added to that section December 15, 1902 (stated later), duties should have been assessed according to the weight of the tobacco at the time of its withdrawal.

[148] *This history of the case exhibits the contentions of the parties and the elements of the contentions, and, it will be seen, the case is one of statutory construction.

First, as to Seeberger v. Wright & L. Oil & Lead Mfg. Co. supra, which is urged as controlling. The importation there was flaxseed. The proof showed that the seed contained dust composed of clay, sand, and gravel to an average of 4 per cent. The case turned upon the meaning of the word "draught" in § 2898 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1919). It was assumed that the word did not apply to impurities, and it was said that the lower court was correct in assuming that the flaxseed in question which was made dutiable, under the act of 1883 [22 Stat at L. 513, chap. 121], at 20 cents per bushel of 56 pounds, less tare, meant 56 pounds of clean seed, or, at least, seed free from any impurities, such as the clay, sand, and gravel in question.

The moisture which the tobacco in the case at bar absorbed cannot be said to be an impurity within the meaning of that decision, even though moisture in tobacco is a variable quantity and its amount can be estimated by weighing the tobacco at different times. Nor can it be considered as an independent, nontaxable substance, even though, as conceded in this case, it was absorbed on the ocean voyage. The statutes contemplate and apply to merchandise which may change in weight, and if the moisture in the tobacco in this case can be regarded as an independent substance,—so much "sea water," to use counsel's graphic phrase,—a question of the application of §§ 50 or 33 could not arise. One or other of those sections was considered applicable from the beginning, and the importations regarded as controlled by it, as merchandise subject to duty by weight, and necessarily there was involved the question at what time the weight should be estimated,—at the time of entry or at the time of withdrawal from warehouse. To that question, then, we shall address ourselves.
204 U. S.

It is said by counsel for the United States that, prior to October 1, 1890, duties were uniformly demanded and collected according to the weight of merchandise at original entry, citing *in support of the as-[149]sertion the custom regulations of 1884 and 1899. Upon that date (October 1, 1890) the tariff act of 1890 took effect. Section 50 provided, as we have seen, that goods previously imported, for which no entry had been made, and goods warehoused, for which no permit of delivery had been issued, should be subject to no other duty than if the goods were imported after the day the act took effect. It was also provided that, when duties were based upon the weight of warehoused merchandise, the duty should "be levied and collected upon the weight of such merchandise at the time of its withdrawal" (italics ours). A question arose as to the scope of the proviso,—whether it was restricted to the matter immediately preceding, that is, merchandise imported before the act took effect, or was of general application, applying as well to merchandise imported after as before the act took effect. The Attorney General decided that the latter was its effect. He said (20 Ops. Atty. Gen. 81, 82): "I am aware that under former tariff acts the rule has been to levy duties upon weighable merchandise according to the weight at the date of importation, but this proviso seems to be intended to change that rule, and there seems to be sufficient reason for such change."

The executive officers of the government followed this construction until the act of July 24, 1897, known as the Dingley act, was passed. The construction made by the Attorney General is disputed as applicable to § 33 of the act of 1897, and it is urged that the whole scope and meaning of that section, when reduced to its simplest terms, make goods theretofore entered under bond for warehouse subject to the duties imposed by the act upon the withdrawal thereof, when the section is construed in accordance with the rule that a proviso refers only to the provision of a statute to which it is appended. This may be conceded to be the primary purpose of a proviso, but a presumption of such purpose cannot prevail to determine the intention of the legislature against other tests of meaning more demonstrative. We said in United States v. Whitridge, 197 U. S. at page 143, 49 L. ed. at page 698, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. at page 408: "While no doubt the grammatical and [150] *logical scope of a proviso is confined to the subject-matter of the principal clause, we cannot forget that in practice no such limit is observed." And the Attorney General's opinion cannot be overlooked. The proviso which he construed in § 50 of the act of 1890 was re-enacted in § 33 of the act of 1897. It would be extreme to hold that Congress by doing so intended to set up the technical rule relating to provisos against the construction of the Attorney General, and to change that construction by repeating the very words construed. And there could have been no oversight. The practice of the executive officers for years gave emphasis and materiality to the construction. A change was made, however,—a change of one word,—a change recommended by the Treasury Department to increase the revenues and give greater convenience to the administration of the customs laws. The word "entry" was substituted for the word "withdrawal," and necessarily thereafter duties upon merchandise there provided for were to be based upon weight at the time of entry. Nor do we see that there is any contradiction of this in other provisions of the statute. Certain provisions of the customs administrative act are, however, relied upon. The provisions of that act, hereafter quoted, originated in § 1 of the act of March 14, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 8, chap. 17), and were carried into the Revised Statutes as § 2970 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1950). which provided that merchandise deposited in warehouse might be withdrawn for consumption within one year from the date of importation, upon payment of the duties and charges to which it might be subject by law at the time of withdrawal. At the expiration of one year, and until the expiration of three years, it might be withdrawn for consumption on payment of the duties assessed on the original entry and charges, and an additional duty of 10 per centum on the amount of such duties. It was decided in Merritt v. Cameron, 137 U. S. 542, 550, 551, 34 L. ed. 772, 775, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, that that section "was intended to provide for cases in which a change of rate of duty had been made by statute while the merchandise was in bonded warehouse."

414

*Then came § 20 of the customs ad-[151] ministrative act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 407), as amended by act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 624, chap. 1244, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1950), providing that warehouse merchandise might be withdrawn for consumption within three years from the date of the original importation, on payment of the duties and charges to which it might be subject by law at the time of such withdrawal. The section was amended in 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 753, chap. 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 419) by the addition of the following proviso: "Provided, That the same rate of duty shall be collected thereon as may be imposed by law upon like articles of merchandise imported at the time of the withdrawal." The circuit court of appeals gave controlling force to the proviso as fixing the meaning of the section. The court said that it had held in Mosle v. Bidwell, 65 C. C. A. 533, 130 Fed. 334, "that the amendment of 1902 was declaratory of the meaning of the section prior to said amendment, and that its meaning as thus declared was that no greater or different duties could be imposed than those to which other like goods imported at the time of withdrawal would be subject." Regarding this decision as conclusive the court said: "If other like goods had been imported at the time when these goods (the tobacco in question) were withdrawn, duty would have been assessed thereon according to their weight at such time." But the question in Mosle v. Bidwell was not the same as in the case at bar. The question now is not what rate of duty merchandise is subject to, or whether it is exempt from duty, but at what date its weight is to be taken as a basis of duty. And weight is a fact independent of the rate of duty. The proviso of § 20 of the customs administrative act, therefore, cannot be made paramount to the proviso in § 33 of the tariff act of 1897. Nor was that the purpose of its enactment. It was enacted to nullify the effect of the decision of the circuit court in Mosle v. Bidwell, by which § 20 was construed to require the payment of duties which had accrued at the time of importation, notwithstanding a change of rate or that the goods had become exempt from duty before *their withdrawal from ware-[152] house. This construction was contrary to the general understanding of the section and the practice of the Department. This, then, is our view: The Attorney General having construed the proviso of § 50 of the act of 1890 as not restricted to the matter which immediately preceded it, but as of general application, and this construction having been followed by the executive officers charged with the administration of the law, Congress adopted the construction by the enactment of § 33 of the act of 1897 and intended to make no other change than to require, as the basis of duty, the weight of the merchandise at the time of entry, instead of its weight at the time of its withdrawal from warehouse.

204 U. S.

Judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is therefore reversed and that of the Circuit Court is affirmed and the case remanded to the latter court.

Mr. Justice Moody took no part in the decision of this case.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
EX REL. ALBERT J. HATCH, Plff. in Err.,

v.

EDWARD REARDON, A Peace Officer of the County of New York.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 152-162.)

Constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—discrimination—validity of stock transfer tax.

1. The tax on transfers of corporate stock imposed by N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 241, is not invalid under U. S. Const. 14th Amend. as making an arbitrary discrimination in favor of sales of other kinds of personal property, such as corporate bonds.

Constitutional law—due process of law—validity of stock transfer tax.

2. Even as applied to shares of a foreign corporation owned by nonresidents, the tax on transfers of corporate stock imposed by N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 241, is not invalid under U. S. Const. 14th Amend. as taking property without due process of law.

Constitutional law—due process of law—validity of stock transfer tax.

3. The adoption of the face value of the shares as the basis of the tax on transfers of corporate stock, imposed by N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 241, does not deprive the owners of their property without due process of law.

Interstate commerce—state regulation—stock transfer tax.

4. An unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce is not made by the tax on transfers of corporate stock imposed by N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 241, as applied to a sale in New York, between two nonresidents, of the stock of foreign railway corporations.

[No. 310.]

Argued December 11, 12, 1906. Decided
January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for the City and County of New York to review an order denying relief by habeas corpus to one charged with a violation of the New York stock transfer tax law, which order was affirmed successively by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, and by the Court of Appeals of the state. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 110 App. Div. 821, 97 N. Y. Supp. 535; in Court of Appeals, 184 N. Y. 431, 77 N. E. 970.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John G. Milburn, John F. Dillon, and John G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The general rule of equality is that all persons subject to legislation shall be treated alike, under like circumstances and conditions, both in the privileges conferred and in the limitations imposed.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On state licenses or taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 204 U. S.

487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 188, 31 L. ed. 650, 653, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 560, 561, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 159, 160, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 668-671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

Classification for the purpose of taxation is subject to this rule of equality.

Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; State, Central R. Co. Prosecutor, v. State Assessors, 48 N. J. L. 1, 57 Am. Rep. 516, 2 Atl. 789; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 562, 563, 46 L. ed. 690, 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 521, 522, 43 L. ed. 786, 793, 794, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 352, 353, 35 L. ed. 1035, 1039, 1040, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 732, 47 L. ed. 669, 672, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 235, 50 L. ed. 451, 456, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 274, 275, 49 L. ed. 471, 476, 477, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Savannah, 198 U. S. 392, 397, 398, 49 L. ed. 1097, 1099, 1100, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Magon v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 299, 300, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1044, 1045, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

There is no basis for the separation of sales of shares of corporate stock from sales of all other species of personal property for the purposes of taxation.

Hayes v. Missouri, supra; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 382.

The objection of inequality and arbitrary discrimination was not and could not have been raised against the provisions of the Federal war revenue act in Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 48 L. ed. 481, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, and was not discussed by this court. That case decided only that the tax on sales of shares of stock imposed by the war revenue act was not a direct tax, but fell within the category of "duties, imposts, and excises," as those terms are used in the Federal Constitution.

Moreover, the equality clause of the 14th Amendment is confined to state legislation. The limitations on the taxing powers of Congress are those respecting the apportionment of direct taxes, the uniformity of duties, and the nontaxability of the exports.

License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 471, 18 L. ed. 497, 500.

A tax on a sale of property is virtually a tax on the property itself.

Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566, 573, 24 L. ed. 1015, 1017; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 521, 43 L. ed. 786, 793, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 444, 6 L. ed. 678, 687; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 581, 582, 39 L. ed. 759, 819, 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Almy v. California, 24 How. 169, 16 L. ed. 614; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

A sale of property is an exercise of one of the rights of ownership, and no distinction can be drawn between a tax on the exercise of a right of ownership and a tax on the property itself. Property is, in its final analysis, simply a complex mass of rights over a tangible or intangible thing, the main one of which is the right of alienation. To deprive a man of that right would largely destroy the value of any article of property. Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Wright v. Hart, 182 N. Y. 330, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 338, 75 N. E. 404. To tax its exercise is, therefore, to tax a main element in the value of the property, and consequently the property itself.

A tax on sales of shares of a corporation is, on this theory, either (a) tax on the property of the corporation represented by the shares (People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Coleman, 126 N. Y. 433, 12 L.R.A. 762, 27 N. E. 818; Re Bronson, 150 N. Y. 1, 34 L.R.A. 238, 55 Am. St. Rep. 632, 44 N. E. 707; Flynn v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 158 N. Y. 493, 53 N. E. 520; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 13, 44 L. ed. 651, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Mechanics' Bank v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 13 N. Y. 599; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; People v. Equitable Trust Co. 96 N. Y. 387), or (b) on the shares themselves, treated and regarded as a distinct species of property (State Assessors v. Comptoir Nat. d'Escompte, 191 U. S. 388, 402-404, 48 L. ed. 232, 238, 239, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; New York ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Miller, 202 U. S. 584, 597, 50 L. ed. 1155, 1160, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Re Enston, [People v. Sherwood] 113 N. Y. 174, 3 L.R.A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Re James, 144 N. Y.

6, 43 Am. St. Rep. 725, 38 N. E. 961; People ex rel. Hoyt v. Tax & A. Comrs. 23 N. Y. 224).

The situs of the property owned by a shareholder in a corporation is either where the corporation exists, or at the domicile of the shareholder.

Re Enston, supra; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592; Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 483; Re Bronson, Re James, State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, Delaware Railroad Tax, Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. and Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky,—supra.

The tax created by this stamp act is a tax upon the transaction of buying and selling shares of stock, and if buying and selling are not commerce, nothing is commerce. And if the thing sold is not within the state levying the tax, and the vendor is a citizen of another state, then such a sale or transaction is interstate commerce, and not subject to the state's taxing power in any form or to any extent.

Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502, 30 L. ed. 699, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 50, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Muskogee Nat. Teleph. Co. v. Hall, 55 C. C. A. 208, 118 Fed. 382; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 597, 43 L. ed. 290, 297, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 356, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1188, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Judson, Taxn. § 146; Miller, Const. 80; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 465, 48 L. ed. 518, 523, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

The New York stamp act is not valid as a tax on the right or privilege to make a sale or transfer.

Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 166, 34 L. ed. 150, 153, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851.

204 U. S.

If the transaction set forth in the criminal complaint in this case is an interstate commerce transaction, then it inevitably follows that, applied to this transaction, the New York stamp act is an interference with interstate commerce and therefore void.

Lyng v. Michigan and Crutcher v. Kentucky, supra; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

And it is immaterial that the state lays the same taxes on domestic commerce that it attempts to lay on interstate commerce.

Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 497, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The act is an interference with commerce with foreign nations.

Brown v. Maryland, supra.

The act is a unit, and void in toto.

Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wiekham) 92 U. S. 259, 275, 23 L. ed. 543, 550; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Brimmer v. Reberman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 62, 35 L. ed. 649, 654, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851.

Even if the mere certificates of stock sent or brought to New York for sale were to be deemed property within this state, this tax law is void under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678.

Mr. Julius M. Mayer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Horace McGuire and James C. Graham, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Congress of the United States is a body with limited powers: it possesses none which are not to be found in the Constitution. The legislature of New York, on the other hand, has absolute and unlimited powers, except where expressly restrained by the Constitution of the United States. None of the restrictions contained in the latter instrument cover this field of taxation.

Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 369, 48 L. ed. 481, 483, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, is a direct precedent in this court.

The tax is an excise or stamp tax.

United States v. Thomas, 115 Fed. 207, Affirmed in 192 U. S. 363, 48 L. ed. 481, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 579; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 445, 19 L. ed. 99; Pollock v. Farmers Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 576, 39 L. ed. 817, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 274.

The act neither creates discrimination nor produces confiscation of property, under the Constitution of the United States.

Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592, 43 L. ed. 823, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 518, 522, 43 L. ed. 792, 794, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Re Whiting, 150 N. Y. 30, 34 L.R.A. 232, 55 Am. St. Rep. 640, 44 N. E. 715; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 371, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 316, 58 Am. Rep. 502, 10 N. E. 685; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 293, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; People v. Home Ins. Co. 92 N. Y. 337; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 679, 25 L. ed. 754, 755; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 43 L. ed. 91, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

When the state may tax at all, the manner in which the tax shall be assessed, and the rate of taxation, however arbitrary or capricious, are matters of legislative discretion. It is not for the Federal court to suggest in any case that a more equitable mode of assessment or rate of taxation might be adopted than the one prescribed. The only concern of that court is with the validity of the tax; all else is beyond its jurisdiction.

Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 231, 21 L. ed. 888, 896; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326-336, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1201, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Vermont & C. R. Co. v. Vermont C. R. Co. 63 Vt. 19, 10 L.R.A. 562, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 488, 21 Atl. 262, 731.

The certificate of stock, if in the state, is liable to taxation, to attachment and execution. It is tangible property, having an existence absolutely complete and separate from the capital stock of the company, its assets, its property.

People ex rel. Commercial Cable Co. v. Morgan, 178 N. Y. 439, 67 L.R.A. 960, 70 N. E. 967; People ex rel. Consolidated Ginseng Co. v. Kelsey, 105 App. Div. 175, 93 N. Y. Supp. 369; New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 350; Van Allen v. Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229; Cleveland Trust Co. v. Lander, 184 U. S. 114, 46 L. ed. 458, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Simpson v. Jersey City Contracting Co. 165 N. Y. 193, 55 L.R.A. 796, 58 N. E. 896; Plympton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592; Re Bronson, 150 N. Y. 1, 34 L.R.A. 238, 55 Am. St. Rep. 632, 44 N. E. 707; New Orleans v. Stem- pel, 175 U. S. 319, 44 L. ed. 180, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.
418

The general course of decisions has sustained taxation of goods brought from other states, if taxed like all other property in the state.

Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 538, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415, 40 La. Ann. 226, 8 Am. St. Rep. 519, 3 So. 642; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382.

A state may tax all property which has a situs within its limits, regardless of the fact that it may have come from or is destined to foreign countries or another state. Certainly, then, it can tax a transaction,—to wit, a transfer taking place within the borders of the state.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Brown v. Houston, supra; Standard Oil Co. v. Combs, 96 Ind. 179, 49 Am. Rep. 156; Rieman v. Shepard, 27 Ind. 288; Carrier v. Gordon, 21 Ohio St. 605; Woodruff v. Parham, supra; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 520, 48 L. ed. 546, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

The reluctance of the courts to interfere with enactments relating to taxation is demonstrated in a long line of cases. The scope of the taxing power enables the state, from time to time, to bring within the purview of its taxing power new subjects which have not been covered by previous legislation; as, for example, mortgages owned by citizens of other states on property within the state. Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, supra.

The right of succession to the property of one dying.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Debts owing by a resident debtor to a nonresident creditor.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

The rights given to a foreign corporation to carry on business within the state.

Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

The amount of capital employed by a foreign corporation within the state.

New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. ed. 323, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

Likewise, the courts have been most liberal in recognizing that it becomes necessary for states to select certain classes, or certain subject-matter, as distinguished from other classes and other subject-matter.

Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 354, 35 L. ed. 1040, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 228, 41 L. ed. 697, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 293, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 597, 598, 43 L. ed. 297, 298, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

Mr. E. Crosby Kindleberger also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The court of appeals having decided that the act did not, in any respect, violate the Constitution of the state of New York, its decision precludes this question from being raised in this court.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 38 L. ed. 265, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 462, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Rasmussen v. Idaho, 181 U. S. 198, 200, 45 L. ed. 820, 821, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Williams v. Parker, 188 U. S. 491, 502, 47 L. ed. 559, 562, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 35, 50 L. ed. 65, 74, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 290, 50 L. ed. 744, 760, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

A taxing statute of a state should not be declared unconstitutional unless clearly opposed to the Constitution of the United States.

King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 436, 43 L. ed. 214, 226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592, 614, 615, 43 L. ed. 823, 831, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 562, 563, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

The tax imposed by chapter 241 of the Laws of 1905 is a tax on transfers, and not a direct tax on property.

New York ex rel. Brooklyn City R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 48, 50, 50 L. ed. 79, 84, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 329, 333, 204 U. S.

334, 46 L. ed. 569, 573, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; Foppiano v. Speed, 199 U. S. 501, 50 L. ed. 288, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. ed. 451, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 47 L. ed. 400, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 664, 43 L. ed. 323, 326, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 268, 269, 45 L. ed. 853, 854, 855, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 370, 48 L. ed. 481, 483, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

It is difficult to see how Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 48 L. ed. 481, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, can be distinguished from the case at bar, for the state statute is identical with the act of Congress there construed, and the state, through its legislature, has like power in matters of taxation which is afforded to the Congress of the United States. This rule is particularly applicable in matters of taxation.

French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 329, 45 L. ed. 879, 884, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 274, 49 L. ed. 471, 476, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 69, 49 L. ed. 663, 668, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Due process of law, as applied to taxation, means only taxation according to accepted usage. Granting that this tax is an indirect one, and usage having settled that no hearing or grievance day is required, it necessarily follows that the imposition of tax is not without due process of law.

Hagar v. Reclamation District No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 711, 28 L. ed. 569, 573, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 239, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. ed. 556; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 60, 44 L. ed. 969, 977, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The state may classify its subjects of taxation in any reasonable way.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 351, 35 L. ed. 1035, 1039, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 662, 37 L. ed. 599, 601, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 539, 40 L. ed. 247, 252, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 195, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 300, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1045, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 521, 43 L. ed. 786, 793, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 94, 45 L. ed. 102, 104, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 562, 46 L. ed. 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 365, 46 L. ed. 950, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Billings v. Illinois, supra; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261, 49 L. ed. 471, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Coulter v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 196 U. S. 599, 49 L. ed. 615, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. ed. 451, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 50 L. ed. 744, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

The stock transfer act effects a reasonable classification.

Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 610, 47 L. ed. 323, 328, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 733, 47 L. ed. 669, 673, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 103, 47 L. ed. 400, 403, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 327, 29 L. ed. 414, 416, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Savannah, 198 U. S. 392, 49 L. ed. 1097, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, supra.

The fact that the tax is measured by the par value of the shares does not invalidate the act.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Jennings v. Coal Ridge Improv. & Coal Co. 147 U. S. 147, 37 L. ed. 116, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

The act does not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 623, 48 L. ed. 1142, 1154, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 28, 48 L. ed. 325, 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co. 187 U. S. 611, 616, 47 L. ed. 328, 332, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206.

This court has frequently held that, although a state may not tax interstate commerce, yet it may impose a tax on property used to facilitate interstate commerce, such as the rolling stock or vessels of a foreign corporation.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 23, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 305, 49 L. ed. 1059, 1062, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686.

If chapter 241 of the Laws of 1905 had attempted merely to tax the sales or transfers of the shares of foreign corporations, it might be argued with more force that this was a restraint on interstate commerce; but the law specifically taxes the sales of all stocks, both domestic and foreign; and its jurisdiction to do so depends on the sales taking place within its borders; and no movement or transportation of goods is contemplated. Under these circumstances it is always held that the state may tax goods or the sale of such goods without violating the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 311, 39 L. ed. 430, 434, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 520, 48 L. ed. 538, 546, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 69, 49 L. ed. 663, 668, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 234, 235, 50 L. ed. 451, 456, 457, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

The modern rule is that shares of stock have a taxable situs within the state where the certificates are physically present, even though, in one sense, they confer but a right to a share of property situated in the state where the corporation exists.

New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 350; Simpson v. Jersey City Contracting Co. 165 N. Y. 193, 55 L.R.A. 796, 58 N. E. 896; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 205, 50 L. ed. 150, 154, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36.

The novelty of the tax does not condemn it.

New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 44, 45, 47, 50 L. ed. 65, 78, 79, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705.

Arguments relating to the policy of the law, and not strictly to its constitutionality, should be addressed to the New York legislature, and not to this court, for this court is not concerned with the policy or wisdom of a taxation statute of a state, but merely whether or not it offends the Constitution of the United States.

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 295, 296, 50 L. ed. 744, 762, 763, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to revise an order [157] dismissing a writ of *habeas corpus and remanding the relator to the custody of the defendant in error. The order was made by a single justice and affirmed successively by the appellate division of the supreme court (110 App. Div. 821, 97 N. Y. Supp. 535), and by the court of appeals (184 N. Y. 431, 77 N. E. 970). The facts are these: The relator, Hatch, a resident of Connecticut, sold in New York to one Maury, also a resident of Connecticut, but doing business in New York, 100 shares of the stock of the Southern Railway Company, a Virginia corporation, and 100 shares of the stock of the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railroad Company, a Wisconsin corporation, and on the same day and in the same place received payment and delivered the certificates, assigned in blank. He made no memorandum of the sale and affixed to no document any stamp, and did not otherwise pay the tax on transfers of stock imposed by the New York Laws of 1905, chap. 241. He was arrested on complaint, and thereupon petitioned for this writ, alleging that the law was void under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The statute in question levies a tax of 2 cents on each hundred dollars of face value of stock, for every sale or agreement to sell the same, etc.; to be paid by affixing and canceling stamps for the requisite amount to the books of the company, the stock certificate, or a memorandum required in certain cases. Failure to pay the tax is made a misdemeanor punishable by fine, imprisonment, or both. There is also a civil penalty attached. The petition for the writ sets up only the 14th Amendment, as we have mentioned, but both sides have argued the case under the commerce clause of the Constitution (art. 1, § 8) as well, and we shall say a few words on that aspect of the question.

It is true that a very similar stamp act of the United States, the act of June 13, 1893, chap. 448, § 25, Schedule A, 30 Stat. at L. 448, 458, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2300, was upheld in Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 48 L. ed. 481, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305. But it is argued that different considerations apply to the states, and the tax is said to be bad under the 14th Amendment [158] *for several reasons. In the first place it is said to be an arbitrary discrimination. This objection to a tax must be approached with the greatest caution. The general expressions of the Amendment must not be allowed to upset familiar and long-established methods and processes by a formal elaboration of rules which its words do not import. See Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 293, 50 L. ed. 744, 761, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459. Stamp acts necessarily are confined to certain classes of transactions, and to classes which, considered economically or from the legal or other possible points of view, are not very different from other classes that escape. You cannot have a stamp act without something that can be stamped conveniently. And it is easy to contend that justice and equality cannot be measured by the convenience of the taxing power. Yet the economists do not condemn stamp acts, and neither does the Constitution.

The objection did not take this very broad form, to be sure. But it was said that there was no basis for the separation of sales of stock from sales of other kinds of personal property; for instance, especially, bonds of the same or other companies. But bonds in most cases pass by delivery, and a stamp tax hardly could be enforced. See further, Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 522, 523, 43 L. ed. 786, 794, 795, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522. In Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168, practical grounds were recognized as sufficient to warrant a prohibition, which did not apply to sales of other property, of sales of stock on margin, although this same argument was pressed with great force. A fortiori do they warrant a tax on sales which is not intended to discriminate against or to discourage them, but simply to collect a revenue for the benefit of the whole community in a convenient way.

It is urged further that a tax on sales is really a tax on property, and that therefore the act, as applied to the shares of a foreign corporation owned by nonresidents, is a taking of property without due process of law. Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36. This argument presses the expressions in Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 444, 6 L. ed. 678, 687; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, and intervening cases, *to new applications, and farther than [159] they properly can be made to go: Whether we are to distinguish or to identify taxes on sales and taxes on goods depends on the scope of the constitutional provision concerned. Compare Foppiano v. Speed, 199 U. S. 501, 520, 50 L. ed. 288, 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138. A tax on foreign bills of lading may be held equivalent to a tax on exports as against article 1, § 9; a license tax on importers of foreign goods may be held an unauthorized interference with commerce; and yet it would be consistent to sustain a tax on sales within the state as against the 14th Amendment, so far as that alone is concerned. Whatever the right of parties engaged in commerce among the states, a sale depends in part on the law of the state where it takes place for its validity and, in the courts of that state, at least, for the mode of proof. No one would contest the power to enact a statute of frauds for such transactions. Therefore the state may make parties pay for the help of its laws, as against this objection. A statute requiring a memorandum in writing is quite as clearly a regulation of the business as a tax. It is unnecessary to consider other answers to this point.

Yet another ground on which the owners of stock are said to be deprived of their property without due process of law is the adoption of the face value of the shares as the basis of the tax. One of the stocks was worth $30.75 a share of the face value of $100, the other $172. The inequality of the tax, so far as actual values are concerned, is manifest. But, here again equality in this sense has to yield to practical considerations and usage. There must be a fixed and indisputable mode of ascertaining a stamp tax. In another sense, moreover, there is equality. When the taxes on two sales are equal, the same number of shares is sold in each case; that is to say, the same privilege is used to the same extent. Valuation is not the only thing to be considered. As was pointed out by the court of appeals, the familiar stamp tax of 2 cents on checks, irrespective of amount, the poll tax of a fixed sum, irrespective of income or earning capacity, and many others, illustrate the *necessity and practice of sometimes substituting count for weight. See Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. Without going farther into a discussion which, perhaps, could have been spared in view of the decision in Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 48 L. ed. 481, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, and the constitutional restrictions upon Congress, we are of opinion that the New York statute is valid, so far as the 14th Amendment is concerned.

The other ground of attack is that the act is an interference with commerce among the several states. Cases were imagined, which, it was said, would fall within the statute, and yet would be cases of such commerce; and it was argued that if the act embraced any such cases it was void as to them, and, if void as to them, void altogether, on a principle often stated. United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. That the act is void as to transactions in commerce between the states, if it applies to them, is thought to be shown by the decisions concerning ordinances requiring a license fee from drummers, so called, and the like. Robbins v. Taxing District, 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

But there is a point beyond which this court does not consider arguments of this sort for the purpose of invalidating the tax laws of a state on constitutional grounds. This limit has been fixed in many cases. It is that unless the party setting up the unconstitutionality of the state law belongs to the class for whose sake the constitutional protection is given, or the class primarily protected, this court does not listen to his objections, and will not go into imaginary cases, notwithstanding the seeming logic of the position that it must do so, because if, for any reason, or as against any class embraced, the law is unconstitutional, it is void as to all. Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 311, 26 L. ed. 1044, 1049; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 118, 44 L. ed. 392, 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 283, 284, 45 L. ed. 527, 530, 531, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Cronin v. Adams, 192 U. S. 108, 114, 48 L. ed. 365, 368, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219. If the law is valid when confined to the *class of [161] the party before the court, it may be more or less of a speculation to inquire what exceptions the state court may read into general words, or how far it may sustain an act that partially fails. With regard to taxes, especially, perhaps it might be assumed that the legislature meant them to be valid to whatever extent they could be sustained, or some other peculiar principle might be applied. See, e. g., People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 283, 48 L. ed. 180, 186, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

Whatever the reason, the decisions are clear, and it was because of them that it was inquired so carefully in the drummer cases whether the party concerned was himself engaged in commerce between the states. Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 30, 35, 36, 46 L. ed. 785, 789, 793, 794, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Caldwell v. North Caro- lina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, supra. Therefore we begin with the same inquiry in this case, and it is plain that we can get no farther. There is not a shadow of a ground for calling the transaction described such commerce. The communications between the parties were not between different states, as in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067, and the bargain did not contemplate or induce the transport of property from one state to another, as in the drummer cases. Rearick v. Pennsylvania. The bargain was not affected in any way, legally or practically, by the fact that the parties happened to have come from another state before they made it. It does not appear that the petitioner came into New York to sell his stock, as it was put on his behalf. It appears only that he sold after coming into the state. But we are far from implying that it would have made any difference if he had come to New York with the supposed intent before any bargain was made.

It is said that the property sold was not within the state. The immediate object of sale was the certificate of stock present in New York. That document was more than evidence, it was a constituent of title. No doubt, in a more remote sense, the object was the membership or share which the certificate conferred or made attainable.

[162] More remotely still it was an *interest in the property of the corporation, which might be in other states than either the corporation or the certificate of stock. But we perceive no relevancy in the analysis. The facts that the property sold is outside of the state, and the seller and buyer foreigners, are not enough to make a sale commerce with foreign nations or among the several states, and that is all that there is here. On the general question there should be compared with the drummer cases the decisions on the other side of the line. Nathan v. Louisiana, 8 How. 73, 12 L. ed. 992; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367. A tax is not an unconstitutional regulation in every case where an absolute prohibition of sales would be one. American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365. We think it unnecessary to explain at greater length the reasons for our opinion that the petitioner has suffered no unconstitutional wrong.

Order affirmed.

204 U. S.

OHIO VALLEY NATIONAL BANK, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN HULITT, Receiver of the First National Bank of Hillsboro, Ohio.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 162-170.)

National banks—stockholder's liability—who are stockholders.

The pledgee of national bank stock as collateral security for a note, with power of public or private sale for the liquidation of the pledge, becomes the beneficial owner of such stock, and, as such, subject to the liability of a stockholder under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465, where, after the death of the pledgeor, it causes the stock to be registered in the name of an employee with no beneficial interest, and afterwards indorses upon the note the supposed value of the stock as of the date of the credit, and presents the note, as reduced by the amount of such valuation, to the pledgeor's administrator, who allows the claim in this form.

[No. 108.]

Argued November 16, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio in favor of defendant in an action to enforce the statutory liability of a shareholder in a national bank, with a direction to enter judgment for plaintiff. Affirmed.

See same case below, 69 C. C. A. 609, 137 Fed. 461.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This case was begun in the United States circuit court by John Hulitt as receiver of the First National Bank of Hillsboro, Ohio, NOTE.—As to who are liable as shareholders in national banks—see notes to Beal v. Essex Sav. Bank, 15 C. C. A. 130, and Earle v. Carson, 46 C. C. A. 503.

On the rights and liabilities of pledgees of corporate stock—see notes to Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L.R.A. 139; Frater v. Old Nat. Bank, 42 C. C. A. 135; and Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 478.

Pledgee as shareholder in national bank.

One whose relation to a national bank is that of a pledgee of its stock, and who is not registered as owner, and has not held himself out as such, is not chargeable with the personal liability for the debts of the bank imposed by law upon shareholders. Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465, Af-against the Ohio Valley National Bank, to recover the amount of an assessment upon certain shares of the stock of the Hillsboro Bank, which had become insolvent, which assessment was directed by the Comptroller of the Currency in accordance with the provisions of the national bank act. The case was tried upon an agreed statement of facts, from which it appears that on March 18, 1893, one Overton S. Price, for a loan of $10,000, gave his promissory note of that date to the Ohio Valley Bank, due ninety days after date, payable to his own order and indorsed by him, and deposited as collateral security for the note, among other securities, fifty shares of stock of the said First National Bank of Hillsboro, Ohio. The note had a power of sale attached to it, signed by Price, and authorizing the holder to sell or collect any portion of the collateral, at public or private sale, on the nonperformance of the promise, and at any time thereafter, without advertising or otherwise giving Price notice, and providing that, in case of public sale, the holder might purchase without liability to account for more than the net proceeds of the sale.

On December 25, 1893, Price died, leaving the note due and unpaid, and no payments firming 56 Fed. 430; Beal v. Essex Sav. Bank, 15 C. C. A. 128, 33 U. S. App. 101, 67 Fed. 816; Welles v. Larrabee, 2 L.R.A. 471, 36 Fed. 866.

He can only become chargeable with such liability either by becoming the owner of the shares in fact, or by holding himself out to be the owner, and thereby estopping himself to deny his personal liability as such. Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 47 L. ed. 792, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

He does become the owner, and, as such, subject to the statutory liability of a shareholder, by indorsing a credit for the supposed value of the stock upon the note to secure which the stock was pledged, and by presenting and obtaining the allowance of a claim against the estate of the deceased pledgeor for the balance of the indebtedness on such note. OHIO VALLEY NAT. BANK v. HULLITT.

He does not become the owner by paying an assessment made by the Comptroller to make good the impaired capital of the bank, and charging the same to the pledgeor as an additional advance, nor by assenting to the reduction of the capital stock made agreeably to law, under the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency. Higgins v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 46 C. C. A. 509, 108 Fed. 475.

A sale by the pledgee of certificates of national bank stock standing in the name of the pledgeor on the books of the bank, although made just before the declared insolvency of the bank, and with a view to escape complications, does not make the pledgee liable as owner, where the contract of pledge required a sale of the shares on default, and did not permit the pledgee to retain the stock as his own property. Magruder v. Colston, 44 Md. 349, 22 Am. Rep. 47.

A national bank which receives as collateral security for a note the stock of another national bank, and, on default, proceeds to sell the stock and bid it in, is not liable as a stockholder, where it never has a transfer of the shares made on the books, and, as between the pledgee bank and the debtor, who claims that the sale is invalid, the stock continues to be held merely as collateral for his debt. Robinson v. Southern Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 295, 45 L. 424

ed. 536, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383. Affirming 36 C. C. A. 584, 94 Fed. 964. The court said that, where one national bank takes the shares of another national bank as security for a loan, there is a presumption against any intention to become the owner of the collateral.

The pledgee of national bank stock, who is not registered as the owner, may have such stock listed in the name of an irresponsible employee without becoming liable to creditors as a shareholder, even though this be done for the purpose of escaping such liability. Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. supra; Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Hullitt v. Ohio Valley Nat. Bank, 69 C. C. A. 609, 137 Fed. 461; Wilson v. Merchants' Loan & T. Co. 39 C. C. A. 231, 98 Fed. 688; National Park Bank v. Harmon, 25 C. C. A. 214, 51 U. S. App. 148, 79 Fed. 891.

And the formal assent of the pledgeor is unnecessary where the certificates are indorsed in blank. Higgins v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. supra.

And where there is no pretense of a change of ownership, one who has taken national bank stock as collateral is liable as a shareholder only upon the ground of estoppel. Frater v. Old Nat. Bank. 42 C. C. A. 133, 101 Fed. 391, Affirming 86 Fed. 1006; Welles v. Larrabee, 2 L.R.A. 471, 36 Fed. 866.

And only in a clear case can a pledgee of national bank stock be held liable on this ground. Frater v. Old Nat. Bank, supra.

When an estoppel of this kind arises it grows out of conduct inconsistent with any other relation than that of absolute ownership of the stock. The question is ordinarily settled by the showing which the books of the bank make. Its creditors are entitled to assume that those persons whom the books show to be shareholders are such in fact, and if a pledgee permits his name to appear on the books of the bank as a shareholder he cannot escape liability as such to creditors of the bank because he may in fact hold the stock as collateral. Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. supra; Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 204 U. S.

have been made thereon except as herein-after stated.

On June 18, 1894, the bank made a transfer of the pledged stock of the First National Bank of Hillsboro, and also of certain other stock in the Dominion National Bank of Bristol, Virginia, to one Henry Otjen, an [164] employee of the bank, and pecuniarily *irresponsible. The shares were transferred on the books of the banks and new certificates issued in the name of Otjen and delivered to him on July 7, 1894. Otjen indorsed the certificates in blank. No money passed in consideration of the transfer, and none was expected, nor was any credit given or indorsed on the note by reason thereof.

The transfer was made upon the understanding and agreement between Otjen and the bank that Otjen should hold the stock as security for the indebtedness of the estate of Price upon the note, he to apply any amounts which he might realize from said stock as credits upon the note. In pursuance of this agreement Otjen subsequently paid the bank sums received from the Dominion National Bank on account of dividends received until the sale of that stock, when the proceeds of sale were likewise applied by him upon the note.

25 L. ed. 448; Moore v. Jones, 3 Woods, 53, Fed. Cas. No. 9,769; Wheelock v. Kost, 77 Ill. 296; Hale v. Walker 31 Iowa, 344, 7 Am. Rep. 137; Magruder v. Colston, 44 Md. 349, 22 Am. Rep. 47.

And this is so even where the debt has been paid and the stock returned to the debtor, with power of attorney to retransfer the shares on the books of the bank, if such retransfer is never made. Bowden v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 1 Hughes, 307, Fed. Cas. No. 1,714.

The registry of shares of national bank stock on the books of a bank in the name of a person as cashier of another national bank does not estop either the latter bank or the cashier from showing, in a suit to enforce the statutory liability of a shareholder, that such stock was held as collateral security for a loan, as such an entry is of such a character as to suggest a qualified or representative holding, and as such to put the public upon inquiry. Frater v. Old Nat. Bank, supra.

A single entry on the stock register of a national bank which shows that a certificate of stock has been issued to a person named therein will not estop him from showing that he holds such stock as pledgee, where that fact could be ascertained from an examination of another entry in the stock register to which the entry in question refers,—especially where the stock list which U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5210, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498, requires to be kept is not produced nor its absence accounted for. Tourtlot v. Stolteben, 101 Fed. 362.

But the failure to keep the list of stockholders of a national bank, required by law, does not affect the liability of one who appears on the books of the bank to be the owner, although he may in fact hold as pledgee. Hale v. Walker supra.

A case involving the question whether shares of national bank stock are held as owner or as pledgee, which turns upon the proper conclusion to be drawn from a commercial correspondence, in connection with other facts and circumstances, is properly referred to a jury, although the construction of written instruments is ordinarily a question for the court. Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 47 L. ed. 792, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

204 U. S.

Whether a pledgee of national bank stock is estopped to deny his personal liability as a shareholder by speaking of himself as holding or owning the stock, in letters to the officers of the bank, who understood perfectly the capacity in which such stock is retained, is a question for the jury. Ibid.

The burden is upon the receiver representing the creditors of an insolvent national bank of showing that a pledgee of its stock has knowingly permitted his name to be carried on the books of the bank as an owner of such stock, so as to estop him from denying such ownership as against creditors. Tourtlot v. Stolteben, supra.

In an action by the receiver of an insolvent national bank to recover an assessment from a pledgee of its stock, on the theory that such pledgee, by substituting for the original shares those of a bank with which the bank issuing them had been consolidated, converted the collateral, the receiver is charged with the burden of proving that the exchange was made without the consent of the pledgeor. Wilson v. Merchants' Loan & T. Co. 39 C. C. A. 231, 98 Fed. 688.

A pencil memorandum in the stock ledger of a national bank at the top of an account with a person to whom certain pledged shares of stock had been transferred at the request of the pledgee, which consists merely of the name of the latter, with whom the correspondence in regard to such account was carried on, is inadmissible in evidence on the issue whether such pledgee had become the owner of the stock and was chargeable with the personal liability of a shareholder. Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. supra.

A memorandum made by the assignee of a pledgeor of national bank stock without the knowledge or acquiescence of the pledgee, to the effect that such stock had been converted by the latter and did not sell for enough to pay the debt for which it was pledged, is inadmissible in evidence on the issue whether such pledgee had become the owner of the shares, and, as such, chargeable with the personal liability of the shareholders,—especially where such memorandum was obviously untrue, as the stock had never been sold. Ibid.

On February 19, 1896, the bank prepared proof of claim against the estate of Price, and, at that time, believing the stocks transferred to Otjen to afford a reasonable security for the note to the amount of $4,484, indorsed a credit for that sum upon the note, as follows: "Forty-four hundred and eighty-four ($4,484.00) dolls. paid on ac. of within note June 18, '94, being proceeds of sale of 30 shrs. stock Dominion National Bank and 20 shares of stock 1st National Bank of Hillsboro, O." The bank filed its proof of claim for the balance of the indebtedness upon the note; that no consideration was paid for said credit, and the same was not entered on the bank's books; that all dividends arising upon the distribution of the estate of Price were applied upon the note.

The Hillsboro bank continued to do business until July 16, 1896. From the date of transfer at all times the stock appeared on the books of the Hillsboro bank in the name of Otjen, there being nothing on the books to connect the Ohio Valley National Bank with the stock, or to indicate that it had any interest therein; that the defendant bank at no time performed any act of ownership, or exercised or attempted to exercise any of the rights of a stockholder [165] in said bank, or of *the Dominion National Bank, unless the acts stated were, in legal intentment, of that character. The Ohio Valley National Bank procured the shares to be transferred to Otjen because it was unwilling to assume the risk of the statutory liability of a stockholder in respect thereto. The circuit court of appeals held the bank liable as a stockholder (69 C. C. A. 609, 137 Fed. 461), and directed judgment accordingly.

Mr. Robert Ramsey argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. J. Muir, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The transfer to Otjen did not bring defendant into such relation to the shares as to subject it to the statutory liability.

Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 47 L. ed. 792, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

Defendant's relation to these shares was not in any manner affected by its proof of claim against the debtor's estate.

Deery v. Cray, 5 Wall. 795, 18 L. ed. 653; Ketchum v. Duncan, 96 U. S. 659, 666, 24 L. ed. 868, 871; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 813.

National banks lack corporate power to incur the risks of a speculative enterprise or partnership liabilities, by taking or holding corporate or syndicate shares, even though taken in satisfaction of a debt; and estoppel will not lie to bar the defense.

First Nat. Bank v. Converse, 200 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 537, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Wehrmann, 202 U. S. 295, 50 L. ed. 1036, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

Mr. Henry M. Huggins argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. T. Hough, filed a brief for defendant in error.

*Mr. Justice Day, after making the fore-[166] going statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 5151 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465) provides that the shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. This section undertakes to hold all shareholders responsible, and questions have arisen under varying circumstances as to what constitutes such shareholder.

In Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, it was held that the mere pledgee, who had never acted as a shareholder, would not be liable as such, notwithstanding the stock was transferred on the books of the bank and the certificate issued to an irresponsible person, in that instance a porter in the employment of the company, and this although the transfer had been thus made for the purpose of avoiding liability which might be incurred by the shareholders of the bank, in case of insolvency. In the course of the opinion, Mr. Chief Justice Waite, speaking for the court, recognized that the real owner might be held liable as a shareholder, but in that case the facts showed the warehouse company, sought to be held as a shareholder, was never other than a pledgee, and that notwithstanding the transfer to the irresponsible person, the real ownership of the stock remained in the original holder.

In Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465, the subject was considered at length, and it was held that one who was described in the certificate as a pledgee, and who in good faith held the shares as such, was not a shareholder, subject to the personal liability imposed by § 5151. The previous cases in this court were reviewed, and, in summing up the rules relating to the liability of shareholders in *national banks, de-[167] ducible from previous decisions, among other things it was said: "That the real owner of the shares of the capital stock of a national banking association may, in every case, be treated as a shareholder within the meaning of § 5151." And again: "The object of the statute is not to be defeated by the mere forms of transactions between shareholders and their creditors. The courts will look at the relations of parties as they actually are, or as, by reason of their conduct, they must be assumed to be, for the protection of creditors. Congress did not say that those only should be regarded as shareholders, liable for the contracts, debts, and engagements of the banking association, whose names appear on the stock list distinctly as shareholders. A mistake or error in keeping the official list of shareholders would not prevent creditors from holding liable all who were, in fact, the real owners of the stock, and as such had invested money in the shares of the association. As already indicated, those may be treated as shareholders within the meaning of § 5151 who are the real owners of the stock, or who hold themselves out, or allow themselves to be held out, as owners in such way and under such circumstances as, upon principles of fair dealing, will estop them, as against creditors, from claiming that they were not, in fact, owners."

And in Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 252, 47 L. ed. 792, 796, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553, the doctrine was stated that a defendant who was in fact the owner of shares of stock could not avoid liability by listing them in the name of another, notwithstanding it might do so if it were the mere pledgee of the stock; and further, that the case then under consideration turned upon the actual ownership of the shares, which question was properly left to the jury. And to the same effect are well-considered cases in other courts, Federal and state. It was held that the real owner might be charged, although his name never appeared upon the books of the bank. Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 3,653, opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Waite; Houghton v. Hubbell, 33 [168] C. C. A. 574, 63 U. S. App. 31, *91 Fed. 453; Laing v. Burley, 101 Ill. 591; Lesassier v. Kennedy, 36 La. Ann. 539.

Assuming, then, the established doctrine to be that the mere pledgee of national bank stock cannot be held liable as a shareholder so long as the shares are not registered in his name, although an irresponsible person has been selected as the registered shareholder, we deem it equally settled, both from the terms of the statute attaching the liability and the decisions which have construed the act, that the real owner of the shares may be held responsible, although in fact the shares are not registered in his name. As to such owner the law looks through subterfuges and apparent ownerships and fastens the liability upon the shareholder to whom the shares really belong.

Applying these principles to the case at bar, we think there can be no doubt of the liability of the Ohio Valley National Bank in this case. Conceding that it was exempt so long as the relation which it held to the stock was that of a pledgee, and that Otjen was the registered stockholder, holding for the benefit of the bank as pledgee, and not as owner,—what was the attitude of the parties after the death of Price, and the credit of the supposed value of the stock upon the note, and its presentation for allowance and acceptance by the representatives of Price's estate? As the foregoing statement shows, the stock was originally delivered to the bank, with a power of public or private sale for the liquidation of the pledge. After the death of Price the bank caused the stock to be registered in the name of Otjen. After proof of the claim the dividends paid out of the Price estate were credited upon the note. If the bank had followed literally the authority of the power of attorney attached to the note and sold the stock at public or private sale, and itself become the purchaser, we take it there could be no question that it would thus have become the real owner of the stock, and, within the principles of the cases heretofore cited, the shareholder, liable under the terms of the statute. We think what was in fact done necessarily *had the same effect; the bank applied the [169] value of the stock with the consent of the pledgee, and thus vested the title in the bank.

It is urged that although the indorsement upon the note in the form in which it was presented to Price's administrator recited credit as of June 18, 1894, being proceeds of a sale of the stock, there never was a sale in fact, and that the bank is not estopped by anything shown in the case from showing the true situation and the actual transaction between the parties.

Conceding, for this purpose, that Price's representative could have insisted upon a strict performance of the power conferred in the authority given to the bank as to the disposition of the collateral, yet, if the representative of Price desired to do so, there was nothing to prevent him from waiving a strict compliance with the terms named, and permitting the bank to acquire title to the stock by crediting its value on the note. This is in fact what was done. Instead of selling the stock, the bank, in executing the authority conferred, indorsed what it deemed the value of the stock, as of the date of the credit, upon the note, and, reduced by the amount of this valuation, presented the note to the administrator of Price, who must have allowed the claim in this form, as it is specifically stated that the subsequent dividends upon the claim were paid to the bank. By this transaction, who became the real owner of the stock? Certainly not Otjen, for it is not contended that he was other than a mere holder of the stock as collateral security to the bank, without any beneficial interest. Price had died, and his representative had allowed the claim, showing the application of the value of the stock as a credit upon the note. If Price's representative could have objected to the form in which the bank liquidated the pledge, he did not do so, but accepted the bank's method of divesting him of title by allowing the claim with the credit upon it. The bank thus become the beneficial owner of the stock, and had the Hillsboro National Bank continued solvent it certainly could not have denied to the Ohio Valley Bank, after this transaction, the rights and privileges of a stockholder.

As we have seen, this court, in construing the banking act, has not limited the liability to the registered stockholders. While the registered stockholders may be held liable to creditors regardless of the true ownership of the stock, and the pledgee of the stock, not appearing otherwise, is not liable, although the registered stockholder may be an irresponsible person of his choice, yet, where the real ownership of the stock is in one, his liability may be established, notwithstanding the registered ownership is in the name of a person, fictitious or otherwise, who holds for him.

We think the Circuit Court of Appeals did not err in holding the bank, in view of the facts shown in the case, as the true owner and responsible shareholder of the stock in question.

Judgment affirmed.

CHARLES ZARTARIAN, Appt.,

v.

GEORGE B. BILLINGS, United States Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of Boston.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 170-176.)

Aliens—exclusion—effect of naturalization of parent.

An alien minor child who has never dwelt in the United States is not, when coming to join a naturalized parent, exempt from the provision of the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 170, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 274), § 2, debarring aliens from landing if they are afflicted with a dangerous contagious disease, on the theory that she was invested with citizenship by virtue of the declaration of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2172, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1334, that minor children of naturalized citizens shall, if "dwelling in the United States," be considered as citizens thereof.

[No. 120.]

Submitted December 7, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review an order denying relief by habeas corpus to an alien minor child of a naturalized citizen, who is debarred from landing because afflicted with a dangerous contagious disease. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Daniel B. Ruggles submitted the cause for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Cooley submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from an order of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, denying a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by [172] Charles Zartarian in behalf of Mariam Zartarian, his daughter, who, it was alleged, was unlawfully imprisoned, detained, and restrained of her liberty at Boston by the United States Commissioner of Immigration, which imprisonment was alleged to have been in violation of the constitutional rights of the said Mariam Zartarian, without due process of law, and contrary to the provisions of § 2172 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1334), which section, it is alleged, made said Mariam a citizen of the United States by virtue of the citizenship of her father, the petitioner.

The United States District Attorney and the attorney for the petitioner stipulated the following facts:

"The petitioner, Charles Zartarian, formerly a subject of the Sultan of Turkey, became a naturalized citizen of the United States on September 12, 1896, at the circuit court of Cook county, in the state of Illinois. That his daughter Mariam, on whose behalf this petition is brought, is a girl between fifteen and sixteen years of age, and was born just prior to the petitioner leaving Turkey. That in the latter part of the year 1904 the Turkish government, at the request of the United States minister at Constantinople, granted permission to the petitioner's wife, minor son, and his said daughter, Mariam, to emigrate to the United States, it being stipulated in the passport issued to them that they could never return to Turkey. That on March 22, 1905, the Hon. G. V. L. Meyer, then United States Ambassador at Rome, Italy, issued a United States passport to your petitioner's said wife and daughter. That said Mariam arrived at Boston from Naples, Italy, on April 18, 1905, and that on April 18, 1905, she was found to have trachoma, and was debarred from landing by a board of special inquiry appointed by the United States Commissioner of Immigration for the port of Boston."

The petitioner's child, Mariam Zartarian, was debarred from landing at the port of Boston under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1903, chap. 1012, 32 Stat. at L. [173] 1213, U. S. Comp. Stat. *Supp. 1903, p. 170, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 274, entitled "An Act to Regulate the Immigration of Aliens into the United States."

Section 2 of that act, among other things, provides that certain classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission to the United States, including "persons afflicted with a loathsome or with a dangerous contagious disease." Upon the finding of the board of inquiry that said Mariam had trachoma, she was debarred from landing.

The contention is that she does not come within the terms of this statute, not being an alien but entitled to be considered a citizen of the United States, under the provisions of § 2172 of the Revised Statutes, which provides: "The children of persons who have been duly naturalized under any law of the United States . . . being under the age of twenty-one years at the time of the naturalization of their parents, shall, if dwelling in the United States, be considered as citizens thereof."

As Mariam was born abroad, a native of Turkey, she has not become a citizen of the United States, except upon compliance with the terms of the act of Congress, for, wanting native birth, she cannot otherwise become a citizen of the United States. Her right to citizenship, if any she has, is the creation of Congress, exercising the power over this subject conferred by the Constitution. United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 702, 42 L. ed. 890, 909, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

The relevant section, 2172, which it is maintained confers the right of citizenship, is the culmination of a number of acts on the subject passed by Congress from the earliest period of the government. Their history will be found in vol. 3, Moore's International Law Digest, p. 467.

The act of 1872 is practically the same as the act of April 14, 1802 (2 Stat. at L. 153, chap. 28, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1334), which provided:

"The children of persons duly naturalized under any of the laws of the United States . . . being under the age of twenty-one years at the time of their parents being so naturalized . . . shall, if dwelling in the United States, be considered as citizens of the United States; and the children of persons who are now *or have been citizens [174] of the United States shall, though born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, be considered as citizens of the United States."

In Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch, 176, 3 L. ed. 190, it was held that this act conferred citizenship upon the daughter of an alien naturalized under the act of January 29, 1795 [1 Stat. at L. 414, chap. 20], she being in this country at the time of the passage of the act of April 14, 1802, and then "dwelling in the United States."

The act has also been held to be prospective in its operation and to include children of aliens naturalized after its passage, when "dwelling in the United States." Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 177, 36 L. ed. 103, 115, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

The construction of this law and the meaning of the phrase "dwelling in the United States" has been the subject of much consideration in the executive department of the government having to do with the admission of foreigners and the rights of alleged naturalized citizens of the United States. The rulings of the State Department are collected in Prof. Moore's Digest of International Law, vol. 3, pp. 467 et seq.

The Department seems to have followed a rule established at an early period, and formulated with fullness in Foreign Relations for 1890, p. 301, in an instruction from Mr. Blaine to Minister Phelps, at Berlin, in which it was laid down that the naturalization of the father operates to confer the municipal right of citizenship upon the minor child if, at the time of the father's naturalization, dwelling within the jurisdiction of the United States, or if he come within that jurisdiction subsequent to the father's naturalization and during his own minority.

Whether, in the latter case, a child not within the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of the parent's naturalization, but coming therein during minority, acquires citizenship, is not a question now before us.

The limitation to children "dwelling in the United States" was doubtless inserted in recognition of the principle that citizenship cannot be conferred by the United States on the citizens of another country [175] when under such foreign jurisdiction; *and is also in deference to the right of independent sovereignties to fix the allegiance of those born within their dominions, having regard to the principle of the common law which permits a sovereignty to claim, with certain exceptions, the citizenship of those born within its territory.

It is pointed out by Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion in United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 686, 42 L. ed. 890, 904, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, that the naturalization acts of the United States have been careful to limit admission to citizenship to those "within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States."

The right of aliens to acquire citizenship is purely statutory; and the petitioner's child, having been born and remained abroad, clearly does not come within the terms of the statute. She was debarred from entering the United States by the action of the authorized officials, and, never having legally landed, of course could not have dwelt within the United States. Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

It is urged that this seems a harsh application of the law; but if the terms of the statute are to be extended to include children of a naturalized citizen who have never dwelt in the United States, such action must come from legislation of Congress, and not judicial decision. Congress has made provision concerning an alien's wife or minor child suffering from contagious disease, when such alien has made a declaration of his intention to become a citizen, and when such disease was contracted on board the ship in which they came, holding them under regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury until it shall be determined whether the disorder will be easily curable, or whether such wife or child can be permitted to land without danger to other persons, requiring that they shall not be deported until such facts are ascertained (32 Stat. at L. 1221, chap. 1012, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 185, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 290). But Congress has not said that an alien child who has never dwelt in the United States, coming to join a naturalized parent, may land when afflicted with a dangerous contagious disease.

As this subject is entirely within congressional control, the *matter must rest [176] there; it is only for the courts to apply the law as they find it.

It is suggested that the agreed finding of facts contains no stipulation as to the dangerous or contagious quality of trachoma, but the petition shows that the petitioner's daughter was debarred from landing because it was found that she had a dangerous contagious disease; to wit, trachoma. Furthermore, the statute makes the finding of the board of inquiry final, so far as review by the courts is concerned, the only appeal being to certain officers of the Department. 32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1905, p. 274; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, supra.

Finding no error in the order of the Circuit Court, it is affirmed.

CONRAD WECKER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

NATIONAL ENAMELING & STAMPING
COMPANY and George Wettengel, Defts. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 176-186.)

Appeal—finality of decision below.

1. A judgment of a Federal circuit court, rendered after the plaintiff, having unsuccessfully moved to remand the cause to the state court whence it was removed, had elected to stand upon his motion to remand, and refused to recognize the jurisdiction of the Federal court, that plaintiff take nothing by the suit, and that the defendants go hence without day and recover their costs against the plaintiff, is final for the purpose of appeal.

Removal of causes—separable controversy.

2. A Federal circuit court to which a case has been removed as presenting a separable controversy properly refuses to remand the cause to the state court, where

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 482; Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302; and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

On the removal of causes from state to Federal court in cases presenting a separable controversy—see notes to Miller v. Clifford, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 50; Robbins v. Ellenbogen, 18 C. C. A. 86; Meeke v. Valleytown Mineral Co. 35 C. C. A. 155; Sloane v. Anderson, 29 L. ed. U. S. 899; Merchants Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 38 L. ed. U. S. 195; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

the testimony shows that the real purpose of the plaintiff in suing jointly in tort a resident employee and his nonresident employer was to prevent the exercise of the right of removal by the nonresident defendant.

Evidence—sufficiency—joinder of resident to prevent removal of cause.

3. Uncontradicted testimony that a resident employee sued jointly in tort with his nonresident employer was merely a draftsman, whose work was confined to making the necessary drawings based on the plans and ideas of others, and that he had nothing to do with planning the apparatus which is alleged to have been so defectively constructed as to have caused the injury complained of, is sufficient to support a conclusion of law that such employee was made a defendant for the sole purpose of preventing the exercise of the right of removal by the nonresident defendant.

Appeal—objections and exceptions.

4. The objection that a Federal circuit court, on motion to remand a cause to the state court whence it had been removed, should not have determined, upon affidavits, the question of the good faith of the plaintiff in suing jointly in tort a resident employee and his nonresident employer, is not open to the plaintiff in error, who made no objection to the consideration of affidavits in support of the petition for the removal, and himself filed a counter affidavit.

[No. 133.]

Submitted December 14, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri to review a judgment in favor of defendants in a suit which had been removed to that court, as presenting a separable controversy, from the Circuit Court of the City of St. Louis, in that state. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward C. Kehr submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Richard T. Brownrigg and William L. Mason were on the brief:

The complaint discloses a joint cause of action against the master, the nonresident defendant, and the servant, the resident defendant, in alleging plaintiff's injury as a result of their joint negligence; since a servant, as well as his master, is liable to third persons for injuries resulting not only from the servant's wilfulness, wantonness, or recklessness, but also for injuries resulting from the servant's negligence in the performance of any task which the servant has actually undertaken.

Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204 U. S.

67; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 96, 97, 42 L. ed. 673-675, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Dougherty v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 126 Fed. 239; Fogarty v. Southern P. Co. 123 Fed. 973; American Bridge Co. v. Hunt, 64 C. C. A. 548, 130 Fed. 302; Hukill v. Maysville & B. S. R. Co. 72 Fed. 753; Harriman v. Stowe, 57 Mo. 93; Lottman v. Barnett, 62 Mo. 159; Martin v. Benoist, 20 Mo. App. 262; Osborne v. Morgan, 130 Mass. 102, 39 Am. Rep. 437; Mayer v. Thompson-Hutchison Bldg. Co. 104 Ala. 611, 28 L.R.A. 433, 53 Am. St. Rep. 88, 16 So. 620; Greenberg v. Whitcomb Lumber Co. 90 Wis. 225, 28 L.R.A. 439, 48 Am. St. Rep. 911, 63 N. W. 93; Donnelly v. Hufschmidt, 79 Cal. 74, 21 Pac. 546; Horner v. Lawrence, 37 N. J. L. 46; Ellis v. McNaughton, 76 Mich. 237, 15 Am. St. Rep. 308, 42 N. W. 1113; Griffiths v. Wolfram, 22 Minn. 185; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Bohn, 200 U. S. 221, 50 L. ed. 443, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Dougherty v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 58 C. C. A. 651, 122 Fed. 205; Warax v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 72 Fed. 637; Andrews v. Boedecker, 126 Ill. 605, 9 Am. St. Rep. 649, 18 N. E. 651; Lough v. John Davis & Co. 30 Wash. 204, 59 L.R.A. 802, 94 Am. St. Rep. 848, 70 Pac. 491; Bell v. Josselyn, 3 Gray, 311, 63 Am. Dec. 741; Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co. 62 Me. 552, 16 Am. Rep. 503; 5 Thomp. Neg. § 5771; Mechem, Agency, §§ 571, 572; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 244.

Negligence for which a servant is liable to a third person, that is, misfeasance, may consist not only in an act directly injurious to such person, but may as well consist in a negligent omission in the course of some task which the servant has undertaken, as a result of which negligent omission such third person is injured.

Osborne v. Morgan, Harriman v. Stowe, Lottman v. Barnett, Bell v. Josselyn, Donnelly v. Hufschmidt, Hukill v. Maysville & B. S. R. Co. and Horner v. Lawrence,—supra; Ellis v. McNaughton, 76 Mich. 241, 15 Am. St. Rep. 308, 42 N. E. 1113; Griffiths v. Wolfram and Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co. supra; 5 Thomp. Neg. § 5771.

In order to justify removal on the ground of improper joinder of the resident defendant, it was necessary for the removal petitioner to both allege and prove that the allegation of joint liability made in the complaint was fraudulently made. There was no evidence even tending to show such fraud.

Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 601, 33 L. ed. 474, 475; 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Plymouth Consol. Gold

Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264, 270, 30 L. ed. 232, 233, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1034; Hukill v. Maysville & B. S. R. Co. 72 Fed. 745; Warax v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. supra; Landers v. Felton, 73 Fed. 311; 2 Foster, Fed. Pr. § 384, p. 925;

If the allegations of a removal petition, charging that a plaintiff was guilty of fraud in alleging a joint cause of action against a resident and a nonresident defendant, are traversed by a motion to remand, such fraud must be proved by the removal petitioner independently of the allegations in the removal petition or of the affidavits filed in support thereof.

Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, supra; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 33 L. ed. 474, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Plymouth Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. supra; Landers v. Felton, 73 Fed. 313; Foster, Fed. Pr. § 284, p. 925; Kelly v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 122 Fed. 286; Ross v. Erie R. Co. 120 Fed. 703; Dow v. Bradstreet Co. 46 Fed. 824; Prince v. Illinois C. R. Co. 98 Fed. 1; Arrowsmith v. Nashville & D. R. Co. 57 Fed. 170; Frec v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 122 Fed. 309; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 303, 34 L. ed. 964, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

The complaint states a joint cause of action. But even if it could be held, upon critical analysis thereof, that it fails to do so, the complaint must nevertheless be regarded as joint for purposes of removal, inasmuch as the allegations of the complaint do not disclose such palpable want of joint liability as to justify an imputation of bad faith upon the plaintiff.

Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Steinhauser v. Spraul, 127 Mo. 541, 27 L.R.A. 441, 28 S. W. 620, 30 S. W. 102; Prince v. Illinois C. R. Co. supra; O'Neil v. Young & Sons' Seed & Plant Co. 58 Mo. App. 628; Harriman v. Stowe, 57 Mo. 93; Davenport v. Southern R. Co. 124 Fed. 983; Shaffer v. Union Brick Co. 128 Fed. 97.

There has been a final judgment.

Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 674, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Colorado Eastern R. Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 36 C. C. A. 263, 94 Fed. 313.

Even if it were true that the assignment of errors specifies other action of the court below than its action on the jurisdictional question, that fact could not affect the right and duty of this court to pass on the jurisdictional question thus brought before it.

United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, supra. 432

Messrs. Robert A. Holland, Jr., and Charles P. Wise submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. George F. McNulty and James A. Seddon were on the brief:

The motion to dismiss this writ of error should be sustained:

(a) Because the writ of error was not sued out to review a final judgment.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; United States v. Evans, 5 Cranch, 280, 3 L. ed. 101; Evans v. Phillips, 4 Wheat. 73, 4 L. ed. 516; Re Aspinwall, 33 C. C. A. 217, 61 U. S. App. 434, 90 Fed. 675; Re Coe, 1 C. C. A. 326, 5 U. S. App. 6, 49 Fed. 481.

(b) Because the question of jurisdiction of the Federal court is not the only question raised.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 668, 35 L. ed. 893, 895, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.

The court below did not err in overruling the motion of plaintiff in error to remand the cause:

(a) Because there was a separable controversy as to defendant in error Stamping Company, the joinder of defendant in error Wittengel not being in good faith.

Hartog v. Memory, 116 U. S. 588, 591, 29 L. ed. 725, 726, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Gustafson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 128 Fed. 85; Ross v. Erie R. Co. 120 Fed. 703; Durkee v. Illinois C. R. Co. 81 Fed. 1; Boatner v. American Exp. Co. 122 Fed. 714; Hukill v. Maysville & B. S. R. Co. 72 Fed. 745; Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

(b) The lack of good faith appeared on the face of the petition of plaintiff in error because said petition shows on its face that plaintiff in error never had a cause against the resident defendant.

Steinhauser v. Spraul, 127 Mo. 541, 27 L. R.A. 441, 28 S. W. 620, 30 S. W. 102; Carey v. Rochereau, 16 Fed. 87; Kelly v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 122 Fed. 286; Prince v. Illinois C. R. Co. 98 Fed. 1; Davenport v. Southern R. Co. 124 Fed. 983; Shaffer v. Union Brick Co. 128 Fed. 97; O'Neil v. Young & Sons' Seed & Plant Co. 58 Mo. App. 628; Harriman v. Stowe, 57 Mo. 93; Stone v. Cartwright (K. B.) 6 T. R. 411; Ferguson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Fed. 177.

(c) Because the verified removal petition and the affidavits filed by the removing defendant abundantly show that the joinder of the resident defendant was wrongful, and for the sole purpose of attempting to prevent removal.

Kelly v. Chicago & A. R. Co. supra; Free 204 U. S.

v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 122 Fed. 309; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 303, 34 L. ed. 964, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is certified here from the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri under § 5 of the court of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), upon a question of jurisdiction.

[178] *Conrad Wecker, the plaintiff below, brought his action in the circuit court of the city of St. Louis, state of Missouri, against the National Enameling & Stamping Company, Harry Schenck, and George Wettengel, undertaking to recover jointly against the National Enameling & Stamping Company, a corporation of the state of New Jersey, and Schenck and Wettengel, residents of the city of St. Louis, state of Missouri. The substance of the complaint is that defendant is a corporation employing the plaintiff in the work of firing, filling, stirring, emptying, and attending certain metal pots used in the melting of grease and lubricant matter in the plant of the defendant corporation; that the grease and lubricant matter was delivered by the corporation to the plaintiff in barrels of great weight,—about 600 pounds each,—and it was the plaintiff's duty in the course of his employment to hoist the same to the top surface of the furnace structure, into which the pots were set, and then to dump the grease and lubricant matter into the pots.

The negligence charged against the defendant corporation consisted in allowing the pots, which were constantly filled with hot and boiling lubricants, to remain open and exposed, without covering, railing, device, or means of any character to protect the plaintiff from accidentally slipping or falling into the same while engaged in the service of the corporation in the performance of his duties, and negligently failing to provide and properly place safe and sufficient hoisting apparatus for the use of the plaintiff in his employment in lifting said masses of grease and lubricant to the top of the furnace, and for failing to give the plaintiff instructions as to the proper manner of performing his duty, and thereby unreasonably endangering his safety in said employment. Plaintiff alleges that, by reason of this negligence, while engaged in the performance of his duties on the 12th of November, 1902, on the top of the furnace, he lost his balance and fell into one of the open, unguarded, and unprotected pots containing hot and boiling grease and lubricant, receiving thereby great and painful injuries. *Plaintiff below further charged [179] that Schenck and Wettengel were employed by the corporation and charged by it with the superintendence and oversight of the plaintiff in the performance of his duty, and were employed and charged by the corporation with the duty of superintending and properly planning the construction of a furnace, and with the duty of providing for said pots reasonably safe and suitable covering, railing, or other device, and with the duty of providing and properly placing reasonably safe and sufficient hoisting apparatus for lifting the masses of grease and lubricant to the top of the furnace, and were further charged by the corporation with the duty of instructing the plaintiff as to the manner of performing his duties, and charges negligence of Schenck and Wettengel in planning and directing the construction of the furnace structure and providing suitable covers or railings as aforesaid, and providing and placing reasonably safe and sufficient hoisting apparatus, and in giving instructions as to the manner of performing plaintiff's duties, by reason whereof the plaintiff lost his balance and fell into one of the pots as aforesaid, to his great injury; and the complaint charges the joint negligence of the corporation and the defendants Schenck and Wettengel; and avers that his injuries were the result thereof, and prays judgment for damages jointly against the three defendants.

The defendant company filed its petition for a removal of the cause to the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri, which petition contained the usual averments as to the character of the suit and the right of removal and diversity of citizenship between the defendant corporation and the plaintiff, and averred that Schenck, one of the codefendants, was also a nonresident of the state of Missouri and a citizen of the state of Illinois, and not served with process; also stated that Wettengel was, at the time of the commencement of the suit and since, a citizen of the state of Missouri; averred a separable controversy between it and the plaintiff as to the alleged negligence and as to the assumption *of the risk upon the part [180] of the plaintiff. As to Wettengel, the citizen of Missouri, it was alleged in the removal petition that he was not, at the time of the accident or prior thereto, charged with the superintendence and oversight of the plaintiff, or with the duty of superintending and properly planning the construction of the furnace, or providing a reasonably safe and suitable furnace and pots and railings or other device to protect the plaintiff, and was not charged with the duty of placing reasonably safe and sufficient hoisting apparatus, nor with the duty of instructing the petitioner in respect to his duties, as charged in the complaint, and, after stating that Schenck, like the defendant corporation, was a nonresident of Missouri and a citizen of another state, charged that Wettengel had been improperly and fraudulently joined as a defendant for the purpose of fraudulently and improperly preventing, or attempting to prevent, the defendant from removing the cause to the United States circuit court, and that the plaintiff well knew, at the time of the beginning of the suit, that Wettengel was not charged with the duties aforesaid, and that he was joined as a party defendant to prevent the removal of the cause, and not in good faith.

After removal, plaintiff filed his motion to remand the case to the state court, on the ground that there was not in the case a controversy between citizens of different states, and no separable controversy between the plaintiff and the company within the meaning of the removal act. The court, upon hearing the motion, refused to remand the cause, and afterward, plaintiff electing to stand upon his motion to remand, and refusing to recognize the jurisdiction of the United States court or to proceed with the prosecution of his case therein, upon motion of the defendant the court ordered the case to be dismissed, and rendered judgment that the plaintiff take nothing by the suit, and that the defendants go hence without day and recover their costs against the plaintiff. A bill of exceptions was allowed, and the court also certified that the only question decided by the court [181] in the cause was that the joining *of Wettengel as a codefendant with the company was palpably groundless and fictitious, and for the purpose of unlawfully depriving the defendant company of its right to remove the cause to the Federal court for trial; that for this reason the motion to remand was denied; that in deciding the motion the court took into consideration not only the complaint and petition for removal, but also the affidavits filed in support and opposition to the motion to remand; that the plaintiff refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the court and suffered a dismissal of the suit for the want of prosecution; that the question is whether the court had jurisdiction of the action.

In the first ruling upon the motion to remand, the court, in a written opinion, based its refusal upon the ground that the petition of plaintiff clearly showed that there was no joint cause of action against the company and the defendant Wettengel. Subsequently, the judge filed an opinion in which he said that in his former opinion he made no allusion to the affidavits tending to show the fictitious and fraudulent joining of Wettengel, and that, in his opinion, the same inevitably showed that the inferences drawn from the allegations of the petition were correct, and that he might properly consider these affidavits in determining the question of removal.

It is urged by counsel for defendants in error that the writ of error should be dismissed because there was no final judgment, and only in a case where a final judgment has been rendered can the question of jurisdiction be certified from a circuit court under § 5 of the court of appeals act. McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118, is relied upon, in which it was held that a writ of error could only be taken out after final judgment.

It is true that, after the circuit court of the United States maintained its jurisdiction, the plaintiff could have gone on and tried the case on its merits, and, after judgment, had there been reason for doing so, taken the case to the circuit court of appeals; but, upon refusing to recognize the jurisdiction of *the circuit court, final judgment in the action was rendered, that the plaintiff take nothing by the suit and that the defendants go hence without day, and recover their costs against the plaintiff. Whether this judgment would be a bar to another action is not now before us; it is final, so far as the case is concerned, and terminated the action.

Section 5 of the court of appeals act provides that only the question of jurisdiction shall be brought to this court from the circuit court, and that is all that is now before us.

It is contended that this case should have been remanded upon the authority of Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161, decided at the last term of this court. In that case it was held that, upon a question of removal, where a plaintiff, in good faith, prosecuted his suit as upon a joint cause of action, and the removal was sought when the complaint was the only pleading in the case, the action as therein stated was the test of removability; and if that was joint in character, and there was no showing of a want of good faith of the plaintiff, no separable controversy was presented with a nonresident defendant, joined with a citizen of the state; in other words, if the plaintiff had, in good faith, elected to make a joint cause of action, the question of proper joinder is not to be tried in the removal proceedings, and that, however that might turn out upon the merits, for the purpose of removal the case must be held to be that which the plaintiff has stated in setting forth his cause of action. And in that case it was said:

"The fact that by answer the defendant may show that the liability is several cannot change the character of the case made by the plaintiff in his pleading so as to affect the right of removal. It is to be remembered that we are not now dealing with joinders which are shown, by the petition for removal or otherwise, to be attempts to sue in the state courts with a view to defeat Federal jurisdiction. In such cases entirely different questions arise, and the Federal courts may, and should, take such action as will defeat attempts to [183] wrongfully *deprive parties entitled to sue in the Federal courts of the protection of their rights in those tribunals."

And it was further stated in the court's opinion that there was nothing in that case to suggest an attempt to commit a fraud upon the jurisdiction of the Federal court.

Much discussion is had in this case as to whether the alleged cause of action is joint or several in its character, and whether the corporation and Wettengel could be jointly held responsible to the plaintiff upon the allegations of the complaint, but we do not deem it necessary to determine that question.

Upon the authority of the Alabama Great Southern Case, supra, and the preceding cases in this court which are cited and applied in the opinion in that case, if the complaint is filed in good faith, the cause of action, for the purposes of removal, may be deemed to be that which the plaintiff has undertaken to make it; but in this case both parties filed affidavits upon the motion to remand, for and against the right to remove.

The petition for removal was sworn to by an agent of the company, and defendant corporation filed the affidavit of one George Eisenmayer, who testified that he was the chief engineer of the company, charged with the planning of new apparatus and the construction and repair thereof for the company, and that Wettengel was employed in the office as a draftsman, with several other persons in a similar capacity; that the sole work of Wettengel was as such draftsman, and that he had nothing to do with selecting plans or approving the same, but took the plans and ideas furnished him and made the necessary drawings for the use of mechanics, and that he had no authority to employ or discharge men or superintend work or give instructions to any of the men as to how they should perform their work. Wettengel's affidavit was also filed, in which he stated that for ten years he had been employed as a draftsman by the defendant company; that his work was performed in the office of the company; that he had no duties outside of the office or with the plaintiff; that he had *no duty of superintendence in connection with him; that he was not charged with any duty of planning or constructing the apparatus which was used in the defendant's plant; that the designing and selection thereof was made by other persons, and that his sole duty was to attend to the mechanical work of drafting, based upon the ideas and plans of others; that he had no discretion whatever as to the sort of apparatus to be used in any part of defendant's plant, nor as to the structures mentioned in plaintiff's petition; that he had nothing to do with the planning of the pots, no right to determine what they should be, or whether a railing should be used, nor what sort of hoisting apparatus should be used in connection therewith; that he had no duty in connection with the plaintiff as to how or when he should do his work, and no authority to give him instructions; in short, that his position was merely clerical and his duties confined to the making of drawings to enable mechanics to construct work from plans furnished by others in the employ of the defendant, and that he did not know the plaintiff by name, and did not know what sort of work he was doing or in what portion of defendant's plant he was engaged.

To these affidavits Wecker, the plaintiff, filed a counter affidavit, admitting that Eisenmayer was charged with the general supervision of the work and business of the company at the place plaintiff was employed and received his injury, and stating that just prior to the construction of the furnace structure he heard Eisenmayer direct Wettengel to prepare plans for a furnace to be erected where the one was built shortly after, upon which the plaintiff was at work when he received his injuries, and states his belief that the defendant Wettengel planned and directed the construction of the furnace.

Upon these affidavits the court reached the conclusion that, considered with the complaint, they showed conclusively an attempt to defeat the jurisdiction of the Federal court by wrongfully joining Wettengel.

The consideration of these affidavits clearly shows that Wettengel's employment was not that of a superior or superintendent, *or one charged with furnishing designs, for [185] it is not contradicted that he was employed as a draftsman, receiving his instructions from others; nor is there the slightest attempt to sustain the allegations of the petition that Wettengel was a superintendent over the plaintiff, or had any authority to direct his work or to give him instructions as to the manner in which his duty should be performed. The testimony certainly shows no basis for these charges. The affidavit of Wecker, except as to the statement of his belief, admits that Eisenmayer was superintendent, and claims that he heard him direct Wettengel to prepare plans for a furnace structure. This is not inconsistent with the undisputed testimony as to the nature and character of Wettengel's employment in the subordinate capacity of a draftsman.

In view of this testimony and the apparent want of basis for the allegations of the petition as to Wettengel's relations to the plaintiff, and the uncontradicted evidence as to his real connection with the company, we think the court was right in reaching the conclusion that he was joined for the purpose of defeating the right of the corporation to remove the case to the Federal court.

It is objected that there was no proof that Wecker knew of Wettengel's true relation to the defendant, and consequently he could not be guilty of fraud in joining him; but even in cases where the direct issue of fraud is involved, knowledge may be imputed where one wilfully closes his eyes to information within his reach.

It is further objected that the court should not have heard the matter upon affidavits, and should have required testimony, with the privilege to cross-examine; but the plaintiff made no objection to the consideration of affidavits in support of the petition for the removal, and himself filed a counter affidavit. In this state of the record there certainly can be no valid objection to the manner in which the court heard and considered the testimony.

[186] While the plaintiff, in good faith, may proceed in the state courts upon a cause of action which he alleges to be joint, it is equally true that the Federal courts should not sanction devices intended to prevent a removal to a Federal court where one has that right, and should be equally vigilant to protect the right to proceed in the Federal court as to permit the state courts, in proper cases, to retain their own jurisdiction.

Reaching the conclusion that the court did not err in holding upon the testimony in this case that the real purpose in joining Wettengel was to prevent the exercise of the right of removal by the nonresident defendant, we affirm the action of the Circuit Court in refusing to remand the case. Judgment affirmed.

SHROPSHIRE, WOODLIFF, & CO.,

v.

BUSH et al., Trustees, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 186-189.)

Bankruptcy—preferences—assigned claims for wages.

The priority of payment of wages "due to workmen, clerks, or servants" given by the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), § 64, when earned within three months before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, extends to claims which had been assigned before the bankruptcy proceedings were begun.

[No. 416.]

Submitted December 20, 1906. Decided January 7, 1907.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit presenting the question whether assigned claims for wages are entitled to priority of payment under the bankrupt act. Answered in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles F. Benjamin submitted the cause for Shropshire, Woodliff, & Co. Mr. Rutherford Lapsley was on the brief:

A priority is defined as "a legal precedence or preference, as in saying that certain debts are paid in priority to others, or that certain encumbrances of an estate are allowed priority over others; that is, they are allowed to satisfy their claim out of the estate before others can be admitted to any share therein."

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1297.

Liens created by statutes which are not merely declaratory of the common law, and which are not dependent for their existence on the possession of the property to which they are attached, are generally assignable; and an assignment of the claim for which such lien is security will usually carry with it the right to the lien.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 25.

The right of priority in a wage claim is a right which attaches to the debt, and not to the person of the original creditor; and the right passes by assignment to the assignee.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Lamont, 16 C. C. A. 364, 32 U. S. App. 480, 69 Fed. 23; Columbus, S. & H. R. Co.'s Appeal, 48 C. C. A. 275, 109 Fed. 177; Re Kerby-Dennis Co. 36 C. C. A. 677, 95 Fed. 116; Union Trust Co.

v. Walker, 107 U. S. 596, 27 L. ed. 490, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 777, 28 L. ed. 596, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; McIlhenny v. Binz, 80 Tex. 1, 26 Am. St. Rep. 705, 13 S. W. 655; Re Waties, 39 Fed. 264.

The allowance of priority to the assignee of a wage claim is not against public policy, and operates in almost every case in the interest, and for the benefit, of the laborer.

Mallin v. Wenham, 209 Ill. 252, 65 L.R.A. 602, 101 Am. St. Rep. 233, 70 N. E. 564, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

Under a reasonable construction of the terms of the act, the petitioners are entitled to priority, presenting their claim as assignees of wage claims.

Re Brown, 4 Ben. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 1,974; Re North Carolina Car Co. 127 Fed. 178, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488; Re Campbell, 102 Fed. 686; Re Harmon, 128 Fed. 170, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64; Leftwich Lumber Co. v. Florence Mut. Bldg. L. & Sav. Asso. 104 Ala. 584, 18 So. 48; 5 Thomp. Corp. § 7117.

Messrs. George D. Lancaster and John P. Tillman submitted the cause for Bush et al. Messrs. J. H. Beal and Williams & Lancaster were on the brief:

The question certified has been answered in the negative by every Federal court that until now has had occasion to pass upon it.

Re Westlund, 99 Fed. 399; Re Campbell, 102 Fed. 686; Re North Carolina Car Co. 127 Fed. 178; Re Harmon, 128 Fed. 170; Re Gurewitz, 58 C. C. A. 320, 121 Fed. 982. See also Loveland, Bankr. 276; Collier, Bankr. 503; Brandenburg, Bankr. 1043; 5 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 386; Re St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co. 147 Fed. 752.

Where the statute of a state, by its express terms, limits the lien given to those to whom wages shall be due upon the happening of a given event, it will be found that an assignment of the wages, made prior to such event, does not carry with it a lien.

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Oxford Iron Co. 33 N. J. Eq. 192.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellees are trustees of the bankrupt estate of the Southern Car & Foundry Company. The appellants, before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, acquired by purchase and assignment a large number of claims for wages of workmen and servants, none exceeding $300 in amount, and all earned within three months before the date of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. The district court for the eastern district of Tennessee rendered a judgment disallowing priority to these claims, because, when filed, they were not "due to workmen, clerks, or servants."

204 U. S. U. S., Book 51.

On appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit that court duly certified here for instructions the following question:

"Is an assignee of a claim for wages earned within three months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy against the bankrupt debtor entitled to priority of payment, under § 64 (4) of the bankrupt act [30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447], when the assignment occurred prior to the commencement of such bankruptcy proceedings?"

The question certified has never been passed upon by any circuit court of appeals, [188] and in the district courts the decisions upon it are conflicting. Re Westlund, 99 Fed. 399; Re St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co. 147 Fed. 752; Re North Carolina Car Co. [seem], 127 Fed. 178, where the right of the assignee to priority was denied; Re Brown, 4 Ben. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 1,974 [act of 1867, 14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176]; Re Harmon, 128 Fed. 170, where, on facts slightly but not essentially different, the right of the assignee to priority was affirmed.

The bankruptcy law (act July 1, 1898, 30 Stat. at L. pp. 544, 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), in § 1, defines "debt" as including "any debt, demand, or claim, provable in bankruptcy." Section 64, under which priority is claimed in this case, is, in the parts material to the determination of the question, as follows:

"Sec. 64. Debts which have priority.—
 . . . b. The debts to have priority, except as herein provided, and to be paid in full, out of bankrupt estates and the order of payment, shall be . . . (4) wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants which have been earned within three months before the date of the commencement of proceedings, not to exceed three hundred dollars to each claimant; . . ."

The precise inquiry is whether the right of prior payment thus conferred is attached to the person or to the claim of the wage-earner; if to the person, it is available only to him; if to the claim, it passes with the transfer to the assignee. In support of the proposition that the right is personal to the wage-earner, and enforceable only by him, it is argued that it is not wages earned within the prescribed time which are given priority, but wages "due to workmen, clerks, or servants;" that when the claim is assigned to another it is no longer "due to workmen, clerks, or servants," but to the assignee; and therefore, when presented by him, lacks one of the characteristics which the law makes essential to priority. In this argument it is assumed that the wages must be "due" to the earner at the time of the presentment of the claim for proof, or, at least, at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Without that assumption the argument fails to support the conclusion.

[189] *But the statute lends no countenance to this assumption. It nowhere expressly or by fair implication says that the wages must be due to the earner at the time of the presentment of the claim, or of the beginning of the proceedings, and we find no warrant for supplying such a restriction. Regarding, then, the plain words of the statute, and no more, they seem to be merely descriptive of the nature of the debt to which priority is given. When one has incurred a debt for wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants, that debt, within the limits of time and amount prescribed by the act, is entitled to priority of payment. The priority is attached to the debt, and not to the person of the creditor; to the claim, and not to the claimant. The act does not enumerate classes of creditors and confer upon them the privilege of priority in payment, but, on the other hand, enumerates classes of debts as "the debts to have priority."

In this case the Southern Car & Foundry Company had incurred certain debts for wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants, which were earned within three months before the date of the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy. These debts were exactly within the description of those to which the bankruptcy act gives priority of payment, and they did not cease to be within that description by their assignment to another. The character of the debts was fixed when they were incurred, and could not be changed by an assignment. They were precisely of one of the classes of debts which the statute says are "debts to have priority."

The question certified is answered in the affirmative, and it is so ordered.

[190] *NORTHERN LUMBER COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM O'BRIEN, Albert J. Lammers, and Mary E. Coffin.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 190-203.)

Public lands—railroad land grant—effect of prior withdrawal from entry.

1. Land which, at the date of the grant by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at. L.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

438

365, 367, chap. 217), to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, was withdrawn of record for the benefit of the Lake Superior & Mississippi railroad under the prior grant by the act of May 5, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 64, chap. 79), was not "public land" within the meaning of the later grant, and did not pass under it when or because it was subsequently ascertained that such land was without the line of the definite location of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, and was within the place limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad, as defined by its map of definite location, but such land, when freed from the earlier grant, became a part of the public domain, subject only to be disposed of under the general land laws.

Public lands—railroad land grant—sufficiency of withdrawal order.

2. An order of the Land Department directing the local land office to suspend from pre-emption, settlement, and sale a "body of land about 20 miles in width" is not so uncertain and indefinite as to be without legal force as to lands which are coterminous and within 10 miles of the line of the general route of the railroad for the benefit of which the order was made, as such route is defined on a map or diagram to which the order refers.

[No. 121.]

Argued and submitted December 7, 1906.
Decided January 14, 1907.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota, dismissing a bill to enjoin the cutting or removing of standing timber from certain land to which complainant claims title under the Northern Pacific Railroad land grant. Affirmed.

See same case below, 71 C. C. A. 598, 139 Fed. 614.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles W. Bunn argued the cause, and, with Mr. James B. Kerr, filed a brief for appellant:

A so-called general route withdrawal is not withdrawal from or as against legislative control and disposition.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. ed. 1139, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 42 L. ed. 333, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 368, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

Cases in which withdrawals of land for the benefit of railroad companies have been held to exempt the land from the operation of subsequent legislative dispositions of public domain are all instances of withdrawal upon definite location.

204 U. S.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging, & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 42 L. ed. 596, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 17, 35 L. ed. 77, 83, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 49, 40 L. ed. 71, 72, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 373, 375, 39 L. ed. 183, 189, 190, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103.

Only those withdrawals are effective as against subsequent legislative grants which are made for the protection of possibly vested rights.

Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 764, 765, 23 L. ed. 769, 770; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 518, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Jameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 37 L. ed. 459, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 32, 36 L. ed. 64, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796; Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; Williams v. Baker, 17 Wall. 144, 21 L. ed. 561; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755, 25 L. ed. 915.

Mr. J. N. Searles submitted the cause for appellees:

When the context limits and restrains the meaning of the word "about," its use does not materially impair the certainty of a description.

Adams v. Harrington, 114 Ind. 66, 14 N. E. 603; Corey v. Swagger, 74 Ind. 211; Jones v. Plummer, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 161; Purinton v. Sedgley, 4 Me. 286; Stevens v. McKnight, 40 Ohio St. 341; Baltimore Permanent Bldg. & Land Soc. v. Smith, 54 Md. 204, 39 Am. Rep. 374; Sanders v. Morrison, 2 T. B. Mon. 109, 15 Am. Dec. 140; Shipp v. Miller, 2 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 248; Cutts v. King, 5 Me. 482; Bodley v. Taylor, 5 Cranch, 224, 3 L. ed. 85; Johnson v. Pannel, 2 Wheat. 206, 4 L. ed. 221.

Lands withdrawn from sale, etc., are not "public lands" within the meaning of railroad grants.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging, & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 42 L. ed. 596, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 18, 35 L. 204 U. S.

ed. 77, 84, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 37 L. ed. 459, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 32, 36 L. ed. 64, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit involves the title to the south half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-seven, township fifty-two north, range fifteen west, in the state of Minnesota.

*The principal question in the case is [193] whether the land in dispute was embraced by the grant of public lands made by Congress July 2d, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, 367, chap. 217), to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, in aid of the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget sound. If it was not, then the decree of the circuit court dismissing the bill was right, as was that of the circuit court of appeals, affirming that decree.

By the act of May 5th, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 64, chap. 79), Congress made a grant of public lands to the state of Minnesota in aid of the construction of a railroad from St. Paul to the head of Lake Superior. This grant was vested in the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad Company, and that company, on the 7th day of May, 1864, filed its map of general route. This map was accepted by the Land Department, and a copy was transmitted May 26th, 1864, to the proper local land office, which was informed of the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a withdrawal of lands for the Lake Superior & Mississippi road, and that office was ordered to suspend, and it did suspend, "from pre-emption, settlement, and sale a body of land about 20 miles in width," as indicated on the above map. The land in dispute was within the exterior lines of this general route of the Lake Superior & Mississippi road, as defined by its map, and was part of the land so withdrawn.

After the acceptance of the map of general route of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, and after the withdrawal by the Land Department, for the benefit of that company, of the lands covered by that map, Congress, by the above act of July 2d, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, 367, chap. 217), declared "that there be, and hereby is, granted to the 'Northern Pacific Railroad Company,' its successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line to the Pacific coast, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores, over the route of said line of railway, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the *amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad whenever it passes through any state, and whenever, on the line thereof, the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed, and a plat thereof filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office."

In 1866 the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad Company filed a map of the definite location of its road, from which it appeared that the land in dispute was outside of the place, indemnity, and terminal limits of that road as thus located.

In 1882 the Northern Pacific Railroad Company filed its map of definite location, which showed that the particular lands here in dispute were in the place limits indicated by that map.

In 1883 the latter company filed in the proper office a list of lands which it asserted were covered by the grant made to it on July 2d, 1864, and on that list, among other lands, were those here in dispute.

In 1901 the Commissioner of the Land Office refused to approve, and rejected, the list so far as the lands now in question were concerned, upon the ground that, although they appeared, after the definite location of the Northern Pacific Railroad, to be within the primary limits of the grant made for that road by the act of July 2d, 1864, they "were excepted from the operation of said grant, because they were, at the date of the passage of said act, within 10 miles of the probable route of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, in aid of the construction of which a grant was made by the act of May 5th, 1864, and were embraced within the withdrawal of May 26th, 1864, made on account of the last-mentioned grant." The question was taken on appeal to the Secretary of the Interior, and he also rejected the above list, rendering a decision under date of *July 16th, 1901, affirming the decision of the Commissioner,—the Secretary ruling that, as these lands were, at the date of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, already "included within an existing and lawful withdrawal made in aid of a prior grant," they were not to be deemed "public lands" when the Northern Pacific grant of 1864 was made, and, consequently, were not embraced by that grant. The Secretary held that the fact that a right under a prior grant did not eventually attach to the lands here in question was immaterial; "first, because the act of July 2, 1864, was a grant in presenti, and second, because a reservation on account of a prior grant will defeat a later grant like that of July 2, 1864, whether the lands are needed in satisfaction of the prior grant or not." Re Northern P. R. Co. 31 Land Dec. 33. Under that decision the above list filed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company was formally and finally canceled, and these lands were never assigned to it by the Land Department.

Although the stipulation of the parties as to the facts is very lengthy, those here stated are sufficient to present the point upon which, it is agreed, the decision of the case depends.

We have seen that, at the date of the grant of July 2d, 1864, to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the particular land in dispute was within the lines designated by the accepted map of the general route of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad; and that the grant for the Northern Pacific Railroad was of "public land." Was the land here in dispute public land at the date of the passage of that act? If, by reason of its having been then withdrawn by the Land Department from pre-emption, settlement, and sale, it was not, at the date of the Northern Pacific grant, to be deemed public land, did that grant attach to it when the Northern Pacific road was definitely located in 1882? These questions were answered in the negative by both the circuit court and the unanimous judgment of the circuit court of appeals. 134 Fed. 303, 139 Fed. 614.

It has long been settled that the grant to the Northern *Pacific Railroad Company by [196] the act of 1864 was one in presenti; that is, the company took a present title, as of the date of the act, to the lands embraced by the terms of the grant; the words "that there be, and hereby is, granted" importing "a transfer of present title, not a promise to transfer one in the future." In St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U.

S. 1, 5, 35 L. ed. 77, 79, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389, 390, the court said that "the route not being at the time determined, the grant was in the nature of a float, and the title did not attach to any specific sections until they were capable of identification; but, when once identified, the title attached to them as of the date of the grant, except as to such sections as were specifically reserved. It is in this sense that the grant is termed one in præsentia; that is to say, it is of that character as to all lands within the terms of the grant, and not reserved from it at the time of the definite location of the route. This is the construction given to similar grants by this court, where the question has been often considered; indeed, it is so well settled as to be no longer open to discussion. Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 60, 22 L. ed. 551, 554; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578." The same principle was reaffirmed in Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 543, 36 L. ed. 806, 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856, and in many other cases which are familiar to the profession and need not be cited.

Again, no lands passed that were not, at the date of the grant, public land; that is, lands "open to sale or other disposition under general laws;" not lands "to which any claims or rights of others have attached." Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. supra. At the time of the grant of 1864 to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company the lands here in dispute were, as we have seen, among those withdrawn by the Land Department from pre-emption, settlement, and sale, and were held specifically under the grant of May 5th, 1864, for the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad. They were not, therefore, public lands embraced by the later grant to the [197] other company. *The grant of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company spoke as of the date of the act of July 2d, 1864; and that company did not acquire any title to these lands, then withdrawn, by reason of the fact that when its line, at a subsequent date, was definitely located, they had become freed from the grant made by the act of May 5th, 1864, to the state of Minnesota. Being at the date of the grant of July 2d, 1864, under the operation of an order of withdrawal by the Land Department, they were not in the category of lands embraced by that grant of "public lands." When the withdrawal order ceased to be in force the lands so withdrawn did not pass under the later grant, but became a part of the public domain, subject to be disposed of under the general land laws, and not to be claimed under any railroad land grant. There is no escape from this conclusion under the adjudged cases.

In Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566, in which the attempt was made to include within a railroad grant lands to which a homestead claim had previously attached, but which claim had ceased to exist when the line of the railroad was definitely fixed, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Miller, said: "No attempt has ever been made to include lands reserved to the United States, which reservation afterwards ceased to exist, within the grant, though this road, and others with grants in similar language, have more than once passed through military reservations, for forts and other purposes, which have been given up or abandoned as such reservations, and were of great value. Nor is it understood that, in any case where lands had been otherwise disposed of, their reversion to the government brought them within the grant."

In Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. supra, Mr. Justice Field, delivering the unanimous judgment of the court, said: "In the Leavenworth Case, supra, the appellant, the railroad company, contended that the fee of the land was in the United States, and only a right of occupancy remained with the Indians; that, under the grant, the state would hold the title subject to their right of occupancy; but, as that had *been subse-[198]quently extinguished, there was no sound objection to the granting act taking full effect. The court, however, adhered to its conclusion, that the land covered by the grant could only embrace lands which were, at the time, public lands, free from any lawful claim of other parties, unless there was an express provision showing that the grant was to have a more extended operation,—citing the decision in Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264, to which we have referred above, that land once legally appropriated to any purpose was thereby severed from the public domain, and a subsequent sale would not be construed to embrace it, though not specially reserved. And of the Indians' right of occupancy it said that this right, with the correlative obligation of the government to enforce it, negated the idea that Congress, even in the absence of any positive stipulation to protect the Osages, intended to grant their land to a railroad company, either absolutely or cum onere. 'For all practical purposes,' the court added, 'they owned it; as the actual right of possession, the only thing they deemed of value, was secured to them by treaty, until they should elect to surrender it to the United States,' Three justices, of whom the writer of this opinion was one, dissented from the majority of the court in the Leavenworth Case; but the decision has been uniformly adhered to since its announcement, and this writer, after a much larger experience in the consideration of public land grants since that time, now readily concedes that the rule of construction adopted, that, in the absence of any express provision indicating otherwise, a grant of public lands only applies to lands which are at the time free from existing claims, is better and safer, both to the government and to private parties than the rule which would pass the property subject to the liens and claims of others. The latter construction would open a wide field of litigation between the grantees and third parties."

[199] Again, in the same case, where the contention was that the Northern Pacific grant embraced lands to which a pre-emption claim had previously attached, but which claim was canceled *after the date of that grant, the court said: "That pre-emption entry remained of record until August 5, 1865, when it was canceled; but this was after the date of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and also after the dates of the several grants made to the state of Wisconsin to aid in the construction of railroad and telegraph lines within that state. The cancellation, as already said, did not have the effect of bringing the land under the operation of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company; it simply restored the land to the mass of public lands, to be dealt with subsequently in the same manner as any other public lands of the United States not covered by or excepted from the grant."

In United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 606, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, 160, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Brewer, said: "Indeed, the intent of Congress in all railroad land grants, as has been understood and declared by this court again and again, is that such grant shall operate at a fixed time, and shall take only such lands as at that time are public lands, and, therefore, grantable by Congress, and is never to be taken as a floating authority to appropriate all tracts within the specified limits which, at any subsequent time, may become public lands." In Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 92, 39 L. ed. 906, 908, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796, 799, Mr. Justice Brewer, again speaking for the court, said: "That when, on the records of the local land office, there is an existing claim on the part of an individual under the homestead or pre-emption law, which has been recognized by the officers of the government, and has not been canceled or set aside, the tract in respect to which that claim is existing is excepted from the operation of a railroad land grant containing the ordinary excepting clauses, and this notwithstanding such claim may not be enforceable by the claimant, and is subject to cancellation by the government at its own suggestion or upon the application of other parties. It was not the intention of Congress to open a controversy between the claimant and the railroad company as to the validity of the former's claim. It was enough that the claim existed and the question of its validity was a matter to be settled between *the government and the claimant, in respect to which the railroad company was not permitted to be heard." In Spencer v. McDougal, 159 U. S. 65, 40 L. ed. 77, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1026, the court referred to Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689, in which the question arose whether a grant of public lands on each side of Des Moines river, in aid of navigation, terminated at the mouth of Raccoon fork or extended along the whole length of the river to the northern boundary of the state, and said: "The Land Department ordered that lands the whole length of the river within the state should be withdrawn from sale. In the course of subsequent litigation it was decided by this court that the grant terminated at the mouth of the Raccoon river. But in the case cited it was held that the withdrawal by the Land Department of lands above the mouth of the Raccoon river was valid, and that a subsequent railroad grant, with the ordinary reservation clause in it, did not operate upon lands so withdrawn." So, in Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging, & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 607, 611, 42 L. ed. 596, 597, 599, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205, 206, 207: "But a single question is presented in this case, and that is whether the withdrawal from sale by the Land Department in March, 1866, of lands within the indemnity limits of the grant of 1856 and 1864 exempted such lands from the operation of the grant to the plaintiff. It will be perceived that the grant in aid of the defendant railway company was prior in date to that to the plaintiff, and that before the time of the filing of plaintiff's maps of general route and definite location the lands were withdrawn for the benefit of the defendant. The grant to the plaintiff was only of lands to which the United States had 'full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption, or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed.' The withdrawal by the Secretary in aid of the grant to the state of Wisconsin was valid, and operated to withdraw the odd-numbered sections within its limits from disposal by the land officers of the government under the general land laws. The act of the Secretary was in effect a reservation. Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; *Wolsey v. [201] Chapman, 101 U. S. 755, 25 L. ed. 915, and cases cited in the opinion; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353, and cases cited in the opinion. It has also been held that such a withdrawal is effective against claims arising under subsequent railroad land grants. St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 17, 18, 35 L. ed. 77, 83, 84, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 54, 40 L. ed. 71, 73, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Spencer v. McDougal, 159 U. S. 62, 40 L. ed. 76, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1026. . . . All that we here hold is, that when a withdrawal of lands within indemnity limits is made in aid of an earlier land grant, and made prior to the filing of the map of definite location by a company having a later grant,—the latter having such words of exception and limitation as are found in the grant to the plaintiff,—it operates to except the withdrawn lands from the scope of such later grant." The doctrines of these cases were recognized in the recent case of Northern P. R. Co. v. Delacey, 174 U. S. 622, 43 L. ed. 1111, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791.

In view of these decisions it is clear that, as the lands in dispute were, at the date of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, withdrawn, of record, for the benefit of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, under a prior grant, they were not public lands within the meaning of the later grant, and did not come under it, when or because it was subsequently ascertained that they were without the line of the definite location of the road of the Lake Superior Railroad Company, and within the place limits of the Northern Pacific, as defined by its map of definite location. When freed from the operation of the accepted map of general route filed by the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad Company, they did not come under the operation of the later grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad, but became a part of the public lands constituting the public domain, and subject only to be disposed of under the general laws relating to the public lands. If, by the act of July 2d, 1864, or before the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad was definitely located, Congress had, in terms, appropriated, for the benefit of that road, any of the lands embraced in the general route of the *other road, a different question would be presented. But it did not do so. It only granted for the benefit of the Northern Pacific Railroad lands which then, July 2d, 1864, were public lands, and no lands were public lands, within the meaning of Congress, which, at that time, were withdrawn by the Land Department; that is, reserved for the purposes of a grant prior, although such reservation turned out to have been a mistake.

[202]

204 U. S.

The suggestion is made in this connection that the order of the Land Department was too uncertain and indefinite to have any legal force, because the direction to the local land office was to suspend from pre-emption, settlement, and sale "a body of land about 20 miles in width." We deem this suggestion without merit. The order for withdrawal referred to the diagram or map showing the road's probable route; and it is agreed that the lands in dispute are coterminous and within 10 miles of the line of the general route of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, as defined by the above diagram or map. The map, however indefinite, was intended to cover these lands. It sufficiently indicated these lands and the probable route of the road, and that was enough.

Many cases are called to our attention which are supposed to militate against the views we have here expressed. We have examined those referred to and do not perceive that any one of them decided the particular question now before us. No one of them holds that a grant, in presenti, of public lands, with the ordinary reservations, embraces lands which, at the date of such grant, are under the operation of a formal order of the Land Department, of record, withdrawing them for the benefit of a prior grant in the event they should be needed for the purposes of such grant. Nor does any of them hold that the subsequent cancellation of such withdrawal order had the effect to bring them under the operation of a later grant of public lands. It is said that United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261, and Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 368, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, should be regarded as controlling and decisive of this case for the appellant. We do not think so. The *principal point decided in [203] those cases was that nothing in the act of 1864 prevented Congress by legislation from appropriating for the benefit of other railroad corporations lands that might be or were embraced within the general route of the Northern Pacific Railroad; and this for the reason that an accepted map of general route only gave the company filing it an inchoate right, and did not pass title to specific sections until they were identified by a definite location of the road. Besides, in neither case was there in force, at the date of the later grant, an accepted, effective order of the Land Department withdrawing the lands there in dispute pursuant to an accepted map of the general route of the Northern Pacific Railroad. If there had been an order of that kind, it would still have been competent for Congress to dispose of the lands within such general route, as it saw proper, at any time prior to the definite location of the road under the later grant. In conformity with prior decisions it was so adjudged in the two cases above cited. Those cases did not adjudge that a grant of "public land," with the usual reservations, embraced any lands which, at the time, were formally withdrawn by the Land Department from pre-emption, settlement, or sale, for the benefit of a prior grant.

We are of opinion that the Circuit Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals correctly interpreted the decisions of this court and did not err as to the law of the case. The judgment below must, therefore, be affirmed. It is so ordered.

[204]*MONTANA MINING COMPANY, Limited,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
ST. LOUIS MINING & MILLING COM-PANY OF MONTANA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 204-220.)

Certiorari to circuit court of appeals.

1. Certiorari to the circuit court of appeals will be allowed by the Federal Supreme Court, where the importance of the case demands it, to avoid any question as to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of a writ of error duly allowed, where an application for certiorari was made after a motion to dismiss the writ of error was filed.

Mines—conflicting lode locations—effect of compromise.

2. An adjustment of subsurface rights, and not merely the establishment of a surface boundary line between two conflicting lode mining claims, was accomplished by an agreement to compromise adverse proceedings, followed by the execution of a bond by the locator of one of such claims, by the terms of which he was to obtain a patent, and was then to execute a deed of certain of the disputed territory, "together with all the mineral therein contained," which deed, when executed, pursuant to a decree for specific performance, conveyed the tract described in the bond with "all the mineral therein contained," together with "all the dips, spurs, and angles, and also all the metals, ores, gold and silver-bearing quartz rock and earth therein."

[No. 402.]

Argued December 10, 11, 1906. Decided January 14, 1907.

[N ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Montana in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for the removal of ore from certain disputed territory. Certiorari allowed to avoid the question of jurisdiction of writ of error, and the judgment of the Court of Appeals reversed and the case remanded to the Circuit Court for a new trial.

See same case below, 147 Fed. 897.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The litigation between these parties has been protracted through a series of years. A brief history will help to an understanding of the present questions. Prior to 1884 Charles *Mayger had located the St. Louis [205] lode claim in Lewis and Clarke county, Montana territory, and William Robinson and others had located, adjoining thereto, the Nine Hour lode claim. These claims conflicted. Mayger made application for a patent. Thereupon adverse proceedings were commenced by Robinson and his associates against Mayger in the district court of the third judicial district of Montana. For the purpose of settling and compromising that action on March 7, 1884, a bond was executed by Mayger to the other parties, in which he agreed to proceed as rapidly as possible to obtain a patent, and then to execute and deliver to Robinson a good and sufficient deed of conveyance of a tract described as "comprising a part of two certain quartz lode mining claims, known as the St. Louis lode claim and the Nine Hour lode claim, NOTE.—On certiorari to the circuit courts of appeals—see note to State ex rel. Hamilton v. Guinotte, 50 L.R.A. 801.

On certiorari in the United States courts generally—see note to Clark v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 69.

On intersecting, crossing, or uniting veins—see note to Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 50 L.R.A. 209.

As to right to follow a vein or lode on its dip beyond the surface lines of the location—see notes to Parrot Silver & Copper Co. v. Heinze, 53 L.R.A. 491, and Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. 66 C. C. A. 311.

On conflicting lode locations—see note to Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 39 L. ed. U. S. 859, and Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 96.

and particularly described as follows, to wit." Then follows a description of what is known as the compromise ground,—a tract including an area of 12,844.5 square feet, "together with all the mineral therein contained." Mayger proceeded to obtain a patent for the St. Louis claim, including the compromise ground, as did also Robinson and his associates, a patent to the Nine Hour claim, omitting the compromise ground. Thereafter the plaintiff in error acquired the interest of Robinson and his associates and the defendant in error the interest of Mayger. The former company demanded a conveyance of the compromise ground in accordance with the terms of the bond executed by Mayger, which being refused, suit was brought in a district court of the state, which rendered a decree in its favor. That decree having been affirmed by the supreme court of the state, the St. Louis company brought the case to this court, and on October 31, 1898, the judgment of the supreme court of Montana was affirmed. 171 U. S. 650, 43 L. ed. 320, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61. In pursuance of the decree the St. Louis company deeded the tract described in the bond, giving its boundaries, the number of square feet contained therein, and adding, "together with all the dips, spurs, and angles, [206]*and also all the metals, ores, gold and silver-bearing quartz rock and earth therein, and all the rights, privileges, and franchises thereto incident, appended, or appurtenant, or therewith usually had and enjoyed; and also all and singular the tenements, hereditaments, and appurtenances thereto belonging or in anywise appertaining, and the rents, issues, and profits therein, and also all and every right, title, interest, property, possession, claim, and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of the said party of the first part, of, in, or to the said premises and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances."

Prior explorations, the exact date of which is not shown, but apparently long after the compromise agreement, had disclosed the fact that beneath the surface of this compromise ground there was a large body of ore which, it was claimed, belonged to a vein apexing in the territory of the St. Louis claim. This was not the discovery vein, but a secondary vein, frequently called the Drumlummon vein or lode, whose apex was between the compromise ground and the apex of the St. Louis discovery vein. Some of this ore was mined and removed by the Montana company. On September 16, 1893, a year before the specific performance suit was brought, the St. Louis company filed its complaint in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Montana, 204 U. S.

against the Montana company and several individual defendants, claiming to recover $200,000 for the damages sustained by the trespass of the defendants in removing the ore. In its complaint the St. Louis company alleged that it was a corporation organized under the laws of Montana, and that the Montana company was a corporation incorporated under the laws of the Kingdom of Great Britain, but nothing was said as to the residence or citizenship of the individual defendants.

On November 21, 1898, three weeks after the decision by this court in the specific performance suit, an amended and supplemental complaint was filed, which omitted the individual defendants and sought a recovery from the Montana*company alone for the ore [207] so wrongfully removed, as alleged. On June 26, 1899, a second amended and supplemental complaint was filed, also against the Montana company alone, and asking for the same relief. To this an answer was filed, setting up the bond and deed heretofore referred to, and pleading that thereby the plaintiff was estopped from claiming any part of the compromise ground or any mineral contained therein.

Pending this litigation, and on respectively the sixth and twelfth days of December, 1898, orders were issued by the circuit court restraining severally each of the parties to this litigation from taking any more mineral from the disputed ground. On the second amended and supplemental complaint a trial was had in which judgment was rendered in favor of the St. Louis company for $23,209. To review this judgment, the Montana company prosecuted a writ of error from the circuit court of appeals of the ninth circuit, which writ was dated October 7, 1899, and the judgment was affirmed May 14, 1900. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430. The St. Louis company took out a cross writ of error from the circuit court of appeals dated January 30, 1900, and that court reversed the judgment October 8, 1900, and remanded the case for a new trial as to the recovery sought for the conversion and value of certain ores, which had been excluded by the circuit court from the consideration of the jury. 56 L.R.A. 725, 44 C. C. A. 120, 104 Fed. 664. The parties then brought, by separate writs of error, these two decisions of the court of appeals to this court, on consideration whereof this court held that the judgment in the circuit court was entirely set aside by the second decision of the court of appeals, and therefore dismissed both cases on the ground that there was no final judgment. 186 U. S. 24, 46 L. ed. 1039, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744.

Whereupon the court of appeals sent down to the circuit court a mandate setting aside the judgment in toto, and ordering a new trial. This new trial was held on May 31, 1905, and resulted in a judgment in favor of the St. Louis company for $195,000, *which judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, to reverse which decision the Montana company sued out this writ of error.

After this last decision by the court of appeals, the circuit court, on the application of the St. Louis company, set aside the order which restrained it from extracting ore from the disputed territory. Thereupon the Montana company filed its application in this court for a reinstatement of that order and that it be continued in force until the final termination of the litigation.

The St. Louis company filed a motion to dismiss the writ of error sued out by the Montana company, on the ground that the jurisdiction of the circuit court depended entirely on diverse citizenship, and therefore the decision of the court of appeals was final. The Montana company then made application for a writ of certiorari, which application was passed for consideration to the final hearing of the case.

Mr. Charles J. Hughes, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. E. Cullen, Aldis B. Browne, and Alexander Britton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The words "together with all the mineral therein contained" when employed in the decree, even had they not been accompanied by a perpetual injunction precluding any claim of any kind on the part of the defendant in error within the bounded area of the compromise ground, acquired a fixed, definite, and certain meaning, and without the injunction, but certainly with it, operated to award the plaintiff in error every particle of mineral in the compromise ground.

Bogart v. Amanda Consol. Gold Min. Co. 32 Colo. 32, 74 Pac. 882.

At common law a deed to real estate passed every interest which the grantor had in the premises described unless some interest was expressly reserved therein.

The common law is in force in the state of Montana unless where repealed, either expressly or by some statute in conflict therewith.

Territory v. Ye Wan, 2 Mont. 479; Territory ex rel. Blake v. Virginia Road Co. 2 Mont. 96; Butte Hardware Co. v. Sullivan, 7 Mont. 312, 16 Pac. 588; Palmer v. McMaster, 8 Mont. 192, 19 Pac. 585; Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 9 Mont. 541, 24 Pac. 17; Forrester v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 21 Mont. 544, 55 Pac. 229, 353.

There exists in the deed nothing which authorizes the invocation of the rule of law upon which the circuit court of appeals announces it proceeded, to wit, a resort to the nature of the property and the circumstances surrounding the execution of the deed for the purpose of ascertaining its meaning. That can only be done when the terms of the deed, its contents, render this necessary in order to determine what is conveyed by it.

Van Ness v. Washington, 4 Pet. 285, 7 L. ed. 860; Tiernan v. Jackson, 5 Pet. 594, 8 L. ed. 240; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 243, 34 L. ed. 948, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; 2 Devlin, Deeds, 2d ed. § 836.

The patent in this case is the usual patent, and there is nothing in its terms which permits, suggests, or gives an excuse for investigating the prior history of the territory embraced within the claim as patented or controversies which may have raged, however bitterly, before its issuance, since they are terminated conclusively by its issuance.

Boggs v. Merced Min. Co. 14 Cal. 279; Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, 56 Fed. 685; Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 182 U. S. 499, 45 L. ed. 1200, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 445, 49 L. ed. 1119, 1121, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716; Wight v. Dubois, 21 Fed. 696; Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 337, 355, 49 L. ed. 501, 511, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; 2 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. § 778, p. 1389.

A compromise does not concede or acknowledge that either party is wholly right, and surely does not permit either party to it to maintain such a position for the purpose of defeating the grant it made as its consideration for what it received under the compromise.

Webster's Dict. "compromise;" Smith, Synonyms Discriminated, p. 62; Century Dict. "compromise;" 1 Bouvier's Law Dict. 308; Huddersfield Banking Co. v. Lister [1895] 2 Ch. 285; Sharp v. Knox, 4 La. 456; Attrill v. Patterson, 58 Md. 226; Landa v. Obert, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 620, 25 S. W. 342; Continental Nat. Bank v. McGeoch, 92 Wis. 286, 66 N. W. 606; Rankin v. Schofield, 70 Ark. 83, 66 S. W. 197; Gregg v. Weathersfield, 55 Vt. 385; Colburn v. Groton, 66 N. H. 151, 22 L. R. A. 763, 28 Atl. 95; Bellows v. Sowles, 55 Vt. 391, 45 Am. Rep. 621.

Mr. Milton S. Gunn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Arthur Brown, J. H. Ralston, Thomas C. Bach, J. B. Clayberg, F. L. Sidons, Ira T. Wight, and W. E. Richardson filed a brief for defendant in error:

Where a party assumes a certain position in a legal proceeding and succeeds in maintaining that position, he may not thereafter, simply because his interests have changed, assume a contrary position, especially if it be to the prejudice of the party who has acquiesced in the position formerly taken by him.

Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 39 L. ed. 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

The language used is to be construed with reference to the peculiar property about which the parties were contracting.

Richmond Min. Co. v. Eureka Min. Co. 103 U. S. 846, 26 L. ed. 560.

In construing contracts, a court may look not only to their terms, but to their subject-matter and the surrounding circumstances, and avail itself of the same light which, at the time of making them, the parties possessed.

Merriam v. United States, 107 U. S. 437, 27 L. ed. 531, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536.

The construction of all deeds must be made with a reference to their subject-matter.

Doe ex dem. Freeland v. Burt, 1 T. R. 701.

Previous and contemporary transactions and facts may be properly taken into consideration to ascertain the subject-matter of a contract and the sense in which the parties may have used particular terms, but not to alter or modify the plain language which they have used.

Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 173, 24 L. ed. 624.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question is, of course, the one [213] of jurisdiction. If *the jurisdiction of the circuit court depended alone on diverse citizenship, then, undoubtedly, the decision of the court of appeals was final, and the case could only be brought here on certiorari. On the other hand, if it did not depend alone on diverse citizenship, the decision of the court of appeals was not final, and the case is properly here on writ of error. The original complaint alleged the citizenship of the two corporations, plaintiff and defendant, but did not allege the citizenship of the individual defendants. In order to sustain the jurisdiction of the circuit court on the ground of diverse citizenship, the citizenship of all the parties on one side must be diverse from that of those on the other. So, unless there was a Federal question presented by that complaint, as the citizenship of the individual defendants was not shown, the circuit court had no jurisdiction of the case. It may be that this was remedied by the subsequent first and second amended complaints, in which the individual defendants were left out, the citizenship of the two corporations, plaintiff and defendant, alleged, and to which complaints the Montana company, without raising any question of jurisdiction, appeared and answered. Conolly 204 U. S.

v. Taylor, 2 Pet. 556, 7 L. ed. 518; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. ed. 1078, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449. Be that as it may, in view of the fact that this litigation has been twice before this court, has been protracted for many years, involves so large an amount, and also presents questions of Federal mining law which, though perhaps not necessary for our decision, have yet been elaborately argued by counsel, we are of opinion that if the jurisdiction of the circuit court did, after the filing of the amended complaints, depend entirely on diverse citizenship, the case ought to be brought here by writ of certiorari. As either by writ of error or certiorari the decision of the court of appeals can be brought before this court, and as each has been applied for, and as the importance of the case seems to demand our examination, it is scarcely necessary to consume time in attempting to decide positively whether there was a Federal question involved, or the jurisdiction depended solely on diverse citizenship. The *writ of error [214] was duly allowed prior to the filing of the record in the first instance, and, to avoid any further question of our jurisdiction, we allow the certiorari. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808.

We pass, therefore, to a consideration of the merits; and the first question presented by counsel—indeed, as we look at it, the pivotal question—is the proper construction of the bond and deed by which the plaintiff in error claims title to the compromise ground.

The bond described the ground, adding, "together with all the mineral therein contained." The deed executed in pursuance of the judicial decree contains the same description, followed by the words above quoted and also the further words given in the statement of facts,—"together with all the dips, spurs, and angles," etc.

Now, the contention of the defendant in error is that the effect of the compromise followed by the bond and conveyance was simply to locate the boundary line between the two claims, leaving all subsurface rights to be determined by the ordinary rules recognized in the mining districts and enforced by the statutes of Congress.

The argument in favor of this construction is forcibly put by Circuit Judge Gilbert, delivering the opinion of the court of appeals, when the case was first presented to that court. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430. Without quoting it in full it is to the effect that agreements and conveyances of the whole or parts of mining claims are to be construed in the light of the mining law, as, generally speaking, we construe a contract, not merely by its terms, but having regard to the subject-matter involved and the surrounding circumstances, in order to ascertain the intention of the parties. Particular reference was made to Richmond Min. Co. v. Eureka Min. Co. 103 U. S. 846, 26 L. ed. 557, in which this court held that a line specified in a contract between the owners of contiguous mining claims to be one continued downward to the center of the earth was not a [215] vertical plane, but must be construed as *extending the boundary line downward through the dips of the veins or lodes wherever they might go in their course toward the center of the earth.

Further, the argument is that the adverse proceedings were maintained by the owners of the Nine Hour claim on the theory that the strip of land so contracted to be conveyed was a portion of that claim; that if the action had gone to judgment, sustaining their contention, the result would have been simply to fix the surface line of division between the two claims, without affecting the subsurface rights. Reference was also made to the suit for specific performance brought by the present plaintiff in error, in which it alleged that the contract had been made for the purpose of settling and agreeing upon the boundary line between the two claims, and that the suit was maintained upon the theory that, as owner of the Nine Hour claim, it owned the compromise ground afterwards conveyed.

We are not insensible to the force of this argument, and also appreciate fully what is said by counsel in reference to the familiarity of the several concurring justices with mining law and contracts and conveyances made under it.

Yet, notwithstanding, we are compelled to dissent from their construction of these instruments, and to hold that something more was intended and accomplished than the mere establishment of a surface boundary line. We premise by saying that nothing can be invoked in the nature of an estoppel from the averments in the pleadings in the suit for specific performance. True, the plaintiff in error alleged that the compromise ground was a part of its mining claim, and that the bond was executed "to settle and compromise the said suit and adverse claims, and for the purpose of settling and agreeing upon the boundary line between" the two claims; but the bond itself, reciting the fact of a settlement and compromise, and an agreement by the contestants to withdraw their objections to the application for a patent, stipulates for a conveyance, after patent, of the compromise ground, [216] "comprising *a part of two certain quartz lode mining claims, known as the St. Louis lode claim and the Nine Hour lode claim," they being, respectively, the two claims owned by the parties hereto. Further, the answer denied that the compromise ground was a part of the Nine Hour lode claim, and alleged that the then owner of the St. Louis lode claim executed the bond as a compromise of the adverse claim and suit, and to enable him to obtain a patent for the whole of his claim.

The facts in the case, as well as the allegations in these pleadings, show that the two claims conflicted, that when application was made for a patent adverse proceedings were instituted, and that rather than try the title of the respective locators to the territory in conflict, and by way of compromise, they agreed that the owner of the St. Louis claim might proceed to patent, and then convey the compromise ground to the grantors of the plaintiff in error.

It must also be noticed that the dispute between the two claims was not simply in respect to the compromise ground,—at least, testimony offered to prove this was ruled out,—but involved a larger area, and that the disputing parties settled by the bond, describing what was to be conveyed.

It is undoubtedly true that if the bond had simply described the surface area or fixed a boundary line between the two claims, the subsurface and extralateral rights might have been determined by the mining law. It might have been implied that there was no intention to disturb the rights given by it.

Further, while it may be true that the words "together with all the dips, spurs, and angles," etc., are generally employed in conveyances of mining claims in order to emphasize the fact that not merely the surface but the extralateral rights which go with a mining claim are conveyed, yet it must be noticed that in addition to these customary words are these, found in both the bond and the deed: "Together with all the mineral therein contained;" and they cannot be ignored, but must be given a meaning reasonable and consistent with other parts of the instruments. It is not satisfactory to say that *they are only equivalent to those that [217] follow, "dips, spurs," etc., that the same thing is meant by each expression. While, of course, repetition is possible, yet it is not to be expected; and when, in addition to the ordinary words found in conveyances of mining claims, is this extra clause, we naturally regard it as making some further grant.

The scope of this deed would not be open to doubt if only the common law was to be considered. And in this connection it may be remarked that the common law has been kept steadily in force in Montana. "The common law of England, so far as the same is applicable and of a general nature, and not in conflict with special enactments of this territory, shall be the law and the rule of decision, and shall be considered as of full force until repealed by legislative authority." Laws of Montana, 1871, 1872, chap. 13, § 1, p. 388, substantially re-enacted in Mont. Anno. Code, § 5152. See also Territory v. Ye Wan, 2 Mont. 478, 479; Territory ex rel. Blake v. Virginia Road Co. 2 Mont. 96; Butte Hardware Co. v. Sullivan, 7 Mont. 312, 16 Pac. 588; Palmer v. McMaster, 8 Mont. 186, 192, 19 Pac. 585; Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 9 Mont. 541, 24 Pac. 17; Forrester v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 21 Mont. 544, 556, 55 Pac. 229, 353. By that law a deed of real estate conveys all beneath the surface, unless there be some words of exception or limitation. But the mining laws of both state and territory were in force, and in construing conveyances of mining claims the provisions of those laws must be taken into account, and may add to or subtract from the rights passing by a common-law conveyance of agricultural or timber lands. It is probably not necessary to specify extralateral rights in order that a conveyance of a mining claim be operative to transfer them, and yet it is not strange that the custom grew up of naming them for the sake of avoiding the possibility of disputes. While the bond made no mention of extralateral rights, yet in all probability it would have been held to pass them and the court may have thought that the single specification, "all the mineral therein contained," was liable to be construed as nar-

[218]rowing the conveyance so as to *include only the mineral beneath the surface, and therefore required that there should be incorporated in the deed the words "together with all the dips, spurs," etc. Yet, in requiring the introduction of these words, which in terms define extralateral rights, it also retained the phrase "together with all the mineral therein contained."

To the suggestion that giving this construction to the bond and conveyance is in effect the granting of a section of a vein of mineral, the answer is that there is nothing impractical or unnatural in such a conveyance. It does not operate to transfer the vein in toto, but simply carves out from the vein the section between the vertical side lines of the ground, and transfers that to the grantee. The title to the balance of the vein remains undisturbed.

To the further suggestion that the owner of the apex might be left with a body of ore on the descending vein beyond the further side line of the compromise ground which he could not reach, the answer is that this assumes as a fact that which may not be a fact. The owner of the apex may be the owner of other ground by which access can be obtained to the descending vein. and it also is a question worthy of consideration whether granting a section out from a descending vein does not imply a right reserved in the grantor to pass through the territory of the section conveyed in order to reach the further portion of the vein. Those are questions which need not now be determined. This secondary vein does not appear to have been known at the time of the compromise, and while, of course, there is always a possibility of such a vein being discovered, yet parties are more apt to contract and settle upon the basis of what they know than upon the possibilities of future discovery.

The action of the parties hereto is suggestive, although not of itself decisive. This action for the recovery of ore taken out from beneath the surface of the compromise ground was pending when the suit for specific performance was brought in 1894. Nothing was done in this action from that time until *three weeks after a final decision [219] of the specific performance case by this court, when an amended complaint was filed, and the case thereafter proceeded by ordinary stages to trial and judgment. The original complaint alleged the ownership by the St. Louis company of its mining claim and of all veins, lodes, or ledges having their tops or apexes inside of its surface boundary lines, with the right to follow those veins, lodes, or ledges on the dips or angles outside the side lines of the mining claim. It also alleged that the defendants entered wrongfully upon one of the veins, lodes, or ledges having its top or apex within the surface location of the St. Louis claim, and which had in its dip or angle passed outside the side lines of the St. Louis claim and "entered beneath the mining property claimed or pretended to be claimed by the said defendants or some of them, and that, in utter disregard of the right or title of plaintiff, the said defendants ever since have been and now are extracting and taking therefrom large quantities of coarse rock and ore," etc. In other words, it sought to recover from the Montana company the value of the ore taken by the latter from a vein whose apex was within the surface boundaries of the former's claim, but which in its dip had passed outside the side lines into territory claimed by the Montana company. With that as its claim the litigation was dormant for four years. Now, if it were true that the apex of the vein was within the side lines of the St. Louis claim and the ore taken by the defendants was taken from below the surface of the compromise ground, and all that was accomplished by the compromise and bond was the establishment of a boundary line, leaving subsurface and extralateral rights undisturbed, there was no necessity of postponing the litigation until the question of title to the surface was disposed of. As we have said, we do not mean that this is decisive, because the St. Louis company may have thought that all controversies would be ended if it could once establish that the Montana company took nothing by virtue of the compromise and bond. Still the delay in the litigation is in [220]harmony with the belief that "the words in the bond, 'together with all the mineral therein contained,' meant all the mineral below the surface.

The disposition of this question compels a reversal of the judgment. It may also effectually dispose of all disputes between the parties, and, therefore, it would be a mere waste of time to attempt to consider other questions which have been discussed with ability and elaboration by counsel.

In view of this conclusion it is also apparent that the order restraining defendant in error from removing ore from the disputed territory ought not to have been set aside.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed and the case remanded to the Circuit Court with instructions to grant a new trial. Further, the order restraining defendant in error from mining and removing any of the ore in dispute will be reinstated and continued in force until the final disposition of the case.

ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner,
v.

ERIE & WESTERN TRANSPORTATION
COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 220-228.)

Admiralty jurisdiction—suit to enforce contribution.

1. A court of admiralty has jurisdiction of a libel brought by one of two vessels, which were both adjudged to be in fault for a collision, to enforce contribution on account of its payment of the entire damage to the cargo of the other vessel.

Contribution—between vessels in fault for collision.

2. The right of one of two vessels which were both in fault for a collision to enforce contribution where it has paid the entire damage to the cargo of the other vessel is not affected by provisions in the latter vessel's bills of lading, giving her the benefit of insurance, and fixing the time within which claims for damage must be made and suits therefor instituted.

Judgment—res judicata.

3. A decree dividing the damage sustained by two vessels held in fault for a collision, but refusing to divide the damages to cargo, because that question was not open under the pleadings, does not prevent the vessel which has been compelled to pay the entire cargo damage from bringing a libel in admiralty against the other vessel to enforce contribution.

[No. 134.]

Argued December 14, 1906. Decided January 14, 1907.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, enforcing contribution to cargo damage between two vessels held in fault for a collision, and ordered the libel dismissed. Decree of Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and that of the District Court affirmed.

See same case below, 73 C. C. A. 195, 142 Fed. 9.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles E. Kremer argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. O. Johnson, filed a brief for petitioner:

Each of two vessels held jointly at fault should equally bear the damage resulting from such negligence.

The Catharine v. Dickinson, 17 How. 170, 15 L. ed. 233; The North Star (Reynolds v. Vanderbilt) 106 U. S. 17, 27 L. ed. 91, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; The Manitoba (Beatty v. Hanna) 122 U. S. 97, 30 L. ed. 1095, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1158; The Albert Dumois, 177 U. S. 240, 44 L. ed. 751, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

Additional pleadings, besides libel and answer, were not necessary to enable a court of admiralty to properly apportion the damages between wrongdoers, when these were the libellant and defendant then before the court.

The Eleanor, 17 Blatchf. 88, Fed. Cas. No. 4,335; Leonard v. Whitwill, 10 Ben. 638, Fed. Cas. No. 8,261; Duncan v. The C. H. Foster, 1 Fed. 733; Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Alexandre, 16 Fed. 279; The Canima, 17 Fed. 271; The Hercules, 20 Fed. 205; The Job T. Wilson, 84 Fed. 204; The Livingstone, 104 Fed. 918; The Albert Dumois and The Manitoba, supra.

An appeal in admiralty entitles the appellant to a trial de novo.

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Gilchrist v. Chicago Ins. Co. 44 C. C. A. 43, 104 Fed. 566.

Recoupment is the right whereby mutual demands which arise out of the same transaction may be adjusted in one action.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 547.

It is of common-law origin and independent of the statutes of set-off.

4 Minor, Inst. 2d ed. 706; 1 Chitty, Pl. 16 Am. ed. 595; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Jameson, 13 W. Va. 833, 31 Am. Rep. 775; 8 Vin. Abr. title "Discount," 556.

But may be equity early transposed.

Grand Lodge of Masons v. Knox, 20 Mo. 433; 1 Chitty, Pl. 14 Am. ed. *p. 568.

It applies to common law and equity; also admiralty.

Snow v. Carruth, 1 Sprague, 324, Fed. Cas. No. 13,144; Nichols v. Tremlett, 1 Sprague, 361, Fed. Cas. No. 10,247.

Petitioner is not bound to recoup.

4 Minor, Inst. pt. 1, p. 656; Burwell v. Knight, 51 Barb. 267; Jennison Hardware Co. v. Godkin, 112 Mich. 57, 70 N. W. 428; Wells, Res Adjudicata, 236, 305.

The question of recoupment and set-off was not considered by the court in the former decision, and therefore that decision could not be held to be res judicata.

Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, § 256; State Bank v. Bartle, 114 Mo. 276, 21 S. W. 816; O'Connor v. New York & Y. Land Improv. Co. 8 Misc. 243, 28 N. Y. Supp. 544; Bulkeley v. House, 62 Conn. 459, 21 L.R.A. 247, 26 Atl. 352; Koelsch v. Mixer, 52 Ohio St. 207, 39 N. E. 417; Cottingham v. Shrewsbury, 3 Hare, 27; Doe ex dem. McCall v. Carpenter, 18 How. 297, 15 L. ed. 389; Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 18 L. ed. 550; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 353, 24 L. ed. 198; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; New Orleans v. Citizens Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 200; Lore v. Truman, 10 Ohio St. 45; Porter v. Wagner, 36 Ohio St. 471.

A right of action existed for contribution and the admiralty court had jurisdiction.

The Hudson, 15 Fed. 162; The Mariska, 47 C. C. A. 115, 107 Fed. 989; Wellman v. Morse, 22 C. C. A. 318, 33 U. S. App. 610, 76 Fed. 573; Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 400, 39 L. ed. 749, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; The Irrawaddy (Flint v. Christall) 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. ed. 130, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; The Dora, 34 Fed. 343; The Wm. Murtagh, 17 Fed. 259.

Analogous to this case in principle as to its character being maritime, and, if so, carrying with it a lien, we have the cases arising in general average.

Benedict, Admiralty, § 295; Dupont de 204 U. S.

Nemours v. Vance, 19 How. 162, 15 L. ed. 584.

In every maritime transaction, whether of tort or contract, coming within the jurisdiction of an admiralty court, if property is concerned a lien is provided, the principal, if not the only, exception to this rule being the case of home supplies, and, even in this class of cases, a lien, if provided by any law, is recognized and enforced in admiralty.

The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 345, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.

If the cause is a maritime cause, subject to admiralty cognizance, jurisdiction is complete over the person as well as over the ship. It must, in its nature, be complete, for it cannot be confined to one of the remedies on the contract, when the contract itself is within its cognizance.

New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 12 L. ed. 465.

It has been held that a lien in admiralty may be assigned and enforced in the name of the assignee.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1136, and cases cited.

Taking a bill or note does not extinguish the lien or claim for which the note was given, unless it is so understood. The note is surrendered at the trial.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1133, and cases cited.

Money borrowed to pay bills stands in the same relation to a vessel as the bill paid.

The Cumberland, 30 Fed. 449; The Arctic, 75 Fed. 601; The Wyoming, 36 Fed. 493; Southern Bank v. The Alexander McNeil, Fed. Cas. No. 13,186.

The right to recover in this case is not one resting upon the right of subrogation, but upon the right of contribution. In numerous cases the courts of admiralty have held that there is a right of recovery even when no direct action could be sustained by the shipper against the carrier. Subrogation is therefore not the rule in such cases.

The North Star (Reynolds v. Vanderbilt) 106 U. S. 17, 27 L. ed. 91, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; The Chattahoochee, 173 U. S. 540, 43 L. ed. 801, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; The Viola, 60 Fed. 296; The Albert Dumois, 177 U. S. 240, 44 L. ed. 751, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; The George W. Roby, 49 C. C. A. 481, 111 Fed. 601.

The rule which applies and which controls this case is the rule of contribution. It arises in this class of cases in admiralty only. At common law contributory negligence defeats the right of action. In admiralty it does not, but entitles the party guilty of negligence to recover if negligence can be proved against the opposite party.

In such a case a plaintiff recovers one half of his damages.

The Atlas (Phoenix Ins. Co. v. The Atlas) 93 U. S. 302, 23 L. ed. 863; The Alabama (The Alabama v. De Las Casas) 92 U. S. 695, 23 L. ed. 763; Dering v. Winchelsea, 1 Cox, Ch. Cas. 318; Camp v. Bostwick, 20 Ohio St. 337, 5 Am. Rep. 669; Chapman v. Todd, 60 Me. 282; Pine Hill Coal Co. v. Harris, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 519; Bank of Catskill v. Messenger, 9 Cow. 39; Durrell v. Wendell, 8 N. H. 369; Byers v. Alcorn, 6 Ill. App. 39; Drummond v. Yager, 10 Ill. App. 380; Chipman v. Morrill, 20 Cal. 135.

The right is regarded as resting, not on the original contractor, but on the relation created thereby of the parties bound by a common obligation, and the contract implied therefrom of discharging such common obligation equally.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 331.

Evidence that the right of contribution does not grow out of the contract, but is based upon the equitable principle of bearing a loss equally with another, is the fact that the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the plaintiff has paid more than his share of the debt.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 365; Wolmershausen v. Gullick [1893] 2 Ch. 514; Moore v. Bruner, 31 Ill. App. 400.

While we find it frequently stated that there is no contribution between tortfeasors, this is not, by any means, a universal rule, and we find that this rule applies only to cases of intentional and conscious wrongdoing, but does not apply to cases which are committed without guilty intent.

Bailey v. Bussing, 28 Conn. 455; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 365; Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 327, 18 L. ed. 799; Ankeny v. Moffett, 37 Minn. 109, 33 N. W. 320; Horbach v. Elder, 18 Pa. 33; Armstrong County v. Clarion County, 66 Pa. 218, 5 Am. Rep. 368.

The rule that there is no contribution among tortfeasors does not apply to admiralty, because there is contribution.

The Frankland, 9 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 196.

Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder and Frank S. Masten argued the cause, and, with Mr. S. H. Holding, filed a brief for respondent:

The right of contribution proper exists only where two or more persons are jointly or jointly and severally responsible to a third for the same amount, and one or more are compelled to pay more than their share. It arises in the equity of equality, dictating that a common obligation should be borne equally by all obligated for its payment; that one should not, as to others equally obligated, be obligated to sustain more than his own share. The doctrine had its origin in equity.

Dering v. Winchelsea, 1 Cox, Ch. Cas. 318;

3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1418; Sheldon, Subrogation, § 169; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Walker, 45 Ohio St. 577, 16 N. E. 475.

There is some doubt, under the decisions, whether contribution will be enforced at all as to joint tortfeasors.

Selz v. Unna, 6 Wall. 328, 18 L. ed. 799; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 17 L. ed. 298.

